Washington, June 26.—John R. McLean, proprietor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, wants the democratic nomination for the vice-presidency, it is currently reported. Those closest to him assert that a generous campaign contribution would be forthcoming. The convention references to McLean in Ohio, Kentucky and elsewhere are all clearly traceable to the influence of Senator Blackburn and other friends who would not work up a sentiment contrary to McLean's wishes. Any attempt to secure instructions for him for president is designed, it is asserted, merely to head off ex-Gov. Campbell of Ohio, and put McLean in for the second place. His candidacy would represent three ideas: outspoken support of free silver, hostility to Mr. Cleveland and his two administrations, and a big campaign fund. Another prominent candidate for the vice-presidency now being presented is McMillin of Tennessee. This candidacy, some of the democratic leaders assert, is especially likely to materialize if Senator Teller should be accorded the presidential nomination. Mr. McMillan, they say, would be a strong complement to the ticket since he is the leading advocate of an income tax, which promises to be an issue hardly less a favorite at Chicago than free silver itself. Mr. McMillan is one of the few men in congressional life prominently identified with the low-tariff movement, which would be used to offset Senator Teller's protection record. Like Teller he is for free silver.

OPPOSED TO FUSION.

Attitude of the Populists as Set Forth by Senator Peffer.

Washington, June 26.—Senator Peffer, pop., Kas., left for home last evening. Before starting he said concerning the populist attitude on the presidential campaign: "The recent pronunciaments of a few populist gentlemen at St. Louis, urging the democratic convention to nominate Mr. Teller was, in my judgment, a fatal mistake and it was treacherous so far as it attempted to speak for the populist party as a whole. These gentlemen spoke without authority from the populist party, and I do not believe the party will sustain them. They had not conferred with the party and had been given no commission to speak for it. Personally I have a high regard for Mr. Teller, but I have no idea that the populist party of this democratic organization will be so far relaxed as to bring about his nomination. In any event, I do not think existing conditions warrant populist endorsement of the democratic presidential ticket. The populist party is for free silver and the platform contains a positive free-silver declaration. I regard the integrity and perpetuity of the populist party as essential to carrying out the plan of reforms we have mapped out. The money question is but one of these. While the democratic convention doubtless will be for free silver, yet it will not be expressive of those other great questions of land tenure and the like which the populist party regards as vital."

North Carolina for Silver.

Raleigh, N. C., June 26.—The democratic state convention yesterday, which was perhaps the greatest ever held in North Carolina, devoted most of its time to platform making and there were scores of declarations for free silver in which two prominent federal officeholders, Revenue Collector Simmons of Raleigh and district attorney R. B. Glenn of Winston, heartily joined. The platform declares allegiance to the people to sustain the Jeffersonian anti-centralization principles; favors independently of other nations free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold without discrimination by either at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1; condemns paying government debts in gold which were specifically made payable in coin and instructs the delegates at Chicago to advocate as a unit for the restoration of silver. The resolutions further declare in favor of a graduated income tax and oppose all monopolies and trusts. The resolutions are fervent in their endorsement of the state administration. A resolution was adopted by the convention extending sympathy to the Cubans struggling for liberty.

Big Stove Works Sold.

Albany, June 26.—The Ferry Stove works property on Rensselaer island, just below Albany, was sold yesterday afternoon at the hands of the receiver, Gen. Marvin, to Edgar Peckham of the Rondout Electric Car works, for $25,100. The property ought to have brought at least $75,000. It was inventoried at $250,000 and is one of the most thoroughly equipped plants in the country.

Surrounded by Insurgents.

Buluwayo, June 26.—It is officially announced that Fort Charter is surrounded by the insurgents, and that hundreds of loads supplies for Gwelo have been stopped at Victoria, which has been looted by the enemy, who secured 25,000 rounds of ammunition.

Held for Murder.

Boston, June 26.—John Glennon is held without bail on the charge of murdering Annie Powers. He waived examination and was committed to the Charles street jail.

DEATH OF LYMAN TRUMBULL.

Brilliant Career of the Late United States Senator.

Chicago, June 26.—Lyman Trumbull, former United States senator, who died at his home in this city yesterday, was born in Colchester, New London county, Conn., in 1813. For more than sixty years his had been a life of ceaseless activity. He had been school teacher, lawyer, judge. He had played his part in politics—on the stump, in the halls of congress, in the deliberations of parties and as a non-combatant counsellor. In the beginning he was an anti-slavery democrat. As a republican he fought side by side with the immortal Lincoln, the men who founded the republican party of to-day. Then his party, as he thought, departed from its true mission and followed a line his conscience would not indorse. Resolutely he turned his back on his former associates and became a democrat. In the latter years of his life he parted company with that party. He took such a ground against the extension of power of the United States courts that he became the hope of the populists. In this sense, their counsellor. Judge Trumbull's last appearance in a court room was made as counsel for the American Railway union officers before the supreme court at Washington. Judge Trumbull was twice married. His first wife was Julia Maria Jayne of Springfield, to whom he was wedded in 1843. She died in Washington in 1868. In 1887 he married Mary J. Ingraham of Saybrook, Conn.

LETTER FROM CLARA BARTON.

Relief Work Appreciated and Aided by the Turks.

Washington, June 26.—Miss Clara Barton, who has charge of the Red Cross relief work in Armenia, writes an interesting letter to a friend in this city under date of Constantinople, June 10, from which the following excerpts are taken: "I am glad to report that no obstacles are placed in the way of our men, and that they are regarded with favor and respect by all parties and persons with whom they come in contact. Physicians are few in these regions and medicine is at a very low ebb, and Dr. Hubbell and his medical assistants have been called upon to treat in the families of the officials since leaving Alexandria. Their presence has been a great comfort to the missionaries stationed at the various points, most of whom had seen no visitors since the massacres. The co-operation and assistance has been mutual and most hearty. We hear only kind words and blessings on every side. The government here has neglected no opportunity of doing any favor which has been asked of it, both kindly and promptly. With the exception of poor Mrs. Mason, the health of every one of us has been excellent."

ORDERED TO RETIRE.

British Surveyors Must Not Resist Determined Opposition from Venezuelans.

Kingston, Jamaica, June 26.—According to advices received here from Georgetown, British Guiana, an armed police force has been dispatched to Acarabisci for the purpose of protecting the British surveyors, who, while engaged in opening a road from Barima to Waini, Venezuela, were stopped by a body of Venezuelans and their leader, Crown Surveyor Harrison, arrested. An endeavor will be made to continue the survey, but the party have been instructed to retire should determined opposition be met with.

St. Paul, Minn., June 26.—The tramps who murdered Sheriff Rodgers at Slingerlands, Minn., Wednesday have been captured and are on their way to Glenco. A company of militia has been ordered on guard there, as a lynching is feared if the prisoners reach Glencoe.

THE PROTOCAL OF '77

Spanish Senate Rejects the Motion To Denounce It.

44 MEMBERS AGAINST THE TREATY

The Subject Brought Up During Discussion of the Competitor Incident—History of the Agreement Between United States and Spain.

Madrid, June 26.—The senate by a vote of 86 to 44 has rejected the motion made by Senator Comas last Monday, during the discussion of the Competitor incident, providing for an amendment to the royal address demanding the protocol of 1877 with the United States be denounced in view of the inequality of the rights of Spanish and American citizens under present conditions.

The reference is to a protocol signed on January 12, 1877, between Caleb Cushing, minister of the United States, and Don Fernando Calderon y Collantes, Spanish minister of justice, and relating to the trial of American citizens by Spanish tribunals. In the chamber of deputies, the same year, Senor Olanteta gave his understanding of treaty and protocol to be that the guarantee of trial of Americans by the ordinary tribunals did not extend to Americans "captured with arms in hands," who, he maintained, might be tried by "exceptional tribunals." It was under such interpretation of the protocol that the Americans captured in the Competitor expedition last May were tried by court-martial and condemned to death. Secretary Olney protested and demanded a civil trial for the accused men, under both the protocol of 1877 and the original treaty of 1795. It is doubtless the friction growing out of these rival interpretations of the protocol which has led to this effort to denounce it.

Newspaper Correspondent Expelled.

Havana, June 26.—A man named Jimenez, said to be a Venezuelan and a companion of Thomas R. Dawley, the American artist, who was recently arrested and subsequently released, has been detained on the charge of taking photographs of the defenses composing the military line across the province of Pinar del Rio. W. N. Gay, a correspondent of the New York World, was notified last night that he would be expelled from the island and must leave Cuba on the first steamer. Gay will leave the city to-morrow.

Yellow Fever Very Prevalent in Cuba.

Washington, June 26.—The marine hospital service is advised that yellow fever is very prevalent in the island of Cuba, but not particularly bad in the city of Havana itself.

MODERN PRIZE FIGHTING.

"Denver Ed" Smith Starts in To Whip Corbett in the Up-to-Date Style.

New York, June 26.—In an interview with a representative of the United Press last night "Denver Ed" Smith, speaking of his coming fight with Sharkey, said: "I knew Corbett was overrated and is only a newspaper fighter. I have been after him for years, but he has made all kinds of excuses, saying among other things that I am a second-rater. Corbett's claim must now be a tenth-rater, if I am a second-rater, when he could not lick a novice like Sharkey. If Corbett don't cover my money and will make a match with Sharkey it shows he is afraid to fight me. And should they fight they can not fight for the championship unless they meet me as my money is up and, under the rules of the ring, I am the champion pugilist of the world. Will not Corbett cover my money any place and will fight him with bare knuckles or gloves. Now, if he is a man and not a coward, let him show the public that he will fight and I will guarantee to punch his head off. I would also like to have a few rounds with Tom Sharkey, either in the Madison Square Garden or California, to show the admirers of boxing that I am a better man than Corbett."

Reconstructing west abutment of bridge No. 210 over Clark's Corners road, Buffalo, to Dodge & MacGregor, Buffalo, for $3,293.90.

Secrecy of the Confessional Upheld.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Good roads improvement still goes on in this city, and the people are glad.

Foster M. Voorhees seems to have dropped out of political sight in the last few weeks.

Franklin Murphy will probably remain chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Senator James E. Smith is confident that New Jersey will line up in the Democratic column next November.

Once again Plainfield is reminded by the annual commencement exercises that she has a public school system to be proud of. And likewise North Plainfield.

Sheriff George Kyte looms up most prominently as the most probable candidate for Senator on the Republican county ticket.

Scarcely a day passes in this city but what an accident is reported where a bicyclist has collided with and injured a pedestrian. Frequently the rider is not to blame, but it is a fact that there is altogether too much "scorching" on the city streets. It ought to be suppressed.

Justice Gummere decides that it is not necessary to specify the precise place where each pole shall be located in designating the streets through which a telephone company may construct its lines, nor to require the company to obtain the consent of abutting owners before erecting poles in front of their respective lots.

Knute Nelson, of Minnesota, enjoys the somewhat singular distinction of being the only member of the United States Senate born on the European continent—Europe outside of the British Isles. He is a native of Norway, and the most conspicuous representative in office of the Scandinavian population of the great Northwest. It is a fact not generally known that there are four Englishmen in the present United States Senate, or more properly four natives of England—Pasco of Florida, Mantle of Montana, Wetmore of Rhode Island, and Jones of Nevada. There are two Canadians, McMillan of Michigan and Gallinger of New Hampshire. There is one Irishman—William J. Sewell of New Jersey. There are nine Ohio men.

The young man who undertook to criticise The Daily Press at the North Plainfield Alumni reception, recently, because The Press published the report of the Board of Education committee appointed to inspect the condition of the school, appeared in a very flippant light. This rash youngster alleged that the publication of the report so chagrined Prof. Boss that he immediately handed in his resignation. As a matter of fact, Mr. Boss handed in his resignation two weeks before the report was printed in this paper. Its publication, therefore, had no effect on the Principal's action, and the young man who was prone to act as a censor of what should be printed, was a trifle off in his calculations. As he grows older and comes more in contact with the ways of the world, the young man will doubtless know his place.

We have heard a great deal through the newspaper and on the stump during the last quarter of a century about "death warrants" having been or which are about to be served on the Democratic party, and the same threat is now being re-galvanized and given the semblance of life. None has been served yet, however, nor has the constable been born who will serve the document. The doctrine of Democracy and the leading issues of the Democratic party are too well-known by every intelligen Democrat to need recapitulation, and they will endure as long as this country retains a Republican form of government. The mistakes and dissensions of the Democratic party have alone aided the Republican party to maintain its ascendancy, inasmuch as that party simply exists as the abettor of trusts, the friend and partner of rapacious corporate interests, and the promoter of geographical and class division, having had no excusable claim for existence as a National party since the close of the war.—Hackensack Democrat.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

The New Jersey delegation to the Democratic National convention will leave for Chicago next Saturday.

The band concerts provide a happy feature of summer life in this city. The more of this class of public amusement we enjoy the better it will be for the city.

Garret A. Hobart is waving the wand of harmony in the camp of the Republicans over in New York. They evidently need some sort of harmonizing influence.

The delegates from this Congressional district to the National Democratic convention at Chicago are Fred C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, and Thomas F. Noonan, of Bayonne.

The News' publication of the report that the trolley would soon invade Washington Park was read with smiles by the boroughites who reside in that section. The trolley will not hum in Washington Park in many a day.

The State Equal Taxation Commission organized yesterday, making Attorney General Stockton chairman and Mr. Vredenburg secretary of the commission. The commission decided to hold its first meeting in Jersey City July 16th, at which time a programme will be mapped out.

The Republican State committee met yesterday and received the resignation of Garret A. Hobart as a member. Franklin Murphy was re-elected chairman, while Sheriff Toffey, of Hudson county, retired from the treasurership, and John Kean elected to succeed him. No plans were mapped out for the campaign, as active work will not be commenced until September 1st.

"I've lived thirty-six years, and I have never seen a man's unhappiness last more than six months, and I have never seen a woman make a wound in a man's heart that another woman couldn't heal. The modern young man is as tough as—well, I can't think of anything tough enough to compare him to. I've always thought it a pity that the material with which men's hearts are made couldn't be utilized for manufacturing purposes; think of its value for hinges, or for the toes of little boys' boots, or the heels of their stockings!"—Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Mr. Whitney, in the advice which he gives to his countrymen relative to the money question, cannot be accused of any selfish motive. He is not of that class who offer advice to the public with the hope that he shall be made the hero of the hour and rewarded with some prominent public position, or at least be put in nomination for it. He declares in the clearest manner in which words can express it, that he is not a candidate for the nomination for the Presidency, as some would be forward to suggest; moreover, he "will not run if nominated, nor serve if elected." What he says, then, may be accepted as the honest expression of his convictions on the question under consideration.—True American.

There is a feeling among some of the local merchants that Saturday night band concerts will be detrimental to their business on that evening. This is said to have been the result of the open-air concerts on Saturday nights last season. It is argued that even if this condition does not prevail, the people are attracted to the concert until a late hour in the evening and afterwards pour into the stores and keep the clerks behind the counters until midnight, while early in the evening the stores are practically deserted. It is suggested that it would be a good idea to hold all the concerts on other evenings than Saturday. They will prove a popular and attractive feature at any time.

WARING BEATS CORSA.

Appellate Court Decides That Colonel Waring's Dismissal Was Justified.

The appeal of Henry C. Corsa, of this city, against his dismissal by Commissioner Waring from the office of district superintendent in the New York street cleaning department, was dismissed by a decision handed down yesterday by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Col. Waring first dismissed Mr. Corsa, and then, when the legality of the dismissal was disputed, reinstated him. Corsa had already begun suit for reinstatement under the Veteran law, and, as he did not report for duty when Col. Waring reinstated him, Col. Waring dismissed him for being absent. The Court held that the dismissal was justified, and that the Veteran act did not protect Mr. Corsa in neglecting to report for duty when ordered.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Pass the good word along the line. Piles can be quickly cured without an operation by simply applying DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

OBSERVATIONS ON TELEGRAMS.

J. E. Martine Draws a Striking Example of How McKinley's Nomination is Received

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

The following telegram from Carnegie and his friend to McKinley, speaks volumes:

Paris, June 19, 1896.

Carnegie joins in heartiest congratulations. Feeling that prosperity is now assured for our Republic. HANNA.

But what say the scores of widows and orphans whose husbands and father were shot down at Carnegie's "Homestead Mills" because they rebelled at the tyrannous exactions and reductions of wages, until the pittance of wages would scarcely buy bread and butter. Reader, you find no congratulatory telegram from them.

New York, June 19.

Accept my heartiest congratulations on your nomination. McKinley and Hobart will sweep the country. DAVID L. EINSTEIN, President Raritan Woollen Mills.

Hoboken, N. J., June 19.

At dock arriving from Europe. Hearty congratulations. JOHN W. MACKAREE.

Now it from the poor workmen of the Raritan shoddy mills who, blackened and begrimed with the filth of the rags they handle to pour wealth into the pockets of David L. Einstein, while receiving wages that scarcely keep American women (their employes) from a life of shame. Oh! No! None from these. Mr. McKinley, get all the satisfaction from these telegrams you can. The poor workmen and women, wage earners, who pay tribute in sweat and toil to the false doctrine and demagogy of protection, can get none. J. E. M.

SUING FOR FALSE ARREST.

Nicholas Kelly Commences an Action Against Policeman Cash.

About three weeks ago the Daily Press told of the arrest and trial of Nicholas Kelly in the city court on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. The complaint was made by Special Officer Jeremiah Cash, but testimony was offered that showed pretty plainly that Kelly was neither drunk or disorderly. The latter claimed that the arrest had been made by Cash in an attempt to "get even" with Kelly. The evidence submitted was overwhelmingly in favor of Kelly and City Judge DeMeza dismissed the complaint.

Kelly was not satisfied with this, however, and has started a suit against Cash for false imprisonment which will be tried at the next session of the circuit court at Elizabeth next fall.

The Trolley Cars to Run Silently.

The gear cases have arrived for the trolley cars and they were equipped with them last night. They will do away with the unpleasant noise.

WHICH ONE IS THE BOSS?

COMPLICATION IN THE BUSINESS OF A LOCAL CONFECTIONERY STORE.

One Man Claims to Be Sole Proprietor, While the Other Asserts That He Is a Partner—The Latter Arrested.

A surprising complication has arisen in the affairs of the New York and Philadelphia confectionery store, for one of the men in charge there claims that he is a partner in the concern, while the other man claims to be the sole proprietor and that the other fellow is only an employe. George Sakelos, the man who claims to be the partner, took some of the funds last Thursday as his share, but the other man, Frank Polities, seriously objected to the confiscation of what he claimed was his, and so Saturday evening he swore out a complaint against Sakelos before Justice Newcorn charging him with receiving money belonging to him, Frank Polities, his master or employer, with intent to defraud. Constable Rockafellow arrested him and he was finally released on bail to appear for examination on Wednesday morning.

Polities does not know exactly how much money is involved, but it is about $100.

Polities and Sakelos are both Greeks and came here a year ago last spring, starting a candy store on West Front street, just above Somerset. Sakelos has apparently had as much to do with the store as Polities, as the goods often came addressed to him and he usually paid the bills. When anyone inquired who was boss, each usually pointed at the other, but now it seems that they have changed their opinions.

SHE DIDN'T BUY THE NOVEL.

It Was One of Bret Harte's Latest, but She Was His Daughter.

"There is something new," the clerk said; "the latest of his works, a novel of the day, one that is being read by everyone."

He handed the young lady the volume. She merely touched it and a flush of color tinged her cheek. A moment later she turned away and went out. The clerk restored the book to the shelf. At the next counter the clerk laughed at him.

"You will learn," he said, not to offer her his books."

"Why, that was Bret Harte's latest, and"—

"And that was Bret Harte's daughter."

There are three Misses Harte, who have resided in Plainfield with their mother for several years. Bret Harte has lived apart from his family since the daughters were little children. There is not the least bitterness between Mr. and Mrs. Harte and despite the fact of their separation they remain good friends. The novelist lives in London and his family move in the best society here. The daughters are very pretty girls, and the eldest, Miss Jessamy Harte, has written for the magazines with much success.

Church Dedication.

The dedication of the recently completed portion of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church will take place next Sunday. There will be services all day. At the morning service, Rev. Walter Thompson, of New Brunswick, will speak; at the afternoon service, Rev. O. J. Scott; and the evening service will be led by Rev. S. Sterges, D. D., of Madison. The dedication will take place in the afternoon.

To Take A Rhode Island Bride.

James Jordan, an employe of E. E. Marshall and Co., will go to Providence, R. I., about the middle of July to take unto himself a bride in the person of Miss Lillie Watts of that city, formerly of Ottowa, Canada. Mr. Jordan came here from Canada in February last, and will probably take up his residence in this city after the nuptials, on or about August 1st.

Still in a Precarious Condition.

The condition of Mrs. Gertrude Peterson, who was injured in the gasolene explosion at her home on LaGrande avenue Sunday morning, is still the same. The physicians in charge have hopes of her recovery, but the injuries are very dangerous ones.

—J. C. VanNatta, night baggage-master at the North avenue station has been transferred to the ticket office as night man. M. H. Meaney, who held the latter position, has been transferred to the Elizabethport station as night operator and Mr. Evans, an employee of the Central, is now night baggage-master at the North avenue station.

A SURPRISE FOR SOCIETY

MRS. E. D. M'CARTHY MARRIED TO JOHN GIFFORD SIX WEEKS AGO,

The Event Solemnized at the Home of the Groom on May 18th—The Bride One of Plainfield's Talented Women.

No nuptial event in which a resident of this city has been one of the happy participants will cause more surprise or interest in society circles than the announcement of the marriage of Mrs. E. D. McCarthy, of Central avenue, to Prof. John Gifford, of May's Landing, N. J.

The event was solemnized at the home of the groom on May 18th, but the fact has been kept so quiet that only the most intimate friends of the couple were aware of the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford will sail for Europe next week to spend the summer in touring the continent.

The groom is the editor of The Forester and secretary of the State Forestry Association, which recently held their convention in this city. He is considered an authority on all forestry matters and is well known throughout the country on this subject.

The bride is one of Plainfield's most talented women and is very active in all matters pertaining to the progress of woman's sphere, being one of the leaders in the Monday Afternoon Club and Town Improvement Association. She is also prominent in the State and National Federations of Women's Clubs, and at their recent conventions read interesting papers. Like her husband, she is also greatly interested in forestry matters and it was while engaged in this subject that the couple met and formed a mutual friendship and admiration for each other which resulted in linking their fortunes together at Hymen's altar. The union is a most happy one and the many friends of both parties in this city extend their congratulations.

KEEP THE STREETS CLEAN.

Wholesome Advice Given By the Town Improvement Association.

Complaints are coming to the Town Improvement Association about neglected vacant houses and lots, where the grass is left uncut and entangled with weeds going to seed, which seeds are borne on the wind to places well kept and so cause much mischief by propogation. If each owner would by a little preventative care have their places attended to before seeding time much trouble would be saved, to say nothing of the unsightliness of such neglected places in neighborhoods where others strive to keep their places clean and beautiful. In view of the aforesaid complaints, an appeal is hereby made to all owners of vacant houses and lots to have the grass cut and kept in order, thereby contributing to the beauty of our city.

An appeal is also made to the merchants to refrain from throwing, rubbish, hay, etc., on the sidewalks and in the gutters.

Advertising circulars are thrown broadcast on piazzas and in dooryards. Those who distribute them rarely notice where they throw them, and frequently a handful will be scattered in one yard. They seldom reach the householder, for whom they are intended, and only serve as a means of annoyance to the public and often a source of danger by frightening horses.

Would it not be more advantageous to advertise in the newspapers?

Just as Good as Any.

Borough residents who find fault with the quantity of noise in their new fire bell, should remember that there never was a bell made, the sounding of which could be heard in all directions at all times. Atmospheric conditions regulate the distance and direction from all bells, and even if a large tapper was used the sound would not be increased. A prominent citizen in talking to a Daily Press representative recently said that when fire alarm box 47 in front of the Pond Tool Works was pulled, the person standing at the box was never able to hear the fire gong.

Drug Clerk—All right, sir. Here's a blood tonic that is advertised to build up the constitution.

Customer— Young man, do you think I'm going to dose myself with a blood tonic for months, just on the chance of it doing me some good? Not much! FREE SILVER ISSUE

Big Meeting of the White Metal Advocates in New York City.

TILLMAN ONE OF THE SPEAKERS

Resolutions Demanding the Adoption of a Free Silver Plank by the Democratic National Convention at Chicago Adopted.

New York, June 26.—The silver mass meeting at Cooper Union last night filled the large auditorium and all the available standing room was occupied. The audience was enthusiastic and applauded loudly every time an opportunity offered itself. Senator Benjamin F. Tillman of South Carolina occupied a prominent place on the platform and was cheered lustily when he entered the auditorium a few minutes before 8 o'clock. George P. Keeney, general organizer of the American silver organization, presided. There were several speakers including Senator Stewart and Hon. Alexander Delmar, and then Senator Tillman stepped to the front of the platform. It took several minutes for the vast crowd in the auditorium to get through cheering when Tillman was introduced. It was after 9 o'clock when the senator began speaking, and by this time the aisles were so full of standing people that it was difficult for one to get out and in. "Three cheers for the man with a pitchfork," yelled a man in the audience. The senator said he came from a part of the country from which many believed no good could come. Notwithstanding this he had received a welcome that touched him deeply. He began by paying his respects to the newspapers. He said that the night would give an opportunity to show the members of the audience that the newspapers were unconscionable liars. The owners of the newspapers, he said, were prostitutes of journalism, and not a paper in New York would dare to print his speech in full. The speaker said that although he had been much talked about and lied about, he had written his name on a page of South Carolina history in such a way that it would remain there always. Coming to the money question, he said: "If the Chicago convention does not give us democracy and return to the faith of Washington and Jefferson I will have nothing to do with it afterwards. The money question is up, and has got to be settled. It is important as was the slavery question, and if enough of you can get together to reverse the verdict of the two millionaire conventions you will deserve the thanks of the whole country." The senator said that if he were on the senate committee investigating the recent bond sale he would ask President Cleveland why he made the private contract to sell bonds at 104½ per cent, when they were actually worth in the market at 117. The senator then talked about unemployed labor, which, he said, was a lever by which those employed were ground down to low wages. "You see on your own street car lines," he continued, "cars that could S. R. Those cars don't carry any mail. They are on there so the car lines can claim the protection of the United States troops in case of a strike." Senator Tillman characterized Mark Hanna, of Ohio as the high priest of Mammon and the joint owner with Hanna of McKinley. The speaker said as he sat down: "America for Americans and to hell with England and all other countries." Resolutions demanding the free coinage of silver were then adopted and that William P. St. John be requested, with a committee, which the chair shall appoint, to, attended the national democratic convention, to urge the incorporation of the free silver demands in the platform of the national democracy.

POWER OF KNOWLEDGE

PRACTICAL THOUGHTS OF DR. JOHNSTONE'S ADDRESS.

The Speaker Impressed on the North Plainfield Graduates the Accomplishments to Grasp Opportunity and Succeed.

One of the happiest events in the lives of sixteen young men and women occurred last Thursday in Warren chapel when the thirteenth annual commencement was held and they were graduated from the North Plainfield public school.

The chapel was filled to overflowing with parents and friends whose hearts were made glad by the joyous occasion. It was 8:15 when the graduating class and other scholars proudly entered and took seats on the platform provided for them. A march, rendered by Miss Randolph on the piano, gave additional pleasure to the opening exercises. President Samuel St. John Cutchen, Ezra Lounds, G. F. Brown, J. H. VanWinkle, Sr., A. V. D. Honeyman, R. M. Fountain and E. J. Waring, members of the Board of Education, and Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone followed and also occupied seats on the platform. The programme was in charge of President McCutchen, who stated that he regretted exceedingly that Principal C. E. Boss was unable to be present on account of illness. Under the efficient direction of Wm. E. Macoy, almost the children sang as an opening selection "The Good Shepherd." This was followed with an essay by Miss Adele Hope Kirby, entitled "The Influence of Little Things." The essay was especially fine, both as to composition and rendition, and it reflected great credit on the scholar and her instructor. The essay was as follows:

Can we doubt or question for a minute the importance of trifles when we look around us? Surely Dame Nature appreciated this fact when she made each individual leaf in the tree to blend with its neighbor and form the luxuriant growth of foliage which is so restful to the eye. The trivial occurrences are what form our characters; and the humble, insignificant character make up the Nation If everyone was equally great there would be no honor or respect among men. Jealousy and contempt would be the ruling passion of the Nation, and in the course of time these two would not only corrupt the people, but everything with which they came in contact. It is, then, impossible to lay too much stress upon the little things, for, as Goldsmith says, "These little things are great to the little man." Unfortunately these trifles exert as much influence for the wrong as for the right. Even the grumblings of a single workman can start a strike in the cities which will often result in the loss of thousands of dollars to the manufacturers, and untold misery to innumerable homes. So it is in the life of everyone of us. We each have the power to do or not to do as we please, but it may encourage us if we bear in mind that even the performance of our simple daily tasks may be bringing light into the skies of someone's existence or lessening the weight of many a burden.

Miss Emma L. Stevens then gave a recitation, "The Wreck of Rivermouth," by Whittier. Miss Stevens deserves great credit for the admirable manner in which she gave the selection. Her work showed care and thoughtfulness. Both graduates received presents, in the form of flowers, from their friends, as did also the other members of the class. Another vocal selection, "Eventide," was finely rendered by the scholars. The selection preceded an address by Dr. Jocelyn Johnstone, of the Church of the Redeemer, on the subject "Ancient and Modern Educational Systems." Dr. Johnstone said in part:

"It is said that the onlooker in chess sees most of the game. So it is probable that, although I am not yet six years in America, I can make a more unprejudiced estimate of American institutions than Americans themselves. At the outset I would say that it is impossible to regard any system, controlled by the human mind, as absolutely perfect. But this I can assert unaffectedly, and without a feather's weight of bias in any direction, I believe that the public schools of America are the chief glory of a land that can pride itself on many accomplishments. The United States today gives to the world a splendid example of free institutions, of freedom of worship and free education. May I say to this audience that the last transcends in dignity and importance all other means and agencies which subserve a nation and make it great. Why is it the duty of the State to see that all its children are educated? I shall answer that question from the standpoint of history and philosophy. A study of the rise and fall of Nations, and the permanence and decay of social systems, will prove to the reader that no people steeped in ignorance can remain free and prosperous. It is the only enlightened among men who know the full value of liberty. In political as well as all other life, knowledge is power. The Constitution of the United States is safeguarded, not by its police force, but by the intelligence of a people who as children have learned in the public schools that liberty is obedience to law.

But the system of public school education has a still more practical result. It is the high average of education and intelligence possessed by individual Americans that has secured the pre eminence of their country among the Nations of the earth. What is the source of American prosperity? The economist will reply that it is the resultant of the wealth and variety of our natural resources. The politician will assure us, in fervid rhetoric, that prosperity walks hand in hand with free institutions. Both answers are correct, but do not enshrine all the truth. It is intelligence which makes the superiority of Nations as well as individuals. The value and amount of products depend more upon intelligence than nature; for the increment of profit is created by the brain, and not the hand. Let me give you an example of the difference between educated and uneducated labor. Down in the iron mines of Pennsylvania a laborer blasts out the metallic crust of the earth. Physically he a rough untutored Hercules, with sinews as strong as whips of steel. His work requires no mental training, or at least very little. As a consequence he is not able to earn more than two or three dollars a day. The world practically sets no value upon physical strength. But let us follow the history of that same iron when it has been smelted in the furnace and rolled in the mills. Then it comes under the control of the mechanical engineer, who moulds it, and shapes it to his will, not by strength of muscle, but by the magic of science, till at last he has created a locomotive, a metallic leviathan, a miracle of grace and power that whirls in a few days a thundering train from New York to San Francisco. Or, with the same material he may construct what I regard as the greatest marvel of civilization, a modern printing press, that moving, throbbing and revolving agent of the world's enlightenment, which, with every revolution of its gigantic cylinders, sends out into the world the chequered story of life, as depicted in the newspaper, the song of the musician and poet, and the high thoughts of patient philosophy. Thus we all know the superiority of mind over muscle, of brain over brawn; and we wonder no longer that intelligence makes a reputation and a fortune.

"But the chief glory, I am convinced which attaches to the American educational system, is the remarkable culture and intelligence of American women. On this subject I can speak dispassionately, because I have known life in the highest and lowest, in two continents. The influence of the American woman does not depend on her physical attractiveness, although that is undoubted, but upon the strength and grace of her mental equipment. Of course, she has larger opportunities for intellectual development than her father, or husband or brother. It is alleged in favor of the latter that they have the battle of life to fight and have no time in which to cultivate their mind. But this is altogether too superficial account for the fact that the average American woman is intellectually superior to the average American man. In charm of conversation, in the acquisition of varied thought, in versatility and vivacity, and in the play of well disciplined mental powers, American women reflect its highest glory upon the system of American education."

The doctor's address was most cordially received by hearty applause, after which "Swing Storm" and "The Storm-Fiend" were sung by the scholars.

President McCutchen then arose and made a few remarks. He said in part: "I regret exceedingly that Mr. Boss is not present tonight. For fifteen years he has been identified with the school as principal, and for the past five years I have been closely associated with him. He has developed the school in a noteworthy manner, and has been faithful, earnest and industrious. He has not shown any petty spirit which would in any way retard the school's advancement. As a friend and neighbor he is loved by all as well as by those connected with the school. We all wish for him a happy and successful future in whatever field he may be called. I also regret to say that we are to lose Miss Cutler, a faithful teacher of the graduating class. It is a serious loss. She was industrious and effective. We wish her God-speed, also the other teachers who will probably leave us." Mr. McCutchen then announced that A. D. Warde had been secured as principal, and that he will take up the good work where Mr. Boss left it. He asked for the co-operation of all the people with Mr. Warde in his work. Continuing the president made a few remarks to the graduates, after which he presented diplomas to them as follows:

James Kneringer Arnold, Jr., Chas. Barlow, Mabel Margarette Conover, Edith Haviland Cooley, Achsah Wagoner Holmes, Sara Vosseller Holmes, Josephine Elizabeth Joseph, Adele Hope Kirby, Lydie Evodie Loiseaux, William Samuel Loiseaux, Nellie May Martin, William Ellsworth Pearson, Bertha May Stevens, Emma Lois Stevens, John Henry VanWinkle, Jr., Thomas Rowland Western.

The decorations at the chapel consisted of a neat arrangement of evergreens over the platform, in the centre of which the words "Class of '96" were placed. The class motto is "Soar Not too High to Fall, but Stoop to Rise." The singing by the scholars of "Auf Wiedersehn" brought to a close the happy event.

ENDEAVOR NOTES.

Matters That Will Interest the Vast Army of Young Christians.

Below will be found some Christian Endeavor notes of interest to local members.

Nearly everyone of the seventy-five societies in the Essex County Union are holding Washington rallies for the purpose of sending a large delegation to the National Convention. The cycling members of the above Union will go to Washington on their wheels. Three days will be taken for the trip. Other members wishing to join the run should address A. W. Clark, 33 Chestnut street, Newark. R. B. Sinclair, superintendent of the correspondence department, has resigned to enter Y. M. C. A. work, and Dr. William R. Ward, of Lyons Farms, has been appointed to the vacancy.

Those in charge of the State Junior Christian Endeavor Society have the following to say:

"Don't forget the roll of honor, which is to be displayed at the October convention in Plainfield. Every Junior society contributing not less than $5 to the work of missions, through its own denominational boards, will have its name inscribed on this roll, if it is reported before the convention is held. All correspondence should be sent to the State superintendent at 414 N. Second street, Camden.

"There is a Christian Endeavorer in the west who is a railroad conductor. In his train he has placed a paper rack which he keeps supplied with religious literature.

"The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, in the Philadelphia church of which Rev. J. R. Miller, D. D., is pastor, recently decided to attend church every Sunday morning in a body."

FRACTURED HIS COLLAR BONE.

Disastrous Results of Bicycle Coasting on a Metuchen Hill.

Charles Newman, a machinist, of Richmond street, enjoyed a costly bicycle ride on Saturday, which resulted in the fracture of his collar bone. He and Harry Connett, also a machinist, went out on a tandem, and at a point called Carhart, city of Bound Brook, accompanied them. They were returning home by the way of Metuchen, and were coasting down the hill which passes under the railroad bridge at the above place. In the descent Carhart run into the tandem, and a serious spill resulted. Connett escaped with an injured nose, Newman fractured his collar bone and Carhart escaped injury. Both the tandem and single wheel were completely wrecked.

Newman was assisted to the railroad station and was taken to South Plainfield by train. At the latter place a carriage was secured and the injured man was brought home. Dr. Jenkins was called and treated the man properly. It will be sometime before Mr. Newman will be able to work. Both Connett and Carhart reached home in safety.

HELPUL, AND TO THE POINT.

Dr. Russell's Talk to Endeavorers at the Congregational Church.

The pulpit of the Congregational church was occupied Sunday morning by Rev. Dr. Russell, of Bridgeport, Conn. He preached a very interesting and helpful sermon, holding the careful attention of every hearer from the first word till the last. The offertory was an exquisite violin solo by P. Ludwig Conde, with organ accompaniment by Mrs. B. T. Barnes.

In the evening, the Christian Endeavor Society had an unusual treat in an address by Dr. Russell on the subject "True manliness and true womanliness." Every word of the address was helpful, practical, and to the point. He emphasized the fact that the true manly or womanly character should be complete, well-rounded, attention being paid alike to physical, intellectual and spiritual development; and gave many practical hints for improvement in the three directions. At the close of the address, there was a vocal solo with autoharp accompaniment by Miss Elfieda Alberti Whiting.

Fractured His Collar Bone.

A young man named Burke, aged eighteen years, of this city, was brought to Plainfield this morning from Milford, Pa., where he has been stopping. On Saturday he met with an accident which resulted in the fracture of the collar bone. He was taken to the hospital for treatment.

George C. Scales, of Boston, is the guest of Harry Yarnell, of this city.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

DIED IN THE FAR WEST.

WORD RECEIVED OF THE SUDDEN END OF JOS. BOLSTERLI.

He Was Quite a Noted Rough Rider, and the supposition is That He Lost His Life by Being Thrown from a Horse

Three weeks ago Monday Joseph Bolsterli, of Chatham street, left town for Wyoming, and Saturday evening a telegram was received by his relatives informing them that Mr. Bolsterli had been accidentally killed and asking what disposition should be made of the body. Mr. Bolsterli's wife was in Newark at the time, and the telegram was received by her sister, Mrs. Kline, of Chatham street. Mrs. Kline went at once to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Bolsterli, parents of the dead man, to inform them of the death, but the parents were not at home, and the sad news was told to the daughter. The parents learned of the news soon afterwards. Word was sent to Mrs. Joseph Bolsterli immediately, and she returned home.

The telegram was signed by Frank W. Cooley, Master Workman of the A. O. U. W., of Sheridan, Wyoming. Mr. Bolsterli was a member of Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., of this city.

A. M. Runyon & Son telegraphed Saturday night to Mr. Cooley, telling him to send the body to this city; and also asked for the particulars of his death.

This morning a Daily Press representative called on Mrs. Caspar Bolsterli, mother of the dead son. She had no knowledge of how her son met his death, but the supposition seems to be that he was killed in attempting to ride a horse. He was considered an expert rough rider, and for the last few years has been associated with equines of a fractious nature.

Joseph Bolsterli was born near Detroit, Mich., in March, 1864, and came with his parents to New Jersey when a year old. The family located at Lebanon, Hunterdon county. At the latter place he attended school for a time. Later the family moved to Plainfield, where Joseph entered one of the machine shops and learned the trade. When he reached his majority he was married to a Miss Everitt. It has been his custom to make a trip occasionally to the west and he has visited Dakota, Wyoming, Texas and several other places. While in the west he invariably worked at his trade and at odd times devoted himself to riding wild horses. A year ago last winter he was associated with Buffalo Bill's wild west shows for three weeks, during which time he sustained an injury which laid him up the following summer. He entirely recovered, however, and worked last winter in the Pond Tool Machine Works. When he made up his mind to go west three weeks ago he was out of work and the prospects seemed bright for his securing work in the west.

Mr. Bolsterli was also a member of Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., and is the first member to die since the lodge has joined the Funeral Benefit Association. His widow will receive $2,000 from the A. O. U. W., of this city.

—All bills against the city for the month of June must be in the hands of the City Clerk by tomorrow to ensure payment next month.

UPBUILDING OF A NATION

PATRIOTIC THOUGHTS IN REV. DR. BARNES' SERMON TO THE J. O. U. A. M.

Rise of a Nation Marks Its Growth in Righteousness and the Fall to the Growth of Sin—Other Sentiments Also.

Rev. C. R. Barnes, pastor of the First M. E. church, delivered a special sermon Sunday to the Jr. O. U. A. M. and large delegations of Franklin and Somerset councils attended.

The speaker told how Jonah, on shipped on a vessel to Tarsus and a storm arose and the sailors cast lots to see who it was had angered God and caused Him to send the storm upon them. The lot fell upon Jonah and they questioned him. Among the questions was, "What is Thy Country?" and when he had answered and told them he was a Hebrew, they knew that he was fleeing from the Lord, as they cast him overboard.

Suppose some one asks us, what is our country. Our country is the United States, and we are united in every sense of the word. The thirteen original states that comprised the country were like little children, each one waiting for the slightest cause that they might withdraw from the union. But today we have the United States. In our country but one language is spoken, and there are very few people out of the 70,000,000 who cannot speak it.

Every man has his individual rights, which no man can take away from him. God has given them to him and anyone who tries to take away those rights is a traitor to God. The law also looks after man. The law itself says that a man may do what he wishes as long as he does what it right, but if another person steps in and tries to injure that man the law steps in and protects him.

You have the training of the future generation to do. Will they look up to the flag and cherish it and love it as you do? Righteousness is the upbuilding of a nation. The rise of a nation marks its advance in righteousness, and the fall of a nation marks its growth in sin. You have the training of the future generation on your hands and with our present excellent school system there is no reason why they should not grow up brave, intelligent men, to love and cherish our country as their forefathers have done.

A Quiet Wedding.

Miss Susan Vail Runyon, daughter of the late Judge E. W. Runyon, of this city, was married at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert Lowry, of 44 Madison avenue, on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, to Arthur R. Lee, of Forto Rico. The Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D., performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate family. Mr. and Mrs. Lee left at 6:30 train for a tour of two weeks, and on their return will make their home in New York.

M. C. Stewart, a former resident of Plainfield, but now of New York city, where he holds the position of Superintendent of Repairs for Trinity corporation, wears a very wide smile. It is a daughter, and she born Thursday last.

—Patrick Moran, of Plainfield avenue, is having his house repaired and elevated.

SURRENDERED.

They called her the daughter of the confederacy in that southern city. She has a daughter of her own now, who should, of course, be called the granddaughter of the confederacy, but probably isn't. That, however, is anticipating.

The daughter of a cause so long dead could not have been so young and beautiful. She must have been the child of a memory, that grows more beautiful with each year, and knows a new youth with each succeeding generation.

She was very beautiful the day that Howard Pearce saw her. He sat on the window ledge of his second-story office —he was a young lawyer from the north—and looked down upon company K, —— Tennessee national guards, lined up at "parade rest." He knew their captain, Saunders, who was also a lawyer, and whose office adjoined Pearce's. It was annual encampment time, and the company was about to go to the grounds at the foot of the ridge.

"Under—Harms!" commanded Capt. Saunders.

"Carry—Harms!"

"Shoulder — Harms! Right for'ad, four-right—Wh!"

Company K moved off up the street. As the last four swung into the column, there came a clatter of hoofs on the pavement, and a girl rode past the company and took her place at its head, saluting the captain gravely and with ceremony.

"What a beautiful girl!" Pearce exclaimed.

She wore a gray riding habit, with a double row of brass buttons leading up to two black bears on the collar. And her sunny locks a small gray slouch hat rested, tilted just the least bit over one eye. She rode well.

Pearce leaned so far from the window to catch a parting glimpse of the girl in gray that he almost fell. The crowd had dispersed, and the young lawyer returned to his desk. It was a warm day toward the end of July, and he was not sorry that he had no business on hand that must be rushed. He reflected that as almost everyone had gone to the camp ground, there was no reason for remaining in the office, which the little breeze that stirred outdoors carefully avoided.

Evidently, the girl in gray had gone to the camp ground. And with Saunders. But Saunders was married; happily married, Pearce hoped. Anyhow, he would call Saunders and ascertain.

That evening he sat before Capt. Saunders' tent, with the captain, his wife and Miss Moore—the girl in gray. To the east of the camp ground the ridge rose in a gentle slope. To the southeast, seemingly, tumbling just over them, was the mountain.

Pearce's heart beat faster as the thought came to him that 30 years before white tents marked the foot of the ridge as they did that day. But then they had stretched for miles north and south.

"Captain," he said, turning to Saunders, "it's easier to get up the ridge than it was once. There are no men in gray there to fight."

"No," the captain replied; "but the sons of some of those men are there," pointing to the company street, in which blue-clad figures lounged. "Loyal!" Without doubt. Listen!"

The bands, which had united for the evening concert, had just struck up "The Star Spangled Banner." When the air was recognized, a cheer arose from the tented wood.

"Hear that?" said the captain.

"Wait," said the girl in gray.

"For what?" Pearce asked.

"They will play 'Dixie' after awhile.' "What then?"

"Then they will yell," she said, looking at him with a bright smile and nodding a confident "You'll see—or hear."

And he did. When the national air was finished there was a brief wait. Then the quick, stirring notes of "Dixie" started the woods into life with sharp echoes, which were drowned by one long, loud yell.

Pearce looked at the girl to receive an expected "I told you so." But she was not looking at him. Her cheeks were dark with color, her eyes, brightened by excitement, were fixed upon the young men, tossing their caps high above the tents and shouting with all their might and lung power.

"I wonder," he mused, "if she hates the north as much as she loves the south."

When the tumult had ceased he turned to Saunders.

"Well, captain," he said, "what do you say to that?"

"Of course they love 'Dixie,' " said the captain earnestly. "So, do I. But there is no deeper meaning in that cheer than the love of a memory. They are loyal."

Miss Moore said that she must go back to town.

"As it is late, I shall have to leave my horse at the camp ground. I shall send for him to-morrow. I reckon I can walk to the train in this rig."

She looked down somewhat doubtfully at her riding skirt. Pearce said that he would be glad to go with her, and thought it was not apparent in just what way he could overcome the disadvantage of the long dress, she seemed to be grateful for his escort.

Well, that was the beginning of it; and the end is not yet. An incident that occurred under a large tree in the old confederate fort on the mountain may give a hint of the trend of events.

Pearce and Miss Moore were under the tree because it was the shelter nearest when the rain suddenly began to fall; and it rained, probably, because a number of young folks of the city had come up on the mountain to spend a September day that promised, in the morning, to be pleasant.

Mr. Pearce was not in good humor. He and Miss Moore had separated themselves from the others. One topic of conversation had led to another, which, in this instance, was a declaration by Mr. Pearce that he was irretrievably in love with Miss Moore, and that if she refused to make him happy he should be forever miserable. At a critical stage of this declaration a raindrop kissed the girl's cheek.

"Oh, it's going to rain!" she cried.

The next instant the downpour began, and both rushed through a breach in the earthen wall of the fort to the tree, whose branches, to which the leaves yet clung, offered protection. There they stood in silence for several minutes, she busily brushing raindrops from her hat, which she had taken off, and he watching her, moodily.

The silence became oppressive, and she glanced at him, curiously and apprehensively, from under her lashes. He caught the glance, and, moving toward her, said:

"Well?"

"Oh, don't," she exclaimed, starting away, her eyes still fixed upon a ribbon with which she was working.

"Why, Katherine—er, Miss Moore—"

"Oh, you mustn't!"

He walked to the edge of the circle protected by the wall and looked out over the clay wall of the fort, down which tiny red rivers ran. She, having dried her hat, placed it again on her head and began brushing her skirt where, here and there, rain had spotted it. She started several times at his back, stubbornly turned toward her. He evinced no intention of moving, nor of speaking again, and she became nervous. The situation was unbearable, and she exclaimed:

"We must get back to the others!"

"We can't very well go through this rain," he said, without turning around.

Another prolonged silence, broken only by the monotonous fall of the rain. Pearce had now almost made up her mind to gather up her skirts and run to the hotel, a quarter of a mile away, he turned and came quickly toward her. He put out his hand as though to take hers, but drew it quickly put her hands behind her and stepped back. He folded his arms and stood before her, looking earnestly into the eyes that she raised to his, almost appealingly.

"Katherine," he said, "I love you. Will you be my wife?"

A beautiful color stole slowly from the ribbon at her throat, up, up, until it tinted the edges of her small, perfectly formed ears. This gaze held him for a moment; then her eyelids fell, and their long lashes swept her cheeks.

"Mr. Pearce," she said, slowly and hesitatingly, "I am sorry, but I—I can't!"

"Because you do not love me?"

She looked up quickly into his face; then down again; but she did not reply. "Katherine, tell me," he said. "Why is it that you cannot marry me?"

"Because—because very busy dislodging a half-buried stone with the toe of her shoe—"because—because you are a Yankee!" Another swift glance met his steady look. Then she moved a little further away, and stood half turned from him. His first impulse was to laugh. But that passed almost as it came. The gray, brass-buttoned riding habit, the flushed cheeks and bright eyes with which she had listened to "Dixie," flashed across his mental vision. The "Yankee" might be an obstacle not to be laughed away.

"But I am not a Yankee," he said, with emphasis. "I am from Illinois."

It seemed a long time to both that they stood in silence. Again she was the first to speak.

"This is an awful rain," she said.

"Yes, a very wet rain," he replied. "Oh, you are going to forgive me for—"

"But I am not jesting," he answered, walking rapidly to where she stood. "What I mean is that you will get wet. The water is beginning to drip from the leaves. Here," stripping off his coat, "let me put this around you."

"Oh, no," she said, stepping back.

"But you must. The air is chill, and if you get wet you will catch cold."

"But you—you—"

"It won't hurt me a bit. Come."

He assumed a commanding tone, and that, or something else, accomplished his end, for she made no effort to free herself when he placed the big coat about her shoulders. A long time, a time to spare just right, and his arm was still around her when he looked into her face and saw that she was looking up into his. Something in her eyes prompted him to draw her close to him and to say, very tenderly:

"Sweetheart, I come from the north, but I love a southern girl. Don't you think that she can love a northern man just a little—if he is not a Yankee?"

She studied the arrangement of his necktie closely, and then transferred her scrutiny to his watch chain. But evidently she was not thinking of either, for when she spoke she asked:

"Illinois people aren't Yankees?"

"Certainly not," he replied, with conviction. "They are a long way from Yankeedom. More than a thousand miles."

She examined the necktie again, looked at his eyes for a moment, then over his shoulder off into the rain.

"Katherine," he said, softly, "do you love me?"

She turned her head slowly until their eyes met. A wave of color rushed into her cheeks, and she murmured faintly: "Yes."

"And you will be my wife?"

With perhaps a sudden thought of her surroundings, and of a stormy day thirty years before, she replied: "I—I surrender!"

The rain, as if to hide from the scene any possible observer, fell more heavily for a moment. Then it ceased altogether, and soon the sun shone through from a blue sky where the gray clouds had parted.—St. Louis Republic.

OWN HOUSE OF WORSHIP

THE MT. PLEASANT CHAPEL DEDICATED YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Of Colonial Design and Conveniently Arranged for the Purposes to Which It Will Be Put—The Special Services.

The dedication of Union chapel at Mount Pleasant took place Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Owing to the disagreeable weather many who expected to be present were detained at home, but notwithstanding this fact the pretty little chapel was filled with members and friends whose hearts were made glad to know that the chapel was a reality.

As will be seen by the cut, the chapel is of the Colonial style and very substantial. The architect, Charles H Smith, of this city, very generously donated the plans for the building, which is well arranged to suit its needs. The building is frame and contains two rooms. The main room is 22x36 and the other is 12x17. The latter will be used for the primary department of the Sunday-school. The interior is finished in hard work and is exceedingly pretty.

Howard Runyon, superintendent of the Sunday-school, presided yesterday afternoon. The exercises were opened with a selection, "Gently Lord, O Gently Lead Us," by a quartette consisting of Miss Katharine Glen, soprano; *Miss Lottie Mes*serschmith, alto; W. M. Miner, tenor; and William E. MacClymont, basso and organist. Mr. Runyon then offered prayer, and followed with a few introductory remarks in which he emphasized the fact that the chapel was a union one and all were expected to assist in all of the services. The congregation then joined in the "Doxology," after which Dr. D. J. Yerkes read the Scripture selection. Another selection, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," was rendered by the quartette.

Mr. DeForest, who is chairman of the building committee, made a brief report of the work in erecting the chapel. He stated that, exclusive of sand and stone, the entire cost was $1,227.75. The incidental expenses were $22.75. The young women of the chapel gave the first $100 and in all they have contributed $283.55. The chapel furnishings cost $122.80. A large amount of the total cost has been contributed by Plainfield people. Mr. DeForest spoke very highly of the fact that Charles H. Smith had given the plans free of cost and had superintended the construction of the building. He also mentioned the earnest efforts and prayers that had been offered.

Dr. Yerkes followed the reading of the report with a prayer and the congregation rendered "Nearer My God to Thee."

Rev. C. E. Herring was then introduced and made a short address. His remarks were taken from the text "One thing have I desired," which is found in Psalm 27:4. Mr. Herring said in part:

"A person does not get one tenth of the things desired. We don't get answers to our prayers because we do not penetrate far enough. David wanted one thing, and that was to behold the beauty of the Lord. He was intense in his prayer and he sought persistently. The Saviour once said to Martha, 'You have the one thing needful,' and to the rich young ruler he said, 'One thing thou lackest.' This chapel means that you want to come together and that you want one thing, that you want to see the beauty of the Lord. You must ask and seek with perseverance. This is God's resting place. Come to him and God's glory revealed. May you learn more of God's word and may this chapel be consecrated to His service."

Mr. Runyon stated that Mr. Munger was unable to be present and had sent a note in explanation. Mr. Runyon said that in 1836 Rev. Mr. Bond, now deceased, used to preach in the old chapel and Miss Payne, sister of Mrs. Shotwell, of this city, also taught in the Sunday-school.

E. E. Anthony, president of the Christian Endevor Local Union, was called upon and made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion. He said the first time he ever spoke in public was in the old chapel. He hoped that while the people were dedicating the chapel they would also dedicate their hearts to God. After the singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" the benediction was pronounced by Rev. B. W. Hand.

A large number of persons were present from this city and enjoyed the exercises very much.

No Free Delivery in Dunellen.

Postmaster Staats received a letter from headquarters yesterday morning instructing him to discontinue the free delivery and to ship the letter boxes from which collections are made back to the department. The order takes effect on July 1st. It will be remembered that a free delivery in this place was an experiment for which a sum of money was appropriated, and for which no extra appropriation has been made.—Dunellen Call.

"YELLOW JACK" IN CUBA.

Believed That the Fever Will Soon Become Epidemic Throughout the Island.

Washington, June 27.—The most alarming report from Cuba with respect to yellow fever comes from Sagua la Grand, where the marine hospital service is advised by its last report, of forty-one cases and four deaths. It is expected that within a very short time the fever will become epidemic and if it does not become virulent in the city of Havana all previous experiences will be set aside. The department has, however, received no advices to the effect that cholera has appeared anywhere on the island. The present war and its relation to the sanitary condition of Cuba is referred to in the last annual report of Surgeon-General Wyman and the statement then made will represent the conditions of this summer, only in a more aggravated form. On this subject, Gen. Wyman then said that the insurrection had interfered to a great extent with the transmission of exact information from the disturbed provinces, and the normal condition of health in the island had been largely modified by the presence of a great body of non-immune Spanish soldiers. These troops have taken their disease and added to the natural number of cases annually prevalent in that island. The difficulties experienced last summer will be met with again by them, because the knowledge as to the number of troops landed with the disease is denied by the Spanish government. The reports from Havana last year showed a total of 1,564 cases, and a mortality of thirty per cent. This summer the greatest caution will be taken to prevent the introduction from Cuba into the United States of yellow fever. Each of the four revenue cutters patrolling the Florida coast has a sanitary inspectors to intercept all fishing smacks and other vessels coming direct from Cuba with no intent to enter legally any port of entry; and also for the purpose of intercepting any returning filibustering expedition for the purpose of landing surreptitiously. Sanitary inspectors have been or will be stationed permanently in Havana and Santiago, and such inspectors will be sent to every seaport of Cuba to report to the marine hospital service on the prevalence of yellow fever.

CAPULET A TOTAL LOSS.

Much of the Mail and Baggage May Be Recovered.

St. Johns, N. F., June 27.—The revenue cruiser Fiona has arrived from the wreck of the steamer Capulet. She reports the steamer still keeping together. The afterpart is under water. There is every likelihood of recovering a portion of the mail and baggage, for which object the Fiona will return to the wreck with diving apparatus. She brought four bags of mail and also Capt. Fillis, the second officer and a seaman of the Capulet. The rest of the crew remain and declared to be a total wreck. The captain complains of the ship being looted by fishermen. The revenue officers declare his story much exaggerated. They go into the lees of the ship begins to-day.

Harrison's Welcome Home.

Butte, Mont., June 27.—Representative Hartman, one of the signers of the Teller bolting manifesto, was given an enthusiastic reception upon his arrival from St. Louis. He was met at the depot by thousands of people and a band, and after the crowd had formed the horses were unhitched and a rope attached to the vehicle. Several hundred enthusiastic silver men from all parties pulled the carriage a mile up the hill to the city. Buildings were decorated and people with brass bands paraded the city all day. In the evening Mr. Hartman addressed 5,000 people and explained in detail the St. Louis bolt.

American Greengoods Circulars in Japan.

Washington, June 27. — American greengoods men are operating in Japan and complaint has been made to the state department by some of the intended victims through Mr. McIvor, United States consul at Kanagawa. Mr. McIvor has sent to the department copies of greengoods circulars sent to people in various business districts. The greengoods operator directed that communications be addressed to Carlos Lapez, Weston, West Virginia.

Holt Will Case.

Washington, June 27.—A motion for a new trial of the Holt will case will be made to-day or Monday. If the motion is overruled the jury's findings will be sent to the orphan's court, which will necessarily affect the will. The attorneys for the repudiated paper will then note an appeal and if the court of appeals reject this, the case can go to the supreme court of the United States.

Capitalization Sheet of Cuba.

New York, June 27.—The Count and Countess of Castellane are, according to certain rumors that have been published here, in need of money. The story goes that a French lawyer has been sent here to try and induce George Gould to marry the latter's wife's sister. The alleged need of extra cash is, it is asserted, due to the count's mode of spending his American wife's money.

To Fight the Silver Move.

St. Louis, June 27.—A large number of business men of this city will go to the Chicago convention to work against a free-coinage platform. Ex-Gov. Francis will head about 250 members of the Merchants' exchange, and John C. Wilkinson a delegation of the wholesalers and jobbers.

Railroad Incorporated.

Albany, June 27.—The New York & Queens County Railway company has been incorporated by the secretary of state, with a capital stock of $2,000,000.

SHARKEY NOT IN IT.

Sadly Punished in a Four-Round Drawn Contest with Corbett.

San Francisco, June 25.—The fourround contest between Jim Corbett, ex-champion pugilist of the world, and Tom Sharkey, the latest aspirant for the title, drew an enormous crowd to Mechanic's pavilion last night. Betting was 10 to 8, that Corbett would not stop Sharkey. There was no Corbett money in sight at these odds. Corbett was seconded by Billy Delaney, Jim Carr and George Green. Sharkey's seconds were Danny Needham, Tim McGrath, and Paddy Ryan of Vallejo. Both men were called to the center of the ring and given instructions by Referee Carr at 10:45.

First round—Corbett first to lead, his left reaching Sharkey's wind. Sharkey leads wildly. Corbett has him guessing. Lands on left jaw. Men in clinches follow. Corbett swings left and lands on Sharkey's forehead. Sharkey leads left and misses. Several more clinches follow. The referee has difficulty in making them break away. Sharkey swings left and right and misses. Corbett reaches Sharkey under right eye and raises a lump as gong sounds.

Second round—Sharkey is aggressive and swings wildly. Sharkey pinches Corbett and holds on. It is now a wrestling match. Sharkey, to avoid punishment, throws his arms around Corbett repeatedly. Corbett lands on Sharkey's chest and face and hits at will. The sailor is very tired at the conclusion of the round.

Round three—Sharkey comes up with a jump and rushes the champion. Corbett was ready for him and got in a stiff punch on the jaw. After a few feints Corbett reaches Sharkey with his right. A rapid exchange near the ropes followed. Corbett appercuts with his right and follows with several smashes on the chest and wind. The lights desert Sharkey's left hands on the champion, but not effectively. Just as the gong sounds the men are at it, hammer and tongs.

Round four—Sharkey leads and Corbett ducks cleverly. Men meet clinch. Sharkey strikes viciously at Corbett and a short mix-up and a clinch follow. Referee unable to separate fighters. Sharkey fighting viciously. He throws Corbett heavily. There is little or no leading done and the men finish the round in a clinch. Referee declares contest a draw. Sharkey's right eye is closed while Corbett is without a scratch. After the call of time it required three policemen to free Sharkey from Corbett. Sharkey struggling in his corner and Corbett protesting to the Referee.

CAPT. DICKMAN'S HEARING.

How the Laurada Loaded Men and Munitions of War in Cuba.

Philadelphia, June 25.—Capt. Dickman, of the steamer Laurada, who was recently arrested at the instance of the Congosto, the Spanish consul in this city, on the charge of engaging in a Cuban filibustering expedition, was given a hearing yesterday afternoon before United States Commissioner Bell. A large number of witnesses had been examined the hearing was continued until to-morrow noon in order to give the government time to secure additional testimony. John Holmes, a sailor, swore that while the Laurada was at Port Tampa, Fla., Gen. Rivera, who had charge of the Commodore's expedition, came on board. Others who came on board were Mr. Hart, Col. Nunez and two other men. Hart, he said, was in charge of the party. Gen. Rivera accompanied the ship to Montauk Point, at the eastern end of Long Island. Two tugs brought two lighters alongside. One lighter carried about 100 Cubans, and the other was loaded with war munitions. At Montauk Point Col. Nunez left the Laurada with final instructions to Capt. Morton to "Get away as quickly as he could." The Laurada then sailed for Cuba and the Cubans uniformed, drilled, fired their guns and said they were "going to Cuba to fight of liberty." The witness stated that the men, arms and ammunition were landed on the coast of Cuba. He required four of his mates to take the row boats, he said, while another boat conveyed the guns, dynamite and flags. The witness while giving his testimony occasionally referred to a slip of paper, and upon cross-examination he hesitatingly admitted that upon this paper he had kept the run of the voyage, so that he could testify afterwards. Holmes' testimony was corroborated by Octavius D. Weyman, a sailor, from New York.

CORNELL FAVORITES

Everything Ready for the Varsity Race This Afternoon.

CLOSE, EXCITING CONTEST EXPECTED

The Four Crews in Splendid Condition and Friends of Each Confident of Victory for Their Favorites—The Course.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 26.—Lowering skies, a chilly atmosphere and an occasional drizzle of rain makes the opening of the day of the great 'varsity race a dismal one. Even the enthusiasm of the college lads, who are packed like sardines in the hotels, is affected by the low barometer. Nevertheless, the weather of the past week bids fair early to show signs of the lively interest they take in their respective crews. Followers of the different crews are sure that their favorites will win, and wagers were made on college loyalty before the arrival of the men in the boats. Excellent arrangements have been made for viewing the race. An observation train of forty cars are in readiness. Seats are provided for 2,000 people. This train will start with the racing crews and follow them to the finish. The train runs on the West Shore track, from which no obstructed view of the course is had. On the river a fleet of excursion boats, private yachts, and kinds of row boats will occupy positions near the finish. United States revenue cutters Manhattan and Hudson will keep the steamers clear of the course. The steam yachts Walla Walla and the Long Island, with the launches will patrol the basin, boats to anchorage positions and preserve order in the flotilla.

The Course.

Aside from the crowd on the trains and the crowd on excursion boats, other crowds will gather on the river banks from which portions of the course may be seen to good advantage. The crews will be started opposite Crum's Elbow, a point on the west bank of the Hudson, three miles above the Poughkeepsie bridge. Four lanes marked by stakeboats are laid out. The positions drawn by lot, and numbering from the west bank are: 1, Harvard; 2, Pennsylvania; 3, Cornell; 4, Columbia. At the mile and two-mile flags are placed stakeboats to mark the lanes. The bridge is the three-mile point. All four crews will pass under the second span. Above each lane is a huge square of white board, with a numeral to indicate the position of the crew. One mile below the bridge, the finish will be marked by sail boats anchored in the stream. From the three-and-a-half-mile point to the finish the excursion steamers and yachts will be anchored well outside of the Columbia's course. Should the race prove too rough this afternoon the race will be postponed until Saturday.

Grand Race Predicted.

A visit to the various quarters this morning elicited the fact that the representatives of the brawn and sinew of Harvard, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Cornell were ready and fit to row the race of their lives for the honor of their Alma Mater. There seemed to be an individual feeling amongst the men that not only would the race be the most interesting ever rowed on these waters, but that the struggle would be one to call forth the most intense efforts, and that the issue would be in doubt up to the last moment. At Cornell quarters the hobbled confidence that characterizes the training of Coach Courtney was manifested, but underlying was an air of satisfaction that indicated that the eight that carried the red and white colors were confident of a measure of success. Guy Richards, who has helped coach the Columbia 'varsity in the unavoidable absence of Walter Post, was non-committal, but it is well known that the conscientious management of the blue and white crew fondly expect to see a repetition of last year's victory. The Harvard crew have done most of their work in a secret manner as was possible. The following of the crimson oars are very sweet on their chances, and the work of the eight since they came to Poughkeepsie has given the utmost satisfaction to those who followed the doings of the Cambridge men. Good judges say that the 'varsity crew of '96 is one of the best crews turned out by Harvard for years. The pratice work of the Pennsylvania crew has been criticised somewhat unfavorably by the experts. Coach Wilson Ward, however, is by no means dissatisfied with the Quakers' showing. Columbia has the heaviest crew engaged. The men average 177 pounds, Harvard comes next with an average of 170½, Pennsylvania averages 169½ and Cornell has the lightest crew of all, the Ithacans averaging 161¾.

Cornell the Favorite.

The prevailing opinion as to the result of the close struggle that is looked for is, Cornell first; a desperate battle for second honors between Columbia and Harvard, with a slight tide of sentiment in favor of the blue and white, and Pennsylvania for the outsiders' position. However, the Quakers, like the proverbial dark horse, may upset the calculations of the sharps.

MORE INTEREST IN GOLF

THE GAME AN IMPORTANT PART IN PLAINFIELD'S SUMMER LIFE.

A Handicap Tournament Arranged for the Fourth, and Later On a Contest With New Brunswick Will Take Place

Golf will play an important part in the summer life of the members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and vigorous efforts are being made to increase the interest already taken in the game. The recent medal play brought out a number of new players and proved quite successful. On Saturday morning, a handicap tournament will be held on the links of the club. It will be for members only.

The entrance fee is fifty cents and can be paid to either H. W. Beebe or J. S. Authony. Entries close on Friday evening. James Stowell Authony, secretary of golf, will arrange the handicaps.

The course will be reserved for the contestants in the tournament on Saturday morning. A tea and reception will be held at the clubhouse in the afternoon and the Fourth promises to be a delightful day there.

Beside the tournament, a match has been arranged with the New Brunswick Golf Club to be played on the New Brunswick links on Saturday, July 11. The teams will consist of four men each and the Hillside team will be picked from the following:—H. D. West, Dean Ryder, Evarts Tracy, H. W. Beele, F. W. Wals, and J. S. Anthony.

A return match in this city will probably be played on August 8th.

Negotiations are also under way for a series of matches with the Montclair Golf Club but the dates have not been definitely decided upon.

FARMER JIM A FIGHTER

HE WILL STAND FOR DEMOCRACY, SILVER OR NO SILVER.

He Believes That There Is More Than One Vital Principle at Stake, and Republicanism Should be Repulsed.

A Press reporter yesterday asked J. E. Martine if he thought the Democracy of New Jersey would bolt in the event of a free silver candidate being named at Chicago, as Hon. Allan McDermott advised.

"No!" said he, "we will lose some voters undoubtedly, but it is ill policy to give such advice. Let individuals act upon their own judgement. Our party stands for more than one idea. I shall vote the Democratic ticket and will urge all Democrats to do the same."

"For a Democrat to vote the Republican ticket will count two, and for a Democrat not to vote counts one for the Republican party. Does any Democrat want this result?

"And what can a Democrat gain by bolting? Will he be any better off if he should succeed in electing McKinley? He is willing to pray to the gold god or the silver devil and vice versa, so long as it may catch votes.

"That grand old party that has guided us safely and wisely for three-quarters of our National existence, can and will guide us out of the maelstrom in which the party of McKinleyism has placed us. Let us fight the contest to a finish."

Pebbles on a Battlefield.

While transplanting a cabbage in his garden on Prospect place, Bound Brook, recently, William W. Provost found a King George III. English penny, bearing the date of 1730. The locality is the field where the battle of Bound Brook was fought, April 13th, 1777. A few days previous, at the other side of the field, James Roach found an English penny of 1722 and another old copper.

A WONDERFUL GAME.

BACHELORS AND BENEDICTS OF THE PARK CLUB TO MEET AGAIN.

This Time They Meet on the Y. M. C. A. Baseball Grounds on the Morning of July 5th—Makeup of the Two Teams.

History does not record a fiercer struggle or a harder won battle than the one between the Batchelors and the Benedicts of the Park Club on the club's bowling alleys last winter. The Benedicts won the match and have been boasting over that grand victory ever since. That famous contest will not be "in it," however, with the struggle that will be witnessed on the morning of July 4th. The Batchelors have been biding their time, and are now ready to meet their veteran antagonists in the greatest of summer games, baseball. It is the best substitute for bowling to be found in the list of summer sports, and so the great bowlers of the club will be expected to distinguish themselves.

The Bachelors think that they have their married clubmates at their mercy, but the Benedicts are steadily preparing for the dire conflict. Every afternoon a party of them may be seen catching flies or stopping fouls, and "Doc" Thiers, who is to pitch for them, daily practices on his front lawn trying to curve the ball around a neighboring tree. His favorite throw, with which he expects to strike out all the opposing, is a drop zigzag inshoot that rises toward the outside as it approaches the batter. J.T.Scott is scheduled to catch this wonderful ball. The battery on the other side is Sandford and Erickson. It will be impossible to tell the wonderful achievements of each player but, like many orchestras, "each man is a soloist."

The two teams are composed of the following:

BENEDICTS.		BACHELORS.
"Doc" Thiers	pitcher	F. Sandford.
J. T. Scott	catcher	R. W. Erickson.
Aug. VanDeventer	1st base	Dr. Mathewson.
Sam'l Townsend	2d base	Geo. G. Stevens.
H. A. McGee	3d base	W. F. Murray.
C. W. McCutchen	s. s.	C. Worth.
J. E. Erickson	l. f.	G. W. Cooley.
C. W. Smith	c. f.	W. S. Runyon.
J. C. Peck	r. f.	L. H. VanBuren.

How is that for an array of talent! Two such teams would fill Madison Square Garden with an audience. It will not be played there, however, but in the Y. M. C. A. field instead.

E. T. Douglass is manager and Augustus VanDeventer captain of the Benedicts, while Peter B. Matthews and R. W. Erickson hold these positions for the Bachelors. Mayor Hegeman, Jr., will act as umpire, while A. L. C. Marsh and F. O. Ball will act as referees to settle fights that are sure to occur. Now, while the game may not be so fine from a scientific point of view, there is likely to be lots of fun.

AMONG THE LIFE SAVERS

CHRISTION ENDEAVORERS REACH OUT FOR THESE STURDY MEN.

This Society Was the First to Inaugurate the Soul Saving Work, Among Men Who Risk Their Lives for Others.

A very interesting lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, was delivered Tuesday in the Seventh-day Baptist church, by Rev J. Lester Wells, of Jersey City, before the Christian Endeavorers of this city. His subject was the life-saving stations, lighthouses, and lightships, and the Christian Endeavor work done among the men there.

This is quite a new work, having only been done for four years now, and New Jersey has the honor of being the first to attempt it. When work is done for every station, there will be at least a half million people under the influence of the workers. This includes the numerous fishermen, oystermen and clammers, who gather round life-saving stations and lighthouses. A preacher at any station could easily collect quite a large audience.

The men who are employed by the Government at her life-saving stations are intelligent, many of them well educated men, and a very strong, athletic set physically. The photographs of crews shown by Mr. Wells showed a fine looking, soldierly set of men, such as one could trust in an hour of peril on the sea. Many pictures of stations were shown, most of them twin, tasteful little buildings. The stations along the Jersey coast are very close together, and all are connected by telephone. Pictures were shown of the various apparatus used by the life savers, the "life line," which is shot out to the ship, where a boat cannot go, that the breeches buoy may be used to bring in the shipwrecked people; and the fog horn, which is run by a steam engine, and kept constantly blowing in foggy weather, to warn vessels off the coast.

Mr. Wells showed many pictures of lighthouses on different parts of the coast; strong and tall, sometimes with the great waves dashing half way up their sides, they shine out their warning, a welcome sight to the bewildered mariner. The lighthouse keepers also often act as life savers, even the women, as in the case of brave Grace Darling, sometimes going to the rescue of some illfated ship.

Life savers, lighthouse keepers, and especially the crews of lightships, which continually patrol our coasts, are much isolated from the world. They are doing a grand work, a work which alone makes it possible for us to sit at home in peace while our friends are on the sea. Countless lives are saved every year by these devoted men. But they are very poorly paid by the Government, and nearly forgotten by their fellowmen. Now the Christian Endeavor Society has begun to try to send them a little Christian cheer and sympathy. Comfort bags, holding any little conveniences, from buttons to courtplaster, are very gladly received; good literature is a boon highly appreciated; but perhaps best of all are friendly letters, showing interest in their daily lives, and especially in the souls which Christ, the great life saver, came to rescue.

A Summer Tea.

Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street, gave a charming tea yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7, to the friends of her daughter, Miss Fanny Cox. Mrs. Cox was assisted in receiving by Miss Lucy Talmadge and Miss Edith Hyde. The home was prettily decorated, chiefly with roses. Tea was served at 7 o'clock, after which the young people indulged in dancing. There were about fifty persons present, who thoroughly enjoyed the event.

—The summer schedule has gone into effect on the Central railroad. There are only a few changes, chiefly on the Long Branch division.

Let the Eagle Scream.

The Fourth of July Committee of the Park Club met last evening and completed arrangements for their celebration, which will do doubt surpass anything of the kind ever held. They decided to charge an admission fee of 10 cents to the ball game in the morning the proceeds to go to the Y. M. C. A. The score cards for the game will be very unique and everybody will want one.

Colored Odd Fellows.

Union Lodge, No. 4023, Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, composed of thirty-two colored young men, was organized last evening in the lodge rooms over Hallock's hat store, by members of St. Mark's Lodge, of Jersey City. There was also a delegation from Pride of Essex Lodge, of Newark. After the organization was completed a fine collation was served. The new lodge will meet on the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month and they will elect officers at their next meeting.

SECOND ECHO MEETING.

E. E. ANTHONY CONTINUES HIS STORY OF THE CONVENTION.

He Pays a Glowing Tribute to the Earnestness of the New Jersey Delegation and Rouses Much Enthusiasm in the Audience.

In the same manner as gatherings at the wonderful Christian Endeavor convention recently held at Washington opened, so did the meeting at the Trinity Reformed church last Monday, which was really an echo of that great movement, one of the thousands that are being held all over this country.

The same songs were sung while the listeners gathered and then came the opening exercises, led by E. E. Anthony, who was to continue his report of the National Christian Endeavor Convention at Washington. There were prayers by Rev. Cornelius Schenck and Horace J. Martin and then the consecration hymn of the night before, "I'll Live For Him," was sung in an earnest manner.

After a few words of introduction, Mr. Anthony continued his interesting report of the Convention where he left off Sunday night, beginning with the services on Friday afternoon of the convention week to the close of the convention. As Mr. Anthony heard many good things at the convention that it was impossible to remember them all, so it is impossible to tell all the good things, for there were lots of them, that Mr. Anthony included in his remarks. He repeated many helpful thoughts of the speakers and described the wonderful meetings in a way that thrilled his hearers.

He told first of the committee conferences on Friday afternoon and described the one he attended, that of the lookout committee, which he declared was one of the corner stones of Christian Endeavor. The conference was conducted as if a new society had been formed and the question of the lookout committee came before them. It was decided that the committee should be composed of the best talent in the society, those who were willing to sacrifice time and energy to their Master's cause. First they should pray, next systemize their work and then work as a committee and not leave it all to the chairman. Friday evening he told of hearing "Caleb Cobweb," who talked as he writes in his correspondence of the "Golden Rule," and spoke in favor of forming a senior society in every church and its benefits. Dr. Withrow, of Chicago, told of the advantages of securing the young in the work. Every speaker was good, said Mr. Anthony, but everyone seemed better than the last. So it was throughout the convention. He told of the consecration of heroism and rain that was against the success of the meeting but "there was something in our hearts that overbalanced all discomfort."

Mr. Anthony was one of the privileged ones to attend the junior rally Saturday morning, and his enthusiasm in describing was contagious. The thought of the wonderful work among the children, as shown by the meeting, filled every heart with gladness. He next described the grand gathering of 75,000 earnest Endeavorers at the steps of the Capitol and their triumphant march down Pennsylvania avenue with the New Jersey delegation well up toward the front. Mr. Anthony's voice shook with emotion as he told of the wonderful sight and declared it the greatest meeting of God's followers since the children of Israel assembled to hear the law read to them by Moses, and possibly even greater than that.

"I don't like to boast about New Jersey," he said in speaking of that march from the Capitol, "but New Jersey did beat them all in singing 'The Banner of the Cross.'" At his suggestion, that soul inspiring hymn was sung by Horace J. Martin, all joining in the chorus.

The New Jersey rally and reception on Saturday evening, he next spoke about, and told of the grand surprise the New Jersey delegates were treated to by Secretary Baer who came to the rally and said that the New Jersey Christian Endeavorers led all the world in efficiency, earnestness, consecration and results. "It was a joyful time for us."

Sunday was a day of rest at the convention. The story of an evangelistic party under Mr. Anthony's lead that visited the George Mallely Home that evening was told by Miss Dunn. Then Mr. Anthony resumed his account, remarking on the definition that one of the boys at the home gave for a Christian Endeavorer. "I am a Christian Endeavorer," said the lad, "is just the same as a Christian."

If Mr. Anthony had spoken feelingly before, when he came to tell of the consecration meeting that closed the convention, he spoke doubly so. His remarks were very effective, and so was the hymn, "My Jesus, I Love Thee." New Jersey's response to the roll call, that was sung at the close of his remarks.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck closed the meeting with the benediction.

TOOK A PIG FOR THE OATS.

LAW SUIT BETWEEN TWO FARMERS WITH A LAUGHABLE SIDE.

Disagreement Over the Sale of Oats, and One of the Agriculturists Carried Away a Porker to Even Up The Deal for the Oats.

Martinville and the surrounding country has been quite stirred up over the quarrel of two farmers living near that place over a load of oats and a pig. One law suit was started by the quarrel and the second one was ended yesterday, with the discovery of a fatal defect in the plaintiff's papers by the defendent's lawyer.

Some time ago, young Charles Baldwin bought some oats of John Stine, giving Stine to understand that they were were for Baldwin's father. When Stine wanted old Mr. Baldwin to pay for them, he refused by saying that his son, not he, purchased them. Stine was determined not to get left, however, and so he swooped down on the Baldwin farmyard, and captured a pig, and despite its squeels, carried it away to his home. The elder Baldwin was exceeding wroth at this turn of affairs, and he immediately sued his neighbor to recover damages or the pig. The case came up in Justice Mattison's court, and Baldwin secured judgement.

Then it was Stine's turn to be angry and started another suit in Justice Austin's court against young Baldwin on the charge of procuring goods under false pretenses. This case came up for trial Monday and young Charles Baldwin was represented by City Judge DeMeza. Judge DeMeza made application for a dismissal of the case on account of the defect in the papers and Justice Austin granted his application.

Stine is now vowing vengeance as he has lost both oats and pig and another suit is sure to follow.

PHYSICIANS MUST REPORT.

Borough Board of Health Insist on Observance of All Ordinances.

The North Plainfield Board of Health met last Monday and transacted routine business, passing the usual summer health ordinance. The ordinance, according to a poor law, must be advertised in a Somerville newspaper, whereby not ten people in the borough will see it. The matter of one of Plainfield's physicians violating the law in not reporting a contagious case that he had been attending for over three weeks, was brought before the board. Rev. Dr. Honeyman, president of the board, told the members of the board present of a call the accused physician had made upon him and of the excuses he had rendered to him for not reporting the case. It was the general opinion of the board that hereafter physicians from this city or elsewhere would be prosecuted as the law directs for failing to report similar cases of contagious diseases.

Nipped in the Bud of Time.

Edward Richards, the druggist, of Fourth and Liberty streets, lighted a lamp in his sleeping apartments at 10 o'clock and, as he thought, extinguished the match, which he threw out the bedroom window. The burned ember landed on a canvas awning over the door and in a few minutes the awning was all in a blaze and several of the weatherboards were scorched. Mr. Richards had presence of mind and hastily tore down the remnants of the awning, frame and all. Had a few minutes more elapsed before the discovery the building would have been well on fire and the firemen would no doubt have had a lively tussle.

First Dose Helped.

TO MAKE A FINE STREET.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS WILL MA CADAMIZE MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

Members Went Over the Ground This Morning.—The Work Will Cost $4,000 Per Mile.—Two and One Eighth Miles.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met Monday last at the home of S. B. Wheeler, Netherwood Farm, for the purpose of considering the question of macadamizing Mountain avenue. The avenue is two and one-eighth miles long, from Somerset street to the line at Union avenue. The members first enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Wheeler and they all voted that never before had they drank such rich milk, and after cracking a few jokes at the expense of each other, drove over the avenue and inspected the same. They were all of the opinion that the avenue should be macadamized and it was so decided.

The road bed will be 18 feet, and it will be one of the best in the county. The cost will be about $4,000 per mile. The work will be started within 10 days. County Engineer Doughty was present and received suggestions from the members of the board regarding the construction of the road. When completed there will be a fine macadam road from Somerset street through to Scotch Plains, Springfield, Millburn, Morristown and other adjoining places and it will be a great improvement.

The boad returned to Mr. Wheeler's house where they were royally treated by their host. In the party was John Frech, counsel for the board. This eminent lawyer has held his position in the board for thirteen consecutive years, and it would be almost im possible to do without him. During his service he has lost but one case for the board.

The increase in county valuation over last year is $779,600. The tax rate this year will be fifty two cents, the same as last year.

Tramps Escaped.

A freight train pulled into the North Avenue station about 10 o'clock Monday and the conductor notified the night operator at the station that a gang of tramps were on board, causing him trouble. The operator notified Night Operator Fred Barker at the telephone office, and he blew his police whistle. Roundsman Frederickson responded. He and several bystanders, whom he called to his aid, made an attempt to catch them. The tramps evidently saw their pursuers first, for they made themselves scarce in the darkness and escaped.

Last summer one of our grand children died with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their deep gratitude for the cures it has effected. $6,000 FOR THE SEWERS

THIS SUM SET ASIDE TO COVER EMERGENCIES THAT MAY ARISE.

Heated Discussion Over the Necessity of the Appropriation—New Police Rules Adopted—Other Business.

The adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Monday was a tedious one. It was late when the meeting was called to order and the business was not transacted with any remarkable degree of despatch. All the members responded to the roll call except Messrs. Fisk and Stebbins. Stenographer George Wean was also absent on a vacation.

The residents of Belvidere avenue petitioned Council for a large number of crosswalks and on Mr. Ginna's motion the matter was referred to the street committee with power.

Samuel Dreier asked for a pawnbroker's license and it was granted, as was also John Scott's petition for a carting license.

The petition of residents asking for electric lights on North avenue, between Leland avenue and Berckman street, was referred to the proper committee.

The commissioners recently appointed to assess benefits and damages in relation to the system of sewers asked for an appropriation to cover the services of a stenographer. It was decided later that the commissioners had the power to secure such a person, and the Clerk was instructed to notify them of the fact.

Mayor Gilbert returned the sprinkling ordinance without his approval, and gave as his reason that the ordinance did not specify the character of wagons to be used. On a motion it was ordered spread on the minutes, and then the report was returned to the committee on a motion of Mr. Sermon. The latter stated that the Corporation Counsel had made a slight mistake and he asked that the ordinance be killed so that a new one could be introduced, and the ordinance was killed.

Mr. Frost stated that regarding the petition of Mr. Sampson and other residents of East Fifth street, complaining of the noise and speed of the trolley cars, had been considered and that the difficulties had been remedied. Superintendent Adlemann had assured him that the speed would hereafter be decreased, also that everything possible would be done to give good service. Mr. Tolles offered a resolution rescinding a former one setting a date in July for the Madison avenue commissioners to meet. The new resolution set the date at September 3, 1896, at eight o'clock in the evening, and the same was adopted.

Regarding the flushing of the sewers by the Plainfield Water Supply company, a resolution was offered by Mr. Frost that the Common Council accept the terms of the Water company to flush the sewers for ten cents per 1,000 gallons. This was the sewer committees recommendation and it was adopted. At this point Mr. Barrows introduced the new police rules and regulations which it had taken the committee three months to arrange. After they were read Mr. Barrows offered a resolution that the same be adopted and that 200 copies be printed. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution which gave the sewer committee power to sell the dwelling, barns and outhouses located on the sewer beds and secure an auctioneer to perform the work. This in the committee's opinion was deemed best, and it was adopted. Mr. Frost stated that the council had ascertained the entire cost of the system of the sewers to date to be $162,152.58. He then offered a resolution that the assessments for benefits and damages authorized by law be referred to the commissioners on assessment recently appointed. Mr. Frost said the above amount included the fees for the Corporation Counsel and the commissioners.

This statement brought out a heated discussion. Mr. Ginna wanted to allow the commissioners $2,000, though he did not think $5,600 was fair compensation. Mr. Moore asked if the Corporation Counsel was not paid a regular salary. He was informed that he was, but Mr. Ginna said that an increase was voted Mr. Marsh.

President See thought that now was the time to fix the figures. He recommended that $6,000 be set aside for emergency. The Council would not be compelled to spend it all, but it would provide for the expenses mentioned. Mr. Weisphal said that he voted once for an increase of $500 for Mr. Marsh and he did not think another increase should be granted. While he thought $500 was securing good services for a reasonable amount he thought there were times when the Corporation Counsel had nothing to do for the city. President See stated

SOCIALIST-LABOR TICKET

THE FIRST PARTY TO PUT A COUNTY TICKET IN THE FIELD.

Thirty Delegates Participate in the Convention and Endorse the National Nominees—Plainfielder for Assembly.

The Socialist Labor party of the Eighth District held a Congressional and county convention last Monday in the basement of Reform Hall. There were about thirty delegates present from Jersey City, Hoboken, Elizabeth and Plainfield. The convention was called to order by B. S. Miller, of Elizabeth, secretary of the county committee, and Frank Mills, of Elizabeth, was selected as chairman. John W. James, of Plainfield, was elected vice-president and J. P. Weigel, of Elizabeth was made secretary.

The following nominations were then made:

For Congress, W. J. Campbell, Jersey City; for Senator of Union County, Otto Hufnagel, Elizabeth; for Assemblymen, J. W. James, Plainfield; Charles Dauman, J. P. Weigel, Elizabeth; for Sheriff, Arthur Scott, Plainfield; for Coroner, W. E. Van-Norton, Elizabeth. The nominations were followed with a few remarks from the delegates. The convention endorsed unreservedly Charles H. Matchett for President and Matthew McGuire for Vice-President. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested and the delegates felt as though their party would secure large increase in the votes this fall.

TOO BUSY TO HAVE A LEGAL FIGHT.

Ernest Barrett, the Plumber, Claimed to Have a Good Case, Though.

Justice Nash issued the summons several days ago in the case of John Bodine, of Dunellen, against Ernest Barrett, on contract, and Monday afternoon the case was settled by the defendant paying the amount in full. As he paid it he told his story of the case and said that had he the time he would like to push the case to an end. Barrett is a plumber, and is especially busy at present. According to him, he had an account with Bodine, while Bodine also owed him something. When these accounts balanced they declared them off. Some time after Bodine sent Barrett's place of business and began arguing with him. Barrett told him to stop and go out, and when Bodine refused, Barrett opened the door and hinted that if he did not leave at once forcible means might be necessary. Bodine went away very angry and immediately started this suit for a small amount of plumbers' materials at almost double its value, according to Barrett. The amount was small, and he knew well this evening. They have worked hard and earnestly to bring prosperity back to the corps again and have succeeded fairly well, at least so far as attendance is concerned. The meeting tonight will be a special one. From here the boys go to Stapleton, S. I., for a week, and then they go to Prohibition Park, where they will take an active part in the annual camp meeting of the Army.

Capt. and Mrs. Brewer, who have been in charge of Corps No. 1, Jersey City, will succeed in the command of the Plainfield barracks. They are experienced Army officers.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

UNCLE SAM KIND TO THEM

A PLAINFIELD ORPHAN AND A WIDOW GRANTED PENSIONS.

The Claims Were Presented and Settled by Lawyer W. A. Coddington—Back Pay Received by Both of the Parties.

Two pensions have been granted by the Commissioner of Pensions, at Washington, to Plainfield people, and in both cases through the agency of ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington. The first was the case of Jennie Squires, of Netherwood avenue, minor child of the late David C. Squires, who fought in the United States Army during the Civil War.

About two years ago the mother of the child consulted ex-Judge Coddington in reference to her claim, and he advised her that she had a legal claim, and that her daughter was entitled to draw a pension until she was sixteen years old. Ex-Judge Coddington then took the necessary steps to protect the claim. Last week the pension for the back pay was received, amounting to nearly $1,000, and the child will also receive a monthly petition of $14.

About the same time that ex-Judge Coddington took steps to secure this pension, he started suit for Mrs. Northup, widow of the late William R. Northup, and last week her pension was allowed and she received the back pay from the time of her husband's death and will receive a monthly pension hereafter.

Both of these cases required a great deal of proof and in each case there was lots of testimony taken and sent to Washington, which, of course, required time.

About five years ago, ex Judge Coddington was appointed a solicitor and attorney in the Federal courts at Washington, D. C., and during that time he has conducted several very important cases and in every instance has been successful.

HE'S FOR FREE PIG IRON.

A. P. Hall Tells McKinley How to Build on Bryan's Logic.

Major McKinley was interested the other morning in a letter from a Georgia man, A. P. Hall, of Atlanta, who is 16 to 1 man, but does not want any half-way measures. He says:

> I accept the arguments of the advocates of free silver and agree with the remedy so far as it goes, but it does not go far enough, and in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of pig iron at a ratio of 16 to 1 by the United States alone, and can prove by the best authority that such a policy on our part will cause others, not plentifully supplied by nature with this article, to become debtor a chance to pay his debts, thereby making the whole country prosperous.

The writer proves by liberal quotations from Bryan and Senators Jones and Stewart that the free coinage of pig iron and the stamp of the Government would make its bullion value the same as its mint value. He also proves by the same authorities that there need be no fear of a contraction of the currency, for if gold and silver should be driven out by the baser metal, there is plenty of pig iron to take their places, and so to give the people plenty of money.

He declares that wages would be compelled to rise, because no man would be fool enough to work for $1 a day who could make $1.00 a day by picking up rusty nails and old horseshoes and taking them to the mint for coinage.

Major McKinley was much amused by this letter, and thinks it is one of the happiest hits evolved by the present situation.

An Enemy of the Maple.

A small white beetle or bug has appeared on the maple trees in the vicinity of Franklin place and East Sixth street and is apparently killing the trees which it infests. When small it is white, but turns to a brown as it grows to almost half an inch in length. Several of the trees are covered with the small insects while the under side of the leaves are white with its eggs. It apparently attacks the leaf stem where it joins the branch, eating it away.

The Fact That Doctors

frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from catarrh is proof that it is a local and climatic disease, and not a constitutional affection. Therefore, unless you can afford to leave home and business, you can find the remedy in Ely's Cream Balm. Applied directly to the seat of the disease, it effects instant relief and a satisfactory cure after a few continuances. No mercury nor injurious drug is contained in the balm. 50 cents. All druggists.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

JOSHUA'S SWIFT CHASE

WHEN A FUSILADE OF SHOTS OCCURRED THE ACTOR FLED.

A Disciple of Thespis Wins the Heart of a Country Girl and Then Suddenly Loses it By an Act of Cowardice.

Courage born of anger and jealousy and emphasized with a revolver last Friday won back the affection of a man's fickle sweetheart.

The angry man was Joshua Lenkert, a farm hand employed by John Lander, a farmer living near Bound Brook, and the fickle young woman was Lander's daughter Susan.

An actor, who called himself Janeway Jennings, came from New York a few weeks ago and engaged board at the Lander farm. Susan had shown a decided fondness for Lenkert, who, though a farm hand, is a good looking and intelligent youth. But there was no more courting for Joshua after the actor arrived. He monopolized all of the time of the pretty country girl and went walking with her, while Joshua denounced the man under his breath and resolved to punish him for stealing Susan's heart.

"I may be only a gawky farmer," Joshua said to a friend, "and I don't dress like that play actor fellow, but he'll be sorry he ever came here." Joshua even went so far as to purchase a new suit of clothes at a Bound Brook store, but, although he arrayed himself in these and a new derby hat, Miss Lander failed to smile upon him as of old.

While Joshua was milking the cows Thursday night Jennings proposed to Susan that she take a rid with him. "We'll go over to New Brunswick," he said, "and get some good ice cream. Bound Brook cream isn't good enough for a pretty girl like you."

Lenkert heard the remark and flushed with anger, but said nothing. After Jennings had harnessed one of Lander's horses to a buggy and driven away Joshua carried his milk pails to the house, put a pistol in his pocket, hurried back to the barn, led out a horse, sprang on its bare back and started in pursuit.

After a gallop of half an hour Joshua came in sight of the buggy. The vehicle was near New Brunswick. The hood was down and Joshua could not see the occupants of the buggy. Pressing his horse forward until he was able to look in the buggy, Joshua saw a sight that infuriated him. Susan's head was on Jennings' shoulder.

Drawing his revolver, Lenkert leaned over his horse and sent three bullets through the buggy top.

The actor leaped from the buggy and fled, Susan sat silent and Joshua had returned the pistol to the pocket. Then, with a glance in the direction the actor had taken, she said:

"I hate a coward! Joshua, will you forgive me?"

Joshua was all forgiveness. Tying his horse to the back of the buggy, the farmhand took the actor's place beside Susan, and they returned to the farmhouse.

Jennings returned to the farm yesterday, packed his trunk, and left for New York.

BABIES CAMP ALMOST READY.

But Before It Is Opened it Will Be Necessary to Have Certain Things.

The managers of the Children's Camp desire to inform the public that they hope to have the Camp ready to receive sick babies by the last of next week.

As soon as the work is completed the ladies will furnish it and will give a tea at the Camp, when they hope all who are interested in the work of caring for the sick babies (and they hope everyone will be) will come and inspect all that has been done.

While kind friends have donated many necessary articles as well as money with which to carry on the work, there is needed a small refrigerator for iced milk, possibly some one might have a nursery one that they are through with; a small cooking oil stove for the nurse to use in preparing light lunches and a pair of andirons for the fire place that a gentleman friend of the Camp had built.

The question of how the babies are to be taken to and from the Camp has not yet been decided upon. It may not be generally known that the Camp is only to be used during the day, and it will therefore be necessary to have a two-seated covered wagon and a horse with which to transport the babies. Has anyone such a vehicle they would loan or hire for the summer, and a horse that would be loaned for its keep at a livery stable? If so, one.

Any suggestions as to means of carrying out this plan will be gladly received. They hope by another year the work will be so well established the Camp will have a conveyance of its own. All donations of money will be received by Mrs. Frank Sprague Martin, 219 Hillside avenue, Chairman of Finance Committee, and other donations will be called for if word is sent to Mrs. Frank Harder corner ninth street and Madison avenue.

MANUFACTURING TOWN.

LAND BOUGHT BETWEEN DUNELLEN AND BOUND BROOK.

Silas D. Drake the Active Principal at the Head of the Movement—A. D. Thompson, of this City, Elected President.

The New Jersey Mutual Realty Company was incorporated on Saturday with the following officers: President, A. D. Thompson; first vice-president, Sylvanus Ayers; second vice-president, Peter Egenolf; treasurer, P. H. Oakley; secretary and manager, S. D. Drake. The company has secured 200 acres of land between Cedar Lane and the Greenbrook tanks, on the lines of the Central and Lehigh Valley Railroads, above Dunellen, and contemplate building a new manufacturing town. Already negotiations are being made with five large manufacturing plants to locate on this property. As this mile frontage offers unsurpassed facilities for manufacturers, the company contemplates offering small investors an opportunity of buying stock in this company in shares of $100 each, thus enabling them to share in the profits of this enterprise. In a short time a limited amount of stock will be offered for sale by the First National Banks of this city and Bound Brook. The fact that the new telford county road runs in the rear of this site, also the opening of the boulevard from Dunellen to Bound Brook, with the trolley line on the same, is the best evidence as to what the profits of this enterprise will be. Already prospective purchasers have placed orders for lots in this new town, and considerable stock has been subscribed for by conservative investors. This new enterprise being near Plainfield, will be of great and incalculable benefit to this city. Mr. Drake, the active principal, has promised great things with the opening up of this new town.

WASHINGTON PARK ATHLETES.

The Boys of the Park Hold an Athletic Meet.

The junior athletes of Washington Park held a great athletic meet on the smooth avenues of the Park Saturday afternoon. The running and bicycle events were held on the road, and the field events on the lawn in the rear of the residence of W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue.

The contests were all exciting and quite creditable for the boys, especially Fred Overton's standing broad jump of 7 feet, 2 inches, and Harry Curtis' high jump of 4 feet, 7 inches. Charles Dupee and Wilbur F. Cornwell shared the duties of referee. The follwing were the contests and winners:

THE CLUB HOUSE SELECTED

The Crescent Who Choose the Old Martin Homestead as Their Home.

The Crescent Wheelmen have at last selected a permanent clubhouse. The matter came up before a special meeting of the Board of Governors last evening and it was decided to secure the old Martin homestead, on West Second street next to the corner of Park avenue, now the property of Assemblyman W. R. Codington.

The location is an excellent one for a club house and the building itself seems particularly adapted for one.

It will be overhauled and thoroughly equipped with everything that will enhance the comfort and pleasure of the members. The size of the building makes it impossible to have a bowling alley there, and its loss will be felt by many of the members, as the bowling contingent is a large fraction of the club.

Dunbar Boys Recovered.

The Dunbar boys who were injured in the accident on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Stelton some time ago and have about recovered. It is understood that they will bring suit against the company.

EVERYONE ENTHUSIASTIC

MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S FESTIVAL WILL BE A BIG SUCCESS.

Frank L. C. Martin Will Act as Grand Marshal and Will Make All Necessary Details for the Bicyclists.

When the Daily Press found its way into the homes of Plainfield's citizens last Friday, the news that Plainfield was to have a "Midsummer Night's Festival" was read with great interest. The people have appreciated Councilman Frost's efforts to give them open air concerts, but the expression of gratitude was unanimous for his efforts to bring the concerts to their homes.

The idea of the bicycle parade was well received by the cyclists. The wheelwomen were especially pleased with it, their only worry being that there would be no place for them. But Councilman Frost is too good a general to leave the women out, and there will be a special division for them.

He has now placed the entire arrangement of the bicycle parade in the hands of F. L. C. Martin, Plainfield's pioneer bicycle dealer, and if there is any man in the State capable of making a success of it, Mr. Martin is that man. He will act as Chief Marshal and, with an efficient corps of aides, will control the vast army of wheelmen that will invade Plainfield on the night of the "Midsummer Night's Festival," which is Tuesday, July 28th.

Everybody in Plainfield and all the surrounding towns that rides a wheel of any size, shape or kind, is invited to take part in the parade.

The news of the "Festival" was especially pleasing to those living along the line of the trolley and most of them declared at once that they would do their share of decorating.

The store keepers were well pleased at the news for such an event is bound to bring considerable trade from out of town beside enlarging the regular local trade.

Altogether, everybody is greatly pleased with Plainfield's midsummer event and promises to be something long to be remembered.

LITTLE GIRLS GOOD TIME.

Ninth Birthday of Ellena T. Woodcock Celebrated Yesterday.

Ellena T. Woodcock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Woodcock, of West Seventh street, celebrated the ninth anniversary of her birthday Friday afternoon in a thoroughly enjoyable manner. She invited a number of her young friends to her home and the time was passed on the lawn in playing games, etc., after which they adjourned to the house where sandwiches, cake, lemonade and ice-cream were served. The decorations were pink and white.

In the centre of the table was a large birthday cake, decorated with nine pink and white candles. The waitresses who helped to serve the little people were Marion Woodcock, Nellie Berry, Annie Littell and Ada Fountain. Those present were Grace Weeks, Edith Runk, Jean, Jack and Will Douglass, Florence and Elizabeth McClay, Rose Woltman Gideon and Guion Fountain, Evelyn and Herbert Hillman, Russell McIntyre and Master Alexander Ross.

WANTS A PAROLE.

Robert Randolph Anxious to Have His Son Released From Prison.

Robert Randolph, colored, is circulating a petition among the citizens of Plainfield for the the purpose of presenting it to Gov. Griggs. The petition asks that Mr. Randolph's boy Alonzo Randolph, may be pardoned from State Prison.

It will be remembered that a few years ago, the boy, while in an intoxicated condition, attempted an assault on Mr. and Mrs. Richard Day's young daughter, in the rear of their house on East Front, street and to save the boy from lynching it was deemed best to take him secretly to Elizabeth in a closed carriage. The boy was sentenced to State prison for 15 years. His father can get him a job at $9 per week and is anxious to have him paroled. If this was done he would still be under the direction of the State authorities and if he failed to behave himself he would quickly be re-committed.

Already a large number of the best people in town have signed the petition through Mr. Randolph's solicitation.

Cut With a Circular Saw.

Theodore J. Mason, of Watchung avenue, a careful and trustworthy employe in R. H. McCullough's of North Plainfield, was working on what is known as a circular or hand saw, on Thursday afternoon at five o'clock, when his right hand accidentally caught in the machinery and it was badly lacerated. Dr. Probasco dressed the wound, but it will be a long time before the patient will have the use of his hand again.

A Mad Dog.

A valuable pet dog belonging to F. A. Pope, of Park avenue, went mad on Wednesday and it was found necessary to shoot the animal. John Carney put the dog out of his misery with three shots from a revolver.

DEATH FROM LOCKJAW.

EUGENE HOERSTER SUCCUMBED TO THE FATAL MALADY YESTERDAY.

Had Suffered Intense Pain for the Last Few Days, But Conscious to the End—A Short Sketch of His Life.

The death of Eugene Hoerster, which occurred Sunday morning at 11:30, was a severe shock to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Death was caused by lockjaw, the result of an accident, Sunday, July 5th, when Mr. Hoerster was thrown from a wagon. On Monday last the first symptoms of lockjaw were noticed, but Mr. Hoerster was not alarmed. On Tuesday he went out and attended to some business, but after that he grew rapidly worse, though he was conscious to the last. He was asked just before he died if he wanted to be taken to Saengerbund Hall or the German Reformed church, and he replied that he preferred the church, although he would not object to the hall if it was the desire of his frends.

Eugene Hoerster was born at Cassel-on-the-Rhine, Hessen, Germany, September 2d, 1862, but was brought up in Switzerland. When he was old enough he entered the banking business and worked at it for four years. When he left the banking house he was connected with he received a valuable recommendation.

At the age of eighteen years he came to this country and settled in Plainfield, where for a year and a half he worked for Scheplin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co. When he reached the age of twenty-three years he was married to Miss Lena Mobus, of Washingtonville, and they have lived happily together for the past ten years. After they were married Mr. Hoerster engaged in the bottling business and has conducted the same for sometime at the corner of Somerset and Race streets, where he was successful.

While in Germany he held the position of a lieutenant in the Reserve Army. A widow and one daughter survive him. Mr. Hoerster was a member of the Saengerbund, and that society will turn out in a body at the funeral, which will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from the house and 3 o'clock from the German Reformed church. Interment will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Monte Scott Suspended.

Chairman Gideon, of the L. A. W. racing board, has issued his regular weekly bulletin and it is the most voluminous of the year. The most important announcement is the suspension of Monte Scott, of Providence, R. I., formerly of Plainfield, pending an investigation of his standing as an amateur. Scott won the time prize in the last two Irvington-Millburn races and he is one of the best distance riders in the county. Hadfield's suspension is also formally announced.

Couldn't Get Together.

The Borough Council committees which were to have met Saturday evening to discuss several important matters did not materialize. Mayor Hegeman, Councilman Lounsbury and Clerk Arnold were the only three persons present and no business was transacted. Mr. Pech was called suddenly away on business and Mr. Valiant left Saturday to enjoy his vacation. No arrangements have been made for a future meeting of the committees.

Charges With Assault.

Fell Down an Open Cellar.

A young man named Leland from the West End fell down an open cellar way at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street Saturday night, and sustained a slight cut in the back of the head. He went to Dr. Fritt's office and had the wound treated. The injury is not a serious one.

Sent Up for Twenty Days.

George Sanatz was not a very handsome object when he was arranged before City Judge DeMeza this morning. He was dirty, ragged, and there was an unkempt air about him that suggested laziness. He said that he was a native of Germany, twenty-two years old, and was now coming from Orange, Mass., looking for work. He was a weaver. Patrolman Saunders had found him fast asleep in an empty freight car on the Cottage place siding and had arrested him for trespassing on the property of the Jersey Central railroad. He pleaded guilty and went down for twenty days.

WASN'T THE RIGHT SIGN.

An Impudent Young Man Meets His Just Deserts.

There is a young man in this town that does not love the sight of policemen, and indeed he has a particular antipathy for them, and whenever he sees one of them, and can't catch him, he expresses it by placing his left thumb to his nose and wiggling his fingers.

Sunday he saluted Chief Grant in this manner from a coal train, but his fun didn't last long for Sergeant Kiely soon escorted him to the lockup. This young man is John Benford, aged 19, and he lives on Cottage place, better known as Paradise alley, with his mother. He has been up in the city court several time for various offences, and so this time City Judge DeMeza determined to make an example of him by sending him to Elizabeth for thirty days.

AMERICAN AND BRITISH HUMOR.

Radical Differences Which Each Race Finds Difficult in Recognizing.

Beyond a question there is a distinct difference between American and British humor. To most Americans London Punch is indescribably dreary, yet to the average Britisher it is the funniest paper published. Per contra, the Englishman seldom enjoys an American joke, and our comic papers are as a rule senseless to him. As an illustration of these national characteristics Charles W. Brooke, a prominent lawyer, recalls the experience of Charles W. Browne, better known as Artemus Ward, one of the first of American humorists. "It was a singular thing that Ward, while he captured the British public in his first lecture, made a complete failure when he became a member of the staff of London Punch, he being, I believe, the only American who was ever employed upon that paper. When he began his first lecture in the British capital by praising warmly the hospitality of the people of London. In glowing terms he described the picture which had been drawn by the British public of the warmth of the greeting which would be extended to him when he had crossed the Atlantic. 'But,' he added, 'the realization has far exceeded the anticipation. Since I have been in London I have received more and measure at the hospitalities of which I have been the recipient. Why, I assure you that even every time I have left a cab a hand has been extended to me for a shilling.' The newspapers at that time related that first there were a few smiles upon the faces in the London audience, then some one tittered, after that a few people laughed, and in about half a minute the entire audience was in a roar. From that time a laugh followed everything he said. His work on Punch, however, the British people were incapable of appreciating; even his delightful description of his visit to the tower of London, in which, in a reminiscent mood, he spoke about his puritan ancestors and told how they had traveled to a bleak and foreign shore, where they could worship God according to the dictates of their consciences and prevent every other man from worshiping according to the dictates of his. That sort of real humor was too subtle for the Londoner."—Philadelphia Times.

Caulas Strategy.

Dogs are allowed to roam at large in Madagascar, and in their frequent excursions they have constantly to pass over the streams of this swampy island. Here they are waylaid by those horrid alligators, which regard a dog as a dainty morsel. This is how the canine quadrupeds contrive to dodge the "cocandrilles," as the French linemen call them. They will assemble in a pack of half a dozen or more near the bank of the river, and commence barking with all their might. Whereupon shoals of alligators are seen converging to the spot in eager expectation of a copious feast. When all the alligators of the neighborhood are got together, the dogs start off at a gallop and cross the river in safety 200 or 300 yards up stream. A remarkable proof this of the instinct and intelligence of animals.—Revue Anecdotique.

FIBBED AND RAN AWAY

KITTIE THORNTON COULDN'T FOOL HER AUNT WITH A FALSEHOOD.

Had Been Working for Mrs. Adams, the Milliner—Gave up Her Position Unknown to Her Aunt, Mrs. Totten.

After deceiving her aunt for nearly a month, seventeen-year-old Kittie Thornton fled from the consequences of her deception and has been missing since last Wednesday morning.

Four years ago Mrs. James Totten, wife of Patrolman Totten, took her sister's child, Kittie, home with her on the death of the mother and father of the child. Since then Kittie Thornton has been living with the Tottens, first at their home on Manson place, and later at their new home at 411 Division street.

Kittie entered Mrs Adams' millinery store on East Front street near Park avenue to learn the trade. She got along pretty well until the Fourth, when she left. Evidently she did not want her aunt to know about it, for she left ostensibly for work every morning, returning to lunch and dinner on time. Instead of going to work she went to the home of a friend on Manson place, and said that she was to spend her vacation there.

Last Tuesday, she came home saying that Mrs. Adams had gone away and that she was on her vacation. Wednesday morning she accompanied Mrs. Totten to Dr. Thiers and while her aunt was there, she said that she was going to Mrs. Adams' store to get her silver thimble that Mrs. Totten had been inquiring after. Mrs. Totten made an appointment with the dentist and then walked down town to meet her niece.

They met on West Front street in front of White's store. Kittie said that she could not find her thimble, but that Mrs. Adams had returned with a new stock of hats and that she would have to go to work again. Mrs. Totten said that was not right when her vacation had just begun and suggested a call on Mrs. Adams. Kittie refused and Mrs. Totten insisted. At last Kittie exclaimed, "I won't go back to the store with you, Aunt Kittie, I have been telling you lies," and then she went on to explain. "Very well, Kitty, I will attend to you later," said Mrs. Totten and then she went to see Mrs. Adams, while Kittie promised to wait for her at the corner of North and Park avenues, but when Mrs. Totten returned, Kittie was gone and nothing more has been seen of her.

Mrs. Totten was seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning and told the circumstances of the disappearance of her niece. She said that she had had implicit confidence in her neice and was greatly surprised and worried over her sudden departure. She will be very glad of any information regarding the whereabouts of her neice. She described the appearance of her neice when she last saw her as follows: Five feet, two inches in height, slender, dark brown hair in braid, rather good looking, grey eyes, wore glasses, good complexion, did not look over fourteen, dark blue sailor hat and striped lawn dress.

Kittie was a quiet girl and her aunt does not think she has gotten into bad company.

SUDDEN ILLNESS ENDS IN DEATH.

Aaron P. Sutton Taken Sick Monday and Died Yesterday.

The many friends of Aaron P. Sutton will be shocked to hear of his death, occurred Wednesday night at 6:30 at his home on Liberty street, after an illness lasting since Monday. Previous to this time Mr. Sutton enjoyed excellent health and never complained. On Monday he was working on a job in the borough when he was suddenly taken with illness. He was taken home and Dr. Zeglio called. His illness seemed to be stomach trouble, and on Wednesday he rallied and hopes of his speedy recovery were assured. But this was followed with an attack of heart trouble, from which he could not seem to rally. Everything possible was done, but to no purpose, and last evening he succumbed to the inevitable.

Mr. Sutton was 59 years old and was born at Fairmount, Hunterdon county. His early years were spent at that place, where he learned the mason trade. Later he was married and moved to Dunellen. He moved from the latter place to this city about ten years ago. For the past twenty-five years he has done work in this vicinity. He was a veteran of the late war and a member of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of this city. He was a staunch and faithful Christian man and a member of the First M. E. church. Mr. Sutton was a man of even temper and was admired and well thought of by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. A widow, two daughters and two sons survive him. One of the daughters is Mrs. Amos Vail, of Dunellen, and the other is unmarried and lives at home. Of the sons, Willard V. Sutton, is married and lives on East Third street, and Fred Sutton lives at home. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

WEEPING ON HER WAY

A COLORED DAMSEL'S WAIL OF ANGUISH AT BEING ARRESTED.

Etta Field Came From Somerville to Visit Friends, But Indulged Too Freely in the Liquid That Befuddles.

The usual quiet of the rookery was disturbed Monday by sobs, cries and yells that issued from one of the cells in an uninterrupted stream.

"Oh, dry up there; you'll get out after awhile," growled one of the other prisoners, "give us some peace." But still the young colored woman in the cell continued her lamentations with renewed vigor.

The cause of all the racket was that she did not have $10 with which to pay her fine, and so Chief Grant said she would have to go down to Elizabeth. The young woman was Etta Field, and she came here from Somerville on a visit, but, instead of behaving, she partook too freely of this city's stimulants and began to act in a very improper manner on Madison avenue. This happened on Saturday evening.

Sergeant Kiely turned up at the right moment and assisted her to the lockup. Monday morning she was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. She counted on her sex to get her out of the scrape safely but she didn't quite understand Plainfield justice. With a "I-will-be-good-if-you'll-let-me-go" expression she appeared and pleaded guilty. The vulgarity of being brought to trial in a police court wounded her feelings considerably and she had a little quiet weep as the trial went on, but when the Judge pronounced sentence, "$10 or thirty days," words cannot express her anguish.

Some of her sympathising Plainfield friends tried to raise the money for the fine but their crop did not turn out well and Etta continued to weep.

A DAY BY THE WAVES.

No Mishap to Mar the Annual Excursion of Trinity Sunday-school.

By the choppy sea waves at Asbury Park the members of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school spent a merry time July 16th. From the time the train left this city in the morning until its return in the evening there was no mishap to mar the pleasure of any of the party. Though there was fourteen cars on the train, there were really only ten filled, as the threatening weather early in the morning deferred many timid ones from going on the excursion.

The varied attractions at the Park provided entertainment enough for all the different dispositions of the excursionists. Of course the juvenile members participated in all the hurly-burly methods of amusement such as merry-go-rounds and the like, others of a more sedate manner occupied sightseeing positions on the piazzas of the hotels, some took dips in the rolling surf and many boarded the trolley cars and enjoyed a breezy trip to Pleasure Bay.

The committee in charge of the excursion was as follows: E. H. Bird, E. J. Cooley, H. C. VanEmburgh, W. F. Oliver, F. E. Smith, H. W. Marshall and E. E. Anthony.

CROP BULLETIN.

Conditions Favored Growing Crops—Oats in Fine Condition.

The weekly crop bulletin, from the State Weather Bureau, at New Brunswick, says:

The observers and crop correspondents report for the week ending Monday, July 13, 1896, that the temperature and rainfall have been above average and the sunshine largely deficient. These conditions have greatly favored growing crops, but were unfavorable for the harvesting of wheat, rye and grass, until Saturday, since which time the conditions have been much better. Oats, the State over, are in fine condition and ripening rapidly. The following heavy rainfalls were reported: Belvidere, 7.57 inches; Papakating, 3.17 inches; Newark, 5.35 inches (3.46 inches on the 6th) and Livingston, 3.10 inches.

Better Lighting.

The North Plainfield Township committee at a meeting held Wednesday evening, ordered that a contract be entered into with the Plainfield Electric Light Company, for eleven electric street lights, to be placed on Somerset street, between Johnston Drive and Demler's store. This is a much needed improvement and one that the public will duly appreciate. That section of Somerset street should have been lighted long ago.

Endeavor Leaders.

The following chairman of committees will serve the Christian Endeavor Society, Disciples of Christ, till January 1st, 1897: Lookout, J. H. Staats; prayer meeting, Mrs. Jennie Staats; social, Mrs. H. Van Middlesworth; flower, Mrs. I. Wilson; music, H. Van Middlesworth.

Arrived on a Freight Car.

On top of a freight car, dead drunk, John Doherty, of Philadelphia, made his entrance into Plainfield early Sunday morning. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson arrested him. He was given twenty days at Elizabeth.

ECHO FROM WASHINGTON

LOCAL ENDEAVORERS HEAR FROM THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

E. E. Anthony Tells in an Interesting Way of the Various Phases Of Work Indulged in at That Time.

An echo meeting of the great Christian Endeavor Convention recently held in Washington, which permeated the lives and homes of thousands, was held in Trinity Reformed church Sunday evening, and the congregation present seemed to catch the inspiration of the late notable gathering. After the singing of two selection a from Gospel Hymns, the pastor conducted the responsive Scripture reading, which was the Twenty-fourth Psalm. William Crawford, of the Church Society of Christian Endeavor, then read the Scripture selection, Gospel of John, 17th chapter from the 13th to the 23d verses. This was followed with prayer by the pastor, and the singing of a hymn by the congregation. The quartette, Mrs. H. E. Rider, soprano; Miss Lizzie Dunn, alto; Robert Clark, tenor; and John Steiner, basso, rendered a beautiful anthem with a solo part by Mrs. Rider, while the offering was being taken.

Rev. Mr. Schenck then stated the object of the meeting, which was to listen to a report from E. E. Anthony, of the Christian Endeavor Society. After Mr. Anthony offered a brief prayer, he spoke in part as follows:

"It is very hard for me to tell in a half hour what transpired in several days, or to select the best from such a feast of good things. There were about 300 meetings a day and the most number anyone could attend was forty, between the hours of 6 o'clock in the morning and 11 o'clock at night. We left here Tuesday, July 7th, and the minute we entered the train we seemed to feel the spirit of the Convention The first one to greet us was our State President, Rev. Clement French, of Newark. Six hours soon passed and we were at the Nation's capital and soon settled in the hotel at Washington. We arrived twenty-four hours ahead of the time for the great convention to open. Wednesday morning we attended a sunrise prayer meeting. The weather was against us, but everything else was favorable. Nothing could quench the spirit of the New Jersey delegation. During the convention there was only one of our number who missed but one meeting and that was owing to illness. I met the evangelistic committee and was assigned my work. Wednesday evening the services commenced. Our State president, Dr. French, delivered an address which was a marvel. His subject, 'The Deeping Spiritual Life' seemed to be the keynote of the whole convention. He held the attention of his audience as though there was only one person present. The Spirit of the Lord worked mightily. Dr. French opened his address by quoting the following from Lyman Beecher: 'Not philosophy, theology not controversy, but saving souls should be our aim in life.' He then went on to say that there should be able preachers in the pulpit, also consecrated people in the church and society. Continuing, Mr. Anthony spoke of an amusing incident in regard to the New Jersey delegation. The colors of the State are orange and black, and during the convention a pure black cat entered the building. Immediately a young woman tied an orange colored ribbon about the cat's neck. It was then known as the New Jersey cat. We wanted to bring the cat home, but the Washington people could not spare it. There were twelve of us who attended the meetings together, and we were known as Dr. French's body guard. The Government officials by vote gave us the whole city for the convention, and we were allowed to hold meetings anywhere, providing we left enough room for people to pass. Father Clark's annual address was partly on the 'Platform.' He said that the political party which had assembled at St. Louis had adopted a platform, and that while he was speaking one was being adopted at Chicago, and he saw no reason why the people assembled at Washington should not have a platform. Mr. Anthony stated that during the year 218,000 persons had been converted, making a total number of 860,000 for the past six years. The banner which was held by England last year, was this year won by Scotland. At the church rally, there was evidenced Christian fellowship, and we told the Jersey delegation something regarding our '96 convention to be held next October. Thursday evening the meetings were devoted to 'Christian Citizenship,' and three remarkable addresses were delivered on 'Temperance,' 'The People of Government.' On Friday we listened with pleasure to Miss Kate House, of St. Louis. Her talk was principally on junior work, and she believed in holding the junior meeting all the year round. Owing to illness, Dr. Cuyler was unable to be present, and President Whitcomb, Columbia University, took his place. The latter said that there was a hole in the programme, and the people had their choice between him and the hole. President Whitcomb delivered a powerful address on 'God Dwelling In Us.' At this time Mr. Anthony asked the quartette to sing the hymn 'Send Out, the Light.' He said that the hymn was sang in the street cars, on the streets and in fact everywhere in Washington. The hymn was impressively rendered by the quartette. In closing, Mr. Anthony spoke of Dr. Chapman's wonderful address before the convention on the "Holy Spirit." His text was divided into three parts "Necessity of Baptism," "Describing Baptism" and "Special Blessings." He urged that all should get special blessings for their work and that they should be baptized by the Holy Spirit. Mr. Anthony continuing said, why wait till '96 to get a blessing when you can have it now. The consecration hymn "I Live for Him" was sung at this time and upon the speakers request fully two-thirds of those present arose for consecration. It was an impressive moment and one to be deeply felt by all. After the singing of the remaining verses Rev. C. Schenck pronounced the benediction. Mr. Anthony announced that the report would be continued this evening at the Christian Endeavor society meeting and as he had many interesting things yet to say he hoped that there would be a large attendance.

Mr. Anthony related a little personal experience which was very impressive. He said that previous to going to the convention he had a heavy heart. Nothing seemed to go right at his office, but after reaching the convention his experience changed and ever since he has been filled with the Holy Spirit, and every day at his office it seemed as though the Lord was by his side talking to him and helping him constantly. He hoped that he would always feel the Holy Spirit's power as he does at present. This incident seemed to make a deep impression on the audience and for a short time a service of wonderful consecration followed in which nearly everyone was a part. It is well known that Mr. Anthony is an interesting speaker, but last evening he was even better than before and his address was one of great power.

END OF A SOLDIER.

Funeral of the Late Aaron P. Sutton Held Sunday.

The funeral services of the late Aaron P. Sutton were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 from the late home on Liberty street. Major Anderson Post No. 109, G. A. R., of which Mr. Sutton was a member, a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and Women's Relief Corps No. 19, also a delegation from John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., were present, in addition to a very large number of relatives and friends. Many of the latter were contractors and builders.

An impressive solo was rendered by E. E. Runyon, after which Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes offered prayer. A few remarks were then offered by Rev. B. W. Hand, after which Dr. Barnes spoke at length regarding the departed. He spoke of him as a soldier, a Christian, husband and father, and many valuable truths were presented in a helpful manner. At the close another solo was rendered and Dr. Barnes offered prayer. Those present were then given an opportunity to view the remains.

The floral tribute consisted of a beautiful wreath, bearing the word "comrade" from Post 109, a handsome pillow with the inscription "S. of V. 28" from John Hand Camp, Sons of Veterans, and a sheaf of wheat. These rested on the casket around which an American flag was arranged.

At the grave the G. A. R. took charge of the service and Rev. L. E. Livermore and several of the post officers had a part. The pallbearers from the post were Comrades Randolph, J. B. Clarkson, W. H. B. Drake, Edward Devine, Charles Randolph and Nathan Pennington. Interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

TROUBLE OVER A GROWLING DOG.

George Shay Intended to Kill the Canine and Threatened Its Owner.

On complaint of Mary McDermitt, of Terrill road and South avenue, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant yesterday for the arrest of George Shay, of Fanwood. The complaint charges that on July 6th Shay came the plaintiff's place with a gun for the purpose of killing an objectionable dog, but she protested against the shooting, and he therewith placed the muzzle of the gun to her head and threatened to kill her. Mr. and Mrs. George Brick, brother-in-law and sister of Shay, took the latter's part and a neighbors quarrel ensued.

Justice Newcorn issued a warrant yesterday for Mr. and Mrs. Brick who appear Monday evening for a hearing. Shay was also held to appear at the same time. Shay is the man who was associated with Wallace, also of Fanwood. The two have caused the authorities considerable trouble. It was only recently that Wallace was arrested for attempting to wreck a train at the Fanwood cut on the Central Railroad.

DOWNED A CRACK TEAM.

ELIZABETH ATHLETIC CLUB DEFEATED BY THE Y. M. C. A. TEAM.

Many Errors in the Early Part of the Game, but the Plainfield Boys Won Out in Great Shape at the End.

"If our team cannot beat them kids, they ought never to play another game." This was the remark passed by an Elizabeth crank at the ball game in that city Saturday afternoon between the Y. M. C. A. team and the Elizabeth Athletic club team. But the kids won the game and the E. A. C. will probably keep on playing. In many respects the game was a most peculiar one. The home team went to the bat first and secured a run. This set the cranks wild and they anticipated a walkover, but when their opponents made five runs in the first inning, their enthusiasm took a drop until in the next inning when five runs were secured by the E. A. C. In the next inning the visitors took one run and in the sixth they tallied six more, while the E. A. C. had to be satisfied with getting only three more runs during the game. In the seventh inning the Y. M. C. A. team placed three additional runs to the score, making a total of fifteen to eight for their opponents. Sheridan pitched three innings for the E. A. C., but a change was thought advisable and Noonan was taken from third base and put in the box while Sheridan went into right field and Kellam held down third base.

The forepart of the game was full of errors and the crowd grunted and groaned because of it. The Plainfield boys made thirteen errors in all while the home team made 2, but then the former hit the ball hard and often. After the third inning both sides were held down and better playing resulted. McLaughlin made a two-bagger and a single, while Schenck secured three base hits. Dennis also got a two base hit. Major knocked out three singles, Symous two and Enright one. The latter played in this city a week ago with the Raritans, when his playing attracted so much favorable attention.

He put up a good game Saturday, although he had no opportunity to distinguish himself. Cory knocked out a single, but in the field he seemed to have an off day. The whole team went into win, however, and in that they succeeded, much to the chagrin of the famous E. A. C. During the game Fredericks, the catcher, was hit several times with the ball and on one occasion he was knocked out for a few minutes but pluckily resumed play. The E. A. C. team is composed of good players and they fight fair and honestly for supremacy. The contest was an enjoyable one in many respects and those present cheered lustily for their favorites. It was a good-natured crowd present and though the game was a little long the spectators were patient and the majority remained till the finish. If the E. A. C. ever come to Plainfield they will find a cordial reception awaiting them. Burt pitched as usual a fine game, and though he only struck out one man he held his opponents down and fielded his position in great shape. Below is the score in full:

Ann Collier Honored.

At the annual meeting of the National Retail Jewelers' Association, held at Atlantic City, last week, Asa Collier, of this city, was elected treasurer. Resolutions were adopted in favor of having a half mark for goods, the quality being under national control. The association also expressed itself in favor of using only goods of American manufacture, and of the jewelry trade being carried on only by legitimate retail jewelers. A resolution was adopted favoring one cent postage. The association condemned department stores, and also bargain counter jewelry.

NO WORD FROM FRANK.

A PLAINFIELD CARPENTER'S ABSENCE FOR FOUR WEEKS UNEXPLAINED.

John J. Frank Disappears From his Wife and Children, Carrying With Him Their Savings of $300—Foul Play Suspected

The mysterious disappearance of John J. Frank, a carpenter, of 325 Dunham place, which occurred four weeks ago Sunday morning, has assumed a serious aspect from the fact that nothing can be learned regarding him.

Saturday night, June 27th, Mr. Frank went home after spending the evening around town. He and his wife retired together at a late hour. Nothing unusual had transpired that would break the usual harmony and affection of the two. When Mrs. Frank awoke the next morning she learned that her husband was missing, and she at once began to worry about him as she could give no reason for his sudden flight. A few days later Mrs. Frank received a telegram from Chicago stating that "John arrived safely." This Mrs. Frank says did not come from her husband, because it lacked the customary salutation of "Laura," her first name. When her husband went away he took $300 with him, and Mrs. Frank thinks that her husband has been waylaid and robbed or killed.

She informed Chief Grant regarding the disappearance and he sent a telegram and a picture of the missing man to Chicago, asking the police to look out for Mr. Frank. Chief Grant thinks that in case the man was taken ill and was taken to a hospital, there may be chances of hearing from him through this source.

Mrs. Frank says that she and her husband have lived happily together for many years and nothing has entered their lives to cause a breach. She is utterly unable to account for her husband's absence.

She has two children to care for and her husband left her no money, as he took their savings when he disappeared.

Just what Mrs. Frank and her children will do is at present hard to tell.

Those who know Mr. Frank say that he is an industrious man and his recent actions cannot be accounted for. He never had difficulty in securing work and was generally busy.

The police in the large cities have been notified to be on the lookout for him.

CHALLENGERS DEFEATED.

The Park Club Tennis Trophies Do Not Change Hands.

Since the Fourth, interest in tennis has taken a great leap forward at the Park Club. This is due, of course, to the offering of challenge trophies and the tennis committee should be commended for their judgment in so successfully arousing interest in this delightful summer sport.

Saturday morning the junior members played. Fred Overton and Will Roome successfully defended the junior Class A double championship in a match with Arthur Peck and William Townsend and defeated them by a score of 6-4, 6-4. In the singles of the same class, Will Roome defeated Fred Overton, 6-4, 6-3, retaining the trophy. He has a challenge for a match with Arthur Peck on Wednesday.

For the single Junior Class B championship, Morgan Townsend challenged Clarence Roome, Townsend was defeated by Roome, 6-1, 6-1. In the afternoon, the senior matches were played. Only the double championship was contested for, and Augustus Van Deventer and Samuel Townsend, the veteran holders of the championship, managed to hold it succesfully against two challenging teams. The first match was very close, Van Deventer and Townsend defeating Charles Dupee and Clarence Peck by a score of 6-5, 6-5. The other match was not as exciting, Van Deventer and Townsend winning from Percy Sandford and A. Willis West by a score of 6-2 6-1.

YOUNG M'KINLEY SUPPORTER.

Plainfield Has the Distinguished Honor of Having the Most Youthful.

Plainfield has the distinguished honor of containing within its borders, Major McKinley's youngest supporter for the presidency of the United States. This youthful citizen is the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Murray, of West Ninth street, who is not quite two years old at present. When the child first began to learn to talk, his grandfather taught him to say "McKinley," when asked who he was going to vote for.

Mr. Murray wrote to the Republican candidate telling him of the staunch supporter he had and received a letter from the father of the famous tariff bill thanking his youthful follower and wishing him success. The letter is now preserved among the most cherished possessions of the child.

The talk of a public building in this city is being revived. It is what Plainfield has long needed.

Furnishing a free lunch to the police force at a cost to the city of $900 a year is not an economical administration of city affairs.

The Daily Press holds a sum of money for the Fresh Air Camp which the treasurer of the King's Daughters can procure by calling at the business office.

The commission created by Governor Griggs to inquire into the question of the equal taxation of railroad and canal property began work in Jersey City yesterday.

The Populist convention will meet in St. Louis next Wednesday. There will be considerable of a contest as to nominating a distinctive ticket or endorsing Bryan and Sewall.

It is probable that Dr. Whalen, who has been acting as deputy under the late Postmaster Sheridan, of Elizabeth, will be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the latter.

Continuing on the same principle of government that animates the Common Council to provide a night lunch to the police, it is as much their duty to provide the firemen their three meals a day.

At the convention of the State Republican League of Clubs at Asbury Park yesterday the secretary's report showed that the organization had 63,251 members, an increase of 32,000 over last year.

The Summit Herald, which was purchased recently by Edward W. Gray from the estate of Dr. David M. Smythe, has been sold to John Clift. Mr. Clift was editor and part owner of the Madison Eagle.

Without a sensation in public official circles New Brunswick would be lost—so regular has these affairs become a part of her municipal government. Just now it is a police scandal that is attracting attention.

"Enterprise" is the term applied to The Daily Press by the Bound Brook Democrat referring to the feat of this paper in printing papers with a half column account of Bryan's nomination fifteen minutes after the nomination.

The New York Mercury, which was established as a daily paper in 1892, and has had varying success until it was devoted exclusively to sporting news the last few months, will be rejuvenated as a Democratic free silver paper. The paper will be enlarged.

The proposed bicycle parade and trolleized band concert is a unique event in local life and ought to receive the hearty encouragement of every Plainfielder who delights in attractions other than those furnished in the ordinary humdrum of existence. No town in the country is more imbued with bicycle enthusiasm than this city and any affair in which the wheel is to play a part is assured of success so long as the weather clerk smiles and stays the rain drops.

Heretofore The Press has called attention to the scorching tactics of many bicycle riders on the city streets. It is a dangerous practice and seems to be on the increase among a class of riders who seem possessed with no regard for the safety of either pedestrians or brother riders who pedal along at a moderate speed. The police cannot better utilize their services than in the suppression of this sort of bicycling. North avenue seems to be a favorite spot for the reckless rider.

In this Republican citadel, where protection has been the political slogan, it will seem odd if there isn't a lively protest against the invasion of an itinerant combination who are to bring a carload of fish from Seabright sidetrack them at the North Avenue station and dispose of them at a price of whatever the demand will warrant. Here we have half a dozen or more established sea food markets in the city, all paying taxes and contributing their support to the city. It is a strange anomaly of government, considered from a G. O. P. standpoint.

Six thousand dollars ought to well provide for any emergencies which may arise in finishing the sewer system.

Plainfield is the only town in Union county that shows an increased valuation during the last year. This is caused by the numerous municipal improvements.

There is assurance from borough officials that the extension of Watchung avenue on the borough side will be finished and in use by the first of January next.

The Populist State Convention will be held in Newark during the first week of August, when Presidential electors will be chosen and candidates for Congress be nominated.

Benjamin F. Howells, Congressman from the Third district, has appointed Charles L. McKeag, of New Brunswick, a son of Hugh McKeag, a prominent Republican, to the vacancy in that district in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The Tribune this morning says that Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth, will probably be renominated in the Eighth Congressional district, as there is no doubt of the support of Union county, and in all probability the leaders in Bayonne will rally to his candidacy.

The statistician of the News, aided by Councilman Barrows, indulged in a little figuring yesterday in the endeavor to create the impression that the night lunch furnished to the police force was not an extravagant and needless item of city expense. It is immaterial whether the lunch costs the city $900 or $600. It is just as wrong to spend a small sum for the lunch as it is a large sum. It is the principle of government which the Press protests against.

California has a Manufacturers' and Producers' Association which is seeking to realize one of the tenets of the high protectionists—a home market for home products. In addition to creating a sentiment and a preference for home products, it has adopted a trade-mark for use by its members, and is in a position to prosecute those who use such trade-mark without license from the association. Now, as a further appeal to prejudice, the association has decided to refuse a license to any manufacturer or producer who does not employ exclusively free white labor. Of course labor is put in the same category with convict labor.

The Weekly Public Opinion, of New York, prints this week a symposium of carefully selected press comment from 123 leading newspapers in all parts of the country on the Democratic Convention and the issues of the campaign. Of these 58 are Democratic, 28 Republican, and 37 are Independent journals, or special organs, farmers, single tacers, etc. Of the 58 Democratic papers, 32 repudiate the platform, 24 of these also emphatically rejecting the candidates. Eleven, either by implication or in plain words, advise Democrats to remain within the party line and vote for the ticket with a reservation, if necessary, regarding the financial plank; 2 declare for McKinley; 3 demand an independent ticket; 15 declare for the platform and candidate with free silver. Of the 28 Republican papers, 4 declare for silver, while 4 say the Democratic party is dead or hopelessly disrupted. Of the 37 Independent and special journals, 15 reject the platform and candidates; 9 declare for Bryan only; 10 declare for Bryan and 3 demand an Independent Democrat ticket.

An Ohio manufacturing concern, which has been experimenting with profit-sharing plans for eleven years, has finally evolved a plan radically different from profit-sharing and more like a permanent wage increase, with a provision for withholding the increase from the more negligent workmen. At first the commonly-talked-of plan of dividing a certain portion of the profits among the workmen was tried, each employe sharing according to his earnings. The first dividend to employes was declared at the end of six months, and was at the rate of 13.47 per cent. on the wages paid. One workman received $278 in dividend. But it was found that the men did not take much interest in this plan, so it was modified and the men were arbitrarily classified according to the interest they were understood to show in their work and their efficiency, the most active receiving a larger share than the others, and all dividends being withheld from those who were noticeably careless. The money so withheld did not go to the firm, but was added to to the part allotted to the workmen and divided among them. Then the firm became a corporation and the plan was changed. The average amount paid had been a 12 per cent. dividend, so it was decided to pay a uniform rate of 12 per cent. on wages, the right to withhold dividends for neglect being retained. Employes are helped to buy stock if they wish. Employers and employes are said to be satisfied with this arrangement.—Post.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION

GEORGE A. CHAPMAN TAKES UP THE SIDE OF GOLD.

He Draws Conclusions That Makes it Appear That to Adopt Free Coinage of Silver Would be Bad For All.

The questions which are decided by the election in November next are perhaps as vital to the welfare of this Nation as any which have ever come before the people, and, yet I meet men every day who do not in the least comprehend the financial question at issue. I have given considerable thought and study to questions of finance, and while I realize how very limited is my knowledge of this vast subject, I believe I do understand the elementary principles involved in the financial question which is now absorbing the attention of our people.

I venture, therefore, to present a simple explanation of the subject, hoping that it may serve to enlighten some of my fellow citizens who have had no opportunity to inform themselves.

"Free silver men pose as bimetallists and some of them claim that as the silver dollar is as good as the gold dollar in this country, so would it be if their free coinage plan was carried into execution. No statement could be further from the truth. Bimetallism, in the interpretation of the word as it is commonly used, contemplates the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, both metals being legal tender for all debts. In other words, any person having silver or gold bullion may take it to the mint and have it coined into dollars free of charge, and all creditors must accept these dollars for their full face value, in discharge of debts due them. Under these conditions it would be impossible for both metals to remain in circulation permanently as money at any conceivable ratio, whether determined by international agreement or otherwise. The relative value of silver and gold is governed by the inexorable law of supply and demand, and therefore will fluctuate. So soon as one dollar should become more valuable than the other, it would cease to circulate as money, because men have the wisdom of the serpent, and insist upon paying their debts in the cheapest money which the law permits.

In 1792 Congress fixed the ratio for coinage at 15 to 1. That is, it declared that the silver dollar should contain 15 times more of silver than the gold dollar contained of gold. As this ratio the gold dollar proved to be the more valuable by about three per cent., and from that time until 1873, silver dollars were not in circulation as money in this country. In 1873, Congress after prolonged debate repealed the law permitting the coinage of silver dollars, thus doing away with a law which had been obsolete for nearly forty years. And this was "the crime of 1873."

Both gold and silver remain in circulation in this country today, because the Government, by the use of its credit, arbitrarily maintains the parity between the metals. But this is made possible only because the amount of silver coin is limited. Men accept the silver dollar today at par because they believe, if no more silver is coined, the Government will be able to keep the silver dollars now in existence, exchangeable for gold dollars, notwithstanding the fact that the gold dollar is intrinsically much more valuable.

The financial plank in the Chicago platform proposes that any one, not only Americans, but any one in the world who has either gold or silver bullion, may bring it to the United States and have it coined, free of charge, into dollars, the relative quantity of metal in each to be as one ounce of gold to sixteen ounces of silver.

As an ounce of gold will buy today nearly thirty ounces of silver, no one will bring gold to be coined, but the whole world will rush to have fifty-two cents worth of silver stamped by our Government as a dollar. If free coinage law should be passed, gold would go out of circulation immediately, producing a very serious contraction in the volume of the currency, and panic and general disaster would ensue. The only currency remaining in circulation would be based upon silver dollars now worth about fifty-three cents each. Who would be the principal sufferers? Clearly, those who are dependent upon fixed incomes; widows, orphans, pensioners of the United States Government, for they would receive no more dollars then than now, but the dollars they would then receive are now worth but fifty-three cents each.

Next, in degree, to suffer, would be the wage earner, the workingman.

A committee of experts appointed by the United States Senate to investigate the subject, reported that during the war when our currency was at a heavy discount, wages advanced about forty-one per cent, and that commodities which the wage earner would buy advanced one hundred and sixteen per cent. In other words a man who formerly earned $1.00 a day would then earn $1.41 a day; but the commodities which formerly he could purchase for $1.00 he would then be obliged to pay $2.16 to obtain. In some such proportion would the workingman be defrauded, if the propositions contained in the Chicago platform are enacted into law.

From a purely economic standpoint, therefore, I believe it would be disastrous for this country to permit the unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at a ratio of 1 to 16.

But there is a moral side to this question which, in my judgment, is of still greater importance.

If a farmer had borrowed from his neighbor 100 bushels of wheat, and should propose to discharge his debt by repaying 53 bushels of wheat, that would be called a dishonorable proposition. If the Congress of the United States should enact a law making such a transaction legal, any honest man would declare that such a law simply legalized swindling. And yet that would be precisely the effect of enacting into law the provisions of the financial plank in the Chicago platform. Not only would this be true as applying to the discharge of debts by private citizens, but it is proposed that this great Government with its enormous resources, and at peace with all the world, shall pay back the one hundred cent dollars it has borrowed from the people with dollars now worth but fifty cents. In the words of Gen. Garfield, "It is a fearful thing for one man to stand up in the face of his brother man and refuse to keep his pledge; but it is a forty-five million times worse thing for a nation to do it. It breaks the main spring of faith; it unsettles all security; it disturbs all values, and it puts the life of the nation in peril for all time to come."

But this Chicago platform goes still further. Listen—"and we favor such legislation as will prevent for the future the demonetization of any kind of legal tender money by private contract." This means that the right of a free American citizen to enter into a contract with his fellow man to buy or sell for gold or for silver specifically, shall be taken from him. Was ever before such a monstrous proposition submitted to this liberty loving people?

If Mr. Bryan can be elected on the Chicago platform, it will demonstrate to my mind that universal suffrage is a failure, and that our republican form of government is nearing its end.

But arouse ye! loyal men everywhere! Let us rally around the dear old flag with determination to maintain it aloft, unsullied, the emblem, now as ever, of liberty, honesty and righteousness.

Let us forget that we are Republicans, let us forget that we are Democrats, let us go forth shoulder to shoulder to do battle for the preservation of our country's honor, our glorious being, "God and our native land." Then by the grace of God we shall succeed.

Respectfully Yours,
July 20, 1896. Geo. A. Chapman.

Hoke Smith's Charleston Journal will support Bryan and Sewell.

The offer of The Press to give a suitable prize to the lady bicyclist who appears in the parade of the Midsummer Night's Carnival with the most uniquely decorated wheel will doubtless stir the artistic accomplishments of the bicycle girl to such an extent that it will rack the brain of the judges to select the one deserving of the honor.

The approaching bicycle parade and trolley band concert should, to attain the success that its novelty merits, be distinguished by some unique features To thoroughly enlist the enthusiasm of the cyclists there should be some characteristic element that will attract more attention than the ordinary rider pedaling along in the conventional way. The Press would suggest that a division be organized for decorated bicycles and fantastic costumes.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

Condition of the National Treasury Not Considered Serious.

VIEWS OF J. P. MORGAN AND OTHERS

Newspaper Talk About the Decline of the Gold Reserve Largely Responsible for the Scare on Wall Street, However, Panicky.

New York, July 21.—The stock market continues panicky, and the pressure to sell has been increased by withdrawals of gold on a large scale. Nearly every stock on the list has suffered since yesterday, but the "Granger Railways" were most conspicuously weak. Some of the industrials and so-called specialties also went off abruptly. There were large sales of government bonds yesterday, especially of the latest issue of fours, but there was no material decline in price. At the close of business last evening gold to the amount of $3,030,000 had been engaged at the sub-treasury for the day for shipment, and it was expected that more would be taken today. All the gold will go to Germany, and it is expected that more will be shipped on Thursday. The bears have been actively at work endeavoring to create an impression that the gold withdrawals indicated an alarming condition of affairs, and that the government would be unable to sell bonds for the purpose of replenishing the gold reserve. As the treasury gold reserve stands to-day at $90,000,000 (round figures), after deducting yesterday's withdrawals for shipment, the condition of the treasury is not considered serious, or such as warrants the suggestion that it is necessary for the treasury to sell bonds now in order to replenish the gold reserve. J. Pierpont Morgan, when questioned on the subject, said he thought the government would have no particular difficulty selling bonds at this time for the purpose of replenishing the gold reserve if it wanted to do so. "At what price?" he was asked.

No Cause for Alarm.

"Ah, that is another question," he quickly replied, and then added: "I have no doubt, however, that they could sell bonds at a fair price now." Continuing he said: "But it is very inexpedient to talk of bond sales at this time. In continuing to discuss the gold reserve the papers do more harm than all the free-silver men put together. If the papers would only stop talking about the condition of the treasury and let it alone matters would not be so bad." "Is there anything, any bad news, Mr. Morgan, before the people to account for the great decline in prices?" "No, on the contrary, the conditions, outside of the political question, are all favorable. Crops are good, railroad receipts have increased, and the railroad management is better." Wall known bank officers concurred in the views expressed by Mr. Morgan as their opinions were practically expressed by Henry W. Cannon, president of the Chase National bank and a member of the clearing house committee. In reply to the question what, any action was likely to be taken by the associated banks with reference to the gold shipments and the decrease in the treasury's gold reserve, Mr. Cannon said: "I regret, of course, to see these shipments of gold, but there is no reason for people getting nervous or for timid people to sacrifice their securities. With $90,000,000 of gold in the treasury, I am not worrying about the condition of the treasury, and I see no cause for other people worrying. We have a low range of prices just at this time, it is true, but we have an easy money market without any disturbance in it, and therefore I see no immediate cause for alarm."

WILL ISSUE NO MORE GOLD.

Kansas City Banks Fear Depositors Intended To Withdraw To Hoard.

Kansas City, Mo., July 21.—All Kansas City banks have refused to issue gold, either in exchange for bills or payment of checks or withdrawals of deposits. Cashier Rule of the Bank of Commerce, who has just returned from St. Louis, said the banks there will take the same action. The reason given by the bankers here for this move is that it was the evident intention of many depositors to withdraw their deposits in gold and hoard the yellow metal, is the belief that it will go to a premium.

COUNTY TAXES FIXED.

SLIGHT CHANGE IN THE RATE OF .55 OF LAST YEAR.

Plainfield Gains $280,000 in Taxable Valuation, and Leads all Other Union County Towns—The Official Figures.

The work of the county board of assessors was not finished Monday afternoon until four o'clock. The assessors completed their labor by fixing the county tax at a very slight advance over that of last year, 55 cents. The tax rate for Elizabeth will be $2.88, ten points lower than last year. This is due to the decreased appropriations.

Elizabeth has also gained $113,650 in taxable valuations, which is but half the amount gained in 1895 over 1894. The other large gains in the county are as follows: Plainfield, $280,000; Summit, $140,000; Cranford, $117,000. The total gain was $800,000.

In only one place was there a noticeable decrease, Rahway, where the valuations fell $18,000 below the figure of 1895.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season. The busy time attendant upon a large and pressing business during the spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

TOO BOOZY TO CARE MUCH

A DRUNK TAKES HIS SENTENCE AS A MATTER OF FACT.

Wanted to Talk to the Judge and When Repulsed, Nonchalantly Asked for a Match and Went to Sleep in a Cell.

"Don't disturb a man when he's asleep," muttered John Hart as Roundsman Mattox fairly dragged him into the dingy little court room in the city rookery. Hart was arrested by that officer early yesterday for being drunk and disorderly on West Second street. He had been trying to work all the saloons in the West End for drinks and had succeeded in several cases until he had reached a state of boozy independence. Mattox had almost carried him to the station house, for the man was too drunk and obstinate to walk, and locked him up until later in the morning when he was brought before City Judge De-Meza. After the officer had landed Hart in the courtroom, Hart staggered up to the rail with his hat cocked over one eye and scowled at the Judge.

"Take off your hat," sternly ordered the Judge, and finally it was removed.

The prisoner was then questioned and managed to tell that he was a metal worker from Belfast, Me., and had been last working in Massachusetts. The prisoner was a silent witness of his own condition and the Judge pronounced sentence, "$5 or twenty days, and if you come back to this city again you'll get six months."

"What ?" drawled out the prisoner, in a way peculiar to intoxicated men, and he sprawled over the rail.

"Excuse me, officer," he expostulated, as Mattox started to lead him away, "I want—hic—to talk to the court." But the Roundsman deposited him in a cell.

"How old are you ?" asked the officer.

"It don't make a —— bit of difference," responded the prisoner, who was already half asleep, "Gimme a match."

He went to Elizabeth this afternoon with Chief Grant.

RAIN SPOILED THE EXCURSION.

Unpropitious Weather Made Necessary the Postponement of St. Mary's Event.

A steady down pour of rain this morning effectually spoilt the excursion of St. Mary's church and Sunday-school yesterday. The destination was Glen Island, but the weather was too unpropitious, and those in charge declared the excursion postponed and sent the train back to Jersey City. Despite the perfect deluge of water that was falling at the time, many of the would-be-excursionists showed up at the North avenue station all prepared to brave the elements, and even after the postponement of the excursion was announced waited about the station as if in hopes that the weather would change. It didn't, however, at that time, and finally all departed for their homes.

No Trace of This Martyr.

The New York Journal contained a story about William Goldthwaite, a Russian, alleged to reside in this city, who says that he is going to return to his native land and serve out a sentence for his father, who has been sentenced to prison. The story says that the father is one of those arrested as a suspicious person at the time of the assassination of the Czar. A Press reporter was unable to find any such person in the city this morning, and at the postoffice it was said that they delivered mail to no one bearing that name. The police were unable to give any information about the man.

KING CARNIVAL TO REIGN

DETAILS OF THE GREAT EVENT NEXT TUESDAY EVENING.

The Daily Press Will Give a Prize to the Best Decorated Wheel Ridden by a Lady—Other Prizes Offered.

King Carnival will reign supreme in Plainfield next Tuesday evening if the weather be favorable and Plainfield will have a chance to show her neighbors what she is capable of. Councilman Frost's unique idea of uniting band concert, trolley party and bicycle parade, has struck the right chord and the "Midsummer Night's Festival" or rather the "Midsummer Night's Carnival," as the committee in charge have decided to call it, will be a grand and glorious success, judging from present prospects.

When Councilman Frost placed the management of the bicycle parade in the hands of Frank L. C. Martin, Plainfield's pioneer bicycle dealer, he made no mistake. Mr. Martin began to plan for the event at once. He selected Louis G. Timpson, F. R. Stevens, Charles B. Morse, M. F. Elderton, and N. R. Titsworth as a committee in arranging the parade and to act as marshal's aides on the night of the car, when he will be chief marshal.

The committee held a meeting last evening at Mr. Martin's office and made some of the preliminary arrangements for the event.

It was decided that the parade form at the corner of Crescent avenue and East Seventh street, starting at 8 o'clock, and ride down Watchung avenue to join the car containing the *band at the corner of North and Wat*chung avenues. The route of the parade has not been definitely selected, but it will be announced in tomorrow evening's Press. It will follow the line of the trolley most of the way, but will take in Watchung Park and Washington Park, Netherwood and the residence section on West Seventh and Eighth streets between Park and Grant avenues.

The offer of the Daily Press to give a handsome prize to the wheelwoman having the most uniquely decorated wheel in order to encourage decorations, was gladly received by the committee, and it was also decided to give a prize to the wheelman having the most uniquely decorated wheel, and another to the rider having the most ridiculous get-up, including wheel decoration and costume.

While the first two prizes will give the cyclists a chance to display some of their artistic taste, the last will furnish plenty of opportunity for an overflow of all the humorous and witty ideas any of the riders may have.

It is but proper that the originator of all this pleasure, Councilman Geo. H. Frost, should head the list of *judges. The two Mayors, Alex. Gil*bert, of this city, and Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, are representative men of "Greater Plainfield" and were chosen as the other two judges.

The cyclists will ride two by two except in the case of the highly decorated wheels, when they will go singly.

It was decided by the committee to divide the parade into four divisions. The First Division will be headed by the Plainfield Lady Cyclers and will include the lady riders of Plainfield and vicinity and their escorts. The Second Division will consist of clubs and organized associations. All the clubs of Plainfield and North Plainfield are requested to send their names and probable numbers to Chief Marshal Martin at once so that they may be arranged in order. Out of town clubs are invited to make Plainfield the destination of a run on Tuesday evening and, if notice is given, a place will be reserved for them in line.

The Third Division will consist of the colored riders of this city, headed by the Victor Wheelmen and the Oriental Bicycle Club.

The Fourth Division will be for the unattached wheelmen and will probably be the largest of all.

Every wheelman and wheelwoman in Plainfield and North Plainfield should turn out and assist in making Plainfield's first "Midsummer Night's Carnival" a great success. Everyone should make some attempt to decorate his or her wheel, while the citizens residing along the line of march, should illuminate as much as possible.

*Great interest has been shown al*ready in the novel project, and should the weather be fair, the "Midsummer *Night's Carnival" will long be re*membered as the greatest event of the summer, and if this one proves to be a success, as it is sure to, the carnival will probably become an annual event of as much or more importance in that part of the state as the river carnivals of Cranford, Rahway or New Brunswick.

The committee decided that the divisions should form as follows: First Division on East Seventh street, Second Division on Crescent avenue, Third Division on Watchung avenue and Fourth Division on Grasde avenue, all facing the square in front of the Crescent avenue church.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich, red blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

NEW JERSEY AND BRYAN

SENATOR SMITH IS NON-COMMITTAL AT THE PRESENT TIME.

Advises Democrats to Let the State Convention Decide Their Course—Realizes the Immense Silver Sentiment.

Senator Smith, of New Jersey, gave out recently his views regarding the Democratic situation as follows:

"Personally I have a very positive opinion as to what ought to be done, but I do not consider it proper to express that opinion at this time. The instructions of the State Democratic Convention were unequivocally in favor of the gold standard, and the delegation was bound to do everything in its power to carry out the wishes of the party in this State. This was done, but, of course, the efforts was futile, and the platform and candidates stand for principles directly opposed to those enunciated by our State convention.

"Under these circumstances I can see but one course open to the delegates from this State, and that is to refer the whole matter back to the State convention for such action as it may see fit to take. The party is free to act on any line that may be deemed wise, for the reason that electors have not been put in nomination.

"I have not been home long enough as yet to find out what will be the attitude of the State Convention. I do know, however, that there is a very wide diversity of opinion. Some with whom I have talked are eager to bolt the ticket and put up an independent candidate. Others favor nominating electors pledged to vote for none but a sound-money candidate for President. Others feel that it is the duty of the Democrats to abide by the decision of the National Committee.

"How the real sober second thought will crystalize itself during the next few weeks I am wholly unable to judge. But one thing in my mind is plain, and that is that the question is so great and so pregnant with consequences that the people themselves are the ones to decide what to do.

"When do you think the State Convention will be held?"

"That has not yet been determined. Probably somewhat earlier than usual."

"Is there any silver sentiment in New Jersey?"

"Yes, much more than is generally supposed. The agricultural element of each party is affected to a considerable degree by the enthusiasm of the Western farmers for this idea. It will be no easy task to overcome this enthusiasm wherever there is a large agricultural element."

"Then you do not forsee a walk over for McKinley?"

"On the contrary, I am convinced that if the election were to be held next week Bryan would win. People here in the East do not appreciate the hold the free-silver idea has taken upon the masses of the entire West and South. They believe they are right in principle and they will be impressed more and more as the campaign progresses by the personality of their candidate.

WRECK OF A RUNAWAY.

A Fractious Horse Causes Excitement Yesterday Afternoon.

David Arthur, the contractor, left his horse untied in front of the old Crescent Wheelmen building, a few days ago, while he went on an errand. During his absence the horse was frightened and ran away. Just ahead of where the animal was standing, there was a horse and buggy belonging to Mr. Taylor, of Bound Brook, and Mr. Arthur's wagon collided with the buggy, upsetting it and wrecking one of the rear wheels. The runaway horse proceeded through East Second street and after passing Watchung avenue collided with another wagon in which were Mrs. Westcott and her mother, of Fanwood. The wheels caught, but before any damage resulted an employe of Blacksmith John Stevens rushed out and caught the fractious steed by the head. He was returned to his owner, who informed Mr. Taylor that he would pay for his damaged wheel.

Funeral of S. P. Mulford.

The funeral services of the late Samuel P. Mulford, were held Saturday afternoon at the home of his father, E. C. Mulford of East Fifth street. Only the near relatives and and friends were present. Rev. Dr. C. B. Wilbur officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Whitney. The floral tributes were numerous and very large and handsome. The pall bearers were J. A. Smith, John Lewis, F. A. Pope, S. P. T. Wilbur, Dr. L. S. Pocock and J. Hervey Doane.

Improvements at Netherwood.

That great improvement in the Netherwood district, the flagging of the sidewalk on South avenue, between Richmond street and Belvidere avenue, is about to be completed. All that now remains is 170 feet between Woodland and Belvidere avenues in front of the Kinyon property, and that is to be flagged at once.

—The death of Mrs. Geo. C. Soulaby occurred at her home in New Market last Saturday. The funeral will be held tomorrow from her late home at 2 p. m.

WON A PATENT CONTEST.

CHARLES E. BUELL ESTABLISHES HIS RIGHTS TO A VALUABLE INVENTION.

Had a Hard Struggle to Maintain His Position, as There Were Three Contestants for the Same Patent.

Charles E. Buell, of North Plainfield, has received a patent bearing date of July 14th, for an automatic sprinkler, which is made operative by expansion due to heat, and is adopted to be used in factories and warehouses for putting out fires. The water necessary to extinguish a fire in its early stages, being discharged from a sprinkler which is opened by the heat of the fire.

Mr. Buell had quite a struggle to obtain this patent, as there were three other inventors besides Mr. Buell having applications for a similar device. The litigation has been long, but the broad and controlling claims for such a sprinkler were awarded to Mr. Buell as being the earliest to invent such a device, and as already stated the patent was issued to him on the 14th inst.

The form of an automatic sprinkler which employs a fusible fastening, and of which quite a number are in use, as in the Babcock building, was patented to Mr. Buell several years ago, and are in extensive use throughout the country.

A WHEELMAN HURT

A Driver Turned His Horse Suddenly and Causes a Spill of the Cyclist.

Driver or bicycle rider, he should always look behind before attempting to turn his vehicle. That rule is often forgotten and such a case resulted in an accident one afternoon last week that placed A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, on the disabled list.

West was riding up Watchung avenue from Front street and a delivery wagon was going the same way. West rode along side of it when suddenly the driver started to turn the horse into the little alley that leads to the stables of J. F. MacDonald, the grocer. West was unable to stop and his shoulder struck the horse in the side. He managed to keep his balance and tried to turn in on the sidewalk. The horse was frightened and sprang forward knocking West off the wheel. He was thrown heavily to the sidewalk striking on his hip while the horse's hoof struck his head and side.

West was badly stunned and bruised by the fall but his wheel was uninjured. The driver thought West was to blame. West however thought the driver careless in not looking around. West was assisted home by a friend and consulted a doctor regarding his injuries.

A Borough of Many Names.

That part of Westfield Township that has been set off in a borough is blessed with so many names that it is confusing to anyone who is not acquainted with its history. The borough is officially named Mountainside. The Postoffice Department knows it as Ballsurol, and to the church and school authorities it is Locust Grove, and yet another part has been known for half a century as Branch Mills. An effort is now on foot to have one name for the entire territory, and do away with the babel of names.—Westfield Leader.

Rescued From Drowning.

Frank Elkins, a lad of ten years, living on Grove street, New Brunswick, had a very narrow escape from drowning at Boynton Beach one day last week. He came down on an excursion with a party of choir boys from New Brunswick. A large crowd were on the beach at the time, including a number of Plainfielders. It was not until the lad had gone down four times that one of his party dove off the pier and pulled the drowning boy out by the hair. It took nearly two hours work to restore the boy to consciousness.

TIPP PLEADS GUILTY.

LAWYER REED ASKS FOR CLEMENCY FROM THE COURT.

Says That His Wife Nagged Him to Distraction—Prosecutor Marsh Satisfied That He Intended to Kill Her.

Gilbert Thompson, familiarly known as "Tipp, the Bootblack," was arraigned in the County Court at Elizabeth July 15th, before Judge McCormick and pleaded guilty to the charge of felonious assault and battery in the attempt to kill his wife at her home on East Second street in this city July 2d.

Charles A. Reed, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, appeared in his behalf and made a plea for clemency on the part of the court in pronouncing sentence. He stated that Thompson had been nagged almost to desperation by his wife in her demands on him for money and in her catechism for his conduct towards other women. There was some aggravation, he said, in the last quarrel they had indulged in, and in a spirit of passion he had shot her.

Prosecutor Marsh represented the side of the State, and said that he was fully convinced that Thompson meant to kill his wife, as he purchased a revolver for that purpose and then went directly after his wife, and after a resumption of the disagreement earlier in the evening, he had shot her with the intention to kill her.

Judge McCormick postponed sentence for one week.

Mrs. Thompson is still confined in the Muhlenberg Hospital, and though she will be disfigured for life, she will recover from the wounds inflicted by the shots fired by her infuriated husband.

POSTMASTER SHERIDAN DEAD.

One of the Leading Democrats in Elizabeth, Who Rose From Obscurity.

Postmaster Patrick Sheridan, of Elizabeth, passed away July 15th, at his home on Race street, after an illness of several months. He had Bright's disease.

Mr. Sheridan was in his sixty-third year, and was born in County Meath, Ireland, coming to America when a boy. He began life in Elizabeth as an errand boy for the late Chancellor Williamson, and became a carpenter and a noted builder of factories and churches. He erected more religious edifices than any other man in New Jersey. His last work of this kind was the Trinity Methodist church, at Rahway. He built and owned the Sheridan House.

Mr. Sheridan was a strong Democrat and served eight years in the City Council and twelve years as Collector of Union county.

When a member of the Council he prevented Comptroller Leggett, who afterwards went to State prison, from issuing $1,500,000 worth of city bonds. Mr. Sheridan was the first one to suggest an appeal to the Legislature when Elizabeth became bankrupt. In 1889 he was a candidate for Mayor and was defeated by John C. Rankin, Jr. In 1893 President Cleveland appointed him postmaster.

ANENT SPRAYING.

What is Needed is a Substance That Rain Will Not Destroy.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I have read with great interest the very timely article on the elm leaf beetle in Friday's issue and must agree with the writer signing himself "The Woodpecker." Spraying with arsenical solutions is all very well, and should not be neglected if we would rid our trees of these pests, but it alone is not sufficient. A healthy rain will wash all the poison off and the beetles will remain to continue their destructive work. Besides, the poisoned larvae are dangerous to the lives of our birds.

What is wanted is a substance that is unaffected by rain and heat and is at the same time harmless to the trees and birds that will catch the larvae as they crawl down the trunks of the trees at any time or at night.

Such a substance has been in use in Germany for many years and is known there as "Ermisch's Raupenleim," introduced in this country as "Ermisch's Caterpillar Lime," (Owl Trident Brand) and is used annually by the German Government, Forestry Departments, Municipalities, orchardists and others by the thousands of tons as the standard remedy against just such crawling insects as the larvae of the elm leaf beetle, the tussock moth and other similar pests that defoliate our trees and are a nuisance to all passers by.

It is applied in a band about 4 to 6 inches around the trunks of the trees by means of a paddle or stiff brush and it retains its stickiness a long time.

No larvae or caterpillar can cross such a band properly applied and if our elms were so banded it would prove an effective assistance in the endeavor to destroy the elm tree beetle.

Respectfully,
A. M. Griffen.

M'DERMOTT STILL FIRM.

Will Not Support Bryan—Confident of a Big Republican Majority.

Allan L. McDermott still adheres to his determination to espouse the cause of sound money and to bolt the Democratic ticket and platform. He still adheres to the position he took at Chicago, and he restated his position as follows:

"I have seen Democrats in both New York and New Jersey, and they all repudiate the platform and the candidate. I am still of the opinion that the Republicans will carry the State by at least 60,000 plurality.

"The more I study that platform the more I become incensed, and, as to the 16 to 1 doctrine, I am more positively convinced that it is a species of political insanity. I think I shall prepare an article on the effect that 16 to 1 will have on the wages of workingmen, and they who run can read, and vote accordingly."

Mr. McDermott said he was not a member of the State Committee and could anticipate the action of that organization in the present campaign.

WHAT IS GOOD TO READ.

Various Sorts of Literature Discussed by Christian Endeavorers.

The subject, "Books and Reading," at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church Sunday evening, was one that interested all and so the meeting was largely attended. It was led by Miss M. G. Morse.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich spoke on "Newspapers," and told of the dangers of newspaper reading and how to avoid them.

Mrs. Goodrich talked on "Devotional Reading" and gave many helpful suggestions.

Miss Emma L. Adams, librarian of the Plainfield Public Library, gave a very interesting and practical talk on "Hints on Reading," dealing principally with the principle of the choice of books.

John V. Beekman spoke very pleasingly on "Bible Reading," after which an open parliament on "Books and Reading" was held in which a number took part. The meeting was a very successful one and greatly enjoyed by those who attended.

Frozen Pipes in July.

Saturday afternoon a tub of cracked ice, containing salt, to be used in packing cream, was sent from Tier's Lake House to the Park avenue store. Instead of being used for the purpose stated, the ice and salt was put in the top of his soda-water fountain by one of his employes. A short time thereafter a customer called for a glass of soda, but the water wouldn't run out of the pipe. Will Tier soon ascertained the cause and taking out the salted ice he threw cold water on the pipes and thawed them out.

Boom in Brick Buildings.

Richard A. Boyce, of North Plainfield, has nearly completed his contract to furnish 14,000 brick for Geo. B. Leland's house on Verdon avenue; also his 30,000 contract for Mr. Perrin's new house on Myrtle avenue, and 15,000 for Seaman Williams for a new house on Sixth street, near Clinton avenue. He has recently been awarded the contract for 17,000 brick to be used in the construction of a house and barn for R. Stelle, on Stelle avenue.

CUT WITH A JACK-KNIFE

A COLORED MAN STABBED WITHOUT APPARENT PROVOCATION.

A Party Had Been Raiding the Growler and When the Drinking Ended, James Morris Made an Attack on Henry Lewis.

A man usually has some object in stabbing another human being, but still no one seems to be able to tell exactly why James Morris stabbed Henry Lewis, last Friday night at the home of William Laing, 305 Arlington avenue. Morris, the only man who can tell, is not to be found by friends or foes. The leading participants in this affair are colored.

William Laing is employed by the Plainfield Produce Company as driver. Henry Lewis is his next door neighbor, living at 301 Arlington avenue. He was in the employ of Fuller, the grocer, until the latter failed and since then has been working by the day. Yesterday, Lewis was helping Laing, as the latter's wife was ill and Laing himself was not feeling exactly right. Thanks to Lewis, Laing finished his work early and went home.

Jane Somerset, also colored, lives with them and last night James Morris and his wife came, expecting to board with Laing.

Lewis and his wife came over to spend the evening and somebody got a growler of beer to add to the pleasure of the occasion. When that was empty, Lewis "rushed" it at the request of the others. Instead of getting the quarter changed that had been given him, he used ten cents of his own.

When he came back he wanted his change, but no one had it. When the contents of this growler and some stronger spirits had followed the example of the first, Mrs. Morris suggested that Lewis "chase the duck" again. The latter refused, however, and said he was going out to have the quarter changed. Dr. Long was in an upper room attending Mrs. Laing and Mrs. Lewis and Laing were there also. The Morris family then issued their ultimatum to the effect that, if no more beer was forthcoming, they would depart. Lewis remarked that there was no objection to the latter action and started for the door. Morris grabbed Lewis by the arm as the latter reached the door. Lewis wanted to know what the matter was and then Morris walked away. As Lewis turned toward the door again he saw the other man rushing at him knife in hand. Lewis thought the knife was intended for his heart, and by a quick turn presented his right breast instead of his left.

The knife, which was a large-sized pocket-knife, had a blade about three inches long which was completely buried in Lewis' side. The blade was drawn downward making the cut about four inches long.

Lewis cried that he was stabbed and Laing came rushing down stairs. He ordered Morris out of his house, whereupon the latter left for parts unknown.

Dr. Long dressed the wound, which was quite a a serious one, as an artery was cut, and later in the evening Lewis bled so freely that the wound had to be redressed. He was confined to his bed today.

The affair happened about 9 o'clock and neither of the men were drunk, although both had been drinking a little.

A MIDSUMMER FESTIVAL

THE BICYCLE, TROLLEY AND BAND TO BE THE ATTRACTIONS.

Councilman Frost at the Head of a Movement Which Will be Unique in History of the Country's Amusements.

Plainfield is going to have something new, new not only to Plainfield but to the rest of this country as well. It is to be a "Midsummer Night's Festival" and is to be held on the evening of Tuesday, July 28th. There is no stream of water in Plainfield large enough on which to hold a carnival as is done at Cranford, Rahway and New Brunswick, so Plainfield's summer is to include her three attractions, open-air concerts, bicycle riding and trolley riding.

The plan for the "Festival" originated with Councilman George B. Frost and is arranged to take the place of one of the open-air concerts that are being given this summer under his supervision.

The plan is to place the Plainfield Cornet Band, of which N. H. Guttman is leader, on one of the open cars on the street railway and stop at various points along the route and give several selections, thus, instead of the people coming to the open air concerts, the concerts will come to them. The car will cover all four branches of the railway and give all an equal share of the music.

In connection with the moving band stand, it is Councilman Frost's idea that there shall be a grand bicycle parade. The band car will start from the corner of Watchung and North avenues at 8 o'clock, and at the same time the long column of cyclists will start. There are at least four thousand cyclists in Plainfield and North Plainfield, and as many more in the surrounding towns and villages. It is hoped that most of these will turn out. The riders will accompany the car until it stops, when they will also halt and take a brief rest while they listen to the music. It is expected to have the band car move part of the distance at a slow rate, while the band is playing.

The residents along the line of the trolley will decorate with Chinese lanterns, and otherwise illuminate. All the bicycle clubs in the vicinity are invited to turn out in a body, and every bicycle rider is especially requested to decorate his or her wheel for the parade. Social, political and other clubs are asked to turn out and carry transparencies with suitable lettering. It's hoped that both political parties will be well represented. Those who aided in the success of the Crescent Wheelmen's parade two years ago by decorating their wheels so handsomely, will do the same on this occasion.

All clubs and parties who intend to start in the parade are requested to their names and number of riders to The Daily Press as soon as possible.

Besides being an enjoyable affair to Plainfielders, it will be of considerable benefit to local business men, as a large crowd of outsiders is sure to be attracted to this city. So everyone should turn out and aid in making Plainfield's first "Midsummer Night's Festival" a grand and glorious success, and something long to be remembered and talked about.

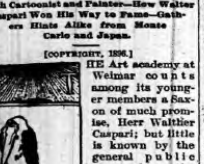
THE GERMAN BEARDSL

A New Artist of Weimar Whose Work Is Attracting Attention.

Both Cartoonist and Painter—How Walter Caspari Won His Way to Fame—Gathers Hints Alike from Monte Carlo and Japan.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]



HE Art academy at Weimar counts among its young members a Saxon of much promise, Herr Walther Caspari; but little is known by the general public about this artist who has so suddenly burst into fame. An interview very graciously accorded to your correspondent, resulted in drawing forth the following facts relating to Herr Caspari's artistic development and the position he holds in German art circles.

Although the name Caspari might suggest a south of Europe origin, Caspari is a full-blooded German, born about 30 years ago in Chemnitz, one of the most prosperous manufacturing towns of Saxony. There are few, if any, traces of artistic tastes to be found among the elder Carparis; yet Herr Caspari claims the Cranachs among his ancestors. But as they lived two or three centuries ago, one might conclude that their influence upon this young man would not be very great. The Casparis of this century are for the most part tradespeople and artisans. One can see very little in or about Chemnitz to arouse in a boy the love for the beautiful, it being essentially a factory town, given over almost wholly to the making of business—and money. But there are good schools there, among them a first-class technical art school; and it was there that young Caspari got his start. He also attended the local gymnasium. The father died while Walther was a mere boy, and since then the young man has had to look out for himself, mother, brothers and sisters. An apprenticeship in a large establishment proved irksome to the high-strung youth, so he threw up his position, and gave himself up to art.

Four years ago he went to Leipsic, without money or influence, to study in the Kunstakademie. Natives in town stood by him, and in a short time he found himself in his element. In the exhibitions of the Leipsic art academy in '92 and '93, his work was marked by a vigor and freshness quite unusual in a young artist.

Six or eight hours a day in the academy might be enough, one would think, for a student; but for Caspari, when the work in the academy was over for the day, there still remained an evening of toil. Up in his little atelier, under a dimly-burning lamp, he worked away on those pen-and-ink sketches which brought him ready money and carried his name before German people. The comic themes which he filled with illustrations bearing the signature "W. C." or "W. Caspari." This work was not very high art, one might think; yet it was very necessary, for the reason that it brought him in the few thalers and marks that were necessary to keep soul and body together. It is very interesting to look through his old portfolio and note the character of the work. Sketches they were for the most part that would not appeal to an American, but which were irresistible to the German. His girls seemed peculiarly up-to-date in the fashions of the day, and I remarked upon it. He informed me that he always got his styles from Monte Carlo, a few days or weeks ahead of Paris as far as styles were concerned.

Caspari left Leipsic in '94 for Weimar, a place made famous for all time by Goethe, Schiller, Liszt, and many others. Here he found a congenial home, and his work has progressed there according to the plans laid in Leipsic. The same eagerness to learn, the same zeal in studying the old masters, the same readiness to make his own the best features of the new schools are even the passing fads—these are the leading characteristics of the young artist.

A critic would be very rash indeed to class Caspari among the leading artists of Germany, yet there is so much strength in the young man's bids fair to rival Max Klinger, a recognized leader in modern German art. The "poster fad" hasn't spread in Germany to any alarming extent, but there are tendencies and notions and schools of this thing and that, enough to bewilder a layman. Caspari is first of all, like Strathmann, of Munich, an artist of today. He has broken away from dead forms; he strives to give nature a pure, and at the same time an artistic expression; his critical irony at times finds place upon his canvases, he is naive without knowing what naivete is; he brings out the simplicity and strength of the early Italians, and at the same time shows his indebtedness to the suggestive artists of Japan.

The squarelle "Fruhling," reminds one of the well-known work of Klinger; it also carries one back to the days of the Fourteenth century Italians. In the foreground of this work, we see, with his back partially turned toward us, the upper half of the nude youth, who, with a simple pipe, is summoning nature to her rebirth. The view stretches out over field and meadow, struggling to free themselves from snow and ice. This landscape, conceived by a poet, tells us of the feeling that nature awakens in a poet's soul. The artist has turned his eyes from the earth to regions of pure delight.

The two aquarelles, "Phlegma" (Idleness), and "Das Poetische Fraulein," show one the modern side of the artist and man. Here, rather more than in the small lower frieze of the "Frahling," where the rays of the rising sun are gladdening the flowers of spring, we note the influence of the Japanese. That lazy bird, serenely resting on one leg and philosophically observing the two snails that are creeping slowly by, might have been painted by a Japanese, could he have embodied in his work the touches of humorous irony that Caspari put into his design. "Das Poarische Fraulein" tells us still more of the inborn humor of the man. But although the artist hammers with his sarcasm the excesses of this poetical young woman, he does not fail to use artistic forms; and here, too, the influences of the Japanese is quite marked. In black and white reproductions all the beauty of coloring is lost, and the reader must be content to take the judgment of critics who say that Caspari's work is incomparable.

Outside of half a dozen families Walther Caspari isn't known in America; but the time is soon coming when his reputation will reach the art centers of the bustling republic. He is a most modest man, with no hurry about his American reputation. His fair, round, boyish face with his well-trimmed hair and mustache, do not proclaim the artist; yet there a pose to his head and a twitch to his eye that mark the man as a master.

BRYAN AND BLAND

Their Meeting an Interesting Incident in the Former's Journey.

EXCHANGED FLATTERING CORDIALITIES

Circumstances, Not Merit, Said Mr. Bryan, Caused His Nomination Instead of the Selection of Mr. Bland—Speeches Made at Several Points.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 17.—The meeting yesterday of Mr. Bryan and Richard P. Bland was probably the most interesting incident so far in the democratic presidential nominee's journey homeward. Mr. Bland had boarded his train in the Union station at St. Louis, but he kept himself in a forward car until the train had started. Then he entered the parlor car in which the Bryan party had seats, and made his way to where Mr. Bryan was standing. Mr. Bland wore a long linen duster over a suit of black clothes. He stretched out his hand to the presidential candidate, and there was the warmest hand grasp between the victor and the defeated. "How are you, Mr. Bryan? I congratulate you," said Mr. Bland. "How are you, Mr. Bland? Thank you," said Mr. Bryan. "Your nomination took a big load off my mind," said Mr. Bland, warmly. Mr. Bryan then presented to the veteran of free silver, and after some general conversation the two men withdrew and talked earnestly together for some time. Within an hour later there was some additional exchange of cordiality between Bland and Bryan. The train stopped at a little place called Washington where a knot of people had gathered to see the nominee. Standing on the platform of the parlor car with Mr. Bryan, beside him, Mr. Bland said to the crowd: "I want to introduce to you the next president of the United States. I served four years with him in the house of representatives and I know he is as true a friend of free silver as I am, and I want to say that if I had had the selection of the silver candidate for president of the United States, this gentleman would have been my choice." Mr. Bryan showed some feeling as he responded: "If this nomination had gone by merit," he said, "it would have gone to the man who for twenty years in the face of great opposition has kept alive the silver cause and in the hour of victory he will be more entitled to credit than any other man in the nation." Mr. Bryan told the audience that circumstances, not merit, had been the cause of his selection, and he closed with the statement that "Had Mr. Bland secured the nomination he would have had no more loyal supporter in the United States than I." This incident was repeated at several stations where stops were made, and Mr. Bland left the party here, where he made a speech last night. A big reception was given Mr. Bryan here.

TURKS AT IT AGAIN.

They Violate the Armistice Agreed Upon and Kill Women and Children.

London, July 17.—In the house of commons last evening George N. Curzon, under secretary for foreign affairs, announced that a complaint had been received by the Christian insurgents in Crete that the Turks in that island had further violated the armistice which had been agreed upon between the Turks and the Christian rebels by making an attack upon the town of Spakerosa, where many persons, including women and children are reported to have been killed.

Leaves His Body for Dissection.

Baltimore, July 17.—The body of an unknown man, supposed to be W. T. Church of Detroit, Mich., was fished out of the harbor yesterday. A man's hat and coat were found on the wharf. A note found in the pocket contained the intelligence that the writer, despondent over long continued misfortune, had drowned himself. It directed that the body be turned over to the College of Physicians and Surgeons for dissection.

MAJOR M'KINLEY'S CAMPAIGN.

To Be Fairly Under Way by August—Lively Speaking Proposed.

Canton, O., July 17.—J. H. Manley, N. P. Scott, Powell Clayton, Cyrus Leland, C. G. Dawes and Henry C. Payne of the republican national executive committee and Gen. Osborne, the secretary of the committee, came to Canton last evening to call on Major McKinley. Mr. Hanna did not come owing to the recent sudden death of his brother-in-law. The visitors will be the committee who are here dined with Major McKinley and then discussed with him the plans adopted by the committee in executive session at Cleveland. There will be frequent meetings of the committee during the campaign. The headquarters in New York will be occupied a good deal of the time by Messrs. Hobart, Manley and Quay. It is understood that Mr. Quay will devote a good deal of time to the situation in the south, a section of the country with which he is exceedingly familiar. Messrs. Payne, Leland, Dawes and Clayton will be much in evidence at the Chicago headquarters. Mr. Wills has charge of very important work there. It is proposed to have a lively speaking campaign, but the date for the formal opening has not been decided upon, nor the place been agreed. The selection for the time and place of the first great rally will be determined somewhat by the developments of the next three or four weeks. The work of preparing and publishing the documents and speeches of Major McKinley intended for distribution will be intrusted to the congressional committee in Washington. Headquarters both in New York and Chicago will be opened within two weeks. The campaign will be fairly under way by the 1st of August unless some unforeseen obstacle occasions delay.

POPULIST PLATFORM.

Ideas of Two Conferences To Be Submitted to the St. Louis Convention.

San Francisco, July 17.—E. W. Wardell, chairman of the populist central state committee, and J. Taylor Rogers, Mayor Sutro's secretary, have prepared a platform which is to be proposed in report to the national populist convention, to be held in St. Louis next week. The financial plank is as follows: "We demand a national money, issued directly by the general government only, as a full legal tender for all debts, and issued without the agency of any private corporation or bank, and in circulating volume subject to law and responsive to our needs, and specially to be increased to $50 per capita of the entire people. Such money shall consist of gold, silver and paper, each dollar thereof endowed with the same function imparted solely from the stamp thereon and not dependent for its money value upon the price of the material used. Each dollar shall be interchangeable with, but not redeemable, in, the other, and shall be demonetized respectively gold, silver and paper money, all national debts being payable in either, at the option of the government. As the United States is a free and powerful nation, and the financial and industrial liberty of its citizens should be independent of the action of any other government, we demand the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver by the United States at their present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without reference to any foreign nation. We demand that all national banks be abolished, and in lieu of them that the government establish a postal bank in each city, town and village of the United States containing a population of 1,000 or more." The platform also declares for the recognition of Cuba and against the refunding of the Pacific railroad debt.

VANDERBILT'S CONDITION.

He Passed Another Restless Night and Was Weaker This Morning.

New York, July 17.—Cornelius Vanderbilt, head of the Vanderbilt family, who suffered a stroke of paralysis Tuesday, passed a restless night last night and is weaker this morning. He is able to speak but with great difficulty. The doctors do not like to say do not look for any marked change in the patient's condition for several days.

—The bishop of Bedford avers that the east London district contains a population of 1,300,000, nearly all poor. From this statement some idea will be had of the vastness of the work the clergy are called upon to perform. The difficulty of raising funds for so great a work is very great.

ORIGIN OF BLUE GRASS.

Not Originally a Kentucky Product, for It Came from Indiana.

"I notice in the papers that somebody in the south part of the state wants to know where blue grass first started," said Prof. John Collett, ex-state geologist.

"A great many people contend that it was first found in Kentucky, but this is not so. Blue grass is a native of the Wabash valley in Indiana. It was found by William Henry Harrison's troops during the solemn march to Tippecanoe in 1811. Harrison gathered a small army at Ohio Falls and started north. At Vincennes the gallant heroes realized that they could not go 200 miles up the Wabash without feed for their horses. Gen. Harrison had two cribs of corn at Terre Haute and persuaded the men to go on. As they came on with hungry horses and scant feed they found the ground covered with blue grass. The miles were of newport, and the Collett farm was found a bountiful supply of blue grass. Some places in the bottom it was growing three feet high and such feed had never been heard of by the Kentucky soldiers. At Blue City they found blue grass was found and from there to Tippecanoe the whole line of march was covered with blue grass. The seed was carried back to Kentucky and sown there, but they without reference to any soil or any warm soil and it had to be sown with oats and rye. Mr. Sandusky, the father of the present family of that name, told me in an early day that no blue grass grew in Kentucky until after it was imported from Indiana. Tom Downing, of Terre Haute, was an ardent admirer of Henry Clay, and once went to visit him at his home near Ashland, Ky. After seeing the fine farm, well set in blue grass, Downing suggested that Mr. Clay let him have some of the seed to take back to Indiana.

"Tom, don't make a fool of yourself," said Clay, "the grandsire of Kentucky blue grass is growing around your house in the fence corners of your fields. We got the seed from Terre Haute and the middle Wabash, and after a hard struggle got it to grow here in its present luxuriousness."—Indianapolis Journal.

Mail Stolen in the Orange Free State.

One of these republics—the Orange Free State—is very nearly as large as England, and just as large as the state of New York. It lies from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the sea, and is mostly level, with some low ranges of hills. The surface is bare of wood, except in a few sheltered spots along the streams, but is well covered with herbage. The air is pure and bracing, much like that of Colorado or Wyoming. There are, happily, no blizzards, but very violent thunder storms are not uncommon, and the hailstones—I have seen them bigger than pigeon's eggs—which fall during such storms sometimes kill the smaller animals, and even men.—Prof. James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

Some Schoolboy Definitions.

In a recent examination some boys were asked to define certain words, and to give a sentence illustrating the meaning. Here are a few: Frantic is well. I picked some frantic flowers. Athletic, young: the boy was too athletic to use. Tandem, one behind another; the boys sit tandem at school. And then some single words are funnily explained. Dust is mud with the wet squeezed out. Sirius are twelve stars; stars are the moon's eggs; circumference is the distance around the middle of the outside. —Educational Gazette.

THE POET'S CORNER.

"Home Is Where the Loved Ones Are."

Tho' north or south, or east or west,
Our feet may wander, near or far,
This truth is borne in ev'ry breast—
Our home is where our loved ones are.

Four walls upreared by human hands
Form not the place that we call home;
We turn to them as strangers from
Where'er we roam,
We're gone for them where'er we roam,
Because the hearts that love and live—
Because the hearts that love are true—
Are gathered there and wait to give
A welcome when our journey's through.

But if, by homeward-gazing eyes,
No face is at the window seen,
And, dumb of heart, we look where lies
A mound, a sacred spot of green,
Oh, weary soul! remember this:
A second truth our Father gives:
The heart that loves, immortal is—
The heart that loves forever lives!

Above the blue, beyond the vail,
Our fait'ring feet must journey far;
We'll find our home—we cannot fail—
For home is where our loved ones are!
—William Wallace Cook, in Ladies' World.

The Call.

The city claims the winter, be it so,
But when the sky is full of songs and wings,
The valleys fragrant with bright blooming things,
To nature's glad republic thou shouldst go.

There inspiration drops from the young morn;
There noons are like full urns pressed down with life;
There dies the past with many sorrows rife
Fall shriveled off and leave the soul new born.

Hark to the call from many a dusky wood,
From spicy pastures drowsing in the sun,
From jilted streams that through the meadows run,
Come, live with us, and we will do thee good.
—Mary F. Butts, in Youth's Companion.

Pink Hyacinths.

An odorous breath of blossoms pure and sweet
Pink hyacinths that come when spring winds blow,
And star the emerald grass about our feet,
Where late has lain the mantle of the snow.

I stoop and pluck one dainty, waxlike bloom
That blushes with the hue of early dawn,
And as I breathe its subtly sweet perfume,
I sigh to think of springtimes that are gone.

But flowers will bloom with each returning spring,
And robins nest with every maiden year;
Then why should we not tune our hearts and sing,
Nor sigh for music fled and spring flowers sere?
—Minnie Quinn, in N. Y. Independent.

Adversity.

We fret and fear at all the year
Is not a panorama gay;
Our food hopes die, we weep and sigh
When dark skies follow day.

If winter's snow would never blow,
How could we love the warmth of June?
If ne'er the night our day would blight
We could not prize the light of noon.

If never friends our trust would rend,
Could we the worth of true friends know?
Our hearts could bless no kind caress
If 'twere not for some cruel blow.

The day of light must follow night
As did the grand creation's dawn;
Our hearts must wait for fortune's state,
Success from affliction flows.

So bide the hours, though smiling flowers
Do not always the path adorn;
Our hardest trials are fortune's wiles,
Our greatest blessings are the thorns.
—Sidney Heald, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

Beneath the Sod.

I saw the mortal laid beneath the sod,
With only earthly food for her bread,
I knew the immortal spirit was with God,
A bright, pure soul had gained eternal life.

First of a band of friends to pass away,
Her busy, useful life on earth is done;
Ended forever all her toil and care,
For her the promised rest has now begun.
I stood and heard the solemn words of faith,
"I am the resurrection and the life."
God, whose great mercy watches over all,
Had from my friend from out our earthly strife.

We left her lying in her peaceful bed,
Until the dawning of the Easter day,
Trusting in One who long ago hath said
That He will wipe all bitter tears away.
—The Academy.

If I Were Ten.

If I were ten, my dear like you,
The sky, methinks, were always blue,
The hours were long, the days were full and dun,
For every day I'd see the sun
Come out and gild the world anew.

And everything I heard were true,
There were no wicked men to undo,
I scarce would know the things to abus
If I were ten.

And yet, perhaps, if I could woo
My age again, I'd keep with you
To see the years and birthdays run
Until at place I now were won.
I'd have a different point of view
If I were ten.
—L. A. W. Bulletin.

The Average Man.

I very much admire many traits that I possess,
And honestly I blush to say it, still I candidly confess
There's lots I like about me; and while others may not see Things in a very different light, I'm really pleased with me.
It's true my habits, my words, my deeds, my figure and my face
May to the careless eye appear as only commonplace,
But that's because I throw about my noble-ness of mind
A mask of modest air that makes my greatness hard to find.
—L. A. W. Bulletin.

Forgive.

Wait not the morrow, to forgive me now;
Who knows what fate to-morrow's dawn may bring!
Let not the night with shadow on thy brow,
With my heart hungering.

Wait not the morrow, but entwine thy hand
In mine with sweet forgiveness full and free;
Of all life's joys I only understand
That joy of love.

Perhaps some day I may redeem the wrong,
Repair the fault—I know not when or how.
Oh, dear one, do not wait—it may be long—
Only forgive me now.
—London Academy.

The Secret.

'Twas first her eyes that drew his heart;
And next her airy wit
Caused him to grieve when they must part—
So true-love knots are knit.

Yet laughing eyes and dainty jest,
Though potent in their way,
Are not the ties that best serve her best
In holding to her sway.

Love lingers now, through years that make
A bravo sad with others,
For she can make a better cake
That's better than his mother's.

that the question was to have enough money to pay what the Council in the future would decide as fair compensation. On a vote, $6,000 extra was appropriated, making in all $166,156.06. Mr. Moore voted against Mr. Ginna's amendment to make the fees $9,000, but all the members voted for the resolution offered to make the fees $6,000.

Mr. Frost then stated that everything was now turned over to the Commissioners on Assessments, and they could start work. Council then adjourned.

A LARGE FUNERAL.

Several German Societies Attend the Funeral of the Late Eugene Hoerster.

The funeral services of the late Eugene Hoerster were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 from the house where a short service was conducted, and at 3 o'clock from the German Reformed church. The funeral was one of the largest ever held in the borough, which gave evidence that the departed was well known and well thought of. The services were in charge of Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the church. The Saengerbund Society, the Independent Scheutzen Corps and the German Beneficial Association were present and acted as an escort.

The church was filled to its utmost capacity and many were obliged to remain outside. Rev. Mr. Hauser offered prayer and read the Scriptures, after which a delegation from the singing section of the Saengerbunds rendered one of their impressive selections. Rev. Mr. Hauser then spoke at some length regarding the departed. Valuable truths were presented setting forth the fundamental principles upon which life is based. At the close of the remarks the singing section rendered another selection.

Those present were given an opportunity of looking upon him who had been their friend and acquaintance.

The floral tributes were very beautiful and costly. They consisted of a large harp, bearing the word "Brother," from the Saengerbunds; an anchor from the German Beneficial Association; a pillow, with the inscription "Comrade," from the Independent Scheutzen Corps; another pillow, with the word "Papa" inscribed, from the decedent's little daughter; a wreath from C. Treft, the Newark brewer; and several smaller wreaths from friends.

Interment was in North Plainfield.

The pall bearers were Charles Schaefer, Otto Barry, Independent Scheutzen Corps; Charles Filber, Henry Reupert, German Beneficial Association; Frederick Beehtle, Jos. Haurand, Saengerbunds.

While the funeral cortege was entering and leaving the church, Professor Schroeder rendered a solemn funeral march.

ALMOST LOST HIS SIGHT

HENRY PIKER THE VIGTIM OF A LAMP EXPLOSION AT WESTFIELD.

Was Stooping Over a Lamp When it Exploded and Badly Scorched His Face—No Serious Results Anticipated.

Just as he was closing up his store after the usual Saturday evening rush, Henry Piker, of 538 West Front street, met with a serious accident by which, it was thought at first that he would lose his sight. Mr. Piker keeps a shoe store in Westfield while his father is a shoemaker with his establishment on Madison avenue.

Young Piker was just closing up the store and was taking down the large lamps that illuminated the interior. In taking them down one caught in his sleeve and was upset on the floor. A friend, who was in the store, seized it and threw it out into the yard. Piker followed and tried to smother the flames when the lamp exploded directly in front of his face.

His face and the side and top of his head were badly scorched and blistered by the flames, and it was thought that his eyes were affected, but it was found only the outer lid was burned. He was carried home by Henry Voehl, who keeps a bakery in Westfield, and this morning returned to his store, although his face was still in a terrible condition.

TOLD PLAUSIBLE STORIES

FIVE MEN WHO FOUND A BED IN A FREIGHT CAR.

When Arraigned Before Judge DeMeza They Told What Appeared to be Hard Luck Stories and Were Then Discharged

While most of the readers of The Daily Press were at their comfortable homes with a roof over their heads to protect them from the heavy shower passing over this city yesterday morning about 2 o'clock, there were five wanderers tramping along the railroad. To protect themselves from the fury of the storm they all took refuge in a train of empty freight cars that were standing on the siding near the North Avenue station, and there they were found by Patrolmen Saunders and Myers. They were arrested and locked up, and this morning were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. They were not a hard looking crowd, everyone looked like a hard working man, and their stories were of the same old strain, no work and therefore no money. They were not together, but met by chance last evening when the torrents of water began to fall.

The spokesman of the party was Wm T. Owen, 35 years old, a boilermaker from Atlanta, Georgia, on his way to Elizabethport. Adolph Hoffman was a soda-water man from Denver and had failed to find work at Long Branch. He was 48 years old. George Nelson, 36 years, was a carpenter in hard luck, returning to his home in Newark. John Bonko had spent part of his 22 years at Yonkers on the railroad and was looking for a job. The other man of the party was Robert Christi, from Nanticoke, Pa. He had been a coal miner, "but," he said, "I couldn't make an honest living there. We only had three shifts a week and last month I only made $11 and had to pay my month's board out of that. I just couldn't do it. I thought maybe I might find some thing to do around New York." He had an honest-looking face and he talked as if he had given up all hope.

The Judge was inclined to be lenient and suspended sentence on them after warning them to keep off the railroad as they would surely be arrested again. They thanked the Judge and started out again in the pouring rain.

FRACTURED THE COLLARBONE.

Mrs. Horace Cunningham Seriously Hurt in a Runaway Yesterday.

Late Tuesday afternoon while Mrs. Horace Cunningham, of 954 West Front street, was returning from a carriage ride she met with a severe accident. She was turning off of Front street into the driveway at her home when an electric car passed going at a good speed. The car frightened the horse and he gave a plunge, upsetting the wagon and throwing Mrs. Cunningham out with great force against a tree. The woman sustained painful injuries and had to be assisted to the house.

A physician was sent for and he learned that the collarbone was fractured. Proper treatment was given and the patient is doing as well as can be expected. The horse was not injured and the damage to the wagon was slight.

Well Known Man Dead.

Lawrence Collins, formerly of Scotch Plains, died at his home, 706 East One Hundred and Sixty-Fourth street, New York city, last Monday after a long illness. He was forty-nine years old and was one of the oldest residents of Scotch Plains. About two years ago he moved to New York. While here he was engaged as an engineer at the fur mills, and for some time he held the same position at Scott's Press Works, Plainfield. He was the only son left of a family of eight. He leaves a wife, who lives in this place. Mr. Collins was reputed to be worth considerable money and he left a testament which will be of benefit to St. Mary's church. The funeral services were held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's church, at Plainfield.

Crop Report.

Weather Reporter Neagle has the following crop report this week:

Plainfield—Promising week for all crops; wheat and rye housed; hay cutting progressing, will probably all be in this week; corn and oats look fine. Average temperature, 75 degrees; rainfall, 0.55.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for almost a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

THE IMPLIED CONTRACT.

AN IMPORTANT CASE BROUGHT IN JUSTICE NASH'S COURT.

Horatio Johnson Claimed That Mr. Markham Gave Him Orders to Do Work, But the Latter Denies It.

An interesting and very important case came up in Justice Nash's court Monday afternoon and on its settlement depends a very important question of contract, the implied contract. The case was that of Horatio C. N Johnston against Mrs. Harriet Markham, on contract.

Mrs. Markham owns a piece of property on Church street, where she lives. There was no sidewalk in front of the property and she consulted Mr. Johnston regarding the cost of laying a flagstone sidewalk. He stated that it would be $31.50, which she said she could not afford at present and let the matter drop. Johnston, however, went to work and laid the sidewalk and then sent in his bill. She would not pay and Johnston took the matter to the justice's court and the suit resulted.

He acknowledged that she had not ordered him to lay the sidewalk but claimed that, because Mrs. Markham made no objection to the laying of the sidewalk, she recognized an implied contract. Mrs. Markham said that she did not see Mr. Johnston or know where to find him when the sidewalk was being laid and that she had said in the first place that she could not afford it.

Winfield S. Angleman represented Johnston and Chas. J. McNabb was the attorney for Mrs. Markham.

Justice Nash reserved his decision for one week.

FELL ON THE TRACK.

But Prompt Action Saved Him From the Wheels.

Railroad men are accustomed to narrow escapes but, after George Green, foreman for George O. Stevens & Company, the enterprising coal dealers, had a little experience Monday afternoon, every man in the crews of the two engines that were nearby, came over to shake hands with him and congratulate him on his escape.

A train of coal cars was being shifted about preparatory to being placed on Stevens & Company's trestle. Green was explaining how the cars should be arranged, and was standing on the step of the rear car, and as switch engine No. 30 pulled the cars past a switch, the engine stopped and the sudden bump of the car caused Green to lose his balance and fall directly on the rail. The train then started to return, the switch having been turned. As Green saw the car coming he put up his feet, resting them against the brake bar, and so he was pushed off the track. The train was stopped, as soon as the engineer saw something was wrong. But had not Green done this he would have been crushed beneath the wheels of the cars. As it was, his side was badly bruised by his fall on the rail. This was his second narrow escape from being run over by a coal train.

FATED WITH ACCIDENTS

A SERIES OF MISHAPS MARKS LIFE IN THE BOROUGH.

Expensive Window Glass Shattered, a Load of Ice Slides Out of the Wagon, and Fractious Horses Cause Excitement.

A series of accidents have happened in the borough since Monday, and that little community now bids fair to being a rival of this city.

Yesterday afternoon the large fanlight over the doors at Smalley Bros. meat market fell and broke the pane of glass, which is very expensive. A few minutes later Coddington's loaded ice wagon turned from Somerset street into Race street and nearly all of the ice found its level in the roadway. This morning a German woman who sells milk left her horse tied on Sycamore avenue while she delivered milk to a customer. The horse was tied with the reins, and during the owner's absence the flies performed good work.

This worried the beast and before he realized what had happened he found himself tangled up in the harness and lying in the road. Borough Clerk Arnold was passing and he kindly assisted the owner, who had come back, in extricating the horse from his trouble and placing him on his feet.

A little later two boys, sons of Jeary Rowe, of Grove street, started out with a mustang and a wagon to peddle fruit and vetables. They had gone but a short distance when the fractious steed began to make trouble. The animal kicked, turned the wagon around a few times, broke the trace, threw the boys out, and raised mischief in general. The boys were not injured, neither did the animal get away. The trip was necessarily postponed.

TERRIFIC WIND AND RAIN

HEAVIEST STORM EXPERIENCED IN YEARS IN THIS SECTION.

The Rain Accompanied by an Electrical Storm That Wrought Havoc All Over This Section—No Fatalities Reported.

All Monday afternoon nature seemed preparing for a grand outburst. It was sultry and warm, very warm in fact, and there was oppressive quietness that seemed to preclude some terrible exhibition of power. The blue sky that made the morning so delightful was obscured, as the afternoon passed by a murky haze that gradually thickened until it became heavy laden clouds. There was a feeling of an undefinable something in the air that made the perspiring pedestrians glance anxiously toward the northwest from which direction the wild tossing banks of clouds began to appear. The patient hack horses moved uneasily, while the stray dogs in the streets crouched in some corner and forgot to chase a poor disreputable cat that was hunting about for shelter. Then came the black sky with clouds rolling and whirling as they came, thus making the dark haze look almost bright in comparison.

Over the city went the advance guard of the storm, the trees stirred in a fretful breeze and pedestrians forgot their warmth and discomfort to scurry for a place of shelter. The trains full of commuters, tired after a day in hot New York, began to arrive and soon were hurrying homeward. At about 5:30 o'clock the first drops of rain began to fall. And with the rain came wind. But the most portentious of all the signs of the coming storm was a terrible funnel-shaped cloud that gathered over the mountain. It was not black, but had a yellowish unearthly tinge, that made the beholder involuntarily shudder at the sight. Along the line of the mountains it whirled and then followed a path to the northeast of Plainfield. Then the rain began to fall heavily, blown into spray by a gale from the northwest. Everybody ran for shelter; even the horses took refuge. The torrents of water that were falling began to flood the streets, especially under the railroad bridges.

At the residence of S. Sharkey, Second and Richmond streets, several large limbs were torn off a tree which stood in the yard. But for the fact that another tree stood between the damaged one and Mr. Sharkey's house, serious damage might have resulted. The limbs in their fall tore the shutters off the house next door, occupied by Joseph Unangst.

Armstrong, the plumber, of Watchung avenue, left the front door of his store open during the storm yesterday and the wind slammed it shut and a large plate glass in the doors was knocked out and scattered about the sidewalk.

Several bricks were blown off the chimney at the residence of Charles Duvier, of West Fifth street.

The house owned by Mrs. John Moore at the corner of Plainfield avenue and West Fifth street, was struck by a bolt of lightning, but miraculously escaped destruction by fire. The bolt entered the roof near the chimney by knocking off some of the slate. Then it followed the chimney down to the lower floor, occupied by Peter Buss and family, although no one was home at the time. The stovepipe was knocked on the floor, and then the lightning jumped across the room to a shelf, on which were stored a quantity of newspapers. These caught fire and were consumed, and it is impossible to explain why the woodwork did not catch fire. A strip of the wall was also knocked off, and then the lightning followed a water pipe to the ground.

The large electric crane at the Pond Machine Tool works also received some of the force of the lightning and and the fuses on them were burned out and several men who were working nearby received slight shocks.

At the home of Charles Foster, 1023 South Second street, the lightning entered the house and smashed a large mirror which hung against the wall, and tore a two by four foot hole in the wall. The family usually occupy the kitchen during a shower, but last night did not, for what reason they can't explain, but had they been there it is more than probable that some one would have been badly injured and perhaps killed as the glass from the mirror flew in all directions and showed by the marks on the opposite wall that had any one been in the room they would have been directly in the path of the glass as it flew across the room, and some of it even flew across two rooms it was found near the front door. There was little damage beside this spot in the kitchen and the

HOBART TO BE PRESENT.

WILL APPEAR IN PLAINFIELD ON THE KNIGHTS TEMPLAR FIELD DAY.

He Is a Member of Melita Commandery, of Paterson, and Will Parade With Them—Other Plans for the Day

The month of October promises to be an eventful one for Plainfield. On the first day of the month the Knights Templar of the State will hold their annual field day, and a week later the Christian Endeavorers meet here for their annual convention.

The committee in charge of the first of these events, held a meeting last evening and planned out their work. The Knights will, of course, turn out for a grand parade. A dress parade will precede the regular parade, which will be held in front of the Revere House on Park avenue. Then the Knights will march down Park avenue to Front street. It is planned to erect a triumphal arch over Park avenue near Front street, which, during the week after will be changed to suit the Christian Endeavorers.

The line of march will then be down West Front street, past the reviewing stand for the grand officers, which is to be erected on the vacant lot at the corner of Madison avenue. The complete route of the parade will be announced later.

A committee from Melita Commandery, of Paterson, came to this city Saturday evening and selected the Revere House as their headquarters for the field day. Garret A. Hobart, the Republican candidate for Vice-President, is a member of that commandery and will come to Plainfield and parade with them at that time.

SETTLED AFTER MANY YEARS.

A Sum of Money Found Years Ago Goes To the Finders.

Lawyer John D. Quincy, counsel for the Building Department of New York City, was in town Monday and with a certified check drew from the First National Bank the portion of his client. Mr. Crawford, who as a boy several years ago found a large sum of money on the railroad track near Elizabeth. The money was taken by ex Chief Keron and placed under the jurisdiction of the county court. The money was found in a stocking among a pile of old rags. No one ever made claim to the same and the boys, who since have married, brought suit for a division of the sum found and some time ago Judge McCormick decided that an equal portion should be distributed to the finders. Mr. Quincy yesterday drew the last portion that settles up a once famous case from the First National Bank of this city.

Whom Does it Represent.

While the employes at the old freight house were cleaning up preparatory to moving, they came across a plaster cast bust of a man. Since then everybody who has seen it has been trying to solve the problem as to whom the cast was made for. The bust represents a middle-aged man, with a pointed beard and bald head, and has a decided French air. The bust has been placed in a prominent place, and the freight house people are waiting for someone to come along and solve the problem.

Sunday Observance League Dead.

The Westfield Sunday Observance League, of which so much has been heard for the last four or five weeks, is dead. P. J. R. Sjostrom, president of the Methodist Epworth League Chapter, originated the idea. There were eleven members and in a preemptory letter to all offenders, they ordered the strict observance of the Sunday Blue laws, threatening general prosecution if they were not obeyed. The threats were laughed at.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATS.

FORMER SPEAKER BERGEN INTERVIEWED ON POLITICAL SITUATION.

He Is a Strong Gold Man and Says the Democratic State Convention Must Stand by That Standard When They Meet.

It was announced yesterday, says The Herald Wednesday, that preparations are being made to have New Jersey represented in the coming convention to select a Democratic gold candidate for the Presidency and to give the sound money Democrats a platform to stand on. The absence of Senator Smith in Europe and the differences of opinion among the New Jersey delegates to Chicago and many of the leaders prevented crystallization of sentiment or action among the gold Democrats.

Former Speaker James J. Bergen, who represented the Third Congressional District in the National Convention, was at the State House, Trenton, yesterday. He is an avowed sound money Democrat, and when asked if New Jersey was going to stand by New York in its efforts to secure a gold platform and candidate he said:

"Yes, I think New Jersey will be found with the rest of the gold States. The State Convention fixed our position, and we must stand by it. Just how we will select our delegates I cannot say, but some ways and means are now under consideration. We will know more by this time next week. The matter is receiving the attention of some of our most prominent Democrats."

"Do you find much expression for silver?" was asked.

"I hear many men say that they hear that there is some silver talk here and some silver talk there, but I do not find anybody that directly declares he has been won over to silver. In my own county, Somerset, there is very little silver sentiment. Many Democrats are talking for silver because it has been indorsed by the National Convention. On the other hand, gold Democrats generally regret that they are in the awkward position of either remaining inactive or going over to the camp of the enemy. There is a demand for the third candidate."

From other sources it was learned that there will be a conference in a few days, which will be attended by Democrats who have declared against the Chicago platform. It is known that Allan L. McDermott is favorable to a third candidate, but does not care to take the initiative because of the criticism of his course at Chicago.

INTERCEDED FOR HIS BROTHER.

An Italian Attacked a Greek With a Crowbar.

A serious assault occurred at Smalley Brothers stone crusher on Somerset street, Wednesday, about 9 o'clock, when John Hull, a Greek, who is employed about the crusher, was struck in the head twice with a crowbar by Italian named Salvey who also works at the same place. The latter's brother and Hull engaged in a heated discussion about some subject when it appeared that Hull was getting the best of it.

It was then that Salvey jumped in with a crowbar and struck Hull, inflicting a deep scalp wound.

N. B. Smalley soon learned of the affair and found the injured man suffering considerable and blood flowing profusely from the ugly wound. Mr. Smalley took the Italian to the hospital where Dr. Long took charge of him. The doctor was unable at the time to tell whether the brain was affected or not, but it now looks as though he would recover. As yet nothing has been done with Salvey.

SENT TO JAIL AGAIN.

WILLIAMS WAS REARRESTED AND NOW AWAITS THE GRAND JURY.

He Served Twenty Days for Carrying a Revolver and Was Arrested on Leving Jail by Chief Grant for Burglary.

There was an unpleasant surprise awaiting James Williams this Monday when he was released from the Union County Jail at Elizabeth. The surprise came in the shape of Chief of Police Grant, of this city, and he quietly informed Williams that he was wanted on a charge of burglary. Williams is the individual that was arrested here on the night of July 3d for carrying concealed weapons and sent down the road for twenty days. By some clever detective work by Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely the man was discovered to be the same one that broke into Adam Deckman's store at Dunellen on the night of July 3d.

The chief evidence against him is the peculiar mark made by the nails in his heel on a window blind that he forced open with his heel, which exactly corresponds with the nails in the heel of his shoe as was previously told in the Press.

Chief Grant took his prisoner to New Market where he was brought before Justice Storms. The evidence was too convincing and the Justice held Williams for the grand jury without bail. Constable Dougherty took him to the Middlesex county jail where he will remain until the grand jury meets in the fall.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

The Decision Given in the Contract Case of Johnston Against Markham.

The decision in the important contract case of Horatio C. N. Johnston against Mrs. Harriet Markham, was given Monday afternoon by Justice Nash in favor of the defendant, the judge ruling that there was no cause for action. The case was tried a week ago, but the judge reserved his decision until yesterday.

The question was that of the implied contract, as was told at the time in The Daily Press. Johnston laid a flagstone sidewalk in front of Mrs. Markham's property on Church street without being ordered, but claimed that he agreed to it because she did not order him to stop.

Her side of the case was presented by Charles J. McNabb while Winfield S. Angleman was attorney for Johnston.

Johnston will now have to go to the exense of having the stone removed or else settle at Mrs. Markham's own terms.

FELL FROM A HIGH PERCH

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY LINEMAN SHOCKED BY A LIVE WIRE.

Was Making Repairs When He Was Shocked and Fell a Distance of Thirty Feet and Was Taken to the Hospital.

Patrick Kellegher, a lineman employed by the Plainfield Electric Light Company, sustained injuries Wednesday, while at work which will confine him to the hospital for at least eight weeks. He and James S. Ellis, another lineman, were working together on West Third street, in front of Day's saloon. Kellegher was at the top of a pole among the wires, making some repairs.

He came in contact with a live wire and received a heavy shock. His muscles seemed set for a moment and his body became rigid, then he toppled to one side of the cross-bar on which he was perched and fell to the ground thirty feet below. He struck with great force. This all happened in a few moments and before Ellis could realize what seemed to be the trouble with his companion. Ellis hastened to his side and found him unconscious.

The fall attracted the attention of the people in that vicinity and soon there was quite a crowd around the injured man. The ambulance was sent for and he was conveyed to the hospital.

Dr. Long made an examination and learned that there was a fracture of the thigh bone. The man was also seriously bruised about the body and head. It is possible that there are internal injuries which may develop a little later, but in any event the man is in a serious condition and nothing but the best of medical aid and care will bring him through all right. Just in what part of the body he received the shock has not yet been learned as there are no indications to show where the wire touched him. It is said that the shock left Kellegher through his mouth and that a bluish flame was emitted at that time.

IN A SUDDEN STUPOR.

AN UNKNOWN GERMAN FOUND UNCONSCIOUS IN A CHAIR.

Roundsman Mattox Conveyed the Man to the Police Station and Administered Restoratives Without Great Success.

A mysterious case came under the observation of Roundsman Mattox this Monday about 9.15. The officer was called to the restaurant conducted by Ross on Park Avenue, and asked to take charge of an unknown man who had entered the place for a meal.

The man was a German, about fourty years old and was well dressed. Early this morning the man was at the restaurant and had his breakfast. At that time he seemed to be all right, but when he came back the second time those in charge noticed he acted a little strange. However, he ordered what he wanted, but when it was brought to him, he was was unconscious, hence the call for the police. The smell of liquor was detected, but not to any great degree. It was reported that the man had $50 in his pockets, but the money was not found. Roundsman Mattox with the aid of Special Policeman Dagnall and a hack succeeded in getting the man to the police station, where he was laid in the hall.

His clothes were searched but only a small amount of money, a comb and a box of matches were found. The Roundsman did not think that the man was drunk, judging from his actions, and his opinion was that he had been drugged by someone. His breathing at times was hardly noticeable, and for the first time the dispensary was used. The Roundsman used amonia freely and this seemed to revive him for a few minutes, but he soon would drop off into unconsciousness. Dr. Simpson was telephoned for but was not at home, neither was Drs. Long or Prine. Roundsman Mattox and Special Policeman Dagnall remained with the man until they were relieved. No one seemed to know the man's name, although his face was familiar. Mr. Ross says he comes to his place frequently but does not know his name. The man was unable to talk intelligently even when aroused from his stupor.

The man recovered consciousness about 2 o'clock on Tuesday and he gave his name as Geo. Mattison and his residence Newark. He said that he had been living for the past two months with his brother, Charles Mattison, at 182 Duer street.

He also said that he had a wife living in Newark, but he did not live with her. He has a daughter in an asylum and this seemed to worry him a good deal. He was anxious to leave the statehouse, but Captain Grant thought it best to have Dr. Simpson examine him first, which was done.

Mattison does not remember anything that happened this morning.

JOHN HOURIGAN'S ROOST

AN EVICTED TENANT'S AIRY ABODE IN THE STREET.

It is a Composite Stack of Hay and Furniture, in Which He Has Borrowed a Shelter for Himself and Wife.

John Hourigan, of Westfield, a stone mason, and Isabel, his wife, are at present abiding on top of a composite stack of hay, hencoops and household furniture in front of his late residence in Spring street, in Westfield, from which they were evicted on Saturday. The stack represents the combined architectural genius of George H. Embree, who is the agent of the Philadelphia owner of the house formerly occupied by the Hourigans, and Constable John M. C. Marsh. And this was the order of its building: Four forkfuls of hay from the Hourigan barn were laid as foundation. Upon this was placed a washstand, the head of a big bedstead, and a clothes rack, more hay, the bedroom crockery, bed slats at all angles, the kitchen chairs, more hay, cooking utensils, three wire netting henecoops, corn fodder, bedding, two large tin slop cans, the foot and side boards of the bedstead, a scythe, more hay, the kitchen stove, and a big deal table. The four pigs of the Hourigan fold were transferred to the vacant pen of a neighbor.

It is not because they can't pay the rent that the Hourigans slumber on this potpourri. They can pay it, but won't. On Agent Embree's first visit with a threat of eviction last March Hourigan was ill in bed, as he had been for almost a year. Mrs. Hourigan produced a wad of bills from her stocking and began to count out the $5. Her husband bounded into the room and snatched the money.

"Never," he cried; "never on your life! Let him fix the front fence; an' the bricks a' fallin' from the chimney an' the windey panes that let in the cold that is tarnin' me red blood blue in me veins. Look, ye mutherer, look!"

Mr. Ebmree fled. The contest was not renewed until two weeks ago, when due legal notice of eviction was served. Meanwhile more than ever has the invalid Irishman become a thorn in the flesh of the Spring street neighborhood, which is composed mainly of negroes and their families. It has been the belligerent stone mason's delight during his convalescence to sit in the darkness of his threshold and make embarrassing comments upon the conversation of Mrs. Williams, who lives across the street, with Mrs. Barton, who lives two doors futher up the street.

Hourigan has burrowed under the shelter, and in that secure retreat defies the rain. In clear weather he sleeps outside, the greater part of the time treating the neighbors to frank opinions of themselves, Mr. Embree, and the constable, touching up their personal characteristics, family life, and genealogical trees.

Mr. Embree is a Town Committeeman. He has served notices upon his colleague, N. B. Gardner, who has immediate charge of the Spring street district, that the highway is obstructed. Mr. Gardner intimates that the sub-Committee on Sewers, of which Mr. Embree is a member, has full power to act. Mr. Hourigan sits aloft and grimly smiles.

"It took the slobs six months," he says, "to run me out of me house. It'll take 'em a good deal longer to run me off the earth."

Thought to Be a Dangerous Character.

The tramp arrested on the top of a freight car a day or two ago, and sent to the county jail for thirty days by Judge DeHaza, was given the "star chamber" degree by County Detective Keron on his arrival at the county jail. A mask was found on his person, which he confessed he wore at times to disguise himself when riding on freight cars. He also admitted that his name was not Gatehill, as he had told the local authorities. It is believed that he is a dangerous character.

Practicing on the Golf Grounds.

A select few of the Plainfield Golf Club amused themselves by playing on their grounds, near F. A. Barnaby's residence on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon. Among those who took part in the sport were: George H. Chapman, Harry Mason, O. T. Waring, Jr., Edward Van Buren, William Kaufman, ex Mayor William L. Saunders, W. H. Smith, W. D. Miller, Harry Stockton and Messrs. Reinhart and Talmadge. Edward Barry, who has charge of the grounds, has been untiring in his efforts to improve them, so that today they rank among the best kept grounds in the State.

LIFE IN THE FAR EAST.

A MISSIONARY OF INDIA GIVES AN INTERESTING LECTURE.

Tells of the Conditions That Surround the Natives, Who, He Says, Are Not Oppressed With Taxes—Characteristics.

"Life Among the Hindoos" was the subject chosen by Rev. L. R. Janney for his missionary talk at Vincent chapel last week. Considering the weather the attendance was remarkable.

Mr. Janney has lived and worked in India for many years and he was thoroughly conversant upon the subject. In opening he sang two hymns, "There is a Happy Land" and "Jesus Christ, My Excellent Saviour." The first he sang to the American tune, using the Hindoo words, and the latter was rendered in the Hindoo tune and words.

The forepart of his talk was devoted chiefly to a geographical description of the country. He spoke of the very warm weather in Southern India, where the thermometer would reach as high as 150 degrees, the lowest being 106. He said that on the plains they would have rain for three months steady, averaging a rainfall of 150 inches. The people were obliged to take their clothes twenty-five miles away to find the sun in order that their clothes would dry.

"India," he said, "contained a population of 287,000,000 people, with a small proportion of English. The people are not patriotic and are divided into castes. The English Government is the best the people ever had, as the native kings were very unjust. At present the people are not oppressed with taxes. When the tax is due the people walk to the tax office and pay quickly, as they are afraid of the English rulers. In all there are about 2,000,000 Christian people in India and 208,000,000 Hindoos. Among the women there has been no change in the fashion for dress in the past 3,000 years, while many changes have been wrought among the men. I have seen a man's head dress made of cloth which contained 210 feet of material. The people will pay five times more for head dress than anything else. India is a land of many Nations, religions, dialects and languages. The many religions taught vary considerable in their meaning. In talking with a Hindoo his object is to find out what you are thinking about and then win you over to his side. A peculiar fact is that they will not kill anything. If mosquitoes bother them they will brush them away and if a bedbug is on their clothes they will take it off and put it upon some one else."

Mr. Janney then gave interesting incidents in connection with his own personal life in India in dealing with the people, and his talk gave evidence that he was successful in reaching them. He talked nearly two hours, after which he exhibited a rare collection of idols which he brought with him to this country. A collection was taken at the close.

NEW FREIGHT HOUSE READY.

Central Railroad Employees Will Take Possession Next Monday.

The new freight house has at last been completed and is ready for occupancy, and the employes of the company will take possession next Monday morning.

The structure is a bunhoome one in every detail. It is built of red brick, and is about 200 feet long and 72 feet wide. There are twenty-one large doors, ten on a side and one on the east end.

The offices, including a telegraph office, are situated in the west end of the building and are all that could be desired in the interior conveniences. The main part of the structure, where the freight will be stored, is about twice the size of the house now in use. The roof is supported by large iron girders, and in it are large skylights which will afford plenty of light. The structure will be lighted throughout by electricity and heated by steam.

The once vacant field, upon which the building is situated, has been transformed into a large freight yard. The approach to the new building for teams will be the North avenue side.

As soon as the new freight house is in full operation, the old one, opposite the depot, which has been a eyesore to the travelling public for many years, will be torn down and removed. If the Company can secure a suitable plot of ground near Grant avenue, part of the old structure will be taken there, and converted into a freight house, for the convenience of the merchants of the West End.

A CLUBHOUSE ASSURED.

HILLSIDE CLUB WILL BUILD ON THEIR GOLF COURSE.

Power to Issue Bonds For the Purpose of Raising Money to Build the Structure With Was Granted to the Governors.

The new clubhouse for the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on their golf course is an assured thing and all that now remains is to select a design and the contractor to build it.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club held a club meeting Friday last at which a new constitution and bylaws, substantially the same as the old, were adopted. Formal powers to issue bonds for the building of the new clubhouse were granted to the Board of Governors, and a committee composed of Howard W. Beebe, chairman, George A. Chapman, Frank Sykes, James S. Anderson and Evarts Tracy, was selected to have charge of the bond subscriptions.

After the club meeting, the Board of Governors held a special meeting to consider plans for the new clubhouse. After routine business was transacted the designs were brought up. There were three, all submitted by members of the club, A. L. C. Marsh, A. D. Shepard, Jr., and J. Evarts Tracy.

The plans were examined and it was decided to hold another meeting on Wednesday night at which time the selection will be made. A building committee was appointed as follows: George A. Chapman, Dexter O. Tiffany, Josiah Browne and the architect, who ever is chosen.

Special Music.

The music committee of the Jamesburg Sunday-school convention are making great efforts to have that part of the services the usual success. Benj. H. Everitt, to whose endeavors the splendid singing of last year was largely due, will lead again this year. He is planning for a choir of a hundred voices. The book used will be "Hymn Songs," published by John J. Hood, of Philadelphia. Four plates with music from this book will be printed in the fifty-page programme now in the hands of Editor Hammell, of the Jamesburg Record.

New Commutation Scale.

The Central Railroad Company has adopted a new schedule of commutation rates which will go into effect August 1st. By the new arrangement the total cost per year will be $90.10, and if a man desires to come to Plainfield for two or three months during the summer and commute to New York he can do so at a reasonable cost. For the twelve months the rates are graduated as follows: $8.10, $8, $7.90, $7.85, $7.75, $7.65, $7.60, $7.40, $7.20, $7.05, $6.85, $6.75.

Trimming the Trees.

Of late many complaints have come in to the city officials to the effect that in numerous places in the city there was no use of having electric lights at night, as they were almost hidden from view by heavy foliage on the trees. Street Commissioner Meeker has his men at work trimming these trees and the improvement is easily noticed.

Nathan Culver, the old man who has been locked up in the Middlesex County Jail at New Brunswick for some time past, charged with a serious crime, has been released on $700 bail. Culver came here from Oklahama on a visit, and he claims the charge against him is simply a trumped up one.

MIKE WATSON ARRESTED

HE IS CHARGED WITH SELLING LIQUOR WITHOUT A LICENSE.

He Was Arrested This Morning by Roundsman Mattox and Held in $200 Bail—To Be Tried in Two Weeks.

There is probably no man in Plainfield who has been charged with illegal liquor selling oftener than Michael Watson, who keeps a grocery store on Grant avenue. Two years ago he fought the city in the different courts, appealing at every conviction to a higher court until finally the case was settled. He was arrested a number of other times on the same charge previous to that time and now the police authorities think that they will collect him for illegal liquor selling.

Watson has no license, but the police were certain that liquor was being sold there. Sergeant Kiely made an investigation and managed to obtain evidence, which he considered good, that Watson was selling strong drinks and on Sunday, too. Sergeant Kiely made a complaint and Friday morning Roundsman Mattox visited Watson's store and placed him under arrest. He was taken before City Judge DeMeza and pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was held in $200 bail, which he furnished in full, and his trial was set down for August 7th. The trial promises to be a sensational one, judging from Watson's past record as a fighter in the courts.

A Family Dinner Party.

A pleasant family dinner party was given at Mountain Park Inn Thursday last by Mrs. Wilson and her son Edward Wilson, of Central avenue. Covers were spread for twenty-four and the menu was complete in every respect. After dinner the guests spent the evening at the inn and enjoyed themselves exceedingly. Those present at the dinner were: Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waring, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Flanders, Miss Yerkes, Miss Grace Yerkes, Miss Waring, Miss Florence Waring, O. G. Waring, L. E. Waring, Edward Waring, Edward Wilson.

Contract Case Finally Settled.

For the third time the case of Pearson against Bohl, on contract, was tried Friday before Justice Newcorn and the following jurors: J. W. Davis, John Ross, C. H. Hook, J. S. Ten Eyck, D. S. Pope, J. N. Anderson, Robert Walker, W. R. Moore, Calvin Sutton, J. Cashman, T. S. Van Horn and James Southard. The case was given to the jury at 6.15 last evening and one hour and a half later they returned with a verdict of $1 for the plaintiff. This throws the cost on the defendant. Lawyer H. C. Runyon represented the plaintiff and Lawyers Swackhamer and Kirch the defendent. The case was hotly contested throughout.

A State Officer Entertained.

Friendship Rebekah Degree Lodge, No. 4, I. O. O. F., had the pleasure of entertaining the State President, Mrs. C. Voelker, of Atlantic City, at their meeting last, Thursday. Delegations from Elizabeth and New Brunswick were also present, as was also another delegation from Newark, who rode here on their wheels. The members listened with interest to an address by the State President and other visitors. At a late hour a fine collation was served to all. During the business part of the meeting Mrs. Jacob Ketterling was elected representative of the local lodge to the State Assembly.

A Promenade Concert.

The Oriental Bicycle Club, of this city, gave a promenade concert and dance in T. A. B. Hall last evening. The concert lasted till 11.30, after which dancing was enjoyed until 4.30 this morning. At 2 o'clock the grand cake walk was held, and after an exhibition that excelled anything ever given in Plainfield before, the cake was awarded to Walter Carter, better known as "Cack." The attendance was large and everybody had a pleasant time. The club will receive a handsome sum as profits of the affair. Music was furnished by O'Reilly.

Horse Died on the Road.

Mr. and Mrs. James Whalen, of Brook avenue, took a party of friends to Boynton Beach on Sunday, and spent the day. Everything passed off pleasantly until the party were coming through Westfield on their way home when the driver noticed that one of the horses was sick. The animal grew rapidly worse and one of the party was sent for a veterinary surgeon. After a vain search, a man of the party mounted a horse and went to Elizabeth for a surgeon. He succeeded in finding one but by the time they reached the scene, the horse was dead. The party then proceeded home with three horses. The dead animal belonged to Street Commissioner William Emmons, of the borough.

STORM TO SUNLIGHT.

MRS. BOOTH THUS DESCRIBES THE BIRTH OF THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Organization Was Started With Limited Funds and Facilities, But is Rapidly Growing in Influence and Power

The appearance in this city last Thursday of Mrs. Ballington Booth, wife of Commander Booth, of the American Volunteers, attracted to the First Baptist church an audience that occupied every seat in the large auditorium. Howard Case presided at the organ and rendered an appropriate selection while the people were gathering. When Mrs. Booth entered a volley was given by the soldiers. In the absence of Rev. Dr. Yerkes, who was obliged to fill a previous engagement, Rufus K. Case presided, and read a letter of regret from Dr. Yerkes. After the congregation had joined heartily in singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and Major Trumbull had offered prayer, Mr. Case introduced Mrs. Booth with the following words: "My impression is that you are already acquainted with Mrs. Booth, though perhaps you have never met her personally. You have heard of her self-sacrificing labor, and how wisely, persistently and modestly she has worked with great success. On your behalf I welcome you tonight." Turning to the Commander's wife he said: "Mrs. Booth, we extend to you a warm sympathetic welcome to our city and church. May God go with you and bless you with your husband in your labors in this country of your adoption." At the close of the remarks, while Mrs. Booth was rising to her feet a long hearty applause was given. Mrs. Booth spoke in part as follows:

"I am glad to speak to you tonight, for I feel as though your welcome is not only one of curiosity but from the heart. I come not to vindicate this new movement, nor to rake up the past, nor to say unkind words, nor to give an exposition of principles and lastly not to tell of the great things we expect to set on foot. There is a great wide, beautiful field to labor in and there is room for all. The name chosen for our banner, 'The Love of Our Banner,' and in the four months of our existence the Lord has been our banner. We started single handed and so far everything has prospered. This movement, like a great many others, was born in a storm, but God has led us into the sunlight. Commander and I have suffered and sometimes when I have looked into his face, I wonder that it is not wrinkled and whitened. I know from the experiences of the past, God has been with us all the way through and we can read victory on our banners. This organization is not ours. Our plans were laid differently, but we now thank God for the young movement. God is to lead. There are no life work in our organization, for we believe that all life vows should be made to God and we want people to go where He leads. The progress of our organization has been remarkable and has surprised us. We did not expect thousands to rush into our ranks at once, as some people believed they would. The foundation came first and that has been well and truly made. We started alone in two rooms with $100 borrowed money and not the millions as reported.

"Suggestions came thick and fast from all quarters. One person said we were to go to Jerusalem and make that place the capitol of the world. Our friends, the reporters, bothered us considerable and for a time it seemed as though they would not let us grow. When we had nothing to tell them they made up stories and thus, no doubt, amused the public. We started with five staff officers and which we have forty-five staff officers and 100 posts in four months time. The Defenders' League formed itself and we now lack twenty-six persons of having a membership of 1,700. There is one thing the Commander has set his face against and that there is to be no debt around us, and there will be none. We have faith and practical common sense. The Volunteer Gazette recently started is now paying for itself, and next week a new monthly magazine will be placed in your hands. We don't want to talk too much, but we want to show the American people what we can do."

Mrs. Booth then went on and gave an interesting account of her prison work among convicts and told how the sainted husband had first taken it a special feature. She related many touching incidents that had come under her personal supervision. At the close a collection was taken. Members of the local post occupied seats in the left and in front of the pulpit was placed the Volunteer and American flags. The service was closed with a prayer by Mrs. Booth. She was obliged to catch a train and in consequence she was unable to meet personally those present. Among the interested persons present was Col. Evans, son of Brigadier Evans of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Booth is an earnest talker and she won many friends in this city last evening.

A Snake Story.

Wm. Classen and Ed Galbraith, of the West End, were blackberrying Saturday morning near Percy Ohl's property at the end of Central avenue, when they discovered a four-foot snake in close proximity to them, and they soon killed the reptile. They have had the skin stuffed as a memento of the occasion.

BLACKMAIL IS CHARGED

FORMER PLAINFIELDERS IN THE MESHES OF THE LAW.

Mrs. George Roberts Charged With Palming Off a Child as a Son That Was Her's—Her Husband Arrested.

One of the most sensational suits that is attracting attention in New York is the alleged blackmail case of Mrs. "Frank" Roberts against millionaire Marvin Cross, of Brooklyn.

The woman in the case is the wife of George Roberts, formerly of this city, and by the legal action taken yesterday on the part of Cross, Roberts has also become involved in the affair as an accomplice.

The story is that for years Cross has been paying hush money to Mrs. Roberts under the belief that he was the parent of her child. He was a man of prominence in business and political circles, and his family moved in the best of society. At one time it is said that he paid as high as $14,000 to Mrs. Roberts under the threat that she would publish him, and thus humiliate himself and family and practically ruin their standing in the circles in which they mingled. Some time ago Cross's wife died and he resolved to refuse to pay Mrs. Roberts anything more.

The refusal was met a few days ago by a suit being instituted by Mrs. Roberts in which she sought the courts to compel Cross to provide for the support of his alleged offspring, who is now thirteen years of age. The announcement created a great sensation in New York and Brooklyn. Detectives were put on the case by Cross and they claim to now have the evidence which proves that Mrs. Roberts has perpetrated a monstrous hoax on Cross for years. The child which she claimed he was the father of, it is now said, was not her son, but the son of her sister-in-law who died some years ago and who was adopted by Mrs. Roberts.

In the attempt to make Cross pay more money before the suit was started, Roberts himself took a hand, and yesterday both he and his wife were arrested at their home in Mt. Vernon, where Roberts is the manager of the theatre, on the charge of blackmail. When arraigned in court they waived examination and were released on $500 bail each. It will probably be November before the case is brought to trial.

Mrs. Roberts is well-known in this city. In 1887 she came to Plainfield with her mother, Mrs. Swift, and was known as Mrs. Frank Townsend. For several weeks they stopped at Laing's hotel, then located where the Babcock building now stands. The child, which she claimed was the son of Cross, was with her at that time. They came from Philadelphia and Mrs. Townsend conducted herself in a ladylike demeanor. It was while stopping here that she met George Roberts and they became enamored with one another. They frequently took carriage drives together and were in each others company a great deal of the time. They returned from a carriage drive one day and said they had been married at Dunellen. Shortly after they moved to Philadelphia where they resided for several years.

MACEDONIAN REVOLT

Greece Permits Armed Rebels To Cross the Frontier.

TURKISH TROOPS CUT TO PIECES

The Sultan's Soldiers Threaten To Revolt Because of Poor Rations and No Pay—Numerous Atrocities at Monastier.

Berlin, July 27.—Count Goluchowski, Austrian minister of foreign affairs, returned to Ischel for the purpose of holding an interview with Emperor Francis Joseph after having had a conference with Prince Hohenlohe, the German chancellor, at the latter's chateau at Alt-Aussee, and reached Vienna on Thursday. On the day of his return to Vienna Count Goluchowski had an interview with Count Nigra, the Italian ambassador to Austria, and since then Count Nigra has been summoned to Rome by the Marquis Visconti-Venosta, the Italian minister of foreign affairs. These comings and goings of diplomatic chiefs cannot be attributed to any other cause than the gravity of the situation in the East. A concert of the powers has failed to effect any good results as has already been stated, and the events which are now taking place completely overwhelm diplomacy. According to telegraphic advices received here the rising of the insurgents in Macedonia has become extremely formidable. Greece, while pretending to take stringent measures against any persons engaging in a raid upon the Macedonia frontier, has allowed upwards of 600 men, all of them armed with Lebel rifles, to enter Macedonia from Greek territory. These men after surprising and cutting to pieces the Turkish troops at Mouass, succeeded in repulsing a strong force of Turkish soldiers which had been sent from Salonica to reinforce the Mouass troops.

Hard Fighting in Macedonia.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that the Turkish reserves who have been called out by the sultan are showing a disposition to revolt in consequence of the fact that their pay is very much in arrears and the rations which are being issued to them are poor in quality and small in quantity. A special dispatch from Salonica says that the statements made by the Turkish officials concerning the situation are all calculated to conceal the desperate condition of affairs in Macedonia. Hard fighting is going on almost every day at Drumnitza, Serres and all points in the Perim mountains. The British consul-general at Prinzend, Preshtima and elsewhere in that section are being equipped and sent to the front as rapidly as possible, and it is estimated that the total number of Turkish troops concentrated on the Macedonian frontier at the present time exceeds 7,000 men. Even this force, however, has not been found sufficient to make any headway against the insurrection, which, under the influence of the prestige of victory secured by the insurgents in the field, is becoming stronger every day. Stimulated by these and similar reports, semi-official newspaper organs like the North German Gazette and the Cologne Gazette are taking a more definite tone in their articles commenting upon the situation. The North German Gazette reproduces an article from the Cologne Gazette which declares that, unless there is some change, the energetic way instead of submitting proposals to the porte, the troubles in Macedonia and Crete will never end.

Appeals for Interference.

The Reichsbote (conservative) publishes a letter written by a German lady living at Salonica, in which the writer narrates atrocities which are practiced there every day without the slightest attempt at interference on the part of the authorities. This letter has stirred up a strong feeling of public indignation here, in fact, more than the remoter massacres and outrages in Armenia. The Reichsbote in an article accompanying the letter appeals to the powers to cease their jealousy and interfere in behalf of the Macedonians and Cretans in the interests of humanity. The Bismarckian organs, on the other hand, are strongly opposed to any policy of interference on the part of Germany. The North Nachrichten declares in their agreement to maintain Turkish rule in Crete and Macedonia which the insurgents are trying to shake off. If they continue their efforts to throw off the Turkish yoke, the paper adds, they must suffer the consequences. Europe cannot stake the peace of the world upon their account.

Trouble in a Foresters' Lodge.

Waterbury, Conn., July 27.—Twenty-one members of court Abraham Lincoln, Ancient Order of Foresters, have placed a $5,000 attachment on the property of officers of the court and have also tied up $1,000 funds of the court in the bank. It is alleged that the officers have mismanaged the affairs of the court and have refused to make a statement of the finances. The fuse is the outcome of a split in the court over the question whether or not beer should be served in the lodge room at meetings.

Appointed by Commissioner Lyman.

Albany, July 27.—L. E. Chittenden of New York city, who held the office register of the treasury under Lincoln's administration, has been appointed by State Excise Commissioner Lyman as assistant cashier in the New York city branch office of the state excise department.

ARMES DIVORCE CASE.

Cause of the Sequestration of the Baltimore Washington Mayor's Property.

Washington, July 27.—Maj. George A. Armes, whose property was sequestrated Saturday by order of Judge Hagner because of his failure to comply with the order of the court directing him to pay alimony to his wife, who is suing him for divorce on the ground of cruelty, has been in trouble with the war department several times. He was court-martialed for insulting Gen. Hastings of Pennsylvania at President Harrison's inauguration. On the day of Gen. Schofield's retirement Armes was arrested, taken from his home and confined in the barracks for disrespect to Gen. Schofield, then acting secretary of war. Armes is now somewhere on the St. Lawrence, avoiding an order of commitment, and has written a violent letter to his son vilifying the attorneys in the divorce case. Upon this showing by counsel for Mrs. Armes and because of the inability of the court to enforce the order in any other way, Judge Hagner issued the order of sequestration and appointed Peyton Gordon as sequestrator, with power to take charge of Armes' property, valued at $250,000, collect and disburse rents, make sales, and pay the alimony awarded by the court. There have been but few cases of this sort in the United States. Meantime the suit for divorce is proceeding. Maj. Armes is on his way home to the jurisdiction of the court while the order of commitment for contempt of court stands against him.

DR. JAMESON'S RAID.

The Cape Parliament Says That Cecil Rhodes Knew Its Contents.

Cape Town, July 27.—The Cape parliament has unanimously adopted the majority report of the committee which was appointed to investigate the circumstances of the invasion of the Transvaal by Dr. Jameson and his followers last winter. The report declares that Cecil Rhodes, who was at the time prime minister of Cape Colony, was aware of the intentions of Dr. Jameson, but that the London directors of the British South Africa company were not, though they ought to have had their suspicions aroused, seeing that the company was being drawn upon for large sums of money, ostensibly on account of shooting, but really to defray the expenses of preparing for and conducting a revolution.

WRECKED ON SABLE ISLAND.

Twelve Men Rescued from a Bark That Grounded on the Sand Bars.

Halifax, N. S., July 27.—The Dominion government steamer Newfield has arrived here with the crew of a vessel that had been lost on Sable Island since the Newfield's previous visit to "the graveyard of the Atlantic," as Sable island is called. The crew consists of twelve men of the Italian bark Raphael D., which grounded on the sand bars off the island during a gale, and was soon broken up. The crew reached the island in the ship's boats after a thrilling experience, narrowly escaping drowning several times. The Raphael D. was on a voyage from Genoa for Miramichi, N. B., in ballast to load with lumber.

NIHILISM THE SPECTRE.

Proposed Visit of the Czar to European Capitals Becoming Very Uncertain.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—The dates of the czar's proposed visits to the principal continental capitals, if, indeed, they have been fixed, are being kept very dark. Announcements have been made that his intended trip is becoming more uncertain daily and Nihilism seems to be the spectre which is standing in his majesty's way. All that is known of his intended visit is that it is his purpose to visit Vienna and Berlin, and probably Paris, but when the visits will take place it is impossible to say.

Discussed Populists at Anarchists.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 25.—At the natinal service in the Asbury Park auditorium yesterday afternoon Bishop John P. Newman created a sensation by declaring that populists were no better than anarchists and were not good American citizens. Instantly a man in the rear of the hall jumped up and shouted. "Bryan is a good American." He tried to propose three cheers for the democratic populist candidate for president, but was drowned by the music of the choir.

China's Compliment to the Powers.

ADVANCE IN PRICES

Values Have Materially Recovered Since the 1893 Panic

INDUSTRIAL SITUATION DEPRESSED

State of Trade for the Time Being Is Unsatisfactory—Bank Clearings the Largest Since 1892—Shoe Factories Busy—Iron and Steel.

New York, July 25.—Bradstreet's review of the state of trade for the week just closing to-day says: Telegraphic and mail advices from commercial and industrial centres indicate a somewhat unsatisfactory state of trade for the time being. Jobbers and retail houses show still further caution in the matter of securing supplies, buying for actual needs to a degree not heretofore reported. The general money market is dull, due not only to caution on the part of banks in discounting, but to a falling off in demand. The favorable feature in Chicago's trade situation is moderately increased orders for dry goods and hardware; almost every other line is quiet. Omaha's clothing trade is brisk. Favorable advices come from Baltimore, where orders in general lines are fairly satisfactory and the volume of business is larger than in the like portion of 1895, and from Galveston, where business generally promises improvement.

Comparison of Prices.

The regular quarterly comparison of prices of 108 staple products, prepared this week by first named, makes it plain that values have materially recovered from the depression reached since the panic of 1893. Compared with July 1, 1896, when trade was generally depressed, there are forty increasing against thirteen July 1 the year, about one-quarter being agricultural products, notably wheat, cotton and sugar. Other advances are for iron, steel, coal, hides, brick, glass, drugs and chemicals. Compared with July 1, 1895, at which time there was a general advance in demand and quotations, prices on July 1 this year show 32 increases; contrasted with July 1, 1893, 18 out of 108 items for which to-day are given in advance to-day, notably drugs, chemicals, hides, copper, petroleum, hay, flour and rice. Compared with July 1, 1892, when general trade was prosperous, 22 quotations appear higher, including most of those last named.

The Industrial Situation.

The industrial situation is somewhat depressed, particularly in iron and steel, prices for most varieties of which, notably southern pig iron, are weak. The encouraging feature in iron and steel is the extent to which stacks have blown out. There is an increase in the number of striking employes in several lines, but the new scale of wages asked by the iron and steel workers has not been conceded to. Production is materially curtailed among manufacturers of woolens and cotton, as heretofore, and in locomotives, hardware, silver, jewelry and lumber industries the factories are busy, mostly on old orders. Eastern wool dealers report no demand, and some leading houses refuse to increase stocks either by purchase or consignment. The principal activity in the dry goods trade consists of special preparations to show fall goods.

Bank Clearings.

Bank clearings throughout the United States aggregate $989,000,000 this week, about 5 per cent. more than last week and 24 per cent. more than the corresponding week one year ago. The contrast with the like week in July in 1894, when business was extremely depressed, is more marked, showing an increase of 28 per cent., and as compared with the like week in 1893, the week's total shows an increase of 11 per cent. Contrasted with the corresponding total in 1892, bank clearings for the past six business days are smaller by only a fraction of 1 per cent. The noteworthy advances in quotations this week are for wheat, flour, oats, cotton and petroleum, while decreases are shown in Indian corn, pork, lard, coffee, sugar and print cloths. Business failures this week number 280 throughout the United States, against 253 last week, 229 in the week a year ago and 237 in the week two years ago.

French Steamers to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, July 25.—The French Compagnie General Transatlantique, which owns the line of steamers between New York and Havre, has arranged to establish a regular line between this port and Marseilles. The new line will compete for all the central Mediterranean trade, and also the African ports of Algiers, Tunis and Alexandria.

Missionary Baird Goes to Hittis.

JOSE MACEO IS DEAD.

Killed on the Field While Fighting for Cuban Freedom.

New York, July 27.—Gen. Calixto Garcia, commander of the patriot forces in eastern Cuba, writes to the Cuban delegate in this city under date of July 13 that Gen. Jose Maceo of the First army corps was killed on July 8 in the engagement at Lamo del Rey. After an engagement of more than eight hours the Spaniards were compelled to retreat. They had 150 wounded to attend to, besides a considerable number of dead. The patriots lost Gen. Jose Maceo, Col. Cartagena, Dr. Pedro Echevarria, and seven others, and had forty-one wounded. "Jose Maceo," Gen. Garcia writes, "met with a glorious death. Regrettable as this is, our enthusiasm will not for a moment abate, nor will the power of the enemy diminish. Our friend will be remembered by his comrades with grief; by his soldiers with love and respect, and our country, once freed, will attach due honor to his name."

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

It Is Likely to Heal the Schisms and Revive Home Rule.

London, July 27.—The Irish national convention, which opens in Dublin on Sept 1, is shaping toward a great historic event. Throughout Ireland and the populous centers of England and Scotland the nationalist societies are appointing delegates and discussing the probable platform of the convention with the heartiest enthusiasm. Delegates from South Africa and Australia are like those from the United States and Canada. From every quarter of the globe where a nucleus of Irishmen can be found sufficient to form an association, delegates are coming. The convention will not only represent the mass of the Irish race, but will also have besides a working leverage of money towards the organization of a great United party. That the convention will heal existing schisms and regenerate home rule seems assured. Mr. Healy and his followers will be present at the convention as friends to its aims. Outside of the English press no one pretends Mr. Redmond and Mr. Dillon with any desire or design to thwart this great national movement.

CHICAGO'S "HOLD-UPS."

One Attempt Unsuccessful — Another Yields $15 and a Gold Watch.

Chicago, July 27.—Shortly after 8 o'clock Saturday night store hold-up No. 21 took place, when two young men entered the jewelry store of C. M. Robertson on North Clark street and asked to be shown several pieces of jewelry, which they endeavored to pocket. Mr. Robertson got the drop on his visitors and, locking the door to prevent their escape, held them at bay with a revolver until the police came to his assistance. The police soon had the police claimed to recognize one of them as a tough character. Store hold-up No. 22 was successfully carried out an hour or so later when the Long Tong Yellow Kid Weil gang entered the grocery store of James O'Reilly on Morgan street, and, while one man held a revolver to O'Reilly's head and robbed him of his gold watch, the other took $15 out of the money drawer, and then both men escaped in the darkness.

CATHOLIC SUMMER SCHOOL.

Programme for the Third Week of the Session.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 27.—The third week of the fifth annual session of the Catholic summer school of America opened yesterday with pontifical high mass, Right Rev. John M. Farley, D. D., of New York, being the celebrant, the sermon being by Very Rev. William Byrne of Boston; subject, "God as Creator." The lectures for the coming week will be "History of English Literature from Chaucer to Spencer," by Rev. Hugh T. Henry of Overbrook seminary; "Beginnings of Metaphysics," Rev. J. A. Doonans, S. J., Boston college, and the "Beginnings of Christian Art," by Prof. T. J. Shahan, D. D., of the Catholic university of Washington. The attendance is now greater than ever before, a large party arriving from New York Saturday evening.

THE SITUATION SERIOUS.

Views of a London Banker on Our Presidential Election.

London, July 27.—The Daily News to-day publishes a report of an interview with J. H. Tritton, a prominent London banker, regarding the chances of the election of the presidential candidate in the United States in which Mr. Tritton says he considers it improbable that Bryan will be elected, but that the situation is one of the most serious character. Confidence, he says, will not begin to be restored here until the United States congress shall have passed a resolution declaring that it is firmly determined to maintain a gold standard. Certainly, says Mr. Tritton, the whole currency of the world ought to be overhauled. The country is suffering from a plethora of paper money.

FOR A THIRD TICKET

Convention To Be Held Not Later Than Sept. 2.

THE GO-SLOW POLICY ADOPTED

National Committee To Meet at Indianapolis on August 7 To Decide on the Place for the Convention—Outcome of Chicago Conference.

Chicago, July 25.—The sound money democratic conference finished its work providing for the selection of a national committee of one from each state in sympathy with the movement to meet August 7 at Indianapolis to issue a formal call for a national convention not later than September 2 and entrusted an executive committee with the work of organizing state meetings. The committee of one from each of the states represented at the conference met to agree on a report as to details and remained in session at the Auditorium hotel three hours. The following report of the committee was presented and adopted without any dissenting voice: "Resolved, that in view of the revolutionary actions of the recent Chicago convention, its repudiation of all democratic platforms, principles and its condemnation of the national democratic administration. "Resolved, that it is the sense of this conference, composed of democrats from the states of Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Missouri, Michigan, Texas, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska, that a thoroughly sound and patriotic declaration of democratic principles are enunciated, and that candidates for president and vice-president in accord therewith be nominated. Resolved, that the democrats in the several states who are in sympathy with this recommendation and unalterably opposed to the declaration and tendencies of the Chicago platform, be requested to arrange for the selection of a member of a national democratic committee. Resolved, that the national committee thus selected meet at Indianapolis on Friday, Aug. 7, at 2 p. m. for the purpose of issuing a formal call for a national democratic convention to be held not later than Sept. 2, at such a place and to be constituted and convened in such manner as said national committee may determine." In so far as the conference decided not to issue and sign the convention call at once and to test the strength of the movement by holding state mass meetings the go-slow policy advocated by Senator Vilas was sustained. The object of the committee and the postponement of the call until August 7 is to give the convention representative republicans from whom more states in the meantime, so that everything could be done with party regularity and avoid the accusation of silver democrats that the unathorized members of the conference were "running things."

Seaman Brown Probably Insane.

Halifax, N. S., July 25.—The testimony elicited at the magistrate's inquiry into the triple murder on board the barkentine Herbert Fuller seems to indicate that the seaman, Brown, who is suspected of the crimes, is mentally deranged. Some four years ago he shot a man through the ear in Rotterdam, Holland, and while laboring under the hallucination that he was an enemy who desired to take his life and was discharged on the ground that he was insane.

Trolley Company Enjoined.

Hartford, July 25.—The board of street commissioners yesterday sued out an injunction against the Hartford street railway company, restraining it from digging up New Park avenue to lay a new track that is to form the connecting link with the trolley road from New Britain into this city, now under injunction. The injunction was granted by Recorder McManus of the city court, under penalty of $15,000.

Transfers of Connecticut Priests.

Hartford, July 25.—Bishop Tierney has made the following transfers of priests: Rev. W. Barry from Wallingford to Norwalk, and Rev. E. L. Sullivan from Norwalk to Wallingford. Bishop Tierney warns people against a man posing as a priest and calling himself Harrington, who is collecting funds for an institution in Ireland. This, the bishop says, is without authority.

Pardon of Irish Convicts.

London, July 25.—A. J. Balfour, government leader in the house of commons, replying to a question in the house, said that the time had not yet arrived to consider the matter of advising the queen to pardon the Irish prisoners convicted of treason. The suggestion was made that her majesty grant a pardon to such convicts upon the sixtieth anniversary of her accession to the throne.

No More Racing at Narragansett Park.

Providence, July 25.—The announcement is made that there will be no more running races at Narragansett park. J. M. Crosby of Boston had a lease of the track and held several meetings. The decision was reached because of the refusal of the New York Jockey club to grant a license.

Ancients Leave Queenstown.

Queenstown, July 25.—The steamship Servia, with the members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of Boston, proceeded from this port yesterday for Boston. The artillerymen repeated their expressions of pleasure at the warmth of their reception in England.

APPEAL FOR MELTON

Olney Petitioned in the Correspondent's Behalf

CONFINED IN A CUBAN DUNGEON

Alleged That a Leper Was Been Thrown into the Cell with the Unfortunate Competitor—Captive in Horrors of His Position.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 26.—A determined effort is being made to induce the United States to secure the release of Ora Melton, who was captured on the Competitor, and who is the young American now confined by the Spaniards in Fort Cabanas. The citizens of Key West and Florida generally are aroused and demand that this government shall do something to relieve him. The people of Key West have petitioned Secretary Olney to act, and they forwarded this petition to T. T. Stockton, general manager of the Times-Union, for transmission to Washington. With the petition Mr. Stockton includes a letter to the secretary of state, as follows:

Appeal for Melton.

"I feel deep interest in Melton, as he went to Cuba as the correspondent of the Times-Union. He had no intention of serving in the army of the insurgents, but simply desired to visit with their lines to furnish reliable news as to the situation in Cuba. I furnished the young man credentials as the representative of the Times-Union, and those credentials he should have had on his person when arrested by the Spaniards. Under these circumstances it seems to be very hard for Melton to be compelled first to undergo the mental torture caused by a death sentence and then, that sentence having been suspended, for weeks or months the horrors of an overcrowded Spanish prison. I do not see that he was more culpable than Artist Dawley of Harper's Weekly or the correspondents of the New York papers, who fell under the displeasure of the Spaniards and were arrested. The correspondents were promptly released on protest by the government, but Melton is allowed to remain immured in a dungeon with criminals and lepers, and his release seems as far in the future as when he was first arrested."

Captured on the Competitor.

Mr. Stockton also says he has "reliable information from Havana that unless he is relieved from his prison he cannot live. If Melton is to be allowed to die by inches in a foul cell it would have been merciful to have permitted the Spaniards to carry out the sentence of the court martial and shot him on the deck after he was captured." The statement and petition recite to Secretary Olney, it will be remembered, that Ora Melton went to Cuba on the ill-fated schooner Competitor as representative of the Times-Union, was arrested aboard that vessel when she was captured by a Spanish cruiser after having landed an expedition on the north coast under command of Col. Mongon. The crew of the schooner were also apprehended and taken to Havana, where they were subsequently tried by a drumhead court-martial and sentenced to be shot for piracy. An energetic protest made by the late Consul-General Williams, under instructions from Washington, secured a temporary reprieve for the prisoners and the case, which assumed the character of an international complication, threatening at the time to involve the United States in war with Spain, was referred to Madrid for revision.

Leper in the Cell with Him.

"The Spanish home government," continues the petition, "has since ordered a new trial for the prisoners by the civil courts, as provided by the terms of the protocol and treaty stipulations, but like all official matters on the island of Cuba, the trial may be put off indefinitely through red tape. Meanwhile Melton, with the other prisoners captured on the Competitor, is confined in the military fortress of Cabanas, at the entrance to Havana harbor, in a little dark cell, reeking with filth and vermin, and, as if to add to the horror of their situation, a drain runs through the room, breeding pestilence and death. Twenty other prisoners, of all colors and nationalities, are accused of every crime in the decalogue, are also huddle together within the narrow confines of the cell, and, if reports received here lately are correct, a leper has been thrown into the dungeon to increase the diseases of the other prisoners."

TRAIN STRIKES BUGGY.

A Young Woman Instantly Killed and Her Escort Fatally Injured.

Lancaster, Pa., July 27.—A train on the Pennsylvania railroad struck a buggy containing a young man and woman at the crossing at Bird-in-Hand yesterday. Both were of Blackhorse was instantly killed and Enos Barge of Refton, her escort, had an arm cut off and is probably fatally injured. The horse was instantly killed. The young couple with their friends were returning from a party and were chatting with friends in a rear vehicle when struck by the locomotive. They are the children of wealthy farmers.

People's Party Active.

Paris, Ill., July 27.—The people's party of Edgar county after putting a county ticket in the field Saturday, appointed a committee of five to call on A. J. Hunter, the democratic candidate for congress to induce him to withdraw and allow the people's party to put a candidate in his place. They made an effort to fuse with the democrats in making up a county ticket, but could not agree and placed one of their own party in the field instead.

There seems to be a dearth of candidates for the Democratic county nominations.

Congressman Mahlon Pitney is desirous of a re-election in the Fourth Congressional District.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees denies that he ever said that Bryan would undoubtedly be elected.

Congressman McEwan, of the Seventh District, has reconsidered his decision and will accept a renomination.

The People's party State Convention will be held August 18th in Newark. They will have two electors, who are to go on the regular Democratic ticket.

The War Cry, the organ of the Salvation Army, paid a compliment to The Press last week by publishing entire the report of Commander Booth-Tucker's recent address in this city which was printed in this paper.

It is probable that Augustus Cutler, who was a candidate for the Democratic nomination of Governor last fall, will be the candidate for Congress in the Fourth District this year against Mahlon Pitney. He is a silver Democrat.

The desire to be "regular" just as far as possible has led many Democratic papers to print the Democratic nominations at the head of their editorial columns while they are doing their utmost to defeat the candidates in their editorials.

Ex Senator Henry D. Winton, editor of the Hackensack Democrat, who was off on a fishing expedition at the time the Democratic convention was held, has returned home and announced that he will not support the nominees of that convention.

Here is the way that "Freeholder," that sarcastic writer of the Jersey page of the New York Press, sizes up the Socialist-Labor nominations:

Fireworks at Chatham are but dimly ignited in the Eighth district, and the ticket nominated at Plainfield gives a fair estimate of the relative number of pessimists for the two parties will have to console, or extinguish, in November.

The Union County Republican Committee held a meeting yesterday at Elizabeth and heard encouraging reports from the various leaders in the county. It was decided to commence the campaign at an early date in the county and to that end committees on the various phases of vote-getting were appointed. The permanent headquarters will be in the Dix building in Elizabeth.

The Press "Oh'd" for a Y. M. C. A. building. The building is one of the sights of Plainfield. The Press "Oh'd" for the removal of the freighthouse. We have the assurance of the honorable officers of the Central Railroad that the freighthouse will go in a short time and a pretty waiting station and park will grace its present location. Now we say, Oh for the abolition of the free midnight lunch of the police.

Here is something that will be interesting to both city and borough since so much trouble has been caused by the pollution of Green brook:

While as yet the Pennsylvania Board of Health has received thirty-nine complaints of the pollution of municipal water supplies, but ill is powerless to act in the matter through the refusal of the Legislature to enact legislation. There is little expectation of legislative action, and it might not be wise to inquire much as many of the rivers used for municipal water supplies have their water-sheds in other States. This, in the opinion of the secretary of the Board of Health, makes the question an interstate one, and therefore one for the consideration of Congress, but there is little hope of relief in that direction.

State Senator William D. Daly, of Hoboken, made public yesterday his reply to a letter received by him from E. J. Grace, of Harrison, in which he was asked to become the Democratic candidate for Congress this fall. The Senator once admitted that he was a gold-standard Democrat, but he has changed his mind, and is now a full-fledged silverite. In the letter Mr. Daly said that he could not accept the nomination and under take to make a canvass in the county, owing to comparatively poor health.

Now we have an evidence of the workings of trust right near Plainfield. Owing to the condition of trade, the magnates of the United States Rubber Shoe Company have decided that the factories which they control shall cease operation, and so the superintendent of the factory in New Brunswick, which is one of the pool, has received an order from the managers of the trust to shut down until they order otherwise. No matter what the managers of the New Brunswick concern think of the order, whether or no they could find a market for their product if left to the natural channel of trade and competition, they must now throw 2,000 persons out of employment for a period of several weeks.

GREAT PROJECT HALTED.

Every Jerseyman was interested in the plan to build a bridge across the North river from the Jersey side to a point somewhere near Forty-second street, and it will be with regret that they learn that the company who were the promoters are involved financial trouble and are likely to abandon the project. The company was capitalized at $1,500,000, of which $80,000 was paid in. Naturally, in such an immense undertaking as the building of a bridge a mile long, there was drawbacks that discouraged some of the less venturesome stockholders, and as a result there was a reduction in the revenues to carry on the preliminary work. An application has now been made by Foster M. Voorhees, representing a dissatisfied stockholder, to appoint a successor for the company. Even the complication does not end the company's career, it will greatly retard its work. Since the movement to bridge the Hudson was first set on foot the promoters of the scheme have had many obstacles to overcome. In the first place special legislation had to be obtained from Congress before the work could be taken up. A charter was finally granted to the New York and New Jersey Bridge Company to build the bridge, and the Atlantic Construction Company was to have erected the Jersey end. Plans were drawn, which had to be submitted to a commission of engineering experts. These were all disproved of by the Secretary of War because the estimated cost exceeded the limit. New plans were drawn and preliminary work is still being carried on.

The Boston banks again came forward yesterday with an offer of a million dollars in gold coin to the Treasury. Philadelphia offered $300,000. If the department gets all in sight the balance will be raised to $112,000,000.

A Memphis man is advocating an amendment to the Tennessee Constitution striking out the requirement that public officers shall give bonds, on the ground that as the public elects its officers it should lose if they prove faithless, and that making the people the losers will cause them to be more careful in the selection of candidates.

L. E. Livermore, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, of this city, sent the following statement of the political situation in Plainfield to the New York Journal, and it was published today:

"So far as I know or can learn at present, there is very little influence in favor of the Bryan silver craze" in this city. A little leaven in the campaign this sentiment may develop so as to become perceptible, but if it exists to a extent now it is latent, or, at least, dormant.

Congressional conventions are being called by the Republicans. The First District Convention will be held on Thursday at Woodbury, when Henry C. Loudenslager will be renominated for a third term. The Second District Convention will be held at Atlantic City on September 3d, when Congressman John J. Gardner will be renominated, also for a third term. The Fourth District Convention will be held at Phillipsburg on August 15th, when Mahlon Pitney will be renominated.

Senator Smith will return from his trip abroad in time to take an active part in the campaign. Between the time of the nominations and the period when active campaign work is started there is plenty of time to take a vacation. The thing, however, which seems to make his absence undesirable at the present time is the fact that he is chairman of the Democratic State organization, and before he returns the State convention will have been held and the policy of the party in this State mapped out. Where there are so many diverse elements in the party as at present, it would seem that strict party loyalty would inspire him, as a leader, to assist in shaping with his personal effort whatever line of action his better judgment dictates.

Since the conventions of the two great parties have been held, their principles enunciated and candidates selected, we have been constantly importuned to lend either editorial aid or condemnation to one or the other standards, but it is well known that The Press is not given to advocating the election of candidates of political parties. The Press is primarily and essentially a paper for the dissemination of local news, and this function it is the intention to continue to the end—a newspaper for the people and not an organ for the advancement of any one political faith. However, The Press will, as usual, open its columns for a moderate discussion of both sides of the issue involved in this approaching election, and in this manner permit a clearer and more honest influence to effect the mind of the undecided voter than the sentiments of party bias could possibly assert.

How to Live a Century

In an address on old age, recently published in the British Medical Journal, Sir James Crichton Browne, M.D., LL.D., says: "Man is entitled to live one hundred years."

Many men have lived a century and not one of them has ever committed suicide. Note that fact. It is a simple question of wear and repair. Accidents excepted, a human life is measured by the body's power to build itself up as fast as use tears it down. In health this is done.

But disease attacks it. Appetite and digestion fail; strength declines, flesh melts like snow. What can stop the wasting and replace the loss?

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of lime and soda.

It is a body-builder. It is the essence of the elements and principles that feed, nourish, reconstruct. It is fuel fat for the vital fire; it makes red blood; it stops the wasting; it puts back the lost flesh.

Hence its brilliant results in cases of anæmia, bronchitis, chronic gastric and intestinal disorders and consumption. The oil (easily digested and assimilated) forms flesh and tissue; while the lime promotes the growth of bone. It fs like an architect in wood, in stone and in iron—all at once.

In Scott's Emulsion the taste of the oil is fully disguised. It does not nauseate the most delicate stomach.

No other emulsion is "just the same as," or "as good as" Scott's. There is a radical difference.

Accept no substitute.

So far as crowds, bicycles and enthusiasm went, the Midsummer Night's Carnival was a great success last night. The display of the elements, however, ended nearly all the festivities in a brief space of time and sent the spectators scampering to places of shelter. 'Twas a pity, but there is satisfaction in knowing that the event was on the high road to a glorious success, and the following out of the same plans at an early date will probably prove the achievement that was promised last night.

Had a Pleasant Time Anyway.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haberle, of 671 West Front street, gave an informal dance to a few friends Tuesday night. The host and hostess had originally planned to witness the Mid-Summer Night Carnival, and had invited their friends for that purpose, but as the celebration failed to materialize the evening was passed in a social way with dancing, singing and a collation. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hunt, the Misses Springer, Miss Brown, W. Clark, S. Smith, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. T. Hovall, and Miss Hovall, of Scotch Plains; Mrs. Thornton, of Cranford; Mr. Allen and Mr Stillner, of Fanwood; Miss Sadie Naylor, Mrs. A. Lorton and E. V. Lorton, of Plainfield.

Two-thirds of an Appropriation Gone.

According to an approximate estimate there has been $10,000 spent by the city on Plainfield streets this year, and there is now about $5,000 left for the balance of the year. Out of the latter amount it is expected to put Front street in first-class condition. It is thought that next year the appropriation will not be quite so large, unless something unexpected happens.

Crop Report.

Weather Observer Neagle has the following crop report this week:

Catchy weather of week hindered haying and the harvesting of oats, the latter now being cut and will yield well; corn looks very fine, is coming in tassel; other crops progressing, except cucumbers, lima and vines turn yellow. Average temperature, 72 degrees; rainfall, 2.21 inches.

PERTH AMBOY'S MORMON COLONY

Its Permit to Hold Open-Air Meetings Revoked by the Mayor.

In his sermon Sunday morning the Rev. George B. VanDyke, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Perth Amboy, spoke of the formation of a colony of Mormons there and denounced the leaders and Mormonism. The Mormon converts have been holding meetings there for about two years, and a company of thirty left for Utah a few months ago.

Mayor Tice announced last night that he had revoked the permit granted several weeks ago for the Mormons to hold open-air meetings on the streets. He says that the Mormon principles are incompatible with morality and good citizenship. Captain Samuel Hornsby, a member of the City Council and son of a Mormon elder, will probably question the Mayor's right to permit the Salvation Army and the American Volunteers to hold meetings while he denies the privilege to the Mormons.

ELECTORS MEET AUGUST 27TH.

Republicans Decide Not to Change the Basis of Representation.

The Executive Committee of the State Republican Committee met in secret session in Newark yesterday. After fixing the date for the Electoral Convention on August 27th in Trenton, it decided not to materially change the basis of representation as in force heretofore. This system allows one delegate for every 200 votes, and one for the fraction not below 100. The Conger Strong contest for representation of the State Committee was heard. Strong opposed Conger's acceptance, claiming that he was illegally elected. Conger will make his explanation on August 3d, to which date the committee adjourned. Garret A. Hobart was not in attendance.

FELL FROM AN ELEVATOR.

Former Representative Dunn Seriously Injured.

Former Representative John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth, was very painfully injured while entering an elevator in the Merchants' Insurance building on Broad street, Newark, Monday afternoon.

Mr. Dunn was about to step into the elevator when the colored boy in charge started the lift up. Mr. Dunn was carried several feet above the floor and then thrown back with such violence that two of his ribs were fractured and his collarbone broken. After ascertaining that his injuries were not necessarily fatal Mr. Dunn, accompanied by his son, was taken to his home in Elizabeth.

Havoc in the Path of the Storm.

The effects of the heavy wind last Monday evening were felt with the greatest severity at Greenbrook kennels, on Greenbrook road, two miles from the centre of the city. This point seemed to be directly in the swath of the terrific wind storm and general havoc was wrought among the trees and light structures about the property. Six immense trees were uprooted and laid flat on the ground chimneys were collapsed, window panes broken and a portion of the piazza on the house occupied by F. E. Phœbus, proprietor of the kennels, wrecked by the velocity of the wind. The damage will amount to quite a sum.

PRISON FOR RAIDERS

The Conviction of Jameson and His Followers Was Necessary.

THERE WAS NO WAY TO SHIELD THEM

The Proof Overwhelmingly Against Them, England Was Compelled To Make a Pretense of Her Friendship for the Boer Government.

London, July 29.—While the conviction of Dr. Jameson and his companions for the recent raid into the Transvaal caused some little surprise among those who did not realize the gravity of the offence with which the men were charged, those who had given the proofs against the raiders consideration, plainly saw that no matter how strongly sympathy might be with the accused in England, there was nothing for the courts to do but to convict. Of course, the raiders were let down as easily as possible, without making the case a complete farce, and at the same time without giving the least friendly feeling existing in England towards the Boer government. In the summing up of the case the chief justice's remarks were distinctly hostile to the defendants. Justice Bruce began by pointing out that none of the essential facts in the case against the prisoners had been contested, and that there was no doubt in regard to their having taken part in or abetted the proceedings at Krugersdorp, Johannesburg, where the invading forces were mustered preparatory to entering the Transvaal. It was entirely unimportant, in his opinion, whether the foreign enlistment act was in force. There was no doubt, he said, that the expedition was of a military character and whether it was aimed to overthrow the Transvaal government or to force a change in the laws of that republic in the interests of others, it was equally an offence against a friendly state. Lord Russell, throughout, summed up adversely to the raiders and concluded with submitting to the jury a series of questions difficult to answer say way but affirmatively. After an hours' absence the jury returned and answered all the questions in the affirmative. Thereupon the chief justice said that this finding amounted to a verdict of guilty and directed the jury to so find. The jury added a rider to the effect that the grievances at Johannesburg were provocative.

Received Their Sentences Unmoved.

Dr. Jameson and his co-defendants were apparently unmoved, and Sir Edward Clarke asked the court's disposition to move for a new trial. The judge retired for consultation, and during their absence Sir Edward Clarke and the defendants consulted together, with the result that when the judges returned Sir Edward Clarke said that in view of the verdict rendered the defendants refrained to instruct for a new trial and expressed a desire to settle the case now. Lord Russell said that the verdict was given on evidence which no reasonable man could have disregarded. All the defendants, he added, were men of intelligence, holding positions under the queen, and their crime had the gravest consequences, including death to some, injury to others, while the future relations of their crime no one was yet able to foresee. Dr. Jameson was sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment without labor. Major Sir John Willoughby was sentenced to five months' imprisonment. Major R. White to seven months' imprisonment, and Capt. Henry F. Coventry, Col. R. Grey and Col. H. F. White were sentenced to five months' imprisonment each. Dr. Jameson, had hitherto hung down his head, looked up proudly when sentence had been passed and the other defendants stared hard at the lord chief justice.

Cheered by the Crowd.

A large crowd had gathered outside the court room to await the exit of the prisoners and cheered vociferously when they made their appearance. Many shouts of "God bless you" were heard as the prisoners were brought out on their way to Holloway jail, where they are to be confined temporarily.

THE DEVIL'S RAG BABIES

THAT IS CHIEF GRANT'S NAME FOR TWO FREIGHT TRAIN RIDERS.

They Were Arrested Last Night and Judge DeMeza Sent Them to Elizabeth to Get a Bath and a New Suit

"The Devil's rag babies" was the way Chief Grant characterized two young specimens of humanity that were taken out of a freight car last Tuesday by Sergeant Kiely and Patrolmen Flanagan and Myers, and locked up for trespassing on the cars of the Jersey Central railroad. There was another young fellow in the top of the car, but the epithet was not as appropriate to him.

The two travelers to whom Chief Grant applied this rather suggestive name, certainly deserved it, for they were by far the raggedest looking couple that have marched into Plainfield's little rookery for a long time. Dirt, filth and rags made up their costumes. They looked as though they had been through a threshing machine and then had had an interview with some farmer's bulldog. They didn't have much to say when arrested, except that they were looking for work.

Their companion on the train evidently did not belong with them for, although poorly dressed, he had apparently tried to keep himself looking as tidy as possible.

The three freight train riders were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza Wednesday. He suspended sentence on the solitary offender, who gave his name as Smalley. He appeared to be really in hard luck, but sent the two down to Elizabeth for ten days so that they might take a bath and enjoy a suit of clothes that was not all fringe.

An Increasing Business.

W. J. Stephenson, of 146 North avenue, near the station, owing to the increase in his restaurant business and his established reputation as a caterer, finds it necessary to have more room and has therefore fitted up in good style, on the second floor of his building, a large room 25x35 with three long extension dining tables, also small tables, and is now ready to furnish dinners and suppers to clubs, lodges, or other parties who can have the use of this room as a private one. He will also furnish a first-class dinner for 50 cents, or he will serve meals "a la carte." He employs only competent cooks and polite attendants.

A Minister Set to Rights.

Rev. William D. Johnson, whose name was connected with the story published in the New York Journal, and reprinted in The Press Tuesday, concerning the alleged troubles of the Fillmore Avenue Baptist church and a church in Westfield, called at this office this morning and denied the truth of the statements. He said that though the church had struggled against many handicaps on the road to prosperity, it was getting along as well as could be expected. As for his being under the influence of Rachael Graham, he said that he didn't even know the woman.

Signs of Prosperity.

Those in a position to know say that the coming Presidential election will in no way interfere with C. Scheffiin & Son turning out the large orders for clothing which the firm is now receiving for the fall and winter trade. In fact, it is asserted, that new and additional hands will soon be put to work in their extensive shops on West Front street.

A Word or Two to those suffering from catarrh or the thousands subject to severe attacks of cold in the head, ely's cream balm is a sure remedy can be offered. Ely's Cream Balm has become a favorite in all sections of the United States, because of its effectiveness. Your cold in the head will be quickly relieved by it, and the severest attack of catarrh will yield to, and be perfectly cured by a thorough treatment. Catarrh is not a blood disease, but inflammation of the passages of the nose and throat, due to climatic changes.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

lightning left no marks of its ingress or exit.

The borough did not escape damage from the terrific storm, and several instances of its visitation are reported. Robert Carson's barn on Belmont avenue was struck by lightning and every board in the structure was splintered. The hay was set on fire, but the drenching rain soon extinguished the flames. Fortunately there were no horses in the barn. The damage to the barn is heavy.

On Manning avenue, near Somerset street, a large handsome maple tree was blown over, and another tree on Lincoln place, near Somerset street, was broken off near the trunk by the wind. On Duer street, near Linden avenue, a large tree was blown over into the street. A farmer named Quimby, living twelve miles over the mountains, reported that the road-way from his place to the borough was obstructed in a number of places by fallen trees and shrubbery. He was late in reaching town in consequence.

A small tree was completely split in two on Prospect avenue, near the Cedar brook bridge by the heavy wind while sundry branches in the neighborhood were twisted off by the same cause.

A torrent of water came down Clinton avenue, overflowed the gutter and washed away the cinder sidewalk at the corner of this thoroughfare and South Second street.

At the height of the shower last evening a cyclist rode through the water which had formed under the Watchung avenue railroad bridge to the depth of eighteen inches, to the great amusement of a crowd of spectators who were seeking shelter under the bridge.

The storm was an electric one of unusual force, one of the most severe that has visited this neighborhood for a long time. The lightning was almost continual and the thunder rolled and reverberated with terrible vigor. The wind still continued to blow a gale and the trees twisted and bent before its force. Large limbs were torn off and many trees blown over. Awnings, little sheds and arbors were wrecked while the wind played havoc in countless other ways. The air was full of electricity and the systems for the electric lighting of many buildings were rendered temporary useless by the burning out of the fuse.

There was trouble on the power circuit of the Plainfield Electric Light company and the trolley cars were stalled all along the line. The current would return after a wait only to disappear again. The broken branches snapped many telegraph and telephone wires and caused a ground on the fire alarm system. The telephone office was a lively place for a while but the entire system was in working order again in the evening when the burnt out fuses were replaced by new ones.

Two large trees on Central avenue, one in front of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and the other between Seventh and Eighth streets, were uprooted by the storm and the sidewalk was torn up in their fall. They blocked that thoroughfare, and the police placed a lantern on each to warn drivers.

Regular seas formed under the railroad bridges in which the water was up to the hubs of the wagons and also invaded the sidewalks and made them unpassable to pedestrians unless they cared to wade. The trolley cars were blocked at the Watchung avenue bridge by the water.

For a time there were no cars running but despite constant stops the trip on the Fourth and Somerset street branches were made. No attempt was made to go further west than Grant avenue on the West Front street line as the storm had abated.

Out in the country the storm had full sweep and fences, trees and sheds went down before it. The apple crop in this vicinity was nearly ruined for the small green apples were almost entirely shaken from the trees while many trees were twisted or torn to pieces.

John Y. Barrett, of Rockview Farm, North Plainfield, suffered severely from a too intimate acquaintance with the lightning. When the storm began, he rushed to the barn to look after the horses there. The lightning apparently struck close to the barn for it filled the interior and ran over a bicycle that lay in the barn. There was a terrible crackling sound and Mr. Barrett was stunned by the shock. When he reached the house again, he was taken very ill and remained that way during the night. His illness was not serious, however, and he had almost recovered this morning. Several trees were struck in that neighborhood.

The storm was felt with all its force at Dr. Lowis' camp near Washington Rock, where the largest of the tallest trees were blown almost to the ground, but they were tough and resisted the storm. The camp was not injured in the slightest, and the two tents there successfully resisted the wind and rain.

The Mountain Park Inn also withstood the storm. The view from there when the storm was at its height was something magnificent.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Evans and family, of Washington avenue, left today for Greenwood Lake, where they will spend the summer.

George Fiering, the driver of the chemical engine, will take his vacation next week, and he will spend it among friends in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Joseph Blatz, of Somerset street, is regaining her health, so that now she is able to sit up and occasionally walk about the room.

Miss Fanny Rafferty, who is engaged in business in New York State, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rafferty, of Park avenue.

Wm. Addis, of North avenue, left town this morning for New York State, where he will spend ten days with his family, who are summering there.

Michael Udhal, of South avenue, who was quite seriously injured by being hit by an Italian sometime ago, is able to be up and about though not able to work.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wells, of Washington avenue, are guests at Camp Pinafore, on Lake Placid, in the Adirondacks, the summer home of Chas. W. McCutchen.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich, red blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

BEATEN AT FLEMINGTON

BY THE AID OF THE UMPIRE THE Y. M. C. A. BOYS DEFEATED.

The Flemingtons Were Favored All the Way Through, and the Plainfielders Had a Hard Row to Hoe.

The nine stalwart young men composing the Y. M. C. A. ball team who journeyed to Flemington on Saturday to play a return game with the team at that place, had an experience which they will not forget in a long time. When the writer says that the umpire helped materially to win the game for the home team, everybody will say "It's the same old story." But it's a fact, nevertheless, and the Y. M. C. A. team did not have a ghost of a show. All decisions were given against them, thus robbing the game of a great deal of pleasure. A sure double play made by the visitors, and one which even a majority of those present conceded, was not given to the Plainfield boys. This incensed them so that they threatened to leave the field. John McLaughlin pitched for the visitors, and after the first inning he put the ball right over the plate, but the umpire would give him no credit for it, and ball after ball was called. Under ordinary circumstances the visitors would have given the Hunterdon boys a lively chase, and in fact the latter had no walkover. Warren McLaughlin, a brother of John McLaughlin, was in the box for the Flemingtons and he pitched good ball. The home team imported Rothfuss, the Newark professional, for the occasion, and he secured four of the eight hits. There is no doubt but that Flemington idolizes her ball team, but they do so at a great sacrifice to the national game. Some day they will learn this to their sorrow, for they do not give visiting teams an impartial show. It is true that the defeat they received at Plainfield was humiliating, and they were determined to win Saturday's game at any rate.

The Plainfield boys put up a good game and played the best they could under the circumstances. Burt went in the box in the eighth inning and the home team could do nothing with him. It appears now that it would have been better if he had pitched the entire game.

The day was perfect and the fair sex turned out in large numbers, in fact there was a big crowd present, with the main felt as though the visitors were being unfairly treated. Townley and Symons in the field had seven chances between them and they accepted them in good shape.

The rest of the team played steady ball and should have won the game. The third game between these teams will be played later on, and if the Hunterdon county aggregation is not beaten there will be a good reason for it. One of those who accompanied the team Saturday was Bowman Pangborn, the ball crank. During the latter part of the game he was missed, but he showed up at the depot with a large handsome bouquet, which was presented to him by his lady friends. Below will be found the score in full:

Anniversary Number.

The Scientific American, of New York, has signalized its fifteth anniversary by the publication of a very handsome 72-page special number, which consists of a review of the development of science and the industrial arts in the United States during the past fifty years. It was an ambitious undertaking, and the work has been well done. The many articles are thoroughly technical, and they are written in a racy and popular style, which makes the whole volume—it is nothing less, being equal to a book of 432 ordinary pages—thoroughly readable. It is inclosed for preservation in a handsome cover, and is sold at the price of ten cents.

Objection is made against teamsters using the left hand side of the road by stone carters on Somerset street. Mr. Conover paid the damage.

FIRE IN A MASS OF RAGS

A LIVELY BLAZE FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT SATURDAY NIGHT.

Supposed to Have Started by Spontaneous Combustion—The Storehouse Burned to the Ground—The Loss Amounts to $1,000.

The full moon was just rising over the hills of Staten Island Saturday evening when another light appeared to the northeast of the city. It came up quickly and in another moment the far-reaching notes of the fire gong sounded an alarm from box 28. Box 28 is located at Woodland and South avenues, but the fire was on Johnston avenue, near North avenue. It was the barn and house of Frank Hanlenbeck and was blazing brightly when the first hose cart arrived. The fire started in the barn, which was all ablaze and had set fire to the house which joins the barn. Two streams were turned on the house and speedily extinguished the flames there, but the barn was not as easy.

Hollenbeck is a junk and rag dealer, who is in the business on an extensive scale, and he had twenty tons of rags in the barn. In these rags the fire is supposed to have started from a spontaneous combustion. The barn was a total wreck, but rags smouldered for sometime, and it was found necessary to thoroughly extinguish them.

The loss is about $1,000, none of which was covered by insurance. It was said that Hollenbeck had a box of money distroyed by the flames, but rumor was incorrect. He did miss a check for $150, however, but afterwards found it.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Hollenbeck, who rushed out of the house to give the alarm. She then remembered that her little child was in the blazing house. An unknown man, on hearing her screams, rushed into the house and brought out the child, unharmed by the flames.

NAY PEN'S OBSERVATIONS.

Thomas Seabrooke, the comic opera star, is sojourning at Asbury Park, partially for his health, but principally because the New York authorities desire to confiscate his body for failure to pay his divorced wife the alimony which a court deemed was her due. Now Thomas is to portray the role of Touchstone in the open-air performance of "As You Like It," along with a lot of other satellites in the histrionic world, but I should say that it is a case of Touch Thomas that is the "motif" of his lingering by the sea waves rather than Touchstone.

* * * * * * *

From over the sea comes the intelligence that an inventive Frenchman has an automatic device to be attached to telephones which will relegate the merry hello girl to oblivion. For the sake of the romantic and picturesque I am hoping that it is not a success. Without the mellifluous telephonic salutation, "Number?" which hails the ear from over a long stretch of wire after we have whir-r-r-ed the bell; without the unruffled temper after a dyspeptic subscriber has vented his spite in a string of snarls at his failure to get what he wants over the wire; without the demure and reserved rejoinders to the interrogations and "jollying" of the gay citizen; without the all-around tact and urbanity of the telephone girl, why this world would be a hollow mockery to those who have occasion to utilize the modern appliance of conveying your articulation to distant points. Keep the telephone girl intact—she is the one oasis of the business man's Sahara of irritableness.

Among the prominent Plainfielders who I have never seen on a bicycle are Counselor Charles A. Reed, Editor Frank W. Runyon, Judge George H. DeMeza, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. D. J. Yerkes and James E. Martine. But they are few and far between.

FRANK IS IN CHICAGO.

THE MISSING MAN'S WIFE HEARS FROM HIM BY LETTER.

He is Very Anxious to Return Home, and Writes to His Wife as Though His Mind Might be Somewhat Effected.

The whereabouts of John Frank, the carpenter, whose mysterious disappearance was recorded exclusively in The Daily Press recently, has been discovered, and it is believed that he will be back very soon.

Saturday evening Mrs. Frank received a letter from her husband in which he states that he is located in West Chicago. He does not mention the circumstances which led him to leave his home, nor does he tell how he reached his destination.

A Daily Press representative called on Mrs. Frank this morning to ascertain whether she had received any tidings regarding her husband, and learned the above. Mrs. Frank has been under a terrible strain since her husband went away, and up till Saturday she believed that he was dead. She says that eight years ago he received a sunstroke and ever since he has had trouble with his head.

In speaking of the letter received on Saturday she said that he wrote as though his mind was not right. He stated that he wanted to come home, but was not sure as to whether his family wanted to see him. Mrs Frank answered her husband's letter as soon as she received it, and urged him to come home. She thinks he will receive her letter today and will at once start for home. Mrs. Frank says this is the first time her husband has acted so strangely, and she cannot account for it except that his mind has been severely affected as stated above.

A Birthday Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street, who are stopping at their summer residence at Boontown, arranged a very complete birthday surprise Friday eve'ng in honor of Mrs. Voehl's brother, Andrew Mantz, who lives in that vicinity. There were about twenty-five persons present, including John H. Carney, of this city, who with Rev, Geo. Bowers, furnished the evening's entertainment with comical sketches, autoharp and vocal solos and recitations. Mr. Mantz was wholly surprised and it was sometime before he regained his composure.

—Those who find it necessary to use the drinking fountain on West Front street near Somerset, are of the opinion that new drinking cups would be a luxury.

WATSON CHANGES AGAIN

NOW HE WANTS TO RETRACT HIS PLEA OF GUILTY.

He Now Wishes to Plead Not Guilty, But Judge DeMeza Will Consider the Matter —Watson Gives No Reason for Changing.

There was an unexpected development in the Michael Watson illegal liquor selling case last Monday that quite astonished the court and the police. Of course, everybody was surprised last week when he retracted his plea of not guilty and decided to plead guilty.

It was evidently too much for him and he came in the city court this morning and calmly remarked that he wanted to change his plea again. City Judge DeMeza looked at him in an incredulous way as if he did not believe his senses while Sergeant Kiely nearly fell off his chair with surprise. Watson was told to appear at the Judge's office at the close of court. He was waiting when the Judge appeared at his office. "Do you want to change your plea of guilty to not guilty?" asked the Judge.

Watson hesitated and then said "yes." He had nothing more to say, however, and gave no reasons for his sudden change. After considering the question Judge DeMeza decided to leave the matter in abeyance until August 10th, when he would give his decision as to whether this change would be allowed. If it is allowed the trial will probably be held over until after the return of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh.

A DANGEROUS PLACE.

The Children Persist in Getting in The Way of the Trolley.

One of the worst places for the motorman of the local trolley lines is on West Fourth street between Liberty street and Plainfield avenue. The street just swarms with little children who think it great fun to see how long they can stand on the track without being run over. In some cases, the motorman has been forced to stop his car and chase the children from the track.

The parents of these children apparently make no effort to keep them out of the way but consider it a joke on the street railway employes. It is a wonder that no one has been hurt as yet but, unless the parents assist the company and the police in keeping the children from the path of the trolley cars, some of the little tots will be injured, perhaps severely.

An Appeal for Help.

The Normal and Industrial School, located at Wayeross, Ga., was organized July 1st, 1895, and is the only school of its kind accessible to 60,000 colored people, whose educational interests have been seriously neglected. By their economy, effort and sacrifice they have purchased land, but have no buildings. The rented building, which they occupied, cannot be had longer.

$2,000 is needed to erect a building by the 15th of September. If we fail our whole school (300 pupils) will be without shelter. Is there a heart to sympathize, and a hand to help? Rev. A. J. Egerton, the financial agent, is here and states that the work is doing well so far as teaching is concerned and every sign of progress is manifested on the part of the children, who are gathered from their dilapidated homes. If you are interested please communicate. A. A. J. Egerton, 115 Madison avenue.

On His Way to Prison.

While the train stood at the North avenue station, several of his colored friends gathered to speak to him. Tip seemed to be in good spirits and was not apparently affected by his new experience of going to prison.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

EVENING SESSION.

No Light, and Adjournment Taken Until To-day.

When the populists got together in convention in the evening they found themselves in trouble. No provision had been made for lighting the hall. Neither gas nor electricity gave a ray of light. The candles provided by the newspaper correspondents and the telegraph companies for their own use, served to make the darkness intense and more picturesque. There was a full attendance on the floor and many spectators in the galleries. For half an hour humorously inclined people in the galleries and on the floor indulged in jokes at the expense of the populists and jeers and college yells prevailed. Some attempts at explanation were made from the chairman's platform, but they were received with derision and hooting. Finally some of the delegates started to sing the national anthem. Others joined in and the band played the accompaniment and this restored better humor. The band continued to play and it was promised from the chairman's stand that light would soon be forthcoming. The real explanation of the trouble was that whoever was in charge of the arrangements had neglected to engage services for the evening from the electric light company until late in the afternoon when it was too late to turn on the current without great risk, as preliminary tests of the circuits were necessary. Some suggestions of adjournments were made but they met with no favor, the crowd rather enjoyed the darkness and the fun. The band kept up its music—Dixie and other popular airs—and the crowd shouted and varied the shouting with cheers and jocular remarks. This condition of things went on without a particle of light, save from the few candle points stuck on the reporters' table and one on the chairman's table. Some negro melodies were sung from different parts of the hall. John Brown's spirit went marching on, and college yells were indulged in. Their were cries from the crowd for Coxey to make a speech, and also calls for Mrs. Lease. She was on the platform and said: "Wait 'till the lights are turned on and I'll talk until you can't rest." Finally the patience of the managers was exhausted, and on the appearance of the electric light being turned on, and, yielding to the necessities of the case, it was announced at 8:50 p. m. that the convention had adjourned until 10 a. m. to day.

NEW JERSEY BRIDGE PROJECT.

Application Made for a Receiver for the Atlantic Construction Company.

Newark, N. J., July 23.—The action begun in the court of chancery yesterday may tie-up operations on the New York and New Jersey bridge project, application for a receiver being made to Vice Chancellor Emery by Gustave C. Henry, stockholder in the Atlantic Construction company, which is to construct the bridge. The company is capitalized at $1,500,000. It is declared insolvent by Henry, who also swears that the bridge franchise is all of value owned by the concern. Its capital, he says, was eaten up by constructing the New Jersey approach to the bridge. Senator Voorhees, representing Henry, claimed that the Atlantic company was about to water its stock from $1,500,000 to $5,000,000, which would injure stockholders' interests. Action was deferred until August 18.

A Slight Difference.

"Well, Mrs. Parslow, I suppose you are doing as many other ladies do nowadays, taking lessons on the bicycle?"

"No, Mr. Johnson, I am not. All the lessons I have had so far have been off the bicycle, but I hope soon to take them on it, as you suggest."—Harper's Bazar.

SELF-BETRAYAL.

The Clever Ruse of a Japanese Salesman.

There was in Yeddo a poor man who had worked hard and long, and had saved a small sum of money. He had no strong box to keep it in; and it occurred to him that if he dropped it inside an empty bean-sauce cask, no one would ever think of ever looking there for it. Now this bean sauce is much used by poor people; but the smell is very strong and somewhat offensive to persons of delicate taste. Some ingenious thief, after all, did discover the hiding place, for one day the poor man found his money missing. He went immediately to Oka, and told him of his loss, adding that he thought it must be laid to the charge of some one of the neighbors. So Oka summoned all the poor man's neighbors for the next day, and when they had appeared in court, he addressed: "It is my opinion it is one of you that has stolen this money from the bean-sauce cask, and, if that is so, I shall be able to tell by the smell of the thief's fingers. So let each one come up here and present his hands in turn." Just as he had said this, he noticed one of the men in the back part of the courtroom suddenly put his hand to his nose and smell it. "That man over there is the thief!" immediately exclaimed the judge, pointing to the man.

Oka knew, you see, that if the thief was really among the crowd, his guilty conscience would probably suggest to him the thought: "Will my hands really betray me?"—Harper's Young People.

How They Grew a Bell.

At the beginning of the last century the only church bell at Grosslawitz, Germany, was so small that its tones were not sufficient to penetrate to the ends of the village. A second bell was badly wanted, but the village was poor and where was the money to come from? One Sunday when the schoolmaster, Gottfried Hays, was going to church, he noticed growing out of the churchyard wall a flourishing stock of green corn, the seed of which must have been dropped by a passing bird. The idea suddenly struck him that perhaps this one stalk of corn could be made the means of procuring the second bell they wanted so much. He waited until the corn was ripe and then he plucked the seed from it and sowed them in his own garden. Next year he gathered the little crop thus produced and sowed it again, until at last he had not room enough in his garden for the crop, and so he divided it among a certain number of farmers, who went on sowing the ears until, in the eighth year, the crop was so large that when it was put together and sold they found that they had money enough to buy a beautiful bell.—Harper's Young People.

A Cert Refusal.

Theatrical Manager—I regret, gentlemen, that I cannot put your productions on the stage.

First Author—Why not, pray?

Manager—Your play, you see, is so awfully simple.

Second Author—And mine?

Manager—Is simply awful.—Fliegende Blatter.

Quite a Mistake.

Texas Cowboy (who has heard that a northern man has arrived in town with a bicycle, but thinks it is a shooting weapon of some sort)—Say, stranger, what may be the size of your bicycle?

"It's a fifty-six," replied the stranger.

"I'll bet you I can do better shootin' with a forty-four caliber."—Texas Siftings.

NO DISTINCTIVE TITLE.

A COMPANY OF UNOSTENTATIOUS CHRISTIANS IN SESSION HERE.

Sometimes Called the Plymouth Brethren, But Repudiate the Appellation—Delegates From All Over the World.

A company of Christians, Plymouth Brethren, (so called) assembled Friday at the home of Paul F. Loizeaux, Brook avenue, for the purpose of following out a study of the Scriptures. The conference will probably continue during the next two weeks.

Persons are present from Minnesota, Nova Scotia, Canada, Wisconsin, the South, Quebec, England and a number of other places. Every evening lectures will be delivered and on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock and in the evening at 7:30. -The lectures are open to the public. All other meetings are private, being intended as above mentioned, for a personal study of the Bible. These people call themselves Christians and repudiate any distinctive title or name. They are unostentatious and seek seclusion in their studies.

Several large tents have been erected on the grounds of Mr. Loizeaux, at the corner of Westervelt avenue and Chatham street, where the meetings will be held and where the delegates will take their meals. Places have been provided for sleeping. The First Church of Christ building on Grove street will be used for sleeping apartments for a number and arrangements have been made for that purpose. Among those who will lecture during the conference are F. W. Grant, of this city, S. Ridout, Baltimore, and Mr. Greenman, of Halifax.

REGRETS HIS DEPARTURE.

Brigadier Evans Has Become Attached to the Central Division.

The following words were spoken by Brigadier Evans at his farewell meeting in Newark Wednesday evening: "I have been expecting this farewell meeting for over three years. Tonight is the saddest night I have experienced in the Central Division. Not only in Newark, but all around Newark, we have been marching steadily on, and we have been victorious. Our division has been cut in two; we have lost three corps, but we now number seventy-four corps. Farewell to the division, farewell to Newark, farewell to our comrades, farewell to our friends. Trust in God as you have before and God will carry you troubles to him. We are going west and know but little of it, but we're going to work for the same cause. We can't preach; we don't pretend to preach; but we can tell of our salvation. There never was a better field for work in Newark, and we are getting stronger every day."

Since Brigadier Evans has come to the Central Division the original number of ten stations has been increased to over 100. The Midland Division, to which he and nineteen other officers have been transferred, covers over 2,000 miles of territory. It embraces Southern Illinois, Iowa, Arkansas, Texas and Missouri.

Brigadier George French will be transferred from St. Louis to take Brigadier Evans' place. Several changes will soon take place in the local corps.

WAR FOR THE SOAP FAT MEN.

They Must Conform With the Ordinances or Else Look Out for the Police.

The soap fat men of Plainfield are soon to become the victims of the combined efforts of the police and the Board of Health officials unless they conform more closely to the city ordinances. One of their number, Theo. Glaser, has already been arrested and will be tried in a short time.

The trouble with Glaser was that he was careless and, according to Health Inspector Peter Weaver, dropped stray bones and fat about the street. Another reason for complaint is that he collects his materials in an open wagon instead of a closed one. The other dealers will be notified to use a top-covered wagon at once. Glaser's trial will come up in a few days.

Upset the Carriage.

Miss Cliff and Harry Wood, of Stanhope, this state, were the guests over Sunday of the Misses Smith, of West Front street. They drove to Plainfield with a horse and buggy. This morning they started for home, intending to reach their destination this evening. While driving on Front street the horse became frightened at a trolley car and upset the bugg. Miss Cliff was thrown out, but sustained no injury whatever. Mr. Wood was also thrown out and received a few slight bruises. The horse ran a short distance and was caught by two men. The buggy was damaged considerable. The two have decided that they will remain in town until after the Midsummer Night's Festival. In the meantime the wagon will be repaired.

Liquor Case Adjourned.

The cases of Samuel Kline and Nathan Richmond, for illegal liquor selling, were adjourned to September 3, in the city court this morning to await the return of corporation Counsel Marsh. Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield represented both the defendents.

PUSHING THE TROLLEY.

SCOTCH PLAINS LIKELY TO BE TAPPED BY THE TIME SNOW FLIES.

Enough Permits Secured Along Second Street and Netherwood Avenue—May Result in the Opening of a New Street.

From present prospects it looks as though the trolley road will surely be pushed through to Scotch Plains before snow flies. Charles L. Moffett, the lawyer, who is representing the company in the matter of securing permits from property owners along the proposed route, has met with such success that already he has enough signitures to a limit of the extension up East Second street and over Netherwood avenue to Front street. As soon as Mr. Moffett gains the consent of an interested party, he immediately forms a complete chain from which there is no reversal by getting an affidavit to the effect that the party is willing for the road to pass his or her property.

The plan for the extension to Scotch Plains is that the road shall start at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, in front of the City Hotel, the permits along this new territory having already been secured with the rest. This, it is thought, will be the most convenient place for the traffic of Scotch Plains to center.

The only fear of the project being blocked is from the residents along Front street above Netherwood avenue, where the railroad would tap the former street.

If there is too much objection here, and it cannot be overcome, it is planned to open an entire new thoroughfare from Second street through to the Plains, being a continuation of Second street. It is understood that owners of the land along this route are anxious to have this plan consummated as it would open up their property for residential purposes and the trolley would greatly enhance its desirability. Then it is calculated that inasmuch as the citizens of Scotch Plains are so anxious to have the road run to their town, the township would improve the street from the city limits, and in this way it would be a good thing for all concerned.

There is but little doubt but what the road will be pushed to completion in that direction.

A RUSTY NAIL IN HIS HAND.

Painful Wound Sustained by George Cose This Morning.

George Cose, of Grant avenue, who is employed in Fred Firstbrook's store on Liberty street, sustained a very painful injury to his left hand while at work Thursday.

He was in the barn at the time, feeding a horse, when he ran a rusty nail completely through the palm of his left hand. He was unable to extricate it himself and called Mr. Firstbrook to his assistance. After several attempts the nail was finally removed. Mr. Cose allowed the wound to bleed freely in order to get out the poison, and as soon as possible had the wound dressed by a physician.

A NEW BICYCLE THOROUGHFARE.

West Seventh Street Will Soon Be a Paradise for Cyclists.

While the residents of the East End have seen nothing of the steam roller for several weeks it has been hard at work nevertheless, and in a week Plainfield will have a thoroughfare that will even excel Park avenue. It is West Seventh street, and it has been put in an excellent condition from Park avenue nearly to Monroe avenue. After the top dressing of fine stone wears even, which it will do in about a week, the street will be as smooth as any floor. It is already a perfect paradise for bicyclists between Park and Plainfield avenues, and many cyclists take advantage of it.

Donations to the Fresh Air Fund.

Donations have been received for the Fresh Air Fund from Miss Lucy Budlong, Mrs. Pierrt Mall, Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. Joseph Gavett, Miss Osborn, Theo. O. Gavett, Joseph Gavett, Jr., Harold Underhill, Mrs. Havens, Donaldson Ryder, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., Mrs. Geo. Staats, Mrs. H. Lawson. A large donation, the proceeds of a sale held by the Misses Osgood and Miss Barlow. Nimrod Horton and Charles Burns have rendered valuable service in painting the building.

A Charming Affair.

Cycling parties are becoming very popular for these summer evenings and a very pleasant one was arranged for Tuesday evening by Miss Huntington, of Franklin place. The party enjoyed a spin out Park avenue in the direction of Metuchen and then returned to Miss Huntington's home where a number of guests, who have not yet mastered the wheel, awaited them. Refreshments and a social chat made the rest of the evening pass only too quickly.

Not Superstitious.

Contractor "Dan" Marsh, of Plainfield avenue, never was superstitious. On July 16 he set a hen with the illfated thirteen eggs, and id just three weeks to the day, thirteen fine, healthy chickens hatched out. Provided they all live, Mr. Marsh may keep them for thirteen years, with the hope that they will lay thirteen eggs each day.

THAT FAMOUS PIG CASE.

ALL WARRENVILLE TURNED OUT TO HEAR THE TRIAL.

But When the Justice Adjourned It Three Weeks to Consider a Point of Law There Was a General Disappointment.

All Warrenville turned out on Friday eve'ng to hear the famous pig and cat case of John Stine against Charles Baldwin, the details of which were exclusively told in The Daily Press last Tuesday. The case was to be tried before Justice Austin, or "Squire" Austin, as he is called there and his office was tightly packed despite the heavy rain that was falling. The suit was to recover the value of the oats from Baldwin, whom Stine claimed had got them on false pretenses. Everybody was expecting something exciting, when City Judge DeMeza, of this city, who represented Baldwin, called the Justice's attention to a certain point of law. The Justice was not quite sure, so he adjourned the case for three weeks to look up the point.

There was lots of fun while the audience was waiting, for John C. Cooper was present, and had many witty suggestions to offer. When he saw the crowd he wanted to build a city hall right away, and thought that while the crowd was there they had better incorporate the village.

The crowd, however, tramped home in the rain, disgusted with the turn affairs had taken. Stine is going to keep it up, however, if it takes ten years to recover the value of the oats, now that the court won't let him keep the pig which he confiscated in their place.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Browns, of Woodbridge, defeated the Metuchens, Saturday, 36 to 3.

The Richmonds, of this city, will cross bats with a Dunellen nine at that place Saturday morning.

The West End Field Club, of Elizabeth, were defeated by the Dunellens at Dunellen, Saturday, by the score of 5 to 2.

Larry Doyle, Captain of the Richmonds, says the team has a few open dates which he would like to fill in with any nine under 15. His address is 601 Richmond street.

The West Ends, of this city, were defeated in two games Saturday by the ex-Gormans on the Y. M. C. A. grounds. Manager Mundy, of the West Ends, has released J. Evans and B. Eddey, and signed D. Killbride and T. Muir.

The P. A. C.'s, of this city play ball with the West End Field Club of Elizabeth, on the E. A. C. grounds Saturday next. The same team will play at Sterling on August 8th, and on September 5th they will play off a tie with the Dunellen team. The local team has no home grounds to play on this season, but next year they hope to have enclosed grounds.

The Plainfield Athletic Club's baseball team went to Somerville Saturday afternoon and defeated the Somersets of that place by the score of 12 to 11. The game was one of the most exciting ones played this year, and by heavy batting the Plainfields won the game. There was a large crowd present rooting for Somerville, and in the last inning the excitement was at fever heat. The Somersets had two men on bases, but by good fielding were unable to get home. The following is the score:

Appointed Notary Public.

Frank J. Blatz, head clerk in the law offices of John H. VanWinkle, has been appointed a notary public by Gov. Griggs and goes to Elizabeth Monday to be sworn in.

—E. E. Anthony on Saturday secured the Jersey Cycle Academy, lighted and heated for one week in October, for the great State convention of the Christian Endeavor. It will seat 800 more than the opera house when the centre surface is filled with folding camp chairs, which have been rented from a New York dealer.

TALK FROM A DELEGATE

E. F. ANTHONY TELLS MORE OF THE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

In All the Services the New Jersey Representatives Took Active Part and Were Spiritually Benefitted Thereby.

Despite the inclement weather last Thursday a fair sized audience gathered at the Park Avenue Baptist church and listened with a great deal of interest to the report given by E.E. Anthony, of Plainfield, Washington Christian Endeavor convention.

A short song service, led by H. J. Martin and a quartette, consisting of Miss Fish, Miss Brokaw, Miss Della Runyon and Miss Adelaide Runyon, opened the service, following which a prayer service was held. Mr. Anthony then read the Scriptures and took his text from a portion of the sixth verse of the fourth chapter of Isaiah: "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord." This text, the speaker said, was the motto of the great convention and was different from other conventions, from the fact that it was very spiritual. There were 1,083 delegates present from New Jersey, who all felt the power of consecration. The singing at the convention was a revelation, with a choir of 1,000 voices, led by the Prince of Singers, Percy Foster. A feature of the gathering, the speaker said, was the stress laid upon the fact that the young people must be educated to know something of public affairs.

Mr. Anthony gave a striking account of a vesper service held at the Capitol, where it was estimated that 72,000 delegates were assembled. He spoke of the choir of 4,000 voices assisted by the Marine Band, and how prominent the Jersey delegates were with their colors of orange and black, and how impressive the service was as it opened with the singing of "Holy! Holy! Holy! Lord, God, Almighty!" The speaker closed his remarks by impressing upon each one the necessity of more faithfulness, devotion and spirituality.

While the hymn "I Live for Him, Who Died for Me" was being sung nearly all present arose and consecrated themselves to God's service. Several gave earnest testimonies at this time.

Mr. Anthony's report in the main was the same given at Trinity Reformed church last Sunday evening, and the above was selected as being something which was not given at that time.

The decorations consisting of American flags formed a pleasing picture and added greatly to the service, which was brought to a close with the Mizpah benediction.

King Bolt Broke.

While one of French's water wagons was passing through Elm place on Monday the king bolt dropped out of position, allowing the front portion of the wagon to drop in the street. The horses are tame and no damage resulted. The wagon held a quantity of water and it was hard to raise. It was lifted, however, with the aid of heavy beams and a jack, and the trouble was soon remedied.

Gave a Bicycle Party.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Drayton, of Franklin place, gave a delightful bicycle party Tuesday evening to a few of their friends. Their pretty residence was illuminated with numerous Japanese lanterns which were strung about the piazza. The party that participated in the ride started from here, while the rest of the guests remained on the piazza and partook of the refreshments that were served to the cyclists on their return.

Preparing For The Convention.

The Christian Endeavor '96 committee met in the Y. M. C. A. rooms Saturday evening and decided to call a meeting for Thursday evening at which time the president of the local union societies, and all committees in convention with the '96 convention, will meet the '96 committee and arrange plans for commencing aggressive work for the convention. The meeting will be held in Trinity Reformed Church.

ROMANCE OF WESTFIELD

TWO BOYS INSPIRED BY YELLOW COVERED NOVELS STEAL A WHEEL.

Deputy Sheriff Russell Was the Victim of the Theft While Eating Peanuts and Watermelon—A Clever Capture Resulted

While the owner of the wheel was enjoying watermelon and peanuts two boys who had left Brooklyn to hunt Indians, captured the wheel and spirlited it away to their camp in the woods at the western end of Eighth street.

The owner of the wheel was Deputy Sheriff Wallace Russell, of Westfield, and last Saturday night he rode over to the office of Justice E. R. Collins, far famed in the bicycle lore of Westfield, on Prospect street, Westfield, and went in to see the Justice. He left his "White Flier" outside while he assisted the Justice and Constable John M. C. Marsh to make havoc on a watermelon and a bag of peanuts. But when the good things had disappeared Russell found that his wheel had disappeared also. The Justice did not know whether to call it a foul or a home run, but he decided to balk the thieves and the three officers of the law investigated. Somebody had seen two boys going down the street on a "White Flier," one on the seat and the other on the step, going towards Plainfield.

Then Sheriff Kyte's assistant hustled over to the telephone office, bemoaning the fact that he had to walk, and called up the police of Plainfield to head off the little tale. A particular point by which the wheel might be recognized was an electric light. Sergeant Kiely was in charge of the night squad when the message arrived and he proceeded to look out for the bicycle thieves. The Sergeant knew that two boys were camping in the woods out West Eighth street, and he visited their tent but found them absent. He placed a special officer from that neighborhood to watch the camp and returned later in the evening to find the two lads and a bicycle at the camp.

The wheel was stolen at about 10:30 o'clock and it was about 11:30 when the police visited the camp. The boys, Roland Lewis, and William Hanold, both sixteen years old and from Brooklyn, left their homes in search of adventure, expecting to kill a few Indians with their small calibre revolvers, and came here Saturday morning.

They established their camp and set up a little tent in which to sleep. They were not satisfied entirely with progress by the ordinary methods of the "knight of the road," but wanted something faster. The bicycle they selected was not exactly "built for two," but still they both could manage to ride it and it was far more comfortable than walking.

They made no resistance to the officer of the law, but gave up their guns and started for the lockup. Visions of long strings of convicts in striped suits, as depicted in the cuts in their yellow-covered literature as "The Poisoned Gum Drop" or "The Candy Woman's Revenge" and similar tales, and of life imprisonment with hard labor, flashed through their minds and, as they marched along in the darkness, they wiped away the signs of weakness on their sleeves.

They were locked up and remained there until Justice Collins and his court arrived this morning. After a little delay the Justice decided it was time to call the game and asked City Judge DeMeza to share the grandstand with him while he umpired the game. The two lads were arraigned before Justice Collins and through Judge DeMeza waived examination and were held for the grand jury. The father of one of the boys was present, but decided not to furnish the required $300 bail at once, but to give the boys a lesson by allowing them to go to jail for a time.

Heroic Act of An Officer.

Patrolman Nicholas Myers is entitled to special credit and an extra button. While patroling his beat in the Third ward about 2 o'clock yesterday morning he discovered two cows which had "wandered from the old feed box," and were grazing peacefully by the wayside. He arrested the cows and took them to Day's livery stable on West Sixth street, where the owner appeared yesterday morning and paid $2 for their safe keeping.

New Freighthouse Not Opened.

The new freighthouse was not open for business last Monday. The delay was caused by Supt. Peddle, of the Central, ordering that some alterations be made. The freighthouse will probably be opened next Monday.

BABIES CAMP OPENED.

A PLACE FOR THE RECUPERATION OF PRATTLING YOUNGSTERS.

The Camp is Not an Elaborate Affair But Will Serve For All Practical Purposes—Those at the Opening Tea.

Far above Plainfield on the summit of the first mountain of the Watchung Mountains, Saturday afternoon, waved a white flag on which was the familiar cross of the King's Daughters in red. The flag was hoisted to the top of a long bark-covered flagpole, which stood close by the well-known Johnston drive that runs the entire length of the First Mountain. Back of the clearing where the flagpole stood, and across the road, there was a little house half-hidden by the trees that surrounded it on all sides. It was a small wooden structure of simple design with a shingled roof and seemed almost lost in the wilderness in which it was placed.

It was a lively place last Saturday afternoon, despite its isolated location, for it was the scene for sick babies, gotten up by the local union of King's Daughter's, and on Saturday afternoon the opening reception was held. Friday was the day set for the opening, but the heavy rain storm necessitated its postponement.

On Saturday there was a misunderstanding about the stages, (not, however, on the part of the ladies,) so some of the would-be visitors were kept away, but those that did come in the stages that did run, in carriages and on bicycles, and there were quite a number that did, found the camp a most delightful place located on one of the choicest parts of the mountain, with a magnificent view equal to that from any part of the Watchung Mountains.

Here, Miss Caroline Rendall, the city nurse supported by the King's Daughters of this city, will bring the sick babies of this city early every morning, look after them during the day and take them home at nightfall greatly refreshed by a day of mountain air. The children will be taken at the request of the local physicians, and the King's Daughters will furnish the transportation.

The house, which is to be the headquarters of this camp, is the gratuitous work of Plainfield men, who gave up their Saturday afternoons to erect this substantial little structure, the material for which was also donated. It is about thirty feet long by twenty feet broad and includes only two rooms. The walls are the plain boards and the bare rafters over head give it a rustic appearance that is carried out on the little veranda which is surrounded by a regular rustic railing. At one end of the room is a great wide rustic fireplace, the gift of Charles W. McCutchen, built out of rough stone in a most artistic manner.

In the house, Miss Rendall will prepare the lunch for her little charges and upon it will also be provided here for those who are to ill to come around. In another year, it is hoped to enlarge the camp and keep children there for several weeks.

Some one, evidently one of the more witty of the builders, has arranged a curiousity that was exhibited to the visitors Saturday. In was in an old cage hung close by the chimney and the inscription beneath it read. "A very rare specimen of Bat (Pholus Withit) found in this chimney. Please approach it carefully in order not to frighten it." And as the visitor carefully peeped in he or she discovered a brick laying on the bottom of the cage.

This was not the only attraction Saturday, for the visitors were treated to delicious lemonade and wafers, Mrs. W. L. O. Glenny, president of the local union of King's Daughters, was present and had a general supervision over the affair. She was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. Frank S. Martin, Mrs. A. Y. Honeyman, Mrs. Isaac N. Field Mrs. Francis C. Harder, Miss Lillian A. Force and Miss Mabel A. Woodruff.

The pretty flag that was visible from as far off as upper Park avenue, was the gift of Mrs. M. S. Simpson, wife of City Physician Simpson.

$25 was turned over to the King's Daughters Saturday afternoon, $22 of which was made at a fair given at the residence of William Barlow, on Prospect place, last week. There is now $127 in the Local Union treasury with all expenses paid but unless more funds are received this will soon disappear in paying running expenses of the camp.

SUSPENDED IN MID-AIR.

PERILOUS POSITION OF A TELEPHONE LINEMAN FOR FIVE MINUTES.

By a Mistake When He Was Released He Fell to the Ground and Was Unconscious—Injuries are Temporary.

Suspended in midair, head downward, was William Spiker for five long and weary minutes until his fellow-workmen came to his rescue and then, instead of being lowered carefully to the ground, a mistake was made and he fell headfirst on the ground below.

This accident occurred Tuesday afternoon on West Fourth street, between Park and Arlington avenues, where a gang of linemen, under the direction of Superintendent J. C. Hankinson, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, were stringing a new cable on the telephone poles of West Fourth street.

There are already two cables on West Fourth street, which run to New Brunswick by the way of South Plainfield. Spiker was at work among the network of wires making a splice in the big cable. He was sitting in a sling of rope fastened to the other cable with his feet resting on a feed trolley wire.

"Be careful" said Superintendent Hankinson, "there's an electric light wire behind you," and the man swinging above him replied, "All right." But the Superintendent had just walked down the street when Spiker leaned back too far and the back of his neck struck the electric light wire. There was a gasp and then Spiker's pincers fell from his nerveless hands and the next instant he was dangling by the rope that had been his seat. In falling it had become entangled about his knees and there he hung twenty-five feet above the sidewalk. The electric light wire was supposed to be insulated, but the insulation did not prove effective and it is supposed, no one really knows, that a current was formed between the electric light wire and the trolley feed wire.

When the passersby saw Spiker's terrible predicament, they hurried to the scene. His fellow linesmen were the first to realize the danger of it and they soon procured two ladders by which they reached the cable. A rope was thrown over the cable and the linesman on the ladder ordered to make it fast to his waist. Through a misunderstanding the rope was thrown back across the cable again leaving a loop hang over. The end was made fast to Spiker and then the rope, in which his feet were entangled, was cut. The loop pulled over the cable and to the horror of the spectators, Spiker fell head first into the mud close beside the company's wagon that contained the apparatus for stringing the cable.

The bronzed face of the lineman above turned pale with horror as he realized that some fatal mistake had been made.

Spiker was unconscious when picked up by his fellow workmen who set about trying to restore him. The ambulance was called and the apparently lifeless form was placed in it and taken to Muhlenburg Hospital.

Spiker did not recover consciousness until seven o'clock last evening and then his condition rapidly improved. There was a long burn on the back of his neck where it is supposed that he touched the electric light wire.

His hands were badly burned, almost to the bone, and it is thought that he probably seized a live wire to retain his balance.

He lives in Newark with his wife and child and expects to return there this afternoon. He is still very weak, however, although much improved.

Rev. Father O'Hanlon, of Trenton, who has been visiting in town, returned home yesterday.

Grace Smith, of Park avenue, is entertaining her friend, Miss Jennie Krows, from up the Hudson.

Miss Mamie McGrath, of New York, has returned home after a visit with the Misses Carty, of Orchard place.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

A DUTCHMAN ON A TEAR

AN INEBRIATED BOLOGNA SAUSAGE MAKER FOUGHT TWO OFFICERS.

Made a Nuisance of Himself at Vogeler's Market and Refused to Submit to Arrest by Police Not in Uniform.

A wild-eyed man, struggling in the grasp of two others, one of whom had a cut nearly four inches long in his neck, was the sight that appeared to Patrolman Mattox as he ran into West Second street from Park avenue Tuesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock.

It was an unusual incident for Plainfield's quiet streets, and there was great excitement for a few moments in consequence. To a stranger it looked like something serious, but Patrolman Mattox recognized the two assailants as Special Officers William Dagnall and Robert Davis, who were trying to arrest the third participant in the scrap.

The offender in the case was struggling for might and main and swearing lustily in German. His name is Frank Littenbauer, and has been employed by A. G. Vogeler, of the Union market, as a bologna maker.

For the last three days, according to Mr. Vogeler's statement, Littenbauer has been hanging around the place in a drunken condition. Yesterday afternoon he got his pay and then started to abuse his former employer. The liquor had left him in a fighting mood, so Mr. Vogeler sent for an officer. Then Littenbauer realized that it was time to take his departure, and started down Exchange alley after firing a volley of oaths at Vogeler in particular and the world in general. The special officers followed and declared him under arrest. The German bologna maker didn't care for any declarations, however, and the officers had to use force.

They dragged their prisoner up to Second street and along as far as Kurzhals' barber shop, when Littenbauer wrenched away from Davis. In doing so one of the bologna knives, in the package he carried, struck Dagnal in the side of the neck, making a gash about four inches long but not at all deep. Dagnal got a grip on his prisoner's throat and was choking his Dutch oaths into a muffled roar when Mattox snapped the nippers onto Littenbauer's wrists. He was then taken to the lockup and spent the night in jail.

This morning the sausage man was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and resisting arrest. He pleaded guilty and paid $6 for his fun.

CRANK AFTER BONDS.

Armed Man Demanded $2,000,000 in a Railway Office.

About 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, as Supt. Wm. H. Peddle, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, was seated at his desk in the office in the Communipaw station, Jersey City, a wild-eyed man of seedy appearance entered the door and walked up to his desk. In a rather husky voice he told Mr. Peddle that he had come to demand $2,000,000 in Central Railroad bonds and in Baltimore and Ohio bonds.

He told the crank that they did not keep large sums of money or railroad bonds there, and that if he would step over to the office of Supt. Charles A. Thompson, of the Motor Power House, he might be accommodated.

The crank, who had one hand engaged in toying with the iron slung-shot in his coat pocket, thanked Supt. Peddle, walked out and went direct to the power house.

When the crank entered he told Mr. Thompson that Supt. Peddle had sent him to get $2,000,000 in railroad bonds and that he didn't want to be kept waiting long for them. The man readily followed Mr. Thompson into the office of Chief Detective J. J. Large, of the railroad company, who resides on East Front street, this city. Before the crank could realize it or make any use of his iron weapon, Chief Detective Large had made him a prisoner. He was taken to the court of Police Justice Potts, who committed the man pending an investigation as to his sanity.

We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. Leaky Gas Mains.

For sometime past residents in the neighborhood of Fourth street and Central avenue have complained of the strong odor of gas which emanated from the gas mains there. The difficulty was remedied so there will be no more cause for complaint from this source, at least.

THE CITY SOLONS BUSY.

SEVERAL IMPORTANT MATTERS CONSIDERED BY THE COUNCIL.

Petition for the Erection of a Garbage Disposal Plant—A New Street Sprinkling Ordinance—Commissioners Make Report.

Councilman Fisk was the centre of attraction at the regular meeting of the City Council Monday night when he appeared in duck trousers, and in the absence of President See, Mr. Fisk called the meeting to order, after which Mr. Ginna was made president pro tem and Geo. Wean was made clerk pro tem in the absence of Clerk MacMurray, who was kept away owing to the illness of his wife. The City Clerk appeared later in the evening and took his place. All of the Council except President See answered to the roll call, and after the reading of the previous minutes a petition was received from ex-Councilman L. S. Spangenberg and others asking for a crosswalk at the corner of Woodland and South avenues. The matter was referred to the street committee.

A petition was received from the Plainfield Sanitary Company, signed by E. H. Pope, S. G. Smith and L. S. Spangenberg, asking Council for the privilege of erecting a sanitary plant for the disposal of garbage. They also wanted to make a contract with the city for one year to receive all garbage. The matter was referred to the water and sewer committee.

The Board of Education asked the Council to take steps toward flagging Berckman and East Second streets in the vicinity of the proposed new school building. This was referred to the street committee.

J. L. Blackford, who was recently dismissed from Gazelle Engine Company, petitioned Council to give him a hearing, as he had not been given one. The matter was placed in the hands of the fire committee.

Residents of La Grande avenue asked for a two-way hydrant to be located on their avenue, 100 feet west of Woodland avenue. The matter was handed over to the fire committee.

Residents of Carleton avenue petitioned the Council to arrange the flagging ordinance so that it would include Carleton avenue, and the committee on streets will look into the matter and report.

The insurance policy held by E. C. Mulford for $4,000 on the city property, located at 1728 West Front street, was received and filed.

Postal Telegraph Company asked for the privilege of erecting a clock in the city, which will be fourteen feet in height, with a base of 2x10 and 2x6. It is proposed to erect a pole with a ball attachment which will cause the latter to drop every day at 12 o'clock noon, similar to the one used in New York city. The Company want to locate it at the head of Park avenue. The matter was referred to the street committee with power to act.

Assessor J. A. Hubbard set Tuesday, August 18th, as the time for the Council to examine his books, and Mr. Dumont moved that when Council adjourned it be to meet on that date, which was so ordered.

The city physician reported that nineteen cases had been treated during the month. Inspector of buildings, T. O. Doane, reported that twenty permits had been issued since his last report. The overseer of the poor stated in his report that there are now thirty seven persons being cared for by the city. During the past month four have died, and one abandoned child had been given a home in the west. Mr. Marx stated that there seemed to be some misunderstanding as in regards to the pauper burial grounds in the Methodist cemetery, and he would report later on the subject. The city treasurer's and collector's reports were received and filed. Mr. Dumont offered a resolution which provided for the borrowing of $4,000 for the general fund and $1,000 for the fire fund in anticipation of taxes. The resolution prevailed.

Mr. Moore, of the license committee, ported that Neil Scott's application for a liquor license conformed to all the requirements, but the committee did not recommend that it be granted, and it was accordingly refused. Mr. Serrell introduced a sprinkling ordinance which was adopted, ordered engrossed and advertised. It provides for a certain kind of sprinkler, and a violation of the same provides for a $20 fine.

Another ordinance was introduced by Mr. Serrell which provided for ash, garbage and stone wagons. Messrs Dumont, Fisk, Barrows, Frost and Moore objected to the restrictions set forth as being too severe, and after a lively discussion the ordinance was

HOWARD GROBES HAS NOT BEEN SEEN SINCE LAST SATURDAY.

Has Been Married Only Seven Months and Seemed to Be Getting Along Nicely—May Have Left on Account of Family Troubles

A number of people will remember that a fashionable wedding among the colored people took place in Bethel chapel, Tuesday evening, February 11th, when Howard Grobes and Miss Alice Lewis were married in the presence of a large assemblage. Scarcely seven months have passed and the two are now many miles apart. Grobes, at the time of his marriage, was head waiter at the Albion Hotel. He was thought very well of and liked by all. Sometime later he left there and took a position with S. C. Rogers, at his East Front street restaurant. His home was on Arlington avenue, where he and his wife lived with Mrs. Grobes' mother. Saturday night Howard went home and dressed himself in his best clothes, after which he left the house. He did not tell his folks where he was going, neither did he tell his employer, Mr. Rogers. That is the last he was seen about Plainfield and his whereabouts are unknown. It has been intimated that everything did not go smoothly at home and that Mr. Grobes was unable to provide for more than his own family. He worked steadily at the restaurant. His relatives are much worried regarding him and they have not the slightest idea where he is.

FRIGHTENED ON THE ROAD.

Two Young Plainfielders Had an Exciting Sunday Night Adventure.

H. C. McVoy and Charles Stephens, of this city, had an exciting experience Sunday night about twelve o'clock while returning from New Brunswick with a horse and buggy. They were riding along at a good pace when they passed through the outskirts of Metuchen. Suddenly a man jumped in the road and attempted to catch the horse's bridle, but Stephens gave an unearthly yell. Mr. McVoy was driving and he spoke to his horse sharply, causing him to make a plunge to the opposite side of the road. They escaped this man, and had gone but a short distance when two men attempted the same trick. They did not succeed, however, and the occupants of the wagon reached home safely. They had no weapons of defense and were well frightened by their experience.

Meeting of the Board of Health.

President Rockafellow and Messrs. H. O. Newman and L. W. Serrell, constituting a quorum of the Board of Health, met in the Mayor's office in the City Hall building Monday night. But little business other than routine was transacted. It was reported that no contagious diseases had existed in the city so far as known within the past thirty days. This is considered something remarkable by the board when it is taken into consideration the fact that diphtheria is raging in Jersey City and other nearby towns. According to print there are at the present time 163 cases of the dreaded disease in Jersey City alone.

In the City Court.

Two cases came up in the city court before Judge DeMeza Monday They were Charles Williams and Albert G. Cook. The pair had a "scrap" in the alley next to the Salvation Army Hall last evening and when arrested gave the officers some little trouble. $5 or twenty days was Judge DeMeza's sentence and they took the latter.

Death of Mrs. Karbaum.

Sunday evening Mrs. Susan Karbaum, of Netherwood avenue, died of consumption at the age of sixty-one years. Her funeral will be held this evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of her son-in-law, John P. Lowenhaupt, 145 Netherwood avenue, and interment will be made in Brooklyn tomorrow morning.

Five Applications for Membership.

At a regular conclave of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., held last evening, five applications were received for knighthood and membership to the Commandery. Plans are rapidly assuming definite shape for the annual field day to be held here in October.

Crop Report.

The following is John Neagle's crop report this week for Plainfield:

Heavy storm on the 27th did no damage except lodging wheat oats, but makes cutting harder now; harvesting progressing; corn, potatoes & tomatoes are growing fine; cool. Average temperature, 76 degrees; rainfall, 1.46 inches.

It doesn't matter much whether sick headache, biliousness, indigestion and constipation are caused by neglect or by unavoidable circumstances; DeWitt's Little Early Risers will speedily cure them all. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

GETTING DOWN TO WORK

DETAILS BEING PLANNED FOR THE STATE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

One of the Most Important Features Will Be an Immense Parade of the Junior Members—The Music to Be Special.

Endeavorers of Plainfield are beginning to wake up to the fact that the convention, towards which we are all looking, is only two months off. Very much is to be done in that time, and the various committees are now organized and will soon commence aggressive work.

The hall and decoration committee, which, as has already been announced, have secured the cycle academy, and intend to make the hall as attractive as possible, with the intermingling of the State colors—orange and black—and the convention colors—green and white.

A corps of well trained, uniformed ushers will be in attendance, so that it is hoped that no difficulty will be experienced in seating as many as the hall will hold. An Endeavor choir of 500 voices will soon be organized under the leadership of Wm. MacClymont. These, with the four Park sisters, and a visit from the Ratgers Glee Club, will make the hall ring with the stirring convention hymns. Notice of the rehearsals of the choir will be given through the newspapers.

The convention badge is a celluloid scroll, upon which is a picture of Washington Rock and the words "Y. P. S. C. E., Tenth Annual New Jersey State Convention, Plainfield, October 7th, 8th and 9th, 1896." The orange and black ribbon upon which the badge is fastened, is secured to the delegate by a pin in the shape of a mosquito.

The work of the assignment committee is by far the most difficult, for to secure homes for five thousand delegates is no easy task. If the various societies in town will send to the committee the names and addresses of those whom they know will receive delegates, it will do much to lighten their burden. A list of those who comprise the several committees will be published later.

Nor are the Juniors forgotten in the preparations which are being made. Some of the brightest of them will act as pages or guides, to the host of visiting Endeavorers. On Friday afternoon, a grand parade will be given by all the Juniors in the city and vicinity. The will form near the Crescent Avenue church, march through some of the principal streets singing as they go and enter the convention hall in a body.

Here they will be addressed by prominent Junior workers, and the meeting will close by a consecration service and roll-call of societies.

In all our preparations for this grand gathering in the fall, let us not forget that our work will count for naught, unless we have the blessing and guidance of our divine Master. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts," will be the underlying thought of the whole convention. Let us keep in mind this thought and remember in our prayers each day the gathering from which we hope so much, praying that our hearts may be prepared for a mighty blessing and that God's Spirit may rest upon us with great power.

A Missionary in Trouble.

Whitfield Frazee, head "blower" in Prof. Guttman's orchestra, is minus a cent. "Whit" lives at 703 South avenue, and he brought a feline out from Washington Market a short time ago which he named "Slim Jim" on account of the cat's activity in crawling through knotholes after spring chickens. Sunday night the cat went out to perform some missionary work, and early next morning it showed up at the house with only three feet and no tail. The cat had been caught in a muskrat trap.

Donations to the Fresh Air Camp.

Donations for the Children's Camp have been received from the following: Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. Dupee, Mrs. A. D. V. Honeyman, Mrs. Stover, Mrs. Josiah Browne, Mrs. Gregg, Mrs. Harder, Mrs. Glenny, Mrs. Schermerhorn, Mrs. Mall, Mrs. Pope, Miss Dunlap, Mr. Gavett, Mr. Mumford.

Don't Stop for Hot Weather.

There were twenty members of the Primary Teachers' Union present at the meeting held Monday afternoon. Mrs. Baker, of Westfield, taught the lesson, and Mrs. Powelson led the devotional exercises. A short routine business meeting was held at the close.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

RANSACKED THE HOUSE.

A DAYLIGHT BURGLAR CAUSES HAVOC IN A BOROUGH HOUSEHOLD.

Entered Through a Second-Story Window But Stole Nothing But a Small Sum of Money Which He Found There.

Burglars seem to be operating in the borough without any fear of being molested. Monday another robbery in broad daylight was reported, but this time the thief was frightened away before much plunder was secured.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Van Nest live at 144 Duer street, and yesterday afternoon, between 2 and 5 o'clock, the house was vacant.

Some mean thief climbed to an upper window by means of the verandа, opened the blinds and entered the house. Although the neighbors were at home at the time nothing unusual was noticed by them and it was not until Mr. and Mrs. VanNest arrived home that they knew their house had been entered.

Furniture, household utensils, etc., on the ground floor, had been strewn promiscuously about, and in the sleeping apartments, bureau drawers had been ransacked and the contents thrown on the floor. Closets had also been thoroughly overhauled, but so far as known only a small amount of money, evidently the only thing the thief or thieves were after, was taken. There is as yet no clue that would lead to the identity of the thief or thieves.

On Their Way to Sea Girt.

The "non-commissioned" staff of the Fourth Regiment, N. J. V., of Jersey City, arrived here at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning on wheels. They were on the way to Jamesburg, where they are to spend two days and from there they go to Sea Girt for a week's stay. The party left Jersey City about 7 a. m., and only stopped over here on account of a puncture to one of the riders wheel. The necessary repairs to the bicycle were made at F. L. C. Martin's. The riders who were in uniform gave their names and titles as Sergeant-major Scott and Johnson, Commissary Schoonover, Ordinance Sergeant Grossman, and Standard Bearer and Bugler Wilsch.

Trolley Talk.

We have it on the best authority, all the final details were arranged last week, in New York, for the building of the trolley line from Somerville to Bound Brook and thence to New Brunswick, and that the material has been ordered; and the work will be commenced September 1st, and prosecuted with vigor. These lines will open up valuable property and will be the means of enhancing the value of property along its lines.—Real Estate News.

Midsummer Night's Dream.

Mrs. Ruggles, of East Third street, is quite a chicken fancier. It is said that a few weeks ago she paid the exorbitant price of $2 a dozen for a setting of eggs, and when the chicks hatched out Saturday a burly tomcat climbed the garden fence and devoured six of them. Four little ones are left, and they are all roosters, so they will be ready to crow after the next election.

Auxiliary for Uniforms.

The colored Republicans of this city are arranging for a meeting some evening this week to start the ball rolling for their new campaign uniforms and the cost attached thereto. Some fifty colored voters are already enrolled.

Contracts Awarded.

The contracts for the work to be done on the Bryant School were given out yesterday. Chas. Wilson will do the carpenter work and D. W. Littell will do the plumbing and heating.

Many a day's work is lost by sick headache, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most effectual pill for overcoming such difficulties. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

ANXIOUS TO BE JANITORS

BOARD OF EDUCATION HAVE ENOUGH APPLICATIONS TO SELECT FROM.

One Man's Claim is That He Has a Family of Five Children, and All of the Petitions Were Signed by Prominent Citizens.

The members of the City Board of Education met in regular session in the Stillman High School building, Monday night, with President Dr. J. B. Probasco in the chair. The full board was present, and the business transacted was of a routine nature.

The following claims were presented and if found correct were ordered paid: Joseph Sattels, $23; Jones & Co., $50; A. M. Griffin, $9.45; Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co., $4.18; J. C. Pope & Co., $29.25.

A communication was received and filed from John Johnson, stating that the back school taxes to the extent of $3,276.90, had been collected and deposited to the credit of the Board of Education.

Petitions and communications were then in order, and under this caption the following were received for the janitorship of the new Lincoln School, each application being accompanied with recommendations: John H. Smith, aged fifty-two years and the father of five children. It was signed by Nelson Runyon, E. R. Pope and A. M. Runyon. The application was also endorsed by a number of prominent citizens of Doylestown, Pa., where he originally lived.

William G. Gray's application was endorsed by J. Evarts Tracy, Charles Abbott and others.

James Armstrong in his application claimed to have been employed seven years by the Schepflin clothing firm on West Front street. He now resides on Fifth street, but in order to facilitate matters he will move near the building. A lengthy petition was submitted setting forth the applicants good qualifications, and it was signed by such representative citizens as E. R. Pope, E. C. Mulford, O. T. Waring, E. L. Finch, J. B. Dumont, J. W. Murray, E. N. Erickson, Rev. Dr. Rodman, Dr. E. W. Hodges, Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, George W. Rockefellow and others.

F. W. Leithauser also petitioned the Board for the janitorship and his application was signed by John J. Kenney, E. M. Laing, H. A. Weber, P. Swain, H. A. Pope, J. A. Smith, James E. Martine and others.

Mr. Leithauser lives in close proximity to the school and he offers to perform any work about the school building in connection with his trade, besides doing janitor duty. All of the above applications were filed.

Two small outstanding accounts against the Franklin and Bryant schools were reported and ordered paid.

Mr. Lounsbury read a petition or request rather, which is to be presented to the Council, asking for flagging on East Second and Berckman streets.

After deducting current expenditures, the finance committee reported a balance of $5,309 at hand.

Mr. Lounsbury, chairman of the building committee, reported on the proposed plans and subsequent alterations in the closet arrangements at the Bryant and Stillman Schools. It was decided to proceed with the work at the Bryant School and wait until the Board shall have sanctioned procedure in the matter of the High School. The entire matter was tabled for the present.

The Board then adjourned subject to a call by the chairman.

AN OLD MAN DROWNED.

A Raritan Man Stricken With Paralysis Falls in the Water and Drowns.

The body of Patrick Moran, fifty-eight years old, was found in the watercower at Raritan yesterday morning.

Moran was an old and respected citizen, and was for twenty-five years the night watchman at the woolen mills. He only relinquished his place six months ago, when he was stricken with paralysis. He had been missing since Saturday night, and suicide was suspected, as he was unable to work and had some family troubles. County Physician Wagoner has decided that death was accidental, as he believes that Moran was stricken with paralysis while walking along the bank of the canal. No inquest will be held.

There May Be Trouble.

James Babbitt, of 130 East Fourth street, and his neighbor, Louis Louie, who occupy flats in the same house, are at war with each other, and the whole matter is likely to be ventilated in the city court at an early date. Babbitt lives on the upper floor, and as there is no veranda in front of the house, he and his children are obliged to sit in the lower doorway or on the sidewalk, and on this account the trouble arises.

NO PLACE FOR TRAMPS

WANDERING WILLIES DO NOT GET THE GLAD HAND HERE.

A Gang Took Refuge in Freight Cars and Were Hauled Out of the Grasp of the Police—Stopped Over in Dunellen.

This is the season of the year when "Wandering Willies," "Weary Waggies" and the other knights of the road are enjoying their summer outing in the country. New Jersey is quite a favorite resort for these connoisseurs of the back door collations, and hither they flock, but Plainfield is to most of them an unwelcome place, as ordinances are too strictly enforced, and they usually pass by on the other side or hide in a freight car. Early this morning a crowd of about eighteen or twenty of these travelers invaded a freight train just outside this city and took possession of it, not interfering with the crew, however, in the performance of their duty. The train stopped here and Fred Barker, night operator for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, learning of the invasion, used his police whistle to call an officer to the scene. Roundsman Frederickson responded promptly but, by that time, the train was in motion, and it was too late to remove the uninvited guests.

A party of tramps, it is not known whether they were the same or not, visited a barn near Dunellen and spent part of the night there and departed, accompanied by several stray blankets that seemed to have an uncontrollable fondness for tramp life.

TO RECUPERATE IN THE BASTILE.

A Professional Beggar Arrested Across the Brook.

A most dejected and forlorn looking specimen of humanity was apprehended on Rockview avenue last Thursday by Chief Marshal Wilson. The man was making his way along that thoroughfare when the chief stopped and questioned him as to where he was going and what he was doing around here. The stranger at first said he was on his way to New York State, but on close questioning the chief learned that the stranger had been going from house to house demanding money and clothes.

At the station house the chief found an outfit such as is carried by professional beggars. He gave his name as John Dorner. Later in the morning he was brought before Justice Crosley who gave him his choice between $10 or twenty days. He will recuperate for the next twenty days at Somerville.

SECOND EUCHRE PARTY.

Revere House Guests Enjoy an Evening With the Cards.

The second progressive euchre party was given last Wednesday at the Revere House, and was a delightful affair.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Plass, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Halsey, Mr. and Mrs. George B. De Revere, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Harbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Boise, Mrs. Henry Brevoort, Mrs. Roome, Mrs. Fowler, Miss Belle Halsey, Miss Maud Fowler, J. Hamilton Jaffray, Jr., Harry Halsey and Herbert Plass.

The first lady's prize was won by Mrs. George B. DeRevere, second prize by Mrs. H. C. Plass. Harry Halsey received first gentleman's prize and D. F. Harbaugh second prize. The consolation prize was won by Quincy Boise.

After the game refreshments were served, and dancing followed. Great praise is due Miss Halsey, who managed the affair.

REVIVAL IN SHOOTING.

Amateur Shooters' League Adopt a Handicap System.

The handicap system adopted by the New Jersey Amateur Trap Shooters' League at its last team contest will no doubt bring about a revival in shooting.

The teams are handicapped in accordance with their previous showing. In this way novice shots are encouraged. The trouble in the past has been that novices were pitted against crack shots on equal terms with disastrous results.

It requires a few years practice before a new man becomes proficient in handling the breechloader. Meanwhile he is entitled to some incentive, such as a handicap of birds or in the way of distance when facing the traps.

Took an Unpremeditated Bath.

A. W. Brown, the North avenue barber, had an experience yesterday while going home to dinner that was far from pleasant. He lives on Elm place and he frequently goes through Stiger's alley and crosses Tier's dam. He took that route yesterday and the water being higher than usual he found it necessary to step carefully on the dry stones in passing over. He got along all right until he stepped on a round stone with rolling proclivities. Quick as a flash he found himself in the water, and before he could extricate himself he received a pretty thorough soaking. He succeeded in getting on dry land, when he hurried home and made a change of clothing. Mr. Brown, it is safe to say, will be cautious in the future when he attempts to cross the dam.

A SUCCESSFUL STRIKE.

CARPENTERS ON A GARWOOD FACTORY TO GET MORE WAGES.

Asked for an Increase From $2.25 to $2.50, and After Stopping Work, It was Granted—Most All of Them Plainfielders.

Dissatisfied with their wages of $2.25 for nine hours work a day, thirty-two carpenters employed in the construction of the factory of the Hercelus Bicycle Tubing Company at Garwood went on a strike this morning. The men wanted a raise of twenty-five cents a day.

The men, twenty-seven of whom are from this city and five from Newark, have been working for two weeks on the building. A portion of them were getting $2.50 a day, but the majority only $2.25. They were dissatisfied with this scale and wanted uniform pay of $2 50. Recently a meeting of the carpenters was held in this city and it was decided to demand an increase of twenty five cents a day for all who were not receiving $2 50. If it was refused they decided to go on a strike. A committee of three were appointed as follows to present their claims to Hedden & Son, of Newark, the contractors: Louis Donavan, Andrew Mattis and Charles Johnson.

Before the time for work to commence this morning the committee approached Superintendent Samuel Wright and made the demands. He said he had no authority to grant them, and the men refused to go to work. Word was sent to the contractors and they came to the scene of the strike and listened to what the dissatisfied workmen had to offer. The work could not be stopped and they agreed to the concessions. Part of the carpenters went to work immediately and the rest will start tomorrow morning. Only seventeen out of the thirty-two are union men, but they all acted together with the exception of S. P. Hoffman, of this city, the forman and a journeyman by the name of Schooley, who refused to go out with them.

Wednesday the hod-carriers on the same building struck for an increase of twenty-five cents a day, making their wages $2 for nine hours. Their demands were granted.

SAILORS, NOT COWBOYS.

RASH YOUTHS WHO START FOR THE PARARIE WILL GO TO SEA.

Inspired By Dime Novels They Ran Away From Home, and at Westfield Commenced Their Depredations—Now Ended

Roland Leveridge and William Hanold, the two young fellows who were arrested in this city for attempting to steal a bicycle at Westfield last Saturday, were arraigned before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth Wednesday morning on three charges, one for breaking, entering and stealing, a second for petit larceny and the third for grand larceny.

The pair belong in Brooklyn, and went to a place back of Westfield, where they camped. They lived on what they could steal from the town. One night they broke into a store and stole some cash from the till, and on another occasion cut a tent in half and ran away with one portion of it. They robbed garden patches and hen coops and committed all sorts of depredations.

When the lads were brought before the court their parents were present and promised Judge McCormick that if the boys were let go they would see to it that the lads were not given an opportunity to repeat their misdeeds. It was their intention to have the lads placed on a schoolship.

Judge McCormick gave the prisoners a severe lecture, and then suspended sentence.

A DESIGN SELECTED.

Mr. Tracy the Architect for the New Clubhouse for the Hillside Club.

The design for the new clubhouse of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has been selected and all that now remains to be done before the house is started is to arrange for the bonding of the club. A special meeting of the board of governors of the club was held last evening at the club house on Watchung avenue, and plans submitted by A. L. C. Marsh, A. D. Shepard, Jr., and Evarts Tracy, were considered. They were carefully examined and after considerable deliberation the board selected the design of Evarts Tracy. No other important business was transacted.

One of the new by-laws of the club says that there shall be no playing on the tennis courts or golf links of the club on Suddays.

No Trace of a Wife-Beater.

A bicyclist from out-of-town rode in from Avon Park, late Saturday evening, and notified the police to the effect that a strange man was beating his wife there. Officers Flanagan and Flynn responded to the call, but when they reached the place neither of the combatants could be found.

—A horse became frightened at the trolley Friday afternoon, near Evona, and ran away. The horse broke its leg and had to be shot. It belonged to a man living on Clinton avenue.

ENTIRETY OF CONTRACT.

DECISION ON THE DOMESTIC'S RIGHT TO QUIT AND RECEIVE PAY.

When There is a Contract to Work by the Month the Full Period Must be Continued to Entitle Employe to Wages.

Another case, which is of particular interest to every employer of domestics in this city, was brought up in Justice Mosher's court last Thursday morning in the action of Meke Meysa against Samuel A. Cruikshank.

The complainant was a Japanese chef employed by Mr. Cruikshank April 29th last to serve in his household at a salary of $30 per month. He remained with the family for two months and received his pay at the end of each month. On June 29th he received his compensation for the second month, and started on the third month with the understanding that everything was satisfactory.

After he had worked twelve days on the third month, Meysa decided to leave the employ of Mr. Cruikshank immediately. Since he was employed by the month, the latter told him that he would have to finish the month in his employ. This Meysa refused to do, and when he ceased work he was refused the pay for his services from the time the third month of his service began.

He brought suit through Lawyer Arthur Miller for what he claimed was his hire. Mr. Cruikshank at once retained Counselor McClure to defend the case, and in court yesterday Mr. McClure made the claim that under the law of entirity of contract, the complainant had no claim for services on Mr. Cruikshank as he had violated his agreement by quitting before the month was finished. He argued that Meysa had broken his agreement with the defendant without just cause and now asked to be remunerated for services he had given to Mr. Cruikshank in part performance of the contract under which he labored. To hold the defendant responsible would be to aid an act of bad faith. After voluntarily and without cause making an infraction of the contract which he agreed too when he was employed, and after the employer stood ready to perform his part of the stipulations, abrogated his right to the money for the twelve days.

After hearing the testimony and argument, the court, following the leading case in the Supreme Court of this State (Beach against Mullins 5 vr 344) and other cases in New York and England quoted by Counselor McClure, said: "That the law was well settled in this State, and in fact every other State in this country and in England, that hiring for a month at a fixed sum made an entire contract and that being an entire contract there can be no apportionment. The contract, therefore, must be fulfilled before wages can be legally demanded. The contract not having been fulfilled, and because of no fault of the defendant, judgment must be for the defendant."

The justice further held, quoting Spencer, J. 13 Johns, 364: "It would be an alarming doctrine to hold that the plaintiff might violate the contract, and because he chose to do so, make his own infraction of the agreement the bases for an action."

Judgment was given for the defendant.

Death Recalls a Scandal.

W. B. Avery, who at one time resided on Westervelt avenue, and was in the Custom House brokerage business, was found dead in bed in the Ashland house, in New York City a few days ago. His death was caused by a congestive chill. It will be remembered that Mr. Avery's home was broken up and a scandal caused by the disappearance of his wife with John Gable, an upholsterer, who was hanger on around the engine houses a few years ago, Gable deserting a wife and family and leaving them in destitute circumstances. Mr. Avery was a very modest man and well liked by many citizens in this city.

—Elmer E. Garretson has leased John T. Case's house on Vine street, and will reside there after Sept. 1st.

—Jacob Keller's new residence on Harrison street, in the borough, will be completed and ready for occupancy by Sept. 1st.

—According to the grade established the crosswalks at the intersection of Park avenue and Fifth street are six inches out of plumb.

—Third size stone and sand have been sprinkled on Liberty street in low spots, adding to the improved appearance of the street.

—A horse belonging to A. L. Cadmus of South Second street, fell when coming down from the old freighthouse, Friday night, and was unable to rise. The animal finally had to be killed. It was thirty years of age, next to the oldest in town.

—The wardens of the Trinity Reformed church have decided not to close the church on the last Sunday in this month for cleaning as usual as was intended, and as Dr. Biggs has no engagement for that date, he will supply the pulpit for five Sundays instead of four.

CROSSMAN IN THE TOILS.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE NETHERWOOD SANITARIUM BACKER.

It is Alleged That He Misappropriated Funds to His Own Purposes—Arrested and Then Released on Bail.

The arrest and incarceration of Greenleaf W. Crossman, of the Townsend Sanitarium Company, vice-president of the Empire Loan and Investment Company, 253 Broadway, New York, and his subsequent release on bail, occurred Wednesday morning at his home, 173 West Seventy-eighth street, New York city. His wife went his bail for $2,500.

He was arrested on complaint of Rudolph Lerch, manager of the Netherwood Sanitarium, and Carl Davidson, through their counsel, A. P. Miller, of this city, and August Reymert, of 31 Pine street, New York.

The action was brought against him for obtaining money under false representation and misappropriating funds for his personal use, he claiming to have purchased the Netherwood Hotel. He also represented that he was about to purchase another, the Halcyon Hall, Millbrook, Duchess county, N. Y., one of the most magnificent buildings in the State. The defendant claimed that he had bought and paid for the Netherwood Hotel, $85,000.

The preliminary hearing in the case is to come up in Centre Street Police Court tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Rudolph Lerch has a five years contract and was sent out here to the hotel with the necessary help to fix it up properly. When the time came to pay his help their first month's salary he was told, and it was a strict understanding from the start, that the money had to be forthcoming to pay help and other necessary expenses. But it was found that Mr. Crossman had expended the money for private purposes, loaned to friends and acquaintances, paid old bills, and by doing so put the manager "in a hole," so to speak. After the money, $1,400, had been invested by Mr. Lerch, he found Mr. Crossman had been up in supplementary proceedings and swore that he was not worth one dollar.

FOR ALL EXEMPTS NOW.

THE RETIRED FIREMEN MAKE IMPORTANT AMENDMENT TO BY-LAWS.

Borough Exempts Can Now Become Members of the City Organization as Well as Can Any of the Retired Fire Fighters.

The Exempt Firemen's Association met Wednesday and transacted important business. The constitution was so changed that all exempt firemen in North Plainfield can legally become members of the Plainfield Association and any fireman moving to Plainfield from any out of town place can join the association, providing he has served his time, and is thereby exempt. The association has been considering for the past month the advisability of such a change and last evening the report of the committee was adopted unanimously. This is the first association of the kind that has thrown open its doors and made like concessions and the change is a most commendable one. There are a large number of exempt firemen in the borough, but they have no association and they do not feel like going to the expense of organizing one and furnishing quarters. Under these conditions the action of the Plainfield association should prove a great benefit to the North Plainfield exempts. It now remains to be seen how they will receive the new order of things.

AVON PARK.

Ellis A. Campbell has recovered from a short illness.

Miss Marie Smith, of Plainfield, is spending the week with Miss Loretta Quinn.

Charles C. Brower is entertaining his father and mother from Poughkeepsie.

The two large trees in front of the residence of Edward Campbell, that were killed by the recent fire, have been cut down.

Thieves tried to raid the chicken coop of Edward Campbell, last Thursday night, but the appearance of the owner with a shot gun, speedily drove them away.

Charles Wood, while working about the residence of Edward Campbell, last week, stepped on a rusty nail forcing its entire length into his foot. He was afraid of blood poisoning, but no signs of it as yet have appeared, and he has nearly recovered from the effects.

—Justice Nash rendered judgment in the case of Brokaw against Dennis, Saturday, for the plaintiff for $46 and costs.

—The work in Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias, was not done Friday evening on account of the carnival. Only a short meeting was held.

—About a dozen of the Princeton College students drove over to Scotch Plains in carriages on Saturday night and dinned at Blimm's Hotel. They started for home about 2 yesterday morning.

FOR THE SUMMER OUTING.

Gowns of Coarse Toweling Will Be Much in Evidence.

The Athletic Bather's Suit—Dress Versus Personality—Ribbons Are Much Worn, Especially White Satin—A White Pique Gown.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

The keynote of the season is transparency. It is a quality of every material used in the make-up of gowns. But to prevent the season from being lop-sided, the proper average is attained by the use of very coarse crash for outing dresses—crash as coarse as that processed by the most modest of kitchens.

Yet these costumes are most charming, especially when accompanied by Alpine hats of the same material. They are made with gored skirts, very full in the back, and have jackets that are old-fashioned blazers, with a Louis impress. Revers do not extend over the sleeves, but are narrow and English in shape. The revers are usually faced with white —white satin being most effective.

Another peculiarity of these jackets is the sham vests which usually protrude from each side of the front, and have embroidered edges. They, also, are of white satin.

While crash has superseded all other materials for the outing dress, white pique still holds its own, in an advanced stage, of course. Pique embroidered with eyelets is now introduced in the construction of jackets, while the embroidered edges overrun all revers.

A novel costume has a gored skirt, encircled about six inches from the bottom with two rows of coarse white lace insertion. The jacket, of embroidered pique, suggests a tailor-made gown in the severity of its revers, which are turned back down the entire length of the front, above the revers broaden out until they reach the arm seam. They are doubly stitched all around, and fastened below the bust with pearl buttons and white cords.

To be entirely certain of the popularity of ribbon, one need only watch the hordes of women standing before ribbon counters, some matching materials, others their complexion. Even that proof is not necessary to the woman who watches the shoppers. Most of the necks are pretty sure to have ribbon bands about them, not to mention hat and dress trimmings.

Among neck ribbons white satin is the prime favorite. No matter what the gown, a white satin ribbon will set it off.

Next in favor is the plain taffeta ribbon, of any light shade. Corn color soils not so easily as white, and yet it has a most effective appearance.

Dresden ribbons are still somewhat used, but their popularity is declining rapidly. They are now little used for neck ribbons, but appear almost entirely in the trimming of gowns and hats.

Yet for effect and beauty there is nothing which combines so well with organdie as the Dresden ribbon. It is used entirely for waist ribbons, with large bow in the back. These bows have long loops, and the effect of the entire thing should be long and narrow. Many of the bows extend half way up the back.

In decided contrast is a belt ribbon which encircles the waist at the back, wends its way up each side the front and meets at the bust line under an immense bow which spreads there, almost concealing the bodice front. Other bows perch on the shoulders, fall in cascades from the neck, nestle in flounce tops, and, in fact, wherever there is a spot large enough to hold them.

She was a slim bit of bright ness, chatting gayly as she ate her luncheon. Her garb seemed to melt into her personality, and I knew without a second glance that it was in some way typical of her vocation.

"My last patient was a charming woman."

As the remark fell from her lips the mystery was solved. Very simple it was, too. For how could one clothed in a severe black gown, buttoned plainly down the front, with white linen collars and cuffs, be aught but a nurse? Yet the incident taught its lesson, and I looked about for other women who told in their garments the story of their lives.

As I stepped from the restaurant I saw another—a typical American girl, true to the life made up of pleasures which she led. Every line of her form showed clearly how well she had herself in hand. Her complexion, the rosy cheeks and the shell-like ears all showed the care with which they were handled.

Her gown and hat, too, were the most appropriate that America could plan.

A skirt of tan canvas over green silk, which shimmered beneath like the waves of the sea. Then a tight-fitting bodice of green silk, and over it green net gathered, sleeves whose top puffs were tan canvas with the lower arms covered with gathered net, a la mousquetaire; coarse cream lace, falling in three points from the neck, which is wound about with a ruche of green net.

The hat was, of course, green, adorned with violets and fans of cream lace.

Now doth the summer girl's fancy lightly turn to thoughts of bathing suits. Not that they always perform that function, for many a bathing suit is not "warranted to wash," and its wearer knows it when she plans the garment. But she intends to put no more than her "Trilbies" beneath the wave. Therefore her gown may be of gorgeous unwashable scarlet or green, trimmed with gold or silver passementerie. Silk is the material most often used in the construction of these garments, and the handsomest ribbons trim them.

The athletic girl eschews all unnecessary fixings for her bathing gown, choosing one which will be serviceable in deep-water swimming. A black or dark blue mohair is selected. The suit is made with rather full knickerbockers and blouse all in one, and a short skirt, with buttons to the hips. If you have ever watched a girl take off her skirt in the water while swimming alongside of a rowboat you can appreciate the advantage of having a suit constructed in the way mentioned.

The blouse is rather low, to reveal a white silk vest; and the sailor collars may be of the silk. Sleeves should be squatty puffs, and the belt adorned with a bow of white ribbon.

Shoes are again to be worn. The custom of displaying the feet did not meet with the expected enthusiasm, and the girls are once more glad to get into shapely slippers. THE LATEST.

SKETCH OF ASA COLLIER

ONE OF THE OLDEST BUSINESS MEN IN PLAINFIELD.

Was Located in One Spot for Twenty-three Years—He is a Prominent and Active Mason and a G. A. R. Man.

There is scarcely a man in Plainfield who is better known than Asa Collier, the Park avenue jeweler, and today The Daily Press presents an excellent picture of him. Mr. Collier was born in Concord, Mass., several years ago, and when old enough he learned the jeweler's trade with his father, who had been in the business sixty years at that place.

When a young man he entered in the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment at the outbreak of the war. He served his full time as a private and never failed in his duty.

After the war he came to Plainfield in 1869, and opened a jewelry store in the building occupied by Ayres Leeson, furniture dealer. He remained there some time and finally moved in the building at the corner of Front street and Park avenue before it was entirely completed. He was the first tenant and remained there twenty-three years, until last May when he moved to his present store on Park avenue, which is among the handsomest in town.

Mr. Collier has taken a lively part Plainfield affairs and has watched with a peculiar interest the growth of the city. When he first came here there was not a single sidewalk laid, and the town was very scarce of houses. The only man who has remained continuously in business in this city for twenty-seven years, like Mr. Collier, is Gerome Pack, of Park avenue.

Mr. Collier is an active member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, Jerusalem Chapter, No. 23; Trinity Commandery, No. 17, of this city; Jersey City Consistory; Mecca Temple, Mystic Shrine, of New York; and also of Major Anderson Post, No. 109 G. A. R., of which he is a past commander. He is also first vice president of the Philadelphia Retail Jewelers' association, and treasurer of the National Retail Jewelers' Association.

Notwithstanding that Mr. Collier is associated largely in society affairs, he is thoroughly attached to his home and family and he can usually be found there out of business hours.

TROUBLE OVER A COW.

Noel Was Taking It to the Pound, But Its Owner Objected.

A poor old cow, whose innocent eyes have often looked wonderingly at the passing cyclist, has suddenly become a character of much importance. The animal who has so suddenly risen in life was the cause of an arrest and the consequent trial in the city court Saturday last. The culprit, if he was one, was Wm. T. Banks, of East Second street, near Netherwood avenue. He was accused of striking Charles Noel, of the latter street, and abusing him. The cow, according to Noel, wandered away last Sunday and finally landed on Noel's property.

That individual started to take the cow to the pound when Mr. Banks and his hired man, Morehouse, appeared on the scene and demanded the cow. Then the statements conflicted, for Morehouse said that Noel tried to push him one side. Noel appealed to Special Officer Stephen R. Hope, but the latter thought that there had been no violence used and would not arrest Banks. Next made a complaint, however, and Banks was arrested. The cow finally was given to Banks by Noel.

In the trial the most damaging witness against Noel was the young son of Banks. The lad was quite bright and stuck to the story that Noel had gone into the field and wrapped the chain, that held the cow around its horns, despite Noel's cross questioning.

"What was on the end of the chain?" demanded Noel.

"The cow" replied the lad and even the court could not keep a sober face. The Judge reserved his decision for a week.

—Charles Walsh was released from the hospital Friday and went direct to his home in Elizabethport. He was admitted to the hospital about two weeks ago, suffering from over-exertion and fever.

—James Fillmore, brother of Mrs. Hollenbeck, whose house was recently burned, has gone away and there is a rumor that he was killed.

PLAYED WINNING BALL.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM DEFEAT THE CRACK RIVERDALE A. C.

But the Victory Was Not Won Before an Large an Audience as Was Deserved—Shortstop Major Was Hit With a Ball

The Y. M. C. A. ball team of this city and the Riverdale Athletic club of Harlem, crossed bats in a very interesting game of ball Saturday afternoon in this city. The day was a perfect one in every respect, but the failure to appeal to the base ball loving public and a small crowd was present in the grounds, while outside the congregation was much larger as they were not taxed fifteen cents.

The Riverdale team is a good one but they played in hard luck and were defeated 12 to 6. The game was an eventful one, from the fact that three of the home team were hit by pitched balls. In the sixth luning Major was hit in the left side with a pitched ball and was obliged to retire from the game. It was thought that several ribs were broken, and he was taken to the hospital by Assemblyman Chas. Reed, who was present, and Doctor E. W. Hedges made an examination which proved that there was a contusion. Major was kept at the hospital until yesterday when he was able to go to his home at Somerville. Owing to the absence of Symons, who is out of town, his place was filled acceptably by Gallagher of Raritan. The Riverdales only secured eight hits off of Burt, who pitched a faultless game and held the visitors down in good shape. Several times they had an opportunity to run the score up, but good judgment and close playing prevented their scoring. When Major retired from the game his place was taken by George Cornwall, who played admirably. He secured one hit and a base on balls, beside getting an assist in the field. A very clever double play was made by Cory and Enright and another one was made by Paasch and Schultz. There was lots of good hitting and fielding which pleased the large audience. Warren Townley played right field and put up a good game considering that he has not played in a long time. Dennis was away and his place was filled in good style by Wren Townley, who caught Burt finely.

Enright, who is now playing second base, is a favorite with the patrons, for his playing is full of snap and he never misses a chance. The visitors are good players but they are not strong enough for the home team who had no difficulty in securing ten hits. It is to be hoped that next Saturday there will be a large crowd present as the home team will play the New Jersey Athletic club team which is composed of strong players. Below will be found the score in full of Saturday's game.

Distinguished Honor for Dr. Carroll.

The Golden Rule has the following to say concerning Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, who was selected as a trustee of the United Society of Christian Endeavor from the Methodist Episcopal church:

And finally, from the Methodist Episcopal church, comes that distinguished clergyman and writer, Rev. H. K. Carroll, D. D., one of the editors of the New York Independent. Dr. Carroll won great praise by his work at the head of the census of churches in connection with the last United States census. Through his position on the Independent he is one of the most influential members of that great body of Christians, the Methodist Episcopal church, and will deservedly exercise great influence in our national Christian Endeavor council.

—George Cose, Wm. Stewart and Jack Evans, of the Fourth ward, acted as baggage-masters on the Hope chapel excursion Saturday, and when the train reached its destination, the sandwiches, boiled eggs, etc., were handed from the train with skill and dexterity.

EX-MAYOR'S WARNING.

L. V. F. RANDOLPH SEVERELY CRITICISES TROLLEY MAGNATES.

He Says the Agents Who Are Securing Signatures For the Scotch Plains Route are Not Going About It in the Right Way.

The trolley people have for some time been at work obtaining from owners of property on East Second street consents to build a railroad in front of their properties. This, of course, was well enough for those who signed willingly and intelligently. But it is now plain that some of these Second street property owners innocently signed a paper, which might be technically construed as giving the privilege in front of certain other properties they owned, and which are on Front street, where the same owners do not want the trolley and where they will not have if they can prevent it.

The form of the consent appears to have been drawn by the trolley company's attorney to suit the company; and it looks like a snare to the property owners. Probably no court of justice would, upon trial of rights, justify a claim that the consent does cover Front street property. It is simply a danger, and a possible trap, in its present form.

Of late, it has been given out that the railroad party was claiming to hold a majority of consents for East Front street. They do not hold them. Many East street property owners are practically solid against the trolley. Possibly the signatures given to the paper by the Second street owners, who are also Front street owners, form the basis of a boast recently made, and may also help to account for the offensive and impudent and menacing attitude recently assumed toward property owners by the agent who has collected the signatures. This communication is intended as a respectful warning to the property owners, to the members of the Common Council, and also to projectors of the trolley road.

DEATH OF JOSEPH BEACH.

Suffered a Severe Stroke of Paralysis From Which He Did Not Rally.

The death of Joseph Beach occurred Friday last at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. William A. Woodruff, East Second street, after being unconscious since Tuesday last, caused by an attack of paralysis.

Mr. Beach was born at Newark. Shortly after marriage he went to Boston and entered into the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company. He remained there until 1849 when he moved to Jersey City. He still remained in the service of the company and made Jersey City his residence until 1861, and then went to Rahway where he resided until 1885, when failing health compelled him to give up business and he came to this city and has made his home with Mrs. Woruff ever since.

In Rahway Mr. Beach became quite prominent in life. He was one of the foremost men of the town and was an elder in a church there and just previous to his death had been re-elected an elder, to serve for four years. The deceased had a severe attack of paralysis last November and from then to last April was confined to his room. Since then he has been in the habit of taking short walks on pleasant days but only occasionally went off the block. He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. W. A. Woodruff and Mrs. Howard V. Waters, both of whom reside in this city. The body will be taken to Rahway for burial, but the date of the funeral has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. Beach was in his seventy seventh year.

GOOD MAN LAID TO REST.

Obsequies Over the Remains of the Late Joseph Beach.

The last sad rites over the remains of the late Joseph Beach were held Sunday night at nine o'clock from the home of his daughter, Mrs William A. Woodruff, 312 East Second street. Rev. James Riggs, D. D., who is at present preaching in Trinity Reformed church, during the absence of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, kindly consented to officiate. The home was filled with friends and acquaintances of the deceased.

Comforting passages of scripture were read by Dr. Riggs, who also made remarks regarding the perfect Christian life of the departed, and helpful lessons for the living were drawn from his life. Dr. Riggs closed his remarks with prayer.

A quartette consisting of Mrs. H. E. Rider, Miss Lizzie Dunn, F. S. Cutter and Robert Clark, sang very tenderly "The Christian's Good Night. Those present were given an opportunity to view the remains. Interment was made at Rahway today.

The Manhattan Changes Hands.

Jacob Hipp's hotel on Somerset street, known as The Manhattan, passed into other hands yesterday. J. Henry Gracely is the new proprietor. Mr. Gracely will move his family here from Brooklyn, Conn., early next week. Mr. Hipp, the former proprietor, it is understood will return to Raritan, where he originally came from.

FOR ANOTHER PARADE.

PROPOSED TO HAVE IT TAKE PLACE BEFORE LABOR DAY.

A Sum of Money to be Raised Among the Merchants and Given in Prizes That Will Create a Great Amount of Interest.

The bicycle parade last Friday evening proved such a success that it is almost settled that before the season ends a much more pretentious event of the same kind will be arranged.

At a meeting of the committee, Saturday morning, who had charge of the affair of last week, it was suggested that a parade be arranged for Labor Day. But a little more consideration showed that it would injure the prospects of success for the Grocers' Association picnic to Boynton Beach, and as there is no desire to have two public affairs conflict with one another, it was suggested by a prominent West Front street merchant, who was solicited to aid, that the parade be held the Saturday afternoon before Labor Day, commencing about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. This would bring an immense crowd into town and end the festivities in time for the merchants to reap their usual Saturday night trade without having it attracted away by a parade in the evening.

The merchant who is interested in the matter says that if such a plan is started he will guarantee to raise $200 among the merchants of Front street, and it is thought that another $100 can be raised from the dealers in other sections, to be used in advertising the affair and offering prizes for the participants. Souvenir buttons would be given to all who entered the parade with special prizes of sufficient value to attract widespread attention and extra effort for decorated wheels, unique uniforms, etc., would be offered. It is proposed to also offer a valuable prize for the club turning out the largest number and making the finest appearance in the line. The matter will probably assume a definite character in a few days.

FOUR CASES OF THEFT.

TWO WERE OF VALUABLE JEWELRY AND THE OTHER TWO OF HORSES.

George Mattison Takes Advantage of the Kindness of a Brother and Steals Valuables While the Family Are Away.

George Mattison, the man who created so much excitement one day last week, by suddenly falling into a stupor in Ross' restaurant from which he did not revive for several hours, is now wanted by the police for grand larceny.

Mattison has been boarding with his brother Charles on Duer street for some time. Saturday night the family went out and left the house in charge of George. Charles was returning later in the evening when some one stopped him and asked where his brother had gone. He remarked that he was at home, but the man who made the enquiry said that he had seen him leaving town.

Charles hurried home and found the house empty. He suspicioned something was wrong and made an investigation. Then he found that a diamond ring and a gold scarf pin was missing.

It was thought that the missing man might have gone to his wife in Newark, and his brother went there in search of him. He was unable to find him. Last night he notified Chief Grant of the affair and this morning the chief sent out notifications to the police of other cities, asking for his apprehension.

A description of Mattison is as follows: Forty-five years of age; five feet, seven or eight inches high; bald on top of head, with mustache and side-whiskers; had on dark suit of clothes and derby hat when he left home.

A South Bound Brook farmer came to this city Saturday night and notified the police that a man by the name of Baker, who had been employed by him and was boarding with his family, decamped Friday evening, taking with him jewelry valued at $300. As it was a day late when the police were notified they could not give him any encouragement for his capture.

This morning Chief Grant was notified by F. N. Smith, a farmer living on the Schooley's mountain, that he had a horse stolen yesterday morning by a thirteen-year old boy whom he had brought from New York to work for him. He traced the horse as far as High Bridge. The boy was leading the animal, and it is thought took him to New York.

Sunday night a horse and buggy was stolen from a church shed in Caldwell. The Chief was notified to be on the lookout for the thief. The horse was a sorrel about fifteen hands high, attached to a side-bar buggy.

A Dastardly Trick.

The valuable Italian greyhound belonging to Arthur Mills, of Grandview avenue, had to be shot last Thursday evening by Marshal Lines. Someone gave the dog a quantity of pulverized glass in some meat, thus causing the poor beast terrible agony.

Clarence Teel, of North avenue, spent Sunday at Lake Hopatcong.

PERFIDY AND DECEPTION

JOHN CUFF SEES HIS WIFE BEING HUGGED BY A VISITING COUSIN.

He Starts to Break Up the Cooing and is Thrown Out of the House Which He Attempts to Enter—All Parties in Court

The city court room was the scene last Saturday of one of the most ridiculous cases that ever came up for trial in this city. After the Judge and court had been convulsed with laughter by listening to the story of the trouble which proved to be trifling, the Judge brought the fun to a sudden end by discharging the entire crowd, and ordering them not to bring such trivial matters into court. The characters in this little comedy were all colored, most of them residents of West Third street. It was the story of the jealous husband and the deceiving cousins, with variations. Peter Cuff and John Wyckoff are cousins. The former lives on West Third street, and the latter in Philadelphia. Wyckoff has been visiting Cuff, and they were supposed to be great friends. Frank Nelson is a neighbor to Cuff, and he was the one on whom the hand of the law rested, charging him with using profane language to Cuff.

The trouble happened yesterday. Cuff went down town and left his wife and cousin at home. When he returned, they were gone but he saw Wyckoff at Nelson's. Over there he tramped to find them and saw "Gamey" Nelson, as he is called, sitting on the porch. Cuff's articulates rather thick and he has the true negro accent, so his story as told in the court was rather remarkable. According to his story he inquired for Wyckoff and "Gamey" said he wasn't in there. Cuff told him with plain directions that he was not keeping to the truth. Then Nelson began a tirade against Cuff for following his wife when, as Cuff told the court, "I began to suspicion dat she was 'round too." Nelson went into the house and Cuff crawled up to the window and peeped through the shutters. "It was dark as it could be" Cuff told the court, "but dere dey were, ober in the corner, huggin each udder as tight as they could," and Cuff's face grew blacker still as he thought of his faithless wife and deceiving cousin. They saw him and Cuff started in at the door to be unceremoniously fired out by Nelson.

The latter came out on the porch and, according to Cuff, yelled at Cuff: "You's a sucker, you're a sucker," Then came the arrest.

The characters in this little incident were present at the trial and did not refrain from making personal remarks about each other. The description of the scene in the house had the effect of nearly causing a free fight on the spot.

The Judge didn't wait to hear Nelson's story, but discharged him, warning them all to behave themselves more discreetly in the future unless they were longing for a trip to Elizabeth.

BEAT HIS AGED WIFE.

A WESTFIELD MAN ATTACKS HIS HELPMEET WITH A STICK.

Turned Her Out of Doors and Then Barricaded the House and Defied Arrest With a Huge and Murderous Looking Knife.

John Hickey, a burly woodchopper, who lives about a mile out of Westfield, while drunk last night beat his wife badly with a heavy stick and then turned her out of the house.

Word was sent to the police. When officers reached Hickey's place they found him barricaded inside. His wife was sitting by the road.

The officers tried to get into the place, but drew a razor, put out the light and declared that he would kill any one who tried to come through the door.

The officers, seeing they could not enter, turned their attention to Mrs. Hickey. It was not supposed that she was injured until she was taken to Dr. Cooper's office.

There it was found that the bone of the middle finger of her right hand protruded through the flesh. Her ribs on the right side had been crushed in by a terrible blow.

The doctor considered the injuries so serious that, after a preliminary dressing, the woman was sent to the hospital at Elizabeth.

Mrs. Hickey is a frail woman, seventy years old. Her husband is much younger and powerful.

He was arrested Thursday morning and was committeed to await the result of his wife's injuries.

An Old Hoax.

An old, but always successful, joke was played on William Ross, proprietor of the Delmonico Oyster and Chop House, Thursday, by some of the lads of the neighborhood. There was a large basket of choice peaches standing in front of Ross' place and someone placed a sign on it reading "Sample peaches, take one." Of course, everybody accepted the invitation and the peaches were nearly gone when Mr. Ross discovered the sign. His expression at that time was worthy of being placed on canvas.

FRYING PAN TO THE FIRE

MORTGAGE GIVEN TO ESCAPE DEBTS MAKES STILL MORE TROUBLE.

Mrs. Charles Herman Trying to Get Her Husband's Property, Which His Folly Has Involved Into the Courts.

With wife and father at sword's points and fighting each other in the courts, the family of the late Charles Holodner, alias Charles Herman, is not a happy one. The cause of all this family trouble is a chattel mortgage that young Holodner gave to his father, Benjamin, on July 17, 1895. Holodner lived in this city with his wife and owned a farm lying between Bound Brook and Martinville, which was looked after by his father. Now Mrs. Holodner says that her partner in life was worried over the fact that some of his creditors might sue him and then secure his property. To prevent that, she says, he decided to give his father a (latter) mortgage for $1,200 on all his property although no money passed between them.

Two months after, he died but the mortgage remained and then the trouble began. After the funeral, Mrs. Herman, for that was what she was generally known by here, sold her goods in her Plainfield home and went up to the farm to live with her father-in-law. Three weeks ago she took out letters of administration to settle up her husband's estate. George Kirch, the grocer, and Lawyer J. P. D. Kirch were appointed appraisers and visited the farm.

While appraising the stock, a little incident occurred that was told of at the time in the Daily Press. David Herman, brother-in-law to Mrs. Holodner, drove to Plainfield with his wife. The appraisers saw the team and wagon that brought him and started to put a valuation on it. Herman thought something wrong was being done and drove away on a gallop to the surprise and astonishment of Messrs. Kirch.

The next developement in this drama was the notification that the elder Holodner was going to sell the goods and chattels of his late son to to satisfy the mortgage he held. The notice did not reach the office of Mrs. Holodner's lawyer, S. S. Swackhamer of this city, until last Wednesday evening at about six o'clock and the sale was to take place Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Lawyer Swackhamer tried to get an injunction from Vice Chancellor Emery, of Newark, but could not secure it in time as his witnesses were in Somerville.

There was only one thing to do and that was to try to stop the sale personally. He hurried to the farm, arriving there after about $38 worth of goods had been sold. He startled the auctioneer and would-be bidders by suddenly appearing on the scene and ordering the auction sale to stop at once under threat of legal prosecution. His arguments were effective and the sale stopped.

Last Friday preliminary proceedings in an ejectment suit were started in Justice Crossley's court by Mrs. Holodner's lawyer with the object of getting possession of the farm. Another suit is soon to be started in the Somerset County circuit court to recover personal property that the elder Holodner still continues to hold. His lawyer is Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Horatio M. Clark Attempts to End His Life With Laudanum.

Horatio M. Clark, aged 40 years, of 60 Grandview avenue, attempted to commit suicide Monday by taking two doses of laudanum, but his efforts were defeated by his wife, who learned of the act soon afterwards.

Mrs. Clark called to Valentine Utzinger, who happened to be passing, and he together with the latter's son walked Clark up and down the street in the hopes that he would come out of his stupor.

Mr. Utzinger asked him why he didn't take enough laudanum to kill, and he replied that he took all there was in the house, but he intended to get a quart and take it all. He said he could not live any longer and wanted to die.

Drs. Carman and Tomlinson were called and prescribed, and the man will recover. Sometime ago Mr. Clark, who is a carpenter, fell from a building and injured his head. The wound never healed properly and every summer Clark has been troubled with his head.

In addition to this, he was addicted to strong drink and frequently he would lose control of himself. Of late he has been selling campaign buttons, as he could not secure work at his trade, but this did not pay him, and has worried him a great deal.

He has a wife and two little girls, who were nearly frantic when they learned what he had done, but kind neighbors assisted them.

Since noon Mr. Clark has been sleeping soundly and no trouble is anticipated. He is being closely watched.

The Newark Board of Education have decided to abandon the use of slates in public schools and substitute paper pads. It is claimed that in addition to the new system being much more neater with the students, that it will be much better on the eyes.

Sometimes the most unexpected thing happens. In the minds of many the free silver believer is associated with the "hayseed" individual of the agricultural community. But now we are treated to the spectacle of Oliver Sumner Teall, the once famous Beau Brummel of polite New York society, announcing himself as a supporter of Bryan and Sewall.

A new low-price record was established on corn in the leading markets Tuesday, the Chicago quotations having fallen to 23½ cents per bushel for the July delivery, and 24¼ cents for September. The price depression reflects the effect of liberal receipts and the prospect that another phenomenal crop yield will follow the unprecedented harvest of last year.

Those pessimists, with which every community are afflicted, who are constantly questioning the sincerity of the ministers of the gospel because they frequently receive a larger compensation than some of the lay members of the congregation, and who generally put the whole ministry in the same category, should study the case of the Long Island pastor who received the meagre salary of $25 per month and was then ousted from his position because he dredged for oysters in order that he might earn sufficient additional money to eke out a respectable existence. There can be no exception to the minister when we consistently apply the scriptural advice, "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

A test of the New Jersey's so-called "blue laws" has recently been made at Belmar, and the result will be looked upon with particular interest in Plainfield where the Sunday observance law is rigidly enforced. Warrants were issued for the arrest of a merchant for selling candy on Sunday. The counsel for the defendant did not attempt to refute the evidence offered that the sale was made, but confined his argument to showing that the law, under which the arrest was made, was an absurd one. It was passed in 1798, when candy and cigars were not liberally purchased, and was not intended at that time to apply to petty cases. The jury, after considering the case for five minutes, returned a verdict of acquittal.

This campaign is prolific in idoms, and here is one of them: William M. Singerly is the editor of the Philadelphia Record, an erstwhile candidate of the Democrats for Governor of Pennsylvania, and at present a candidate of the same party for Presidential elector in that State. But both in his private life and in his paper he is bitterly opposed to the election of Bryan and Sewall. Knowing his opposition to the success of the ticket, an anxious Democrat, who is a supporter of the regularly nominated candidates, wrote him a letter asking how he would vote in the electoral college if the Democratic ticket should carry Pennsylvania. Mr. Singerly answers that he would vote for Bryan and Sewall, but he takes consolation in the statement that he does not think there is the slightest chance of his being placed in this delicate and rather inconsistent position.

Once before The Press has called attention to the eggregious blunder of Editor Runyon in subscribing for a cheap boiler-plate cartoon service and palming it off on his readers as a piece of enterprise. That time it was a characteristic caricature from a Democratic standpoint ridiculing the claims of the Republicans. Since he professes great belief in the theory and practice of the Republican party, and uses his paper to advance those principles, the publication of the cartoon, in the parlance of the street, "put him in a hole." He tried to crawl out of his inconsistent position by printing an apology for the blunder in the same issue that it appeared. But it made him the laughing stock of the community. Last Wednesday the public was treated to another exhibition that was even worse than the first. It was the publication of an alleged joke illustrated with a gaudy picture. The illustration was such an grace many of the periodicals which are barred from every respectable family. The remarks underneath were of the most suggestive tone. In times gone by Editor Runyon has posed as the moral censor of the community, but now he is seen as a rank offender.

Governor Griggs opines that New Jersey will give a Republican plurality of 70,000 for McKinley and Hobart.

Michigan has passed a law fixing a heavy penalty upon railroad companies for the employment of persons addicted to the use of intoxicants.

A Democratic plum fell in Somerset county the first of this month when President Cleveland appointed May J. Munson postmaster at Millington.

Henry C. Kelsey, Secretary of State, in a letter to The Herald this morning, says that he is going to vote for McKinley and will oppose the nomination of a third ticket.

Six States hold their elections before November 2nd. They are Alabama, August 3rd; Vermont, September 1st; Arkansas, September 7th; Maine, September 14th; Florida, October 6th, and Georgia, October 7th.

The Republicans of the First Congressional district held a convention at Woodbury yesterday and for the third time nominated Henry C. Loudenslager, of Gloucester county. It was a walkover for the candidate, as he had no opposition.

Oh, the enterprise of these great New York newspapers! The Herald appears this morning with almost a half column account of the preliminary details of the bicycle parade which was held in this city last Friday evening.

The Republican candidates for Senator in 1899 are keeping pretty quiet so far, but as with Hobart out of the contest it is certain to be a lively scramble. The candidates will be from this section of the State, and Franklin Murphy, John Kean and Governor Griggs have been the names most frequently mentioned.—Newark Call.

The Socialist-Labor party held a State convention at Trenton last Saturday and nominated a full set of electors, one of whom is James Bell, of this city. The platform denounces the Democratic, Republican and Populist parties, free silver and protection, and wealthy classes are referred to as oppressors of the workingman.

The bicycle parade should be made one of the annual features of the summer season in Plainfield. Born in the mind of one man, and months only a week by a few enthusiasts, it attracted thousands whose one voice was that of praise, and though at first rebuked by lightning, thunder and rain, it ignored the setback and blossomed out in a blaze of glory and made Plainfield a gala town.

Postmaster-General Wilson has issued an order to railway mail clerks directing them not to take an active part in the political campaign, such as would be involved in their attending political conventions as delegates, making political speeches, or assisting in the management of the canvass. The circular expressly states that it is not desired to control their opinions on political matters.

Plainfield is forging ahead with the trolley system, and the people find that it pays to encourage them in and out of the city. A new line is now being opened up to Scotch Plains, and a line is already running to Dunellen and Netherwood, but Elizabeth has no trolley connection anywhere except to Newark, where a great deal of the cash trade goes. There is no feeder for this loss. Trolley cars should be running to all the suburban towns of Elizabeth.—Contractor.

Orange taxpayers are mad and one of the assessors is wishing that he had never been called to place a valuation on property by which the revenues for government are provided. This particular assessor is a real estate agent and he took a rosy view of the value of property when he increased the valuation $800,000 in his district. The taxpayers are weeping mad and threaten all sorts of things from refusing to pay their taxes to certiorarying the whole matter to the Supreme court for adjustment.

Chairman J. P. McDonnell, of the Executive Board of the New Jersey Federation of Trades and Labor Unions, says that the representation at the eighteenth annual labor congress, which will be held in the State House in Trenton on August 17th, will be larger than that of any previous labor convention held in New Jersey. In the trades-unions affiliated with the Federation there are over 50,000 members, all of whom will be directly or indirectly represented at the Trenton congress.

The Supreme Court of California has handed down a decision that S. D. Worden, who stands proven guilty of wrecking a train at Sacramento two years ago and causing the death of the engineer and three United States soldiers, was lawfully and justly condemned to death and must be hung. Some people with diseased minds who think that men on a strike have a right to destroy property and kill people with perfect immunity have been fighting Worden's condemnation for a long time and now receive a lesson by which others as well as themselves may profit.—Rochester Union.

Keep Up Your Scott's Emulsion in Summer-time

What are your resources for the summer? Have you an abundance of health stowed away for the long, hot, depleting days, or does summer find you low in vitality, run down, losing flesh, and weak? Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil will give you the proper reserve force, because it builds up the system on a solid foundation. A tonic may stimulate; Scott's Emulsion not only "boosts," it sustains.

It is a wise precaution always to have at least a small bottle of Scott's Emulsion in the house. Unopened, it will keep indefinitely. Tightly corked, after using, kept in a cool place, it will remain sweet for weeks.

A company has been organized in Chicago to insure the payment of salaries and wages to the employes of firms and corporations.

Lawyer Alex. C. Young, formerly of Somerville, and for a few years past associated with the son of the late ex-Governor Leon Abbett in the legal profession in Hoboken, is mentioned as a probable Congressional nominee in Hudson county by the Democrats. Mr. Young is an excellent young man and his many friends in this section of the State will be pleased to learn of his prominence.

James E. Martine is ready to jump into the thickest of the battle for the election of the Democratic candidates, and he will start the ball rolling on Aug. 19th, at Packer's Island, when he will indulge in a joint debate on the silver and gold currency question with Congressman Mahlon Pitney. The occasion is a big picnic of the farmers of that section, and it is probable that several thousand people will hear the debate.

This morning we were again treated to the monumental enterprise of a New York newspaper. Though the bicycle parade took place almost a week ago, the Advertiser appeared this morning with an alleged full account of the affair which was said to have been held last night. Accompanying it was a sketch pretending to be a representation of a section of the riders in fantastic costume. The story was written in the office of the Advertiser by a reporter, it is nine out of ten chances, who never saw a bicycle parade, and the illustration was simply an imagination of the artist.

It is reported on good authority that a talk on the silver question will be one of the features of the annual picnic of the Graggers of Essex, Union and Morris counties, to be held at Swinefield Bridge, Morris county, August 13th and 14th. The speakers will be Editor Collingwood, of Hackensack, editor of Rural New Yorker; Professor E. B. Voorhees, White House Station; Franklin Dye, secretary of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, and Hon. Augustus Cutler, of Morristown. The latter, it is believed, will handle the silver question. He was a candidate for Governor in the last Democratic convention, but was turned down by the State machine.

WOULDN'T ADMIT HIM.

PITIABLE CONDITION OF MAN TURNED AWAY FROM THE HOSPITAL.

Spent All of His Money for Treatment But Was Not Cured—When He Returned the Rules Wouldn't Let Him In.

"It is no disgrace to be poor, but it is some times inconvenient," is an old saying that is true, and it has been verified in the case of William Nestor, an employe at the fur mills, Scotch Plains. The case is a sad one and has appealed strongly to the hearts of those who are acquainted with the facts.

Several weeks ago while at work Nestor sustained an injury to his wrist, with the result of blood poisoning.

Dr. Westcott, of Fanwood, was sought and he treated the man for a time, but there seemed to be no improvement. Nestor then came to Plainfield and saw Dr. Long, of the hospital staff. His arm at this time was in a bad condition and the doctor sent the man to the hospital, where he remained for five weeks. At the expiration of that time the doctor told him he could go, but he must come back to him every few days and have the arm dressed, and if he experienced much trouble, he was informed that he must go to the hospital again.

During Nestor's five weeks stay at the hospital, he had paid every cent of money to that institution, and being a poor working man his resources were small. Soon after he left the hospital, his arm gave him much trouble and he again sought Dr. Long. This was last Saturday afternoon. The doctor told him to go to the hospital Sunday morning at 10 o'clock when there would be a physician there to attend him. He followed instructions and learned that another doctor was in charge. The man was asked if he had any money, and he replied that he had previously paid all the money he had. The doctor then informed him that patients were supposed to pay, and that unless he could pay something, nothing would be done for him. The doctor, however, wrapped a bandage around the wound and gave Nestor a written formula to poultice his arm three times a day with flaxseed and to use oil silk.

Nestor told the doctor he had no money with which to purchase oil silk, whereupon the doctor informed him that he could not help that.

Nestor left the hospital and called on Overseer of the Poor David R. Weaver, of the borough, and to him he related his story, and while doing so, the man's injury pained him so much that he cried. Mr. Weaver sent him to Dr. Carman's office for treatment and gave him an order to secure some groceries. Mr. Nestor has a wife and two children, and is known as an industrious sober man, always working whenever he can get employment. North Plainfield Township is now looking after Nestor and doing all they can for him.

TO BREAK ANOTHER RECORD.

A. W. W. Evans Preparing to Lower the Time for 200 Miles.

A. W. W. Evans, whose feats on the wheel have drawn to him the attention of all bicyclists in this part of the country, announces that on next Monday or some day early next week he will make an effort to reduce his own creditable record for 200 miles. This he made some years ago in twelve hours and twenty minutes under conditions much less favorable than those which aid the rider at the present time. He made the trip then unpaced.

When he rides next week he will be paced and is confident that he can make 200 miles in much less than twelve hours.

Mr. Evans will not attempt to break the twenty-four hour record for the state until the latter part of the month when the moon is full again and he will be aided by its light when riding at night.

NOT WILLING TO SACRIFICE SEWALL

Kansas Democrats To Endorse the Populist State Nominees—Bryan Spends a Quiet Sunday—A Western Judge Creates a Sensation.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Senator Jones of Arkansas, chairman of the national democratic committee, arrived in Washington at noon yesterday and after a few hours' rest at his residence went down to the headquarters of the congressional campaign committee, where he had an hour's talk with Secretary Gardner, who had come to town from his summer home at Laurel, Md., to meet him. To-day the senator said that he was not yet ready to announce the executive committee, although it was possible that he would name several of the members in a day or two. He had practically made up his mind as to some of them, but he did not care to disclose them at present. Perhaps the executive committee would not be announced or at any rate completed until the full meeting of the national committee in New York on the 11th inst. At that time the location of the national campaign headquarters would also be selected and in all probability the selection would not be made before that time. The senator's choice for headquarters was about evenly divided between Washington and Chicago. He recognized great advantages in each and some disadvantages. There was no democratic morning paper of prominence in Chicago and the others there, he said, were dishonest—worse in fact than in any city in the country. He thought he could rely on the dissemination of fair reports from Washington, for although no democratic paper is printed here, the newspapers of the national capital took a fair and the usual machinery for news dissemination was unequalled. With regard to the insinuation of W. L. Peck in the Atlanta Journal Saturday that he (Chairman Jones) had expressed a willingness to sacrifice Sewall and urged Watson's nomination, he said emphatically to-day it was utterly baseless. He had received a note from Peck stating that Watson's nomination would be the salvation of Bryan, and he had not answered it or paid any attention to it. He had been in St. Louis during the populist convention, but had never gone to any of its sessions nor participated in its work.

Plans of Kansas Democrats.

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 3.—Ex-senator John Martin, a leader of the Kansas democracy, is authority for the statement that the democratic state convention at Hutchinson to-morrow will nominate no candidates for state offices, action to be deferred pending the result of the populist convention which will meet at Abilene on Wednesday, and that the nominees of the Abilene convention will then be indorsed by the democrats. As to presidential electors, according to Mr. Martin, there will probably be a fair division, representation being given to each of the several political organizations favorable to free silver legislation. The electors so nominated will be instructed to vote for Bryan and for either Sewall or Watson, whichever has the majority of votes cast in the United States.

Quiet Sunday for Mr. Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 3.—Yesterday was a quiet Sunday for Mr. Bryan. He attended services in the First Presbyterian church in the morning and took a drive in the afternoon. His brother, who resides in Omaha, was his guest at dinner. A number of telegrams from Congressman Sulzer and other Tammany leaders congratulating Mr. Bryan on his endorsement by the Tammany executive committee have been received by the nominee. The statement made by Senator Thurston, that Bryan was in the pay of owners of silver mines, is to be answered. The person who is to reply to it has not been named, but he will probably act by authority of Mr. Bryan.

Created a Sensation.

Kearney, Neb., Aug. 3.—In a populist rally here last night District Judge C. J. Scott of Omaha caused a sensation when in his speech he classified McKinley and Senator Sherman with Herr Most, and declared that he had sent better men than Grover Cleveland to the penitentiary. Judge Scott gained notoriety several months ago by ordering newspaper men sent to jail for criticising his course on the bench. He was elected as a republican, but has recently been advocating populist doctrines.

Demand Senator Wolcott's Resignation.

Denver, Aug. 3.—A secret meeting of leading republicans of Denver was held yesterday in the office of a well-known attorney and it was resolved to ask senator E. O. Wolcott to resign as senator. Republican Representatives of the democratic, populist and silver parties were present and voted with the republicans to demand Mr. Wolcott's resignation.

"Cyclone" Davis for Congress.

Texarkana, Tex., Aug. 3.—"Cyclone" Davis, the peoples' party leader, has been nominated for congress by populists of the fourth district to succeed D. B. Culberson.

Wagner Society in Trouble.

Berlin, Aug. 3.—The once famous Wagner society held a meeting at Bayreuth under the chairmanship of Baron Seckendorf. The annual report showed that the membership, which in 1893 was 8,000, had fallen to 2,500. A motion to dissolve the society was defeated, but there is no hope that it will continue to exist much longer.

A Republican Retiry.

There is quite a stir in political circles in Rahway over the announcement by Wm. H. Miller, the Republican clerk of the Board of Education for the past two years, that he intends to vote for Bryan and Sewall next November. Mr. Miller's father is George Miller, alderman of the Fourth ward, and the son is a prominent member of the American Mechanics. His defection from the Republican party is due, so he declares, to his belief in free silver.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Why is it,

if catarrh is a constitutional affection, as those claim who have a blood tonic to sell, that physicians, in extreme cases, frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from it? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm, in all cases of catarrh, is so efficient as to draw with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and a perfect cure after short continuance.

It is a fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla, the one true blood purifier, has proved, over and over again, that it has power to cure, even when other medicines fail to do any good.

—Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or gripe. All druggists, 25c.

HOBOS ENJOY A FEAST.

Tired of the Usual Backdoor Collation of Left-Overs They Will Set Down to Delicacies Prepared by Their Own Members.

Weary Waggles, Dusty Rhoades and others high in the circles of the Knights of the Road can no more exist for a long period of time on the ordinary "hand out," which prevails at every back door, than can the more respectable citizen eat quail for thirty days without his stomach revolting against the food. The nomads toil not, neither do they spin, but they must eat. Choice dishes seldom greet them when they beg, however. So they have to resort to their own devices once in a while to satisfy the gnawing in their stomach for something besides cold meat, bread and butter, and the left-overs of the family table. Two nights ago a small coterie of tourists came together at a camp below this city, and before bunking up for the night, they discussed the propriety of holding a barbecue, open to the members of the "perfesh." at Greenbrook tanks. They all agreed that the time had arrived for a change of diet and an indulgence in some of the fresh vegetables which do not attend the back door collations. There is a bond of sympathy among the true Knights of Road and it was decided to hold the affair this afternoon and invite the rest of their brethern who were en route over the Central or the Lehigh Valley to enjoy the layout.

The word was passed along the line, and by last night every hobo within twenty-five miles was aware of the "feed." Yesterday afternoon the original projectors of the barbecue jumped off a coal train at the tanks, and after a little prospecting, located the camp in a secluded piece of woods not far from the stream of water which bears the name of Green Brook.

Every train arriving from either direction at the tanks between last night and this morning brought its tattered quota of tourists. Those who pre-empted the camp selected a *reception committee from their num*ber and they lay in wait for the arrival of the black line coalers. The glad hand was extended to everyone who had credentials that they hadn't trashed in a month or worked since they got out of the penitentiary after serving a bit for vagrancy. Those who could not prove these qualifications were repulsed and warned to comply with them immediately if they desired to participate in the feasts to be arranged in the future.

The camp was organized by the selection of a King, who assumed control and appointed subordinates to attend to the details. Close on to midnight a dozen of the party swooped down upon neighboring gardens and farms, and by daylight a sufficient amount of cabbages, tomatoes, cucumbers, eggs and other provisions had found their way into the camp to provide amply for all who were expected to partake. Some of the others had purloined an old pail from a farmhouse in which to cook the eggs and other things that required hot water. The little details were also provided for and when a call came for salt and pepper a half dozen dived into their pockets and brought forth as many packages of the seasoning article, and more than the embryo chef considered would be good for the food.

At noon today the camp was all activity and anticipation. The time for the consumption of the delicacies was fixed at four o'clock. After the dinner, and before the camp is broken, a number impromptu toasts will probably be given on subjects in which the tourist is deeply interested.

Fall of Enthusiasm.

Through an oversight the name of J. Hervey Doane was omitted from the committee on the coming bicycle carnival to be held September 5th. A meeting of the committee will be held tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock at F. L. C. Martin's cycle store. One of the committee called on several Front street merchants yesterday and learned that they are all full of enthusiasm and are willing to assist all they can.

For Cruelty to Animals.

Jules Berrick was arrested in the borough by Chief Marshal Wilson, last evening, on a charge of cruelty to animals. The prisoner was locked up in "Sebastapol" over night, and today he was taken to New Market, where the charge was entered, for a hearing before Justice Storms.

A CARCASS IN THE WELL.

To the Sign Says, But Some Wheelmen are Incredulous.

Some wag has played a smart joke upon the cycling public and at the same time, there is little doubt, increased the trade of an enterprising gentleman who has recently set up a "Wheelmen's Rest" at Pumptown, near Metuchen, where he dispenses various "soft" beverages.

Pumptown, it is said, takes its name from the fact that at the bend in the Metuchen-Plainfield macadam road there is a pump, celebrated for its water. Wheelmen resort there.

The rogue in question backed up a sign conveying this startling information: "$25 Reward for the Arrest and Conviction of the Party Who Threw Into This Well the Carcass of a Dog." The proprietor of the "Rest" greets his patrons with broad grins when he sees them turn away from the pump. Nevertheless, despite the alleged dead dog flavor, the water continues to quench cycling thirsts, for a joke is suspected—New Brunswick Home News.

Married on the Lord's Day.

Harry Becker, the popular young tonsorial artist of Somerset street, and Miss Emma Jeanne, of Pearl street, North Plainfield, were united in marriage by Rev. Mr. Hauser, at the parsonage last Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The service was simple and impressive. Only an informal reception was tendered the bride and groom at the close of the ceremony, after which the members of the D. O. H., Deutch Order Harugari, of which the groom is a member, gave them a hearty welcome and reception. Their wedding trip will include Niagara Falls and the Canadian shore, and they will be back by the middle or latter part of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerno, will be at home after September 15th, at 147 East Fifth street, this city. Mr. Gerno is one of the lineman and inspectors for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company.

The company passed through this city Saturday afternoon and expected to arrive at Sea Girt early this morning. Three years ago this company marched over the same route to Sea Girt.

BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED

WHAT THE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION WILL MEAN TO THIS CITY.

Dr. Service, One of the Speakers at the Washington Assemblage, Gives the Principal Talk—E. E. Anthony Also Talks.

An important Christian Endeavor mass-meeting, in the interests of the State Convention of '96, to be held in this city next October, was held at 4 p. m., Sunday in the First Baptist church. E. E. Anthony, president of the local union, presided over the meeting, which opened with a twenty-minute service of prayer, in which many took part, praying for a great blessing on the convention and the convention city. A ten-minute service of song followed, led by a choir of Endeavorers from the various societies, then, after Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. Dr. Tarbes, Mr. Anthony introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Dr. Service, of Michigan, one of the speakers at the Washington convention, who spoke on "The Benefits of a State Convention to a City." He brought out many excellent points in his interesting talk; among them, the interdenominational fellowship, which is always found in such gatherings, the encouragement for workers in finding so many others engaged in the same warfare, and the proof given to all observers that it is not necessary for people to wait for this or that form before beginning to be useful servants of God.

Mr. Anthony then said a few words as to what the convention would give the city, and what it wanted from the people. It would give several days of unusually helpful meetings and fine speakers, including such names as Moody and Talmage. It desired from the people their prayers, their work in preparing for the reception of the visitors, their homes, in which to lodge delegates, and their money, to help pay the expenses.

The meeting was closed by the benediction, pronounced by Dr. Yerkes. The attendance was large, in spite of the warm afternoon.

BELABORED A CRIPPLED HORSE.

But Agent Pangborn Saw the Cruelty and Will Take Proper Action.

With slow unsteady steps a horse attached to a buggy pulled away from the curb on Somerset street near Front street last Thursday. It was apparent to the passersby that the horse was in no condition to be driven as it could barely move, but the driver began to belabor the poor equine with his whip. Ex-Chief Marshal William A. Pangborn, the agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, was at the corner of Front and Somerset streets at the time, and when the man drove up to the corner he stopped him.

The individual in the buggy proved to be the hired man employed by Rabbi Senovskoz, of New Market. After learning the facts of the case, Mr. Pangborn allowed the man to go and will compell the owner of the horse to refrain from using the animal on the road. It is afflicted with blood spavin, and one leg is almost entirely useless.

SERVICE FOR VETERANS

REV. L. E. LIVERMORE SPEAKS OF THE WRONGS OF IMMIGRATION.

He Says That Every Man Who Emigrates to This Country Should Endorse All Things Customary Here.

The service held in the W. C. T. U. rooms Sunday afternoon at 4:15 for the G. A. R. men and Sons of Veterans, was a most interesting one. There were large delegations present from each organization, and also from the Woman's Relief Corps. A large American flag was prettily draped around the stand on the platform, and a large bouquet of flowers was as additional adornment.

The meeting was arranged by the committee on Soldiers' and Sailors' work, of which Mrs. M. C. Dobbins is the chairman. Several of the W. C. T. U. members occupied seats on the platform with Rev. L. E. Livermore who delivered a helpful address. He spoke of the appreciation felt by the soldiers in being invited to the rooms, and thanked the members of the W. C. T. U. for their kindness. Mr. Livermore then gave two touching incidents in connection with his army life. He told of the inauguration of a prayer meeting at Maryland Heights which resulted in the conversion of one of the worst soldiers he had ever met. Mr. Livermore's text was "Endure Hardness as a Good Soldier." In part he said:

"A soldier will defend his country against the harmful. Intemperance is the cause of national poverty. It is not recognized by either of the great parties, such as silver and gold and 16 to 1, which has resulted in a split in every party, including the Prohibition party. The greatest enemy, intemperance still remains.

"We should guard against uniting church and state which is now threatening us. Romanism stands against religious liberty. General Grant once said 'that we should labor for free speech, free press, and encourage the free schools and that not one dollar should be appropriated for sectarian schools.'

"Every soldier will unite with American citizens to close our ports for a term of years against paupers, etc., who flood our country. A man coming to this country should declare supreme allegiance to the Government of the United States, and he should also endorse our system of education. If he will not, we should not allow him to plant his foot here. The report rendered for 1895-6 shows that 262,703 immigrants came to this country. This is 72,781 more than for the year previous. It is the character of those who come that causes alarm. There are very few of them who do not worship the Virgin Mary, and they would quickly strike against America in their hatred for Americans.

"There were many thousand veterans who passed away last year, and we should prepare for that great change. We should make Jesus Christ our personal Savior. We should live honestly and love God and then we will receive that everlasting peace and joy eternal."

The meeting was thrown open at the close of the above remarks and several of the veterans gave interesting testimonies, as did several of the women. During the service a quartette composed of Ezra Loomis, H. J. Martin, L. C. Hummer and Chas. Hummer, rendered several appropriate selections in a pleasing manner. Commander McVoy thanked the women for courtesy extended, and he said that he knew that the comrades appreciated their efforts.

Those present joined heartily in singing several hymns, after which Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson spoke a few words of congratulations and cordially invited all to attend the Sunday afternoon services held in the room. After the singing of a hymn, the service closed by Rev. Mr. Livermore pronouncing the benediction.

A feature of the service was the vocal duet by Miss Jemima and Miss Florence Dodge.

PASTOR WITHOUT A CHURCH.

The Rev. Mr. Judd's Place Was Filled While He Was Abroad.

The Rev. William B. Judd has returned to Cranford from his year at the university at Jena, Germany and though he won the degree of Ph. D., he is very much exercised to find that he is without a pastorate. He is a Methodist minister of the Newark Conference, and his leave of absence was for a year.

The time was up in March when the conference met, and the Bishop appointed him to the pastorate at High Bridge. But after completing his course, he tarried for a little sightseeing, and this week, upon returning to his home here, he found that Presiding Elder Smith had filled the place to which he had been assigned.

TOOK GRANDPA'S WATCH

A BELLE OF PARADISE ALLEY GETS HERSELF IN COURT AGAIN.

On Her Return From the County Jail She Stole, so Her Grandfather Alleges—Lucie Says Her Grandmother Gave It to Her.

One of Roundsman Mattox's "children," as they are called, Lucie Scudder, is in trouble again. The cause of her trouble is her grandfather's watch, and thereby hangs a tale. Lucie, as the Roundsman calls her, is a dusky-hued maiden who has graduated from Paradise Alley with honors and now lives on East Third street. The Roundsman first met her when he did duty on the beat that included Paradise Alley. The first of last May, he had to lock her up for some rash acts on the "Alley," including an attempt to brain Maggie Benford with a kettle. She went down the road for twenty days.

Andrew Jackson Brown is her grandfather and he lives with his wife in Westfield. Sorrowful to say, he often drinks more than is good for him and disgraces his gray hairs. He was in that condition when Lucie went up to see his wife soon after she released from jail. She wanted his watch, and as he was fast asleep and a amount of yelling could awaken him, she took it. She says that Mra. Brown told her to.

At any rate it came to Plainfield with her while the old man looked in vain.

"I'd a little bit suspicioned her" grunted out Andrew Jackson Brown, as he told his story in Justice Nash's office yesterday "cause she took a watch from my wife once." After consulting a number of friends about the loss of his "val'abl' watch," it cost him five dollars and he was not willing to swear in court that it was $; he found out that the watch was in Plainfield and so yesterday afternoon he came to Justice Nash and swore out a complaint. Roundsman Mattox captured the offending Lucie, who seemed in high spirits to be in a court room, again and brought her over.

Lucie owned up to taking the watch but said Mrs Brown told her to. The watch she gave to John Bergen, of Battle Row, to have repaired and he took it to the little jeweler's shop on Somerset street, just off Front street. There is reason to think somebody pays the $1.75 it cost to repair it.

Brown appeared in court in a rather unsteady condition, as if he was walking on the deck of a ship in a storm, and he ran his words together as if they tasted the same as his breath. He was very sure that his naughty grand daughter was entirely to blame and he wanted his watch.

"You bring your wife here," said the justice.

"I could, but that's neither here nor there. I want my watch," and he spoke with the determination of a man partially full of rum.

Then the Justice informed him in quiet but decisive tones, that he was to bring his wife to the court on the morrow. It finally penetrated his brain what he was to do and he declared that he would be there. Lucie was also ordered to appear this afternoon for trial and released on her own recognizance.

HOME FOR THE NURSES.

Work Will be Started on the New Building Very Soon.

Work is soon to be started on the nurses' house at Muhlenberg Hospital. Preparations are being rushed along so as to have it completed as soon as possible so that the nurses may take possession and the portion of the annex now occupied by them used by the patients, thus relieving the present over crowding of the hospital.

The final estimates on the structure are expected to be in this week. The nurses' house, which was designed by J. Evarts Tracy, of this city, is a two-story frame building, with clapboard siding and shingle roof on the style of the other hospital buildings. It contains accommodations for fourteen nurses, each having a separate room, a lecture room, a sitting room, bath rooms, etc. The building will be placed in one corner of the hospital lot so as to be as far as possible from the hospital proper. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy before January 1st, 1897.

A Dog and Goat Fight.

Summons has been issued by Justice Newcorn in the case of the New Jersey Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Wm. Pangborn, prosecutor, against Barry, which is returnable August 10th. It appears that Barry owns a bulldog and a goat, and on June 26th the defendant had the two animals fighting. As a result of the fight the goat was severely injured and an attempt is being made to save the life of the goat. Wm. Pangborn, an agent for the society, has brought action against Barry for the above cause.

THE GREAT CONVENTION

ENDEAVOR LEADERS PREPARING THE DETAILS TWO MONTHS AHEAD.

Arrangements Being Made to Provide for the Immense Crowd of Delegates Who Will Be Present at the Assemblage.

The coming '96 Christian Endeavor convention, to be held in this city in October, promises to be the greatest one this State has ever seen. There are, of course, many important details for the convention to be arranged by the committees. The members of these committees and the presidents of the societies in the Local Union held a meeting last evening at the Y. M. C. A. building, at which the committees told something of their plans and helpful suggestions were made. The meeting opened with prayer, E. E. Anthony acting as leader. He stated that the Jersey Cycle Academy had been secured for the convention and that comfortable camp chairs had been hired for the occasion. Circulars and the provisional programme will be sent out in a few weeks by Miss Stevens, State secretary.

The question of providing ushers for the different meetings was brought up and several methods proposed. The entertainment of the visiting delegates was also considered and some suggestions made to the entertainment committee. The very important work of the finance committee was the subject of some discussion and then the work of the press, hall and decoration committees were discussed. A full statement of the work of these committees will be announced later. After a general informal discussion of various plans for the convention, the meeting closed with a short prayer service.

WHILED AWAY WITH DANCING.

Notwithstanding the Heat the Light Fantastic Toe Was Tripped.

The board of governors of the Catholic Club gave another of their delightful dances in the Catholic clubhouse Thursday, and despite the oppressiveness of the weather the attendance was all that could be desired, as every available inch of floor space was utilized.

The fact that everyone present were enjoying themselves was very apparent, and the management once more proved themselves to be popular pleasure providers. Prof. O'Reilly was in charge of the full orchestra present.

The committee in charge consisted of Michael Mack, P. Casey, J. Keenan, James Carey, Charles Ward, Hugh McDonald and John Gallagher, while W. Claassen had charge of the door. T. Carty the refreshments, and Dennis Galbraith and Con Guinee were the floor committee.

CLAIMS HE WAS ASSAULTED.

A Colored Man Says He Was Pounced Upon by Five White Men.

Edward Palacios, colored, a resident of North Plainfield, was taken to the hospital last week suffering from two badly swollen eyes and a sprained wrist. He was admitted for treatment and Dr. Long considers the man's condition serious. The man says that he was going home last evening at a reasonable hour and on the way five white men jumped on him and assaulted him. He does not know who the men are nor can he give any reason for the assault. In fact he seems to know very little about the affair except that he got the worst of the fight. The affair evidently did not come under the observation of the police as no arrests were made.

A CHURCH FESTIVAL.

First Church of Christ Members Conduct a Successful Event.

A ROYAL RECEPTION.

HOSPITALITY OF THE NEW BRUNSWICK Y. M. C. A. BOYS LAST NIGHT.

Gave Their Cycling Brethren a Jolly Time After a Hard Ride Over the Rough Lots—Delightful Ride Home.

New Brunswick obtained a reputation last evening for hospitality that will last for many a day. The cause of it was the way in which the Y. M. C. A. entertained their guests of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. cyclists were there with the rest and had the largest representation, twenty-four riders, two of whom were on the tandem. Eight men rode over from Passaic, a distance of forty-two miles, and returned later in the evening, making their run eighty-four miles long. Four of their number were on tandems and paced the rest. The other associations represented were Orange, Rahway and Westfield.

As soon as the guests arrived, with perspiration running off them in little streams, for the evening was a very warm one, they were hurried to the shower bath and then treated to a glass of "Sparkling Kolafra" which is made in New Brunswick. An entertainment was given consisting of selections by a young men's orchestra and a male quartette, in which was to be seen the familiar face of Lewis Bragdon, who is well known in this city as the star of the Rutgers College Glee Club. Then a bountiful lunch was served, ending with ice cream.

There were nearly a hundred cyclists present, and the run was voted the best of any of the league runs. Each visitor was presented with a souvinor of the occasion ere he left.

The Plainfield riders were under the command of Thomas A. Cuming. There was no scorching and the run was a delightful one both ways, but the rain came out in time for the return, which made it all the more enjoyable. There were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the occasion.

THE AMATEUR ART ADVISOR.

The canvas sold for oil painting is already primed read for painting on. It does not need to be sized.

Most of the amateur artists' materials keep studies for china painting in great variety, especially the stores where undecorated china may be obtained. The designs are usually rented.

Walls are frequently covered in distemper, a cheap method compared to the use of oil paint. This mixture resembles whitewash in quality. It is applied much in the same way.

There is a special preparation sold for mixing with the bronze powders. This makes them adhesive while preserving their brilliancy. Only sufficient should be mixed for use each time.

For pen-and-ink work for reproduction you require either smooth white paper or Bristol board. India ink, undeniably black, and pens specially made for the purpose, fine or broad, according to the quality of the work.

CATCHING A SWORDFISH.

A Task Requiring Considerable Courage and Experience.

In the pursuit of the swordfish the hunter of the sea finds his greatest excitement. There is no slow and careful baiting and patient waiting. The game is sharp to cutting the surface of the water—and a chase that often ends in a terrible struggle is begun, for a wounded swordfish often fights fiercely, thrusting its two-edged spear straight through a boat and sometimes striking his pursuers.

But a fisherman who has once tried the sport never tires of it or of its excitements.

Not long ago a party set out from Cape May in a little sloop. It was a calm, sunny day, and the men in the cross-trees swept the sea to catch a glimpse of the white bit of foam that would show where a swordfish swam.

For an hour the sloop skimmed lightly along.

"Hey-o," came suddenly from the man in the rigging.

"Where away?" sung out the skipper from his place at the wheel.

"Off the weather bow."

In a moment all eyes were watching a glistening fin that cut the water ahead.

The mate ran to the bow and took his place in the "pulpit," and, seizing the steel harpoon, stood ready for the game.

For a few minutes the vessel and the soldier of the sea ran silently and swiftly. The skipper gradually drew the bow around until the huge fish was close alongside.

Then came the supreme moment.

As the little vessel shot into the wind the mate raised his harpoon and leaned forward from the pulpit. Every eye was upon him. For a moment the steel flashed, and then, with a crashing sound, it entered the back of the fish.

"Stand clear of the line!" shouted the mate, as he sprang to the deck.

The warning was well heeded, for the rope was running over the vessel's side with the sound of a ripsaw. The swordfish was in flight. When the last yard spun out the mate tossed overboard the keg, to which the rope was fastened, and away it went, followed by a wave of foam and spray.

A moment later the dory, loaded with fishermen, pushed its nose into the sea, and after a spirited race reached the flying keg and lifted it aboard. The half-exhausted fish felt the strain, and the next instant the dory was rushing along—a swordfish express.

Slowly the rope was hauled in, the prey being given plenty of opportunity to spurt and wear himself out. Presently the sharp fin was seen close at hand, and with a rush the great fish was laid alongside.

Hauled partly out of water by the rope, the fish gave a sudden plunge with his weapon. Crash it went through the side of the boat, and the men within rolled over and let go the rope. There was a sudden plunge and a heavy jar. The infuriated fish had thrust his sword through the bottom of the boat, narrowly missing an oarsman's leg.

"To the rope," shouted the bowman, and instantly every man braced himself and pulled while the water gushed through a hole in the boat.

A few moments more of terrific struggle and the huge fish was brought alongside. Without giving him another chance to strike, the bowman lifted an oar and a violent blow on the head killed the fierce fish.

Quickly the sloop came alongside just as the dory grew dangerously full of water, and the daring fishermen climbed aboard. The fish measured ten feet and two inches in length.—Chicago Record.

Jay That Lighted Matches.

A dangerous acquirement of a pet blue jay is told about in the American Naturalist by Newton Baskett, of Mexico, Mo. The blue jay referred to somehow learned that parlor, or popping matches, would make a delightful sputter and flame if properly manipulated. The bird was in the habit of beating the buttons of the cabinet some hard substance, perhaps for the purpose of breaking or softening it. It probably treated one of the parlor matches in this way one day, and so learned that they made a noise. When a match was given to it it would hop on a chair round and strike the fulminate against the wood, end on, repeating it rapidly till the head was ignited; then it would throw it away and watch the flame.

Facts About Blue-Eyed Cats.

It is a curious fact that blue-eyed cats are invariably deaf. Mr. H. Harrison Weir, a well-known authority on the cat, once bought a big, white, blue-eyed beauty, which seemed to be every inch a good cat, except that its vocal organ was of such robust power that her cries drove the household frantic. After some strange experiences the problem was solved by this voiceful specimen being taken home by a kind old lady, who was herself stone deaf.

FURROWS BY TROLLEY.

The Use of Electric Power in Farming Operations.

Chicago Man's Invention a Boon to the Man Who Raises Corn and Sweet Potatoes—Practically Tried and It Is Practicable.

"Farming by electricity," is the name Isreal Hogeland has bestowed upon his first and latest invention. Mr. Hogeland declared to a Chicago Record reporter at a test of his invention that his new method of agriculture was bound to be a success and he also said it would be the last blow to the usefulness of the horse as a farm animal.

"Farming by electricity" does not mean, as its name might indicate, that by the Hogeland method a farmer may sit in his easy-chair and by manipulating a switchboard or pressing a series of buttons gather onions, plant corn, weed a strawberry bed, annihilate potato bugs or milk the cows, all without taking his eyes off his weekly paper. Mr. Hogeland's idea of tilling the soil with the aid of lightning is a trolley plow. His new invention is nothing more nor less than a four-wheeled truck equipped with from one to four plows and operated by a young man who turns a crank like the motorman of an electric car and who might as well be a motorman, except for the fact that he has no gong to ring.

About a year ago Mr. Hogeland hit upon an idea for an electric plow, to cost a medium amount and to do the work of ten men in such marvelously short time that it would be indispensable to the farmer and planter.

After months of labor in his workshop the electric machine at last evolved something which answers to this description:

A wooden platform six by three feet, mounted on four wheels. The front wheels are of solid cast iron, and are used as the steering wheels. These wheels are controlled by a wheel which looks like the brake on a freight train, and it stands just to the right of the operator. The man running the trolley plow has an iron seat like a seat on a mowing machine. At his left is the familiar barrel-like arrangement, with the crank at easy reach. Just behind the driver or motorman, or pilot or gripman, or plowboy, or whatever he is, rests the motor, encased in an oval box constructed of zinc. The traction wheels are about 3½ feet high, of the skeleton design, and have long, broad teeth every few inches along the outer surface. There is a "plow lift," operated by a lever, also within easy reach of the person who steers the plow.

Now comes the old part of this piece of machinery. A trolley wire, of course, couldn't be strung over a ten-acre cornfield, so Mr. Hogeland has fixed things so that an insulated trolley wire is carried aboard the four-wheeled plow and is paid out by a reel. When the driver gets to the end of his rope—or, more fitly speaking, his trolley—he reverses his engine, backs up, makes a neat turn and starts away in the opposite direction, the reel picking up the wire as it lies upon the ground.

The electrical circuit was supplied at the test by street car trolley wires which fed the Hogeland plow by means of a connected wire from the terminus of the Bowmanville electric car line at North Fifty-ninth street and Lincoln avenue. Only one plow was attached to the machine, but that one was enough to show that a stone quarry could be uprooted if four shares were at work and a full head of electricity were turned on. Mr. Hogeland's assistant rode around an uncultivated plat of ground for an hour or so and when he was called off the lot looked like a portion of the sanitary canal. Everybody seemed pleased and hastened to tell Mr. Hogeland what a great thing the plow would be. Then somebody said, innocently:

"But, Mr. Hogeland, what if you are in a state, or a section of a state, that doesn't have trolley wires convenient to the farm?"

"Oh, that's all right," said Mr. Hogeland. "There's always a corporation in every neighborhood which uses electricity, and farmers may get their supply that way. It's very cheap. Then, again, a storage battery may be used. Such a battery would not be too heavy, in my opinion. Another good scheme would be to have farmers club together, buy their own engine, and take turns about using the plow."

Photograph of the Eye.

At a recent meeting of the Paris Academy of Medicine Dr. Gulnoch stated that he had successfully photographed the interior of the eye. The advantages of this method are important, since it enables actual pictures of the diseases of the retina to be secured and compared from time to time to determine whether disease processes of the eye progress or not. The picture is made in two seconds. The apparatus can thus serve as an ophthalmoscope, and any number of persons can observe the results.

Snow-Melting Machine.

In preparation for next winter an Italian has invented a snow-melting machine. In this machine a lift receives the snow gathered up by a shovel, subjects it to the heat of pipes filled with boiling water and allows the liquid thus obtained to flow into a tank and then into the street gutter. The machine is driven by a motor and a brush at the rear sweeps to the side whatever escapes the shovel.

SUMMER SONG.

Mabel Graduates.

Mabel's coming home from college
With the "sheepskin" that she's won;
I suppose she'll call her knowledge
Of all things beneath the sun.
I shall hardly dare address her
Now, she's got a big A.M.
Would I were a grave professor,
Then perhaps she'd fancy me!

Wonder if Miss Mab's forgotten,
Ere she came to Greenbank Grove,
How we roamed beneath the cotton
Woods that blent above the creek?
Spent long afternoons together
When the corn was in the husk,
Wandering slowly back together
Through the fields at dusk and dusk?

Wonder if she still remembers
All the merry winter nights—
Chestnuts roasted in the embers,
Coasting parties on the heights?
Wonder—hang this jolty table—
Now her learning's such a "stack,"
If she'll call me "Mabel,"
If she still will call me "Jack?"

Mabel's coming home from college!
Mabel's coming home to-night!
Strange, but sweeter in the knowledge
Makes the cloudy day grow bright!
It's absurd—I don't deny it—
But—well, I'm not the dome
Seems to know my joy, and cry it—
"Mabel's coming home to-night!"
—Harry Pelouze, in Detroit Free Press.

Has Lavish Summer Brought the Rose?

Has lavish summer brought the rose?
Why did my heart not know,
When every gentle wind that blows
Made haste to tell me so;

And all the birds went mad with glee,
And sang from morn till night;
And then the stars came out to see
What made the world so bright?

But I missed something from the time,
And so I did not guess
The meaning of the summer's rhyme,
Or the warm wind's caress.

Can gladness be where she is not?
Can roses bud and blow?
Does all the world but me forget
That now 'tis June indeed?

I care not for the day's kind grace—
The magic of the night—
Since with them comes no more the face
That was the June's delight.
—Louise Chandler Moulton, in Youth's Companion.

Sour Grapes.

When with a reminiscent view
I note the things I've failed to do—
The rising stocks I didn't snatch;
The heiresses I failed to catch;
The prizes I missed in a fight
Have been insured somehow to write;
The pictures that I might have drawn;
The journeys that I might have gone;
The loads of fun I might have had—
It makes me blue, and green, and mad!

But when I see the chaps who got
The things I missed and envy not;
Who put their money into stocks
That turned out naught but paper blocks;
Who won the "prize" lemon test;
Who on long voyages knocked about,
And seemed their homesick hearts to rout;
I've come to think—'twixt you and me—
That grapes both sour and high may be!
—Paul Pastnor, in Detroit Free Press.

Be as Brave as You Can.

I was weak and despairing from illness and pain,
I seemed to be foiled in each wish and each plan,
When a friend gave me hope that yet all I might gain:
Through my sobbing I heard: "Be as brave as you can!"

Bright with cheer were the words, sympathetic and strong;
They conquered my weakness! New courage I won
They may gird up some heart, so I pass them along
To all in sore need—"Be as brave as you can!"

When the night gathers round you, and gone is your light,
Before the morning, when darkness you scan,
The sunshine will come again, shadows take flight;
Trust the Lord and cheer up! "Be as brave as you can!"
—Emma C. Down, in Home and Farm.

The Flight of the Arrow.

The life of a man
Is an arrow's flight,
Out of unknown
Into light,
And out of light
Into darkness again;
Perhaps to pleasure,
Perhaps to pain!

There must be something,
Above or below,
Somewhere unseen,
A mighty bow,
A hand that tires not,
A sleepless eye
That sees the arrows
Fly, and why.
One who knows
Why we live—and die.
—Richard H. Stoddard, in Atlantic Monthly.

I Love You, Dear.

"I love you, dear!"
There is no phrase so worn and old
In all the world, for one so sweet
To lover's lips or maiden's ear,
As this refrain: "I love you, dear!"

"I love you, dear!"
There is no time as time goes on,
No new words seem to mean so much
As when they're uttered, fondly near,
In trembling fancy: "I love you, dear!"

"I love you, dear!"
No night so dark, no day so long,
But hope brings comfort to the heart,
If only words come soft and near—
To murmur, low: "I love, you, dear!"
—N. O. Picayune.

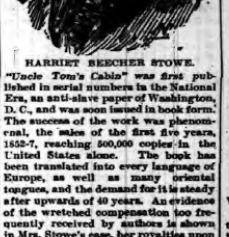
WAS A GREAT WOMAN.

Harriet Beecher St we, Author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Her Strong Personality and Active Anti-Slavery Work—Remarkable Genius of the Beecher Family—A Prolific Writer.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, who died at Hartford, Conn., July 1, was the sixth child of a family of 11 children, every one of whom attained distinction in literature, or oratory, or both, she being a daughter of Rev. Lyman Beecher and a sister of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher. Mrs. Stowe was born at Litchfield, Conn., June 14, 1822, and displayed remarkable precocity at an early age. When but 12 years old she wrote a very strong essay upon the immortality of the soul. Having the misfortune to lose her mother when but four years of age, she was placed with her grandmother, a worthy and most sensible woman, at Guilford, Conn., where she remained until her father's second marriage, when she returned to the home roof and became a pupil in the academy in Litchfield. The school days of Mrs. Stowe were marked by earnest study and a ready apprehension of all that was taught, her standing always being high in all her classes.

At the close of her school days she became a teacher in a seminary at Hartford which had been founded by her eldest sister, Catherine, but when her father was called to the presidency of Lane Theological seminary at Cincinnati in 1832, the young woman accompanied him and there founded another school. Four years later Harriet married Prof. E. C. Stowe, an instructor in the seminary, and soon thereafter the man and wife became actively identified with the anti-slave movement, their home becoming noted for what was termed a "station of the underground railroad," by which route fugitive slaves escaped to places of safety. The extreme views of Dr. Beecher upon slavery finally led to a nearly complete breaking up of the school, and in 1850 Prof. Stowe accepted a chair in Bowdoin college. It was here that Mrs. Stowe's work which has given her fame in every part of the world was written.



HARRIET BEECHER STOWE.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" was first published in serial form in the National Era, an anti-slave paper of Washington, D. C., and was soon issued in book form. The success of the work was phenomenal, the sales of the first five years, 1850-5, reaching 500,000 copies in the United States alone. The book has been translated into every language of Europe, as well as many oriental tongues, and the demand for it is steady after upwards of 40 years. An evidence of the wretched compensation too frequently received by authors is shown in Mrs. Stowe's case, her royalties upon "Uncle Tom's Cabin" having amounted to only about $10 per week.

Since 1850 no less than 35 books were written by Mrs. Stowe, all of which gave evidence of the strength and creative faculty of her mind, although in one instance, the Byron controversy, the wisdom of her judgment was questioned by many of her friends, even. Her writings, chiefly romances, present almost every phase of American life and testify to the remarkable perspicacity of their author. Her popularity as a writer is shown in the fact that all her writings met with a ready and large sale.

Subsequently Prof. Stowe filled a chair at Andover and then removed to Hartford, where he died August 22, 1886, and which city his widow continued to make her home. After the war Mrs. Stowe spent several winters in Florida, but intimately renounced this portion, allegiant to the absence of sympathy among those with whom she there temporarily resided. Mrs. Stowe was slight in figure, but possessed a strikingly personality, her face especially indicating her great strength of character. She was remarkable for the courage of her convictions and her freedom in voicing them, with a manifest indifference as to the views of the majority.

Several years previous to her death she was in feeble health, and the mental vigor that had been so pronounced gradually failed, until the light of reason became dim. But during this period of weakness she had the unlimited ministrations of loving and devoted friends. Among the scholars and literati of the old world Mrs. Stowe is accorded first place among the women of America as a writer as well as thinker, and her death "at home" is pleasing to them in the number of the most remarkable and successful books of any age, this success comprehending results achieved as well as universal popularity; it has been the lot of few authors to receive as she such universal praise on one hand and such pronounced censure on the other, both criticisms being unqualified in their genuineness.

A New Form of Crime.

Bicycle snatching is a new form of crime developed in Paris. A lady was riding some distance ahead of her husband near the Port Maillot recently, when two men stopped her, pulled her off her bicycle and were making off with the machine when her husband caught up with them and had them arrested.

FOR BRIGHT CHILDREN.

How They Can Make Toy Furniture from Old Corks.

If there's a box of old corks in the pantry the boy or girl, with a jackknife, can make a whole set of furniture and many other interesting things out of them.

All the tools and materials necessary are a very sharp knife, a box of matches, a bottle of thick mucilage, Bob's watercolor paints, a few old calling cards, a hairpin or two, a pair of stout scissors, with sharp points, and the pin-cushion. With these and the corks you can find a great deal of interesting amusement.

Perhaps the best thing to begin with is the cork out of the mustard pot, which is large and flat. Snip the sulphur heads off of four matches, leaving them square at the ends. Sharpen the other ends a little, and make holes with the penknife in the under side of the cork and stick the pointed ends of the matches into these. Cut out a circle of a visiting card somewhat larger than the mustard cork, glue it on top of the cork, and there stands a beautiful piece of nursery carpentry, table all complete. A small, square bit of cork that once served to stop the mouth of a little guava jam jar and sticking in four matches for feet and two more on the upper side for a back, with a bit of cork at the top of these, one has at once a delightful chair to go with the table and stool. The next piece of manufacturing high is a tee-totum, and here Bob's paints begin to come into play.

Cut a match in half; sharpen one end a little. Cut a thin slice crossways from a piece of round stick the match through the middle of it, pointed end first. Cut out a circle of cardboard four times as large as the cork, and draw two lines at right angles across the face of it. This will leave it divided into four squarers, and these quarters are to be painted blue, green, yellow and red. Bore a hole in the center of the disk and slip the blunt end of the match through it until the cardboard rests upon the cork. Next cut another, but rather thicker, slice from the cork, bore a hole in the center and stick the blunt end of the match through, pressing it down till it touches the card. This will leave about an inch of match to be taken between finger and thumb for spinning this beautiful teetotum.

Cutting long slices through the middle of the cork leaves pieces which, with the aid of Bob's paints, can be turned into a beautiful set of dominoes, and by cutting out square pieces one can make a beautiful set of noiseless dice to be used with the backgammon board.

But perhaps the standby of all made in this shop, which has for its sign: "Old cork taken in exchange for new playthings," is the set of parlor croquet. To begin this heavy but fruitful labor cut out 18 small squares of cork. Bend into a curved hoop—a miniature of those used in lawn croquet—nine hairpins, and these, with each end stuck into one of the small squares of cork, will stand upright and serve as hall sockets for the game. Cut slices crosways from the vinegar-bottle cork, and into the middle of each of these stick a match whose end has been sharpened for the purpose. These can be painted around with rings of contrasting colors, as is done to the goal stakes of lawn croquet.

Next, for the mallets hunt about in the cork box for four small ones of even size—those from the small medicine vials serve admirably if they have been stained by drugs. These, if a nice shape, need no cutting at all. Matches will serve as handles for these mallets, and a band of color must be painted around each. The fingers are distinguished their own mallets. Some nice, large, old sugar-coated pills would make beautiful balls for this nursery croquet, with a stripe of paint around each one.—Chicago Record.

About Some Queer Birds.

The woodpecker can climb up the stem of a dead tree in a flash, but can't climb down it to save his life. The little sapsucker of the same family can do both. The kingfisher dives under the water and catches its fish in its mouth. The crane stands in the water and flaps and spears its prey with its long, sharp bill, as you might spear an eel with a gig. The crane rises with the fish impaled on its bill and flies away home. I shot a six-foot crane once on the wing that had a two-pound trout impaled in that way. The fishhawk drops into the water like a plummet and seizes its fish in its talons.

ALMOST BLED TO DEATH

AND IEW SAFFRAN SEVERED THE RADIAL ARTERY IN HIS WRIST.

All Effort to Stop the Flow of Blood Were Fruitless Until He Was Taken to the Hospital and the Artery Sewed Up.

Andrew Saffran, aged twenty-two years, an employe of R. H. McCullough, at his sash and blind factory, narrowly escaped death Wednesday morning, while at work in the Saengerbund Hall, on Somerset street. Saffran had been sent to the hall to replace several panes of glass that had been broken in the rear windows. He had completed one sash and had just started on another. To do the work it required a long ladder, which Saffran placed in position.

The floor was waxed and very slippery and nothing was used to prevent the ladder from slipping. While Saffran was busily working, the ladder suddenly jolted. The young man's first impulse was to grasp forward, and as he did so his right arm caught on a piece of glass, cutting severely the radial artery. In the fall he also struck his head. Immediately after his descent he got up and walked to Dr. Mattison's office across the street. The blood flowed profusely, and as Saffran walked across the street a track of blood was left behind. Dr. Mattison was alone in his office, and until someone arrived he did the best he could to stop the flow of blood. Saffran was growing weaker and stimulants were used to give him some strength.

Mrs. Becker, who lives upstairs over the doctor's office, hurriedly secured a cot and performed valuable service in assisting the doctor, as did also Mr. Totten, who came in. Wm. Kettenring happened along and he was sent for Dr. Zeglio, but the latter not being home, Dr. Probasco was secured. When he arrived he did all he could for Saffran, but it was impossible to stop the flow of blood.

The ambulance was telephoned for and Saffran was taken to the hospital. At the latter place the doctors cut into the arm sufficiently to sew up the radial artery, which they learned was cut. This stopped the flow of blood, and the young man is doing nicely. He will be able to leave the hospital in a day or two as soon as he recovers his strength.

Some time ago Saffran shaved the nail off a finger with a planer, while working at the mill, but the accident today he considers the worst he ever experienced.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Max Honeyman and his cousin, Fred Zandt, started early this morning on their wheels for Jamesburg, Middlesex county. Max will remain at his cousin's home for a week or longer.

The Elizabeth Field Club went to Westfield Saturday determined to win, but were clearly outclassed in every position by the Westfield Y. M. C. A. boys, who played without an error. Considerable work is being done among the members of the various associations comprising the Catholic Diocesan Union for the athletic games to be given under the auspices of the union at Caledonian Park, Newark, Saturday, August 8th. The rivalry for possession of the team banner is causing some of the associations to emulate the examples of the big athletic clubs, and a few are beginning to corral star performers to represent them. The Catholic Club, of Jersey City, is foremost in this line, and that organization has induced Jerome Buck, of the Knickerbocker A. C., to run in Catholic Club colors. Buck is a top-notcher among the sprinters of the day. The local associations are getting out all the latent athletic material that they possess, and the interest in the games grows as the events draw nearer.

referred back to the committee for amendment. The ordinance provided that no stone should be dropped on the street and that properly built wagons be used, also that wagons should not be loaded to the top with stone, ashes or garbage. The intent of the ordinance was all right but the provisions were unreasonable. Messrs Ginna and Serrell voted alone for the ordinance.

Mr. Frost offered an ordinance relating to house connections with the city sewer, and after a few amendments it was adopted, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Fisk presented the report of the Watchung avenue commissioners together with the map, and after giving all present an opportunity to have their say regarding the opening, moved that the report be referred to the street committee and that they report at a future meeting, which it is hoped will be Monday, September 7th. There were no persons present to speak on the subject and the above procedure was taken. There being no further business council adjourned.

Well-known Speakers.

The following well known speakers have been added to the list for the Jamesbury Sunday School Convention on August 26th; Rev. Hugh B. MacCauley, of Newark; Rev. Swain, D. D., of Allentown; and Rev. Frank R. Symmes, of Tennent. These with Dr. A. A. Willetts, of Spring Lake, will make a quarette of addresses well worth hearing. The grove in which the convention is held is an easy walk from the stations and is a large one covering many acres. Its beautiful shade, its lovely walks and secluded nooks make it an ideal place to spend a day in the woods. There are always provided plenty of refreshments for the inner man at the stands throughout the grounds. The railroad is giving special rates there for that day.

Entered for Saturdays Races.

W. E. Brock's trotting horse "Active" and J. Wesley Johnson's "St. Albans" are entered for a race on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association, Saturday afternoon next at three o'clock. Charles Brower's "Sergeant" will also trot in the race. All of these horses are well-known to local sportsmen and an exciting time may be expected. No cash prizes are offered for the races, inasmuch as they are only friendly contests between members' horses. The sport has been continued on the track for several years past, and each Saturday afternoon brings out a good attendance.

Parade Committee.

The following is the committee who will make the necessary arrangements for the bicycle parade to be held on September 5th, the Saturday before Labor Day: Edward White, J. Fred. MacDonald, Horace J. A LONG CHASE FOR BICYCLE THIEVES RESULTED IN THEIR CAPTURE.

Detective Totten Followed Them for Many Days and Many Miles, But Did Not Catch Them Till After They Sold the Wheels

Somerville, Aug. 4.—Edward Bartow and James Fisher, two business men of Bound Brook, had their wheels stolen while attending a harvest home gathering in the village of Milstone on the night of July 25. The wheels were taken from a cloak room near the church, while the young men were entertaining a party of friends on the lawn. A large party of wheelmen scoured the country in every direction in search of the thieves as soon as the theft was discovered, but could find no trace of them.

On the following day Detective O. D. Totten traced the riders of the stolen wheels to the hamlet of Frankfort. They were two negroes known in the Souriand Mountain district as Pete Setchel and Oliver Johnson. Johnson is a son of Preacher J. S. Johnson, who is now under sentence of death in the Somerset county jail for the murder of Annie Beekman. The two were doing fancy riding for the amusement of a crowd of loungers in front of a country grocery when the detective came upon them. They scorched off in the direction of Hopewell at the sight of the detective, and left him and his fast road horse far in the rear. From Hopewell they took a circuitous course of thirty miles to Somerville, with the detective hot upon their track. Here they eluded arrest and rode thirty miles to Trenton. At Trenton they sold the stolen wheels for $10.50 to Pawnbroker Simon Levey. They have since kept in hiding in different parts of the surrounding country.

Last night Detective Totten traced them to a colored settlement near Somerville, where they were captured with the aid of the local police. They confessed the theft and were placed in county jail.

Bartow and Fisher have recovered their wheels from Pawnbroker Simon.

CLUBBED A HORSE.

A Borough Man Who is Not Fit to Drive a Horse.

On a warrant issued by Justice Storms, of New Market, and endorsed by Justice Mattison, of North Plainfield, Julius Berrick, of the borough, was arrested yesterday by Marshal Wilson, on complaint of Agent William Pangborn, of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. On July 24th, Berrick was carting a load of stone through New Market and the wagon got fastened in some way. Berrick, in a fit of passion, clubbed one of the horses shamefully. The facts were learned by Agent Pangborn, but Berrick disappeared and had not been seen until today. The horses he was using belonged to George Wise, of the borough. At present Berrick is working for N. B. Smalley. The man was giving a hearing and placed under $50 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

FINANCES COME FIRST.

SUCCESS OF THE BICYCLE PARADE DEPENDS ON THE MONEY RAISED.

The Press Will Receive Popular Contributions to Aid the Great Event—Public Interest Grows Apace About the Town.

There is no doubt but that Plainfield's giant parade which is to be held on September 5th will far excel any thing of the kind ever held in this district. The entire city is fast waking up to a realization of its size and importance and the interest is growing apace. From the start it made a very favorable impression and when the necessary funds are subscribed, there will be no hinderance to its success.

The parade committee held an informal talk last evening at Chairman F. L. C. Martin's store. It was impossible to take any definite action until after the meeting of the general committee tomorrow night, but many plans were suggested and discussed. The prize list will be an extensive one and will be arranged so as to attract clubs from all over the State, New York and Long Island. The individual prizes will be well worth striving for, and the ingenuity of Plainfield cyclists will be taxed to its uttermost to get up decorations that will keep the prizes at home.

Of course, the most necessary part of the affair is the financial part. The finance committee is hard at work securing subscriptions among the business men but there should be many other citizens who would be willing to help out. The Daily Press will receive popular subscriptions for this object and it is hoped that the Plainfield people will liberally assist in making this greatest summer event of the year for Plainfield a great success.

The general committee will hold a very important meeting tomorrow evening at the Board of Trade rooms.

CAMP LEVEE ESTABLISHED.

A. H. Serrill Commemorates it by Cutting an Artery in his Wrist.

"I've been working on the levee.
All the livelong day."

*So sing four young men who yester-*days established "Camp Levee" on the Watchung mountain near Washington Rock. All but one of them can sing it truthfully but the other attends to his duties in this city during the day and takes supper and spends the night at the camp. The four young men, who have chosen this delightful way of spending the summer days, are Arthur H. Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, Thomas U. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, and Charles C. Gallup and Charles H. Angleman, of West Front street. Smith returns everyday to his duties in this city, only to appreciate all the more the cool breezes on the mountain in the evening. Yesterday, the tent and equipments were carried up and "Camp Levee" was fully established.

The first night did not pass, however, without incident. Smith and Serrell came down to Plainfield in the evening and returned, or started to, in the darkness. The moonlight was a minus quantity and the young men lost the path and wandered about the mountain. In the darkness, Serrell missed his footing and slipped, falling on a barbed wire fence. The wire cut his wrist and severed an artery there.

The camp was at last found but, as they were unable to stop the flow of blood, Serrell and Gallup came back to Plainfield and had the wound dressed.

The two young men, who remained, found the night on the mountain very chilly and were only too glad to use the extra supply of blankets.

Hot at the Shore.

The excursionists of the Crescent Avenue church, Church of the Redeemer, St. Stephen's church and Bethel chapel Sunday-schools, had a pleasant day at the seashore Tuesday. Two sections of cars were needed to convey the large party of pleasure seekers to the shore. On their arrival there was a land breeze which made the atmosphere very hot. Many sought a secluded and shady spot until about 11 o'clock when the wind shifted and a breeze from the ocean commenced to blow up. By keeping quiet one could keep cool, but many of the young people were out to see the sights and have a good time in general, and they had it notwithstanding the oppressiveness. There were no mishaps to the excursionists.

Former Plainfielder Dead.

Word was received in this city, Tuesday, announcing the death in Elizabeth of J. H. Rapheires, a former resident of Arlington avenue, this city. His death is said to have resulted from excessive heat. Mr. Rapheires left here about ten years ago, and since then he has lived a retired life.

PROSTRATED BY HEAT.

JOSEPH HURTLIEH SUCCUMBED IN JUSTICE NASH'S OFFICE.

He Talked Wildly on His Delirium and Gave the Police a Mystery to Solve, Which Was Cleared up This Morning Early.

The extreme heat of the last few days has had many victims and, Tuesday afternoon, another man was prostrated in this city and the police were given another mystery to solve.

"Give me a drink of water," begged a man as he entered the office of Justice Nash late yesterday afternoon. He reeled as he entered and grasped a chair for support. There was a wild look in his eyes that intensified as he heard the Justice's answer that he had no water. The man was of medium built, had a mostache and appeared about thirty years old.

Before a glass of water could be secured, the man fell to the floor with a groan. Chief Grant was hurriedly summoned by telephone and soon he and Sergeant Kiely appeared. Dr. Long was also sent for and arrived in a few moments. The stranger appeared in a halfswoon and was but partially conscious. Everything appeared to the prostrated man said, and then his utterings became incoherent.

Before that, however, he had told Chief Grant that his name was Joseph Hurtheh, and that he was employed by W. H. Boggs, a florist, of Weston, which is situated along the canal about five miles from Bound Brook. In the morning, he said, he had ridden one horse and led the other down from Weston to Plainfield, and was thirty-two years of age.

Dr. Long ordered out the ambulance and the prostrated man was taken to the hospital, and on the way he became wild and it took the united efforts of Sergeant Kiely and Theodore Kurzhals, Jr., to keep him on the cot. The physician declared that the man had been effected by the terrible heat.

Chief Grant telegraphed to Hurtheh's supposed employer at Weston, and this morning received an answer from Boggs, saying that Hurtheh was not in his employ, and suggested that the Chief had better investigate the ownership of the horses.

C. S. Conklin, of Doremons, New York, drove from the above place to this city yesterday and upon his arrival here he was overcome with the heat. He was taken to the City Hotel and Dr. Adams was called. The doctor found that the man's temperature was 103 and that the heat had effected him very much. Proper treatment was given and a little while Conklin began to recover. He is still very weak and will not be able to leave the hotel for home before tomorrow. Medical aid was summoned just, in time to save the man.

Chief Grant investigated the case Tuesday morning and found that the mystery was easy to solve after all. He saw the man in the hospital who had recovered somewhat from the sunstroke and found that his story of the night before had only been his wild unmeaning rayings. The man had started home to Connecticut in the train and had stopped here. The horses in question are now quiety pastured at Weston and have never left there except in the disordered mind of the sick man. He expects to return to Weston this afternoon.

RECEIVER APPOINTED.

Affairs of the Jersey Wheel Company to Be Wound Up.

Charles A. Reed, of the law firm of Reed & Coddington, went to Trenton yesterday, and in behalf of some of the stockholders of the Jersey Wheel Company, made application to the Vice Chancellor to settle up the affairs of the company. The liabilities of the corporation are $12,000 and the assets $7,500. Lawyer Wm. R. Codington was appointed to act as receiver.

The company was organized last spring to manufacture and put on the market a bicycle embodying the ideas of George H. Cobb, a well known bicycle enthusiast in the Metropolitan district. The factory of the Climax Stopper Company was purchased and machinery put in, but plans failed to materialize and only a few wheels were put on the market. A large sporting goods store was also started on North avenue, but this did not prosper as was expected.

Dunham Family Reunion.

The reunion of the Dunham family be held this afternoon at the old homestead in Stelton, and is largely attended. A good old fashioned family dinner will mark the occasion. Speeches will be delivered by Rev. L. E. Livermore and J. A. Leverideb, both of this city.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

AN INTER-STATE LINE.

PRINCIPAL NEW JERSEY TOWNS TO BE CONNECTED BY TROLLEY.

The Syndicate Has a Fleet and the Contracts Have Been Made For the Building of the Line—Some of the Details.

An electric road between New York and Philadelphia is said to be now an assured fact. Ex-Mayor Frank A. Magowan and J. Henry Darrah, of Trenton, after nearly a year's hard work, have succeeded in forming a syndicate among New York and Philadelphia capitalists, who are well and prominently known in both cities. The result is the organization of a company, the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, which also has associated with it the Central Jersey Traction Company.

At the head of the enterprise is Joseph Canby, of Philadelphia, who has had much experience in traction railways. He is now connected with the most prominent traction company in Philadelphia and is also identified with several others in Pennsylvania. Mr. Canby is also the head of a new company which has just secured a franchise for an electric road in Fairmount Park, Philadelphia.

The syndicate for the traction road through this State is, it is asserted, not only formed, but the transfers of stock have been made and a partial payment made to the promoters, Messrs. Magowan and Darrah, of Trenton, and John Blair McAfee, of Philadelphia. Several of the old officers and directors of the former company remain in the new organization.

Work upon the new road is to be commenced in a few days. A contract has just been given out for work upon the road between New Brunswick and Bound Brook, Raritan and Dunellen, which will amount to $475,000. A power-house, to cost $100,000, is to be erected near Bound Brook. The specifications for laying other branches of the road are now out.

Mr. Magowan is the president of the concern and was the largest stockholder in both companies. He has practically all the stock in the syndicate. It is understood upon good authority that settlement for the stock has been made to the promoters upon a basis of part cash and part bonds and other securities.

From the Asbestos Club.

The news of the demise of Elias R. Pope startles this community, and the solemn fact accentuates the wide popularity of the deceased in life. He was an unassuming, companionable and genial gentleman, easily of approach for advice, not so much in abstract intelligence as practical common sense. From boyhood he advanced gradually in commercial confidence and was sought for places of highest trust. His life asserts itself in death and speaks plainer than written epitaphs; prominent in every phase of this community; charitable with the quietness of true charity; the friend of the widow and orphan; unpretentious in his habits; yet the general expression of the public sense make him a business and social ideal, whose influence was wide and lasting.

"Old Hugh" Was There.

That old and familiar character, "Old Humid," who has been playing havoc in this part of the country for the past week, should be arrested on the spot and sent to Farmer Dunn. The weather has been so warm that even politicians can't cool their ardor, and Farmer Dunn has been petitioned by the rich and poor alike for a change in the condition of things. Just think of the thermometer registering 119 degrees at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, not exactly in the shade and with no coal fires blazing in the cellar. But such was the case at Hope Chapel, and the instrument was in a position to catch what little breeze there was floating at the time.

To Hear Bryan.

Among those who attended the Bryan and Sewall notification meeting, and occupy reserved seats in Madison Square Garden last evening were James E. Martine, John Rose, Wm. M. Myers, D. W. Martine, Andrew Kenney, David Kenney, John Kenney, John McIntyre and Charles Lyman.

It was Edward Stevens and not J. Stevens that was arraigned before Justice Crosley yesterday morning and fined $10 for being drunk and disorderly.

Special Song of Service.

Dr. Robert Lowry has kindly offered to compose words and music of a song of welcome to be sung at the opening of the C. E. convention, October 7th, by the local choir of 500 voices.

Poison Ivy, insect bites, bruises, scalds, burns, are quickly cured by DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the great pile cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

HEAT KEPT MANY AWAY.

THE BAND CONCERT WAS NOT AS LARGELY ATTENDED AS USUAL.

But Still There Was a Big Crowd Present and the Music Was Rendered so as to Please Those Who Listened to It.

Even the prospects of a delightful band concert in the open air could not overcome the general prejudice against moving in Tuesday's sheat and stiltiness and so the first of Councilman Frost's open air concerts to be held in the open lot across Madison avenue from the Babcock building was not as largely attended as the previous ones. Of course, it was the warm weather that was to blame, for those that did brave the elements and venture out found the evening an extremely oppressive one. High collars and stiff shirt bosoms went down before the ravages of the heat without exception, and everybody was uncomfortably warm.

It was a presiring crowd that gathered to listen to the music. Front street was crowded and almost entirely blocked along the open lot with the exception of a little path which the police kept clear by unusual exertions. The steps to the First M. E. church made an excellent grand stand and it was about as hard to get a seat there as on the grand stand when the old Crescents played ball. Those who couldn't get a seat there either took possession of the curb or lounged against the adjacent buildings. Madison avenue, north of Front street, made a quiet resort for many of the listners

There was one man who had a bright idea, but it needed considerable faith in human nature to carry it out. He had a stock of camp chairs on hand and rented them out for a small sum. Of course, he took his chances of ever getting his chairs again but, according to last accounts, he got them all back.

The crowd was made up of the same people as usually attend the concerts. Every class was represented, but last evening the young people seemed to greatly outnumber the older ones.

The band played in its usual excellent manner, and the selections were all well received, especially the medley of popular airs.

Who Took Jerry's Grass?

There was a heavy growth of grass sometime ago on the cleared spot at the City Park. Street Commissioner Meeker told Special Officer Jeremiah Cash that he might have it for his horse if he cared to cut it. Jerry was much pleased at the offer and accepted with thanks. Carefully he cut it one afternoon and returned next morning to carry it away, when to his disgust he found that some one had been there before him and that "the early bird had got the worm." Now Jerry is looking out for the thief.

Picked Her Pocket.

A middleaged woman from South Plainfield came to Plainfield Tuesday night to see Prof. Nate Guttman and his band put out—not on—airs. While circulating around among the 1,303 persons in the crowd, some mean scamp gently lifted a wallet from her dress pocket. The wallet contained just enough money to take her home, so she walked.

A Matter of Local History.

Many persons, passengers and others, often ask how long the North Avenue station has been standing. For their information it is stated that the brick work on the exterior was completed December 1st, 1874, but it was several months afterwards when the station was thrown open to the public.

Another Heat Prostration.

Mrs. James Emory, of Park avenue, was about the house as usual on Saturday last, attending to her household duties, when she suddenly reeled and fell over on the floor from heat prostration. Mrs. Emory is sixty-seven years of age, but Dr. Hodges is doing his utmost to bring her around all right again.

The Meanest Kind of a Thief.

One of the street laborers, who was at work fixing up the roadbed on East Front street near Richmond street Tuesday, left his dinner pail hanging on the fence. When dinner time came the pail was missing and the poor man had to go hungry for the balance of the day.

Crop Report.

Weather Observer Neagle has the following crop report this week:

Excessive sunshine and high temperatures have not yet had a disastrous effect on crops everything is looking well, especially corn which is growing rapidly and will yield well providing rainfall in moderate this is needed. Average temperature, 80 degrees: rainfall, 0.38 inches, on three days.

Many a day's work is lost by sick headache, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most effectual pill for overcoming such difficulties. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

J., was served, the great success of which was due to the charming and affable hostess, Mrs. Henry Allen, of New York. Supper over, all participated in dancing, singing, etc., until the handsome "Spanish Cavalier," T. Nightingale, announced that Sunday morning was approaching.—Mt. Minsi Mountain Record.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlin's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Stimson stood in a corner and glowered. He was a fierce man and had indomitable whiskers, albeit he was very small.

"That young tarrier," he whispered to himself. "He wants to quit makin' eyes at Lizzie. This is too much of a good thing. First thing you know, he'll get fired."

His brow, creased in a frown, he strode over to the huge open doors and looked at a sign. "Stimson's Mammoth Merry-Go-Round," it read, and the glory of it was great. Stimson stood and contemplated the sign. It was an enormous affair; the letters were as large as men. The glow of it, the grandeur of it was very apparent to Stimson. At the end of his contemplation, he shook his head thoughtfully, determinedly "No, no," he muttered. "This is too much of a good thing. First thing you know, he'll get fired."

A soft, booming sound of surf, mingled with the cries of bathers, came from the beach. There was a vista of sand and sky and sea that drew to a mystic point far away in the northward. In the mighty angle, a girl in red dress was crawling slowly like some kind of a spider on the fabric of nature. A few flags hung lazily above where the bathhouses were marshalled in compact squares. Upon the verge of the sea, stood a ship with its shadowy sails painted dimly upon the sky, and high overhead, in the still, sun-shot air a great hawk swung and thrilled slowly.

Within the merry-go-round there was a whirling circle of ornamental lions, giraffes, camels, ponies, goats, glittering with varnish and metal that caught swift reflections from windows high above them. With stiff wooden legs, they swept on in a never-ending race while a great orchestrion clamored in wild speed. The summer sunlight sprinkled its gold upon the gaudy creatures carried by the tireless racers and upon all the devices of decoration that made Stimson's machine magnificent and famous. A host of laughing children bestrode the animals, bending forward like charging cavalrymen and shaking reins and whooping in glee. At intervals they leaned out perilously to clutch at iron rings that were tendered them by a long swinging arm. At the intense moment before the swift grab for the rings one could see their little nervous bodies quiver with eagerness; the laughter rang shrill and excited. Down in the long rows of benches, crowds of people sat watching the game while occasionally a father might arise and go near to shout encouragement, cautionary commands, or applause at his flying off-spring. Frequently mothers called out: "Be careful, Georgie!" The orchestrion bellowed and thundered on its platform, filling the ears with its long monotonous song, while over in a corner, a man in a white apron and behind a counter roared above the tumult: "Pop corn! Pop corn!"

"YOU'D BETTER ATTEND STRICTLY TO YOUR BUSINESS."

A young man stood upon a small, raised platform, erected in the manner of a pulpit and just without the line of the circling figures. It was his duty to manipulate the wooden arm and affix the rings. When all were gone into the hands of the triumphant children, he held forth a basket, into which they returned all save the coveted brass one, which meant another ride free and made the holder very illustrious. The young man stood all day upon his narrow platform, affixing rings or holding forth the basket. He was a sort of general squire in this diet of childhood. He was very busy.

And yet Stimson, the astute, had noticed that the young man frequently found time to twist about on his platform and smile at a girl who shyly sold tickets behind a silvered netting. This, indeed, was the great reason of Stimson's glowering. The young man upon the raised platform had no manner of license to smile at the girl behind the silvered netting. It was a most gigantic insolence. Stimson was amazed at it. "Why, jiminy," he said to himself again, "that fellow is smiling at my daughter." Even in this tone of great wrath it could be discerned that Stimson was filled with wonder that any youth should dare smile at the daughter in the presence of the august father.

Often the dark-eyed girl peered between the shining wires, and, upon being detected by the young man, she usually turned her head away quickly to prove to him that she was not interested. At other times, however, her eyes seemed filled with a tender fear lest he should fall from that exceedingly dangerous platform. As for the young man, it was plain that these glances filled him with valor, and he stood carelessly upon his perch as if he deemed it of no consequence that he might fall from it. In all the complexities of his daily life and duties he found opportunity to gaze ardently at the vision behind the netting.

This silent courtship was conducted over the heads of the crowd who thronged about the bright machine. The swift, eloquent glances of the young man went unobserved save by him with their message. There had finally become established between the two in this manner a subtle understanding and companionship. They communicated mentally all that they wished. The boy told his love, his reverence, his hope in the changes of the future. The girl told him that she loved him, that she did not love him, that she did not love him, that she did love him. Sometimes a little sign saying "cashier" in gold letters, and hanging upon the silvered netting, got directly in range and interfered with a tender message.

The love affair had not continued without anger, unhappiness, despair. The girl had once smiled brightly upon a youth who came to buy some tickets for his little sister, and the young man upon the platform observing this smile had been filled with gloomy rage. He stood like a dark statue of vengeance upon his pedestal and thrust out the basket to the children with a gesture that was full of scorn for their hollow happiness, for their insecure and temporary joy. For five hours he did not once look at the girl when she was looking at him. He was going to crush her with his indifference; he was going to demonstrate that he had never been serious. However, when he narrowly observed her in secret, he discovered that she became more blythe than was usual with her. When he found that his apparent indifference had not crushed her he suffered greatly. She did not love him, he concluded, if she could be thus easily crushed. He would have been crushed. For two days he lived a miserable existence upon his high perch. He consoled himself by thinking of how unhappy he was, and by swift, furtive glances at the loved face. At any rate he was in her presence, and he could get a good view from his perch when there was no interference by the little sign: "Cashier."

But suddenly, swiftly, these clouds vanished and under the imperial blue sky of the restored confidence, they dwelt in peace, a peace that was satisfaction, a peace that, like a babe, put its trust in the treachery of the future. This confidence endured until the next day, when she, for an unknown cause, suddenly refused to look at him. Mechanically, he continued his task, his face blazed, a tortured victim of doubt, fear, suspicion. With his eyes he supplicated her to telegraph an explanation. She replied with a stony glance that froze his blood. There was a great difference in their respective reasons for becoming angry. His were always foolish, but apparent, plain as the moon. Hers were subtle, feminine, as incomprehensible as the stars, as mystic as the shadows at night.

They fell and soared, and soared and fell in this manner until they knew that to live without each other would be a wandering in deserts. They had grown so intent upon the uncertainties, the variations, the guessings of their affair that the world had become but a huge immaterial background. In time of peace their souls were filled with prayerful, caresses confided to the air. In time of war, their youthful hearts, capable of profound agony, were wrung by the intricate emotions of doubt. They were the victims of the dread angel of affectionate speculation that forces the tired brain endlessly on rounds that lead nowhere.

At night, the problem of whether or not she loved him confronted the young man like a specter, looming as high as a hill and telling him not to delude himself. Upon the following day, this battle of the night displayed itself in the renewed fervor of his glances and in their increased number. Whenever he thought he could detect that she too was suffering, he felt a thrill of joy.

But there came a time when the young man looked back upon these contortions with contempt. He believed then that he had imagined his pain. This came about when the redoubtable Stimson marched forward to participate.

"This has got to stop," Stimson had said to himself, as he stood and watched them. They had grown careless of the light world that clustered about them; they were become so engrossed in their personal drama that the language of their eyes was almost as obvious as gestures. And Stimson, through his keen sense, his wonderful, infallible penetration, suddenly came into possession of these obvious facts. "Well, of all the nerves," he said, regarding with a new interest the young man upon the perch. He was a resolute man. He never hesitated to grapple with a crisis. He decided to overturn everything at once, for, although small, he was very fierce and impetuous. He resolved to crush this affair.

He strode over to the silvered netting. "Say, you want to quit your everlasting grinning at that idiot," he said, grimly.

She cast down her eyes and made a little heap of quarters into a stack. She was unable to withstand the terrible scrutiny of her small and fierce father.

Stimson turned from his daughter and went to a spot beneath the platform. He fixed his eyes upon the young man and said: "I've been speakin' to Lizzie. You better attend strictly to your own business or there'll be a new man here next week. I will, by jing!" He had blazed away with a shotgun. The young man reeled upon his perch. At last he in a measure regained his composure and managed to stammer: "A-all right, sir." He knew that denials would be futile with the terrible Stimson. He agitatedly began to rattle the rings in the basket and pretend that he was obliged to count them or inspect them in some way. He, too, was unable to face the great Stimson.

For a moment, Stimson stood in great satisfaction and gloated over the effect of his threat. "I've fixed them," he said complacently, and went out to smoke a cigar and marvel in himself. Through his mind went the proud reflection that people who came in contact with his granite will usually ended in quick and abject submission.

PART II.

One evening, a week after Stimson had indulged in the proud reflection that people who came in contact with his granite will usually ended in quick and abject submission, a young feminine friend of the girl behind the silvered netting came to her there and asked her to walk on the beach after "Stimson's Mammoth Merry-Go-Round" was closed for the night. The girl assented with a nod.

The young man upon the perch holding the rings saw the two things that nod and judged its meaning. Into his mind was born a little plan for defeating the watchfulness of the redoubtable Stimson.

When the merry-go-round was closed and the two girls started for the beach, he wandered off aimlessly in another direction, but he kept them in view and as soon as he was assured that he had escaped the vigilance of Stimson, he followed them.

The electric lights on the beach made a broad band of tremoring light, extending parallel to the sea, and upon this band the two girls walked. Beyond a great crowd intermingling, intertwining, sometimes colliding. In the darkness stretched the vast purple expanse of the ocean, and the deep indigo sky above her peopled with yellow stars. Occasionally out upon the water a whirling mass of froth suddenly flashed into view, like a great ghastly robe appearing, and then vanished, leaving the sea in its solemn, mystic darkness, from whence came those bass tones of the water's unknown emotion. A wind, cool, reminiscent of the wave wastes, made the women hold their wraps about their throats and caused the men to grip the rims of their straw hats. It carried the noise of the band in the pavilion in gusts. Sometimes people unable to dance upon the floor, trod up at the pavilion and were reassured upon beholding the distant leader still gesticulating and bobbing and the other members of the band with their lips pried to their instruments. High in the sky soared an unassuming moon, faintly silver.

For a time the young man was afraid to approach the two girls. He followed them at a distance and called himself a coward. At last, however, he saw them stop on the outer edge of the crowd and stand silently listening to the voices of the band. When he came to where they stood, he was trembling in his agitation. They had not seen him.

"Lizzie," he began. "I—"

The girl wheeled instantly and put her hand to her throat. "Oh, Frank, how you frightened me," she said brilliantly.

"Well, you know I—I—" he stuttered.

But the other girl was one of those beings who are born to attend at tragedies. She had for love a reverence, an admiration that was greater the more she contemplated the fact that she knew nothing of it. This couple before her fine fervor bowed her and made her humbly wish that she might be destined to be of some service to them. She was very homely.

Perceiving that the two loitered before them, she, in her sympathy, actually overestimated the crisis and felt that he might fall dying at their feet. Shyly, but with courage, she marched to the rescue. "Why don't you walk on the beach with us," she said. The young man gave her a glance of deep gratitude which was not without the patronage which a man in his condition naturally feels for one who pities it. The three walked on.

Finally the being who was born to attend at this tragedy said that she wished to sit down and gaze at the sea alone.

They politely urged her to walk on with them, but she was obstinate. She wished to gaze at the sea, alone. The young man swore to himself that he would be her friend until he died.

And so the two young lovers went on without her. They turned once to look at her.

"Jennie's awful nice," said the girl.

"You bet she is," replied the young man, with great feeling.

They were silent for a little time.

At last the girl said: "You were angry at me yesterday."

"No, I wasn't."

"Yes, you were, too. You wouldn't look at me once all day."

"No, I wasn't angry. I was only putting on."

Though she had, of course, known it, his confession seemed to make her very angry. She flashed a resentful glance at him. "Oh, were you, indeed!" she said, with a great air.

For a few minutes she was so haughty with him that he loved her to madness. And directly this great poem which stuck at his lips came forth lamely in fragments.

When they walked back toward the other girl and saw the patience of her attitude, their hearts swelled in a patronizing and secondary tenderness for her.

They were very happy. If they had been miserable they would have charged this fairy scene of the night with a criminal heartlessness, but as they were joyous, they vaguely wor-dered how the purple sea, the yellow stars, the changing crowd under the electric lights could be so phlegmatic and stolid.

"YOU WERE ANGRY WITH ME YESTERDAY."

They walked home by the lakeside way and out upon the water, those gay paper lanterns, flashing, fleeting and careering, sang to them, sang a chorus of red and violet and green and gold, a song of mystic lands of the future.

One day when business paused during the dull, sultry afternoon, Stimson went up town. Upon his return he found that the popcorn man from his stand over in a corner was keeping an eye upon the machine for him, and that nobody at all was attending to the wooden arm and the iron rings.

He strode forward like a sergeant of grenadiers. "Where in thunder is Lizzie?" he demanded, a storm of rage in his eyes.

The popcorn man, although long associated with Stimson, had never got over being dazed. "They've—they've—gone around to th'—th' house," he said, with difficulty, as if he had just been stunned.

"Whose house?" snapped Stimson.

"Your—your house, I 'spose," said the popcorn man feebly.

Stimson marched round to his home. Imperial denunciations surged, already formulated, to the tip of his tongue, and he bided the moment when his anger could fall upon the heads of that pair of children.

He found his wife convulsive and in tears.

"Where's Lizzie?"

And then she burst forth: "Oh—John—John—they've run away—I know they have. They drove by here not three minutes ago. They must have done it on purpose to hide good-by, for Lizzie waved her hand sad-like, and then, before I could get out to ask where they were going or what, Frank whipped up the horse and they were gone."

Stimson gave vent to a dreadful roar. "Get my revolver—get a hack—get my revolver, d——, do you hear—what the devil"—his voice became incoherent in a chaotic rage.

He had always ordered his wife about as if she were a battalion of infantry, and despite her misery, the training of years caused her to spring mechanically to obey, but suddenly she turned to him a shrill appeal.

"Oh, John—not—the revolver."

"Confound it, let go of me," he roared again and shook off his clinging arms.

He ran hatless upon the street. There was a multitude of hacks at the summer resort, but it was ages to him before he could find one. Then he charged it like a bull. "Up town," he yelled, as he tumbled into the rear seat. The hackman thought of severed arteries and broken bones. His galloping horses distanced a large number of citizens who had been running to find what caused such contortions by the little hatless man.

"OH! JOHN—NOT—THE REVOLVER."

It chanced as the bouncing hack went along near the lake, Stimson gazed across the calm, gray expanse and recognized a color in a bonnet and a point of a hood. A buggy was traveling along a highway that led to Sorrington. Stimson bellowed: "There—there—there they are—in that buggy."

The hackman became inspired with the full knowledge of the situation. He struck his horse a deliberate blow with the whip. His mouth expanded in a grin of excitement and joy. It came to pass that this old vehicle, with its drowsy horse and its dusty-eyed and tranquil driver, seemed all suddenly to awaken, to become animated and fleet. The horse ceased to ruminate on his state, his air of reflection vanished. He became intent upon his gait and spread his aged legs in quaint and ridiculous devices for speed. The driver, his eyes shining, sat critically in his seat. He watched each motion of this rattling machine down before him. He was an engineer. He used the whip with judgment and deliberation as the engineer would have used coal or oil. The horse clacked swiftly upon the macadam, the wheels hummed, the body of the vehicle wheezed and groaned.

Stimson, in the rear seat, was erect in that impassive attitude that comes sometimes to the furious man when he is obliged to trust the battle to others. Frequently, however, the tempest in his breast came to his face and he howled: "Go it—go it—you're gaining; pound 'im; thump the life out of 'im; hit 'im hard, you fool." His hand grasped the back of the front seat carriage top, and it was clenched so that the nails were faintly blue.

Ahead, that other carriage had been flying with speed, as from realization of the menace in the rear. As if his every rapidity, drawn by the sheer spirit of a young and modern horse, Stimson could see the buggy-top bobbing, bobbing. That little pane, like an eye, was a derision to him. Once he leaned forward and bawled angry sentences. He began to feel impotent; his whole expedition was the tottering of an old man upon the trail of birds. A sense of age made him choke again with rage. His vehicle, that was youth, with youth's pace. It was swift-flying with the hope of dreams. He began to comprehend those two children ahead of him, and he knew a sudden and strange awe, because he pursued their future, their young blood, the power to fly strongly into the future and feel and hope again, even at that time when his bones must be laid in the earth.

The wind rose easily from the hot road and stifled the nostrils of Stimson. The highway vanished far away in a point with a suggestion of intolerable length. The other vehicle was becoming an insect. Stimson could no longer see the derisive eye.

At last the hackman drew rein to his horse and turned to look at Stimson. "No use, I guess," he said. Stimson made a gesture of acquiescence, rage, despair. As the hackman turned his dripping horse about, Stimson sank back with the astonishment and grief of a man who has been defied by the universe. He had been in a great perspiration and now his bald head felt cool and uncomfortable. He put up his hand with the sudden recollection that he had forgotten his hat.

At last he made a gesture. It meant that at any rate he was not responsible.

[THE END.]

Word From the Tourists.

A letter was received Friday from Rev. C. E. Herring who, in company with Geo. Coleman, sailed some time ago for Europe. Mr. Herring states the trip over was truly delightful and neither he and his companion were sick. They were much encouraged by several persons who informed them that they would find excellent roads for wheeling. The letter was mailed upon their arrival at Antwerp, just as they were preparing to start on their wheels. They were both in excellent health and ready to enjoy a pleasant trip.

Serious Fire Narrowly Averted.

A serious fire was narrowly averted Saturday evening at Rogers' restaurant on East Front street. Mr. Rogers was lighting the gas chandeliers in his place when suddenly a spark caught in some of the fancy paper decorations around one of the chandeliers. In an instant the whole affair was in a blaze, but Mr. Rogers showed great presence of mind and with the use of his two hands quickly extinguished the fire before any serious damage resulted.

Funeral Service of Miss Edith Marsh.

In spite of the oppressive heat quite a large number of friends attended the funeral services of Miss Edith S. Marsh, at the residence of her father, Francis E. Marsh, 915 Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Martin I. Cooley and Miss Gussie Runyon sang two selections. The Rev. Robert Lowry, a friend and neighbor, conducted the service. Interment at Evergreen Cemetery followed the service.

To Picnic at the Rock.

The Warren Township Sunday Schools will hold a union picnic at Washington Rock on Wednesday August 19th. The Plainfield Cornet Band will discourse music. Speeches by prominent local speakers are on the program. Should the day prove stormy the exercises will be postponed until the next day.

Danced on the Mountain.

An enjoyable dance was held at the Mountain Park Inn Saturday night, which was attended by a number of Plainfield's young society people. Despite the warm weather the guests found it exceedingly comfortable on the mountain. These Saturday night dances have become very popular and are well attended.

No After-dark Picnics.

Bishop Wigger, of the Roman Catholic faith, of Newark, has issued an order to the effect that all picnics under church auspices must be brought to a close at 6 o'clock in the evening, and no permission will be granted for after-dark or midnight picnics.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

A Suit Brought to Determine Ownership of Machinery.

An interesting case was tried before Justice Crosley and a six-men jury Monday morning in the borough court room. John Wolf, dealer in farming implements, brought action against a man named James Stewart, a farmer, living near Mt. Bethel. Lawyer John Kirch represented Mr. Stewart and Mr. Wolf had no lawyer. It appears that some time ago a man named Falkner living in the borough purchased some implements from Mr. Wolf and never paid for them. Mr. Falkner left town some time ago and the goods were stored in a barn on the farm occupied by Mr. Stewart. In consequence Mr. Wolf made a levy on the goods to satisfy his claim. Mr. Stewart said the goods belonged to him and that Wolf had no right to them.

The case tried this morning was for the purpose of ascertaining who was the owner of the goods and the jury gave a verdict of no cause for action. Those serving as jurors were: J. W. Van Horn, J. M. Smalley, George Wise, F. Hall, Frank Kesselring and C. J. Smith.

DEATH OF A RESPECTED WOMAN.

Mrs. John L. Laing Succumbs to a Lingering Illness in Brooklyn.

Announcement is made of the death of Mrs. John Louis Laing, which occurred at her home on DeKalb avenue, Brooklyn, Saturday morning, after a lingering illness. Deceased resided on this avenue for a long time previous to the family's removal to Brooklyn. She was a daughter of the late John Bryant and a sister of the late Joel Bryant. Mrs. J. F. Boman, of West Fifth street, this city, is a sister-in-law.

Mrs. Laing was a member of the M. E. church while she was a resident here, a faithful Christian and a consistent member of the church. In the family circle she was loving and devoted and her death will cast a gloom over many.

Besides the husband, there survive her one daughter and two sons, one of the latter for several years, a compositor on The Central New Jersey Times here and later of the Brooklyn Eagle.

Fast Driving at Bound Brook.

Two well known North Plainfield young men went for a carriage ride to Bound Brook Suuday, and it was their intention to drive on to New Brunswick. The two speeded their horse through the streets at a rapid gait, and instead of going direct to New Brunswick as was their first intention, they returned to a hotel for supper, and here they were arrested, marched before the borough judge. They pleaded ignorance of the law, but the judge fined them $10 each and trusted them for a week to make good their respective fines. It is hardly thought possible that the young men will be seen in Bound Brook again this season.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following summons have been issued in Justice Newcorn's court, all returnable August 17th: McClintock against Smalley; Van Winkle against Johnson; Miller against Ten Eyck et ux; Waite & Company against Miller Brothers. The case of Johnson against Hoffman was adjourned till August 24th, and the case of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals against Barry was adjourned till August 13th. The contract cases of the United States Heater Company against Cobb et ux, and Griffen against Cobb et ux, were tried this morning and judgment was given the plaintiff in each case.

Everybody Takes to the Car.

Sunday was another very busy day for the street railway. The North Plainfield and Dunellen cars were crowded during the day and evening, and standing room was almost at a premium. The Somerset street line also conveyed many passengers to and from the mountain. Many entire families took a ride over the various routes in order to get what little breeze the was.

Music and Mirth at the Inn.

At the Mountain View Inn Saturday night there was music and mirth in great variety, and for an hour or two the guests and a select few of their friends were entertained with recitations by Clerk Armstrong and other members of the assemblage. Mr. Beach, of New York, also entertained the guests with some expert phrenological tests, which were entertaining and instructive.

Carried a Trunk on His Wheel.

There are tricks in all trades, but the latest device adopted by bicyclists is carry trunks. One man rode up to the North Avenue station Saturday morning carrying a 75-pound trunk along with him. The trunk was strapped partly to the rider and partly to the bike.

For the Little Ones.

Additional babies are being given daily outings on the mountains. Some of the liverymen and hackmen drive whole loads of infants to the Mountain Camp almost every pleasant day, and the little ones seem to enjoy the outing very much.

POLITICAL POT SIZZLES.

AT PRESENT THE TALK IS ABOUT SENATOR AND SHERIFF.

For Sheriff William Kirk is Said to be a Strong Candidate—George Kyte Looked Upon With favor For State Senator.

The Elizabeth Journal recently published the following political gossip:

Union county this fall will elect three assemblymen, a senator and a sheriff, and there promises to be a lively run for the nominations on both the Republican and Democratic sides. Then too, the county will vote for congressman as well as presidential electors.

At present the only talk is about candidates for senator and sheriff. They are the two offices in which the people of the county are at present taking the most interest, assembly and congressional talk being temporarily sidetracked. The Republican congressional nomination, however, will probably be given to Congressman Charles N. Fowler.

For the senatorial race Senator Foster M. Voorhees seems to be the favorite of the Republicans, as he has made such a clean, fine record at Trenton. But "Our Foster" has a large law practice, and, while his friends intend to insist that he run, some of the more intimate of his political colleagues say that he has not yet decided to slight his practice for another term in the senate chamber.

Sheriff George Kyte of Fanwood is being put forward by some of his friends as a claimant for the Republican nomination for senatorial honors, and a number of them expect to secure the running place for him. They claim that his chances of securing the nomination are good, but recognize that should Senator Voorhees be prevailed upon to stand for a renomination their candidate would have a hard row to hoe.

Many of the Democrats are looking toward ex-Senator and Prosecutor Fred C. Marsh, to lead them in the senatorial contest and many of them believe he is the only one who would be able to come near carrying Union county for the Democrats should the Republicans renominate the present incumbent.

There are other Democrats, however, who claim to have other strong candidates but they are not saying much about them yet.

There will be but little opposition among the Democrats to the candidacy of ex-Sheriff Hicks for the shrievalty nomination. He was prevented from being re-nominated for a second term by the operation of the law prohibiting a sheriff from succeeding himself, and the members of his party seem to think he ought to have another opportunity to try for the office.

The candidates on the Republican side, however, are not so few. The Republicans are very sanguine of carrying old Union again, and believe that the nominations will be almost equivalent to an election. Therefore quite a scramble is expected for the shrievalty, which returns a good salary, and is considered a splendid political position.

While but one or two of the candidates have yet publicly announced themselves, they are already at work among the leaders, and their friends are beginning to boom their claims.

Ex-Councilman Robert Houston is being urged by his friends as the rightful candidate. He was one of the most prominent candidates in the field three years ago, but withdrew in favor of Sheriff Kyte. His loyal supporters will urge this as the reason why he should be awarded the plum this fall.

Freeholder W. H. Huiskamper, who was also a candidate at the last shrievalty struggle, is likewise being boomed by his friends.

Capt. Joseph G. Ogden is a third Elizabethan in the field, and he is going to hustle, it is said, while ex-Sheriff F. F. Glasby, also of the Ninth ward, completes the quartette of Elizabeth's claimants for the nomination.

Plainfield has a strong candidate in William Kirk, while Fanwood wants Deputy Sheriff Miller to have the office.

Then the friends of Deputy Sheriff James Clark are backing him for the place, and he has a great many of them.

Altogether there is a sufficient number of aspirants in the field to make a lively, healthful competition for the party's choice, and it is expected the hunt for delegates will begin as soon as the summer vacation season is over.

The Honeyman Party.

The latest from the Honeyman party is that they were enjoying the best of health at Interlaken, Switzerland, and about to make an excursion to the Grindelwald glacier. They had no rain, save a slight shower or two, between Liverpool and Interlaken. The delightful coaching trip, and the visits to London, Paris and Geneva had been made in perfect weather. No accidents nor breaks had occurred. The party next visit Lucerne, cross the Alps to Italy and go to Venice, Florence and Rome. They subsequently recross Switzerland and go down the Rhine.

NOT COMING THIS WAY.

TROLLEY COMPANY ABANDON ITS ROUTE TO THIS CITY.

The Capitalists Declare That They Will Not Build on the South Side of the Central Track—That Ends All Talk.

For some time there has been talk of a trolley road to Plainfield, to connect the systems in that city and it has been rumored on several occasions that the capitalists of the Consolidated Traction Company would be the builders and operators of the proposed new line.

When the matter of route was broached it was found that so much opposition had developed to running the line on the county road—Westfield avenue—that the only route feasible would be along the South side of the Central Railroad tracks. A number of property owners were interested in getting the route located along the south side in order to develop their lands.

The proposition to build a trolley line between this city and Westfield has been considered for some time by the officials of the traction company. The idea was to connect the Plainfield system with that in this city, and thereby establish connection with the systems in Newark and Jersey City. The Plainfield system is owned by the Rikers, capitalists of Newark, and they intend to extend their line as far as Westfield. It was in that borough that the two systems were to connect.

Yesterday John D. Crimmins, the well known capitalist, and B. M. Shanley, the rich contractor, visited this city for the purpose of looking over the proposed route between here and Westfield. They were met by John W. Whelan, who escorted them over the territory. The party drove in a large carriage.

They went out West Jersey street, then through Jersey avenue to Roselle, and still along the south side of the Jersey Central through Cranford and Westfield, carefully noting the various towns, and the general lay of the country. All of the practical questions concerning the establishment of the proposed line were carefully considered.

When they had visited the entire district, Mr. Crimmins stated that positively and absolutely the traction company would not build a line on the south side of the Central railroad, and further stated that anybody who wanted to might go aboad, as the traction company was positively out of the field.

This decision was reached, Mr. Crimmins announced, because of the bad condition of the streets on the south side, along the proposed route.

Then the party took another drive over the route that has been talked of for a trolley line between this city and Rahway. The object of such a line would be to connect the traction company's system with the Rahway road that runs down through Woodbridge to Boynton Beach.

While such a connecting road might be profitable in time, Mr. Crimmins expressed himself as not favorably impressed with the scheme, and the traction company will not go into it, at least not at present.—Elizabeth Journal.

RUN INTO BY A SCHOONER

PLAINFIELDERS WHO WANT $500 DAMAGES FOR THE ACCIDENT.

The Party Were Out Fishing and Were Dragged, at the Peril of Their Lives, Through the Water for Nearly a Mile.

What promises to be a very interesting lawsuit has just been started by Counsellor William K. McClure, into whose hands it has been placed. Last Saturday a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Marshall, James Stryker, A. A. Stryker, Robert Garvey and Frank Manchester, of this city, went to South Amboy fishing. They all had excellent luck fishing and by the middle of the afternoon they had captured about 250 porgies. They had an oyster boat which was anchored outside of the course of the larger boats. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon, a large two-mast schooner manned by an Italian crew, and owned by Sayer & Fisher, of Sayerville, came along under full sail. The schooner was out of its course and as a result struck the oyster boat, containing the Plainfielders, on the broadside. The two boats hooked and the oyster boat was carried nearly three-fourths of a mile before it could be unfastened. In the meantime the Plainfielders were thoroughly frightened and lost several articles of value. Mrs. Marshall was nearly thrown into the water and the whole party came within an ace of drowning. For this reason a suit has been brought for damages against Sayre & Fisher for $500. The case will come up in September, and the result will be watched with considerable interest by a number of people. The Plainfield party expect to make another fishing trip Saturday and they look for better luck, and hope that they will meet with no accidents.

VOLUNTEERS COMING.

Old Time Fire Laddies to Have a Festive Time in This City.

Ex-Chief Bates, George Nott and Isaac Bush, a committee from the New York Volunteer Firemen's Association, stopped in Plainfield last evening, on their way home from Easton, Pa., where they had been to arrange for their Association their attendance at the centenial celebration of the Easton association the first week in October. The committee held a conference with the Exempt Firemen's Association of this city, and arranged for the appearance of the New York Volunteers in this city, Saturday, October 3d, on their way back from Easton.

There will probably be 150 visitors, and they will be the guests of the Exempt Association. There will probably be a parade and an exhibition of some kind during the day. The Exempt Firemen's Association will arrange all details for the event which will be a memorable one.

Editor Day on Corn.

The superintendent of the sewer farm, Clarence Slape, at the request of the Plainfield council, favored the newspaper fraternity and city officials with a goodly supply of corn grown on one of the beds last Saturday. A Plainfield editor was eating his sample says: "He is bound to confess it is excellent corn." We are bound to confess that we supposed we had received a dozen ears of the finest looking corn for our Sunday dinner that we ever saw and cheated the butcher and produce dealer out of our usual Sunday order. When we attempted to fill upon corn we found that corn was our portion and being unaccustomed to horse fodder, we sought out our relations in New Market to satisfy the inner man. If this was intended as a joke it was nicely played and we will watch for an opportunity to get "hunk."—Dunellen Call.

For More Prompt Service.

A new arrangement has been introduced at fire headquarters which will no doubt be generally used. The electric wires have been so arranged that at the first tap of the gong the chemical engine team appears instantly, thus doing away with the push button. The new scheme was tried yesterday and works perfectly. A fair test will be given and if it is all right the same arrangement will be adopted all around.

Williams Pleaded Guilty.

James Williams, who was recently arrested on the serious charge of breaking and entering Adam Denlaman's store, at Dunellen, on the night of Friday, July 3d, and who was arrested and taken to the New Brunswick jail for trial, was on Wednesday sentenced to State Prison for seven months. Williams, it is said, bears a bad reputation, and it is a surprise to many that he escaped with a sentence of less than two years. Chief Grant is in possession of the prisoner's shoes and hat.

It's No Snap, But Hard to Get There.

Letter carrying is no snap, especially at this season of the year. One letter carrier in particular is sorry he left a good job to be employed by Uncle Sam. He says in the summer it is hard to get around on account of the heat, and in the winter the snow, slush and cold weather is a detriment.

WASH DAY FOR FARMERS

PUMPKIN DUSTERS ENJOY THEIR YEARLY DIP IN THE SURF.

Thousands, in All Sorts of Toggery, March to the Beach, Munch Peanuts and Have a Good Time in General.

For one whole year the farmers of Monmouth and Middlesex Counties had been waiting for Saturday which to them was "salt water day," one more generally observed than any of the national holidays outside of Christmas. On this day the country people leave their places to enjoy themselves by the seashore. Pretty nearly all the farm houses in the two counties were vacant yesterday.

The wagons of the farmers were packed with eatables, and some of them were on their way to the shore at Manasquan and South Amboy, where the two big celebrations took place, long before daybreak.

In Monmouth County, where some of the countrymen come from fifteen to twenty miles to take part in the festivities, a start was made on Friday night, so that they would be in time.

There were thousands of the country people camped on the beach at two places when the sun made its appearance and peeped at them over the horizon. All were dressed in their best clothing, and from the appearance of the wagons and horses it looked as though several days had been spent in making preparations for the outing.

To the older people of the picnickers the day was one of reunions. Acquaintances made at last year's "wash" and at other previous years were renewed, and crops and farm life were discussed.

The younger people of the farmers visited the various summer resorts, taking in the merry-go-rounds, and spending the money they had managed to save for the past year in the various catch-penny devises which 'fakirs" had in stock in preparation for the visit of the country folk.

At the noon hour, at a given signal, the annual "wash" took place. It was not that the bathers needed to be cleansed; they were merely following out their yearly custom. Whole families, from the father and mother down to the youngest children, all went in the water for a dip.

Bath houses or costumes did not appear to bother them much. The younger people who had been roaming about in the morning went to the farm wagons, where they changed their Sunday clothing for their work-ing clothes, and these they used for bathing suits.

The colors varied from bright red, which shone gayly in the sun, to the dark black, showing death or mourning among the family or relatives of the wearer, on the women, while the suits of the men mostly consisted of a pair of overalls and an undershirt.

At the start of the first wagon for home, the others began to make preparations to move away, and by dusk all that remained to tell of the visit of the country people was a quantity of empty boxes which had contained eatables.

In South Amboy the celebration was not as extensive as at Manasquan, but farmers from many of the towns and villages who had not been to the seashore since last "Salt Water Day" took advantage of the heat to take a dip in Raritan Bay.

ELEVEN INNINGS GAME.

A FINE EXHIBITION OF BASE BALL PLAYING LAST SATURDAY.

The New Jersey Athletic Club Met Worthy Foes in the Y. M. C. A. Boys—The Game Marked by Many Brilliant Plays.

The game of baseball played Saturday afternoon in this city between the Y. M. C. A. and New Jersey Athletic Club teams was undoubtedly one of the finest exhibitions ever witnessed in this city, and it brought to the minds of many present the palmy days of baseball when enthusiasm reached the top-notch and it seemed as though everyone would go wild. It was a pitched battle for fair and for eleven innings the large crowd present was kept on the anxious seat.

The game did not open auspiciously for the home team, for the visitors succeeded in placing six runs to their credit in the first inning and everyone thought the contest was going to be one-sided. This was not the case, however, for the Jersey boys were given a hard fight. It was unfortunate that they should secure such a lead, but it happened through a series of mishaps together with four hits. For the five innings the visitors failed to make a run, and during the balance of the game they only got five hits off of Burt, who pitched the best game ever witnessed. The visitors, all good batters, were unable to find the ball very often, and as the game continued, the struggle grew fiercer. The nerve of every player was strung to the highest pitch as inning after inning brought no runs.

In the last four innings the home team failed to score, but they broke the ice in the fifth by making three runs, and in the seventh they tied the score. This set the crowd into the wildest excitement, for they thought there was a possibility of winning. The crowd began to crowd around the diamond, and if it had not been for the veteran ball player, George Cornwell, who chased them back, the game would have been finished amid difficulties. The Jersey boys then added two runs to their score in their half of the seventh, while in the next inning the home team secured one run and in the ninth another one was made. In the eighth and ninth innings the visitors were shut out. This required a tenth inning, but no runs were scored. The eleventh inning brought the same result for the home team, but when the visitors came in for their half they were very fortunate in making the all-desired run. Pule was the first man up and he hit a sharp grounder to Cory at third. The latter failed to stop the ball and the batter reached the base. Bieling made a good sacrifice, which advanced Pule, who came home on a long hit made by W. Langford. Thus ended one of the best games ever played in this city was brought to an end.

Below is the score in full of Saturday's game. When the winning run was made there was only one man out:

Earned runs, Y. M. C. A., 4; N. J. A. C., 4. Two-base hits, Samson, Schenck. Three-base hits, Dennis. Stolen bases, Y. M. C. A., 4; N. J. A. C., 1. Double plays, Pule and Murphy; Pule, Bieling and A. Too much praise cannot be given both sides for the exhibition given, and especially did the home team play great ball. The battery work of Burt and Dennis was superb and it was a pleasure to see the clock-work manner in which they played. MacLaughlin at first base held down that bag in a masterly style. Major was able to play short, in spite of the accident a week ago, and his playing won hearty applause as he accepted every chance. The playing of Cory at third base was good. Several were inclined to think he lost the game, but if he had stopped the ground-hit ball it would have been a marvelous play, and he can be excused for the error. A clever play was made during the game when a fly ball came to Samson at second base. The ball bounded out of his hands and Major happened to be close by and caught the ball. Samson, who has been in Boston for some time, resumed play on the team, but his work was a little shaky, on account of his not being used to the second base position. Shenck, Wren Townley and Warren Townley in the field did good work.

The visiting team put up an even game and won the contest on its merits. Special mention should be made of Pule's playing at short stop, which was very fine.

Praise should be given Thomas Keller, as umpire. His decisions were exceedingly accurate and gave the best of satisfaction.

During the game Samson was nearly overcome with the heat, but he pluckily finished the game. It is to be hoped that another game may be witnessed in this city between the same teams. Next Saturday the famous and well-known Staten Island A. C. team will play in this city and another close contest may be looked for.

The Plainfield Athletic Club went to Stirling Saturday and defeated the Stirling Athletic Club by the score of 18 to 11. The grounds proved to be the worse that the Plainfield boys have ever played on, which accounts for the many runs made by the Stirling team, as they only got five hits off of Winn, while the Plainfield team pounded the pitching of Leonard all over the field for twenty hits and a total of twenty-four bases, which shows the heavy hitting of the Plainfield boys which they have the credit of. The game was never in doubt after the seventh inning when the Plainfield boys forged ahead and kept the lead to the end. One of the most outrageous things ever done by any baseball team was that by the Stirling team Saturday after the game, when they refused to pay the expenses of the Plainfield team for stage hire after they promised to. The expense, however, fell on the manager of the Plainfield team. If the manager of the Stirling team keeps this up they will be unable to get any teams to play with them for the rest of the season. The features of the game were the pitching of Winn and the heavy hitting of the Plainfield team. Follow is the score:

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

A call has been issued for a meeting of the New Jersey Democratic State Committee for Wednesday, August 19th, at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. The date for the convention to nominate Presidential electors will be fixed, and it is also probable that the action of the Chicago convention will be passed upon. Senator Smith, who is the chairman of the committee, is in Europe and, of course, will not be at the meeting.

Ex-State Senator H. D. Winton, who was appointed the New Jersey representative in the gold men's conference committee at Chicago, says of New Jersey's participation in the third-ticket movement: "There is no sound-money Democratic organization in New Jersey. Therefore no one is authorized to represent the State in Friday's conference at Indianapolis. When the call is issued for the convention to nominate candidates New Jersey Democrats will select delegates."

It is almost certain that the next four band concerts will be held on the vacant lot near the Babcock building. They will naturally attract an immense throng of people and benefit the merchants, more or less, of that end of the town, it is suggested that they make an effort to have the lot put in such shape that it can be occupied without coming in contact with a great mass of weds. Doubtless such action would result in many people bringing camp-chairs to set on while the concert is in progress, and thus make them even more popular than they are now. Councilman Frost will see to it that there is plenty of electric illumination for the occasion.

Now that Plainfield is plagued with the bicycle scorcher, the following from The Evening Sun is very opportune:

The greatest known nuisance is certainly the scorcher, because he is a deliberate menace to the safety of many members of the community. Homely, lank and lantern-jawed as nature has unkindly made him, when he is caught he deserves a good clubbing and a hanging besides. There is no excuse, plain, second only to the scorcher kind. This latter kind are of the hopeless type, the epithet which most nearly applies to him is "rabbler." He is inconsiderate everywhere, in crowded city streets and on narrow country roads. You cannot go him without taking your life in your hand. He seems to possess an uncanny fear that will enable him to intercept you at any stage of the game. This he does naturally. It makes no difference whether he hears you come or not. Instinct teaches him how most effectually to block your path. If you are so he cannot keep his wheel straight to save his life, and that when he hears the whirring of an approaching bicycle his trouble attacks him in an aggravated form. This is not true. It is the absolute knowledge that one of his victims is approaching that possesses him. He would cross his path whether he knew a wheelman was approaching or not. A confirmed wheeler always looks straight ahead and looked up. Later his wheel should be confiscated, he should be put on the blacklist and any one selling or lending him a machine should be heavily mulcted in gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, after which the machine should be sold and the money obtained devoted to the improvement of country roads.

Throughout the United States today there is a determined public movement for good wagon roads. In the cities and larger towns the streets are being better paved. In country districts the highways are perceptibly improved. In Massachusetts there is a State commission and a liberal annual appropriation from the State funds. In New York and New Jersey there are hundreds of miles of road in as perfect condition as the best highways of Continental Europe. Property values have been inestimably increased by road improvements, and whole counties have been made available for small farms through this agency alone—Exchange.

The Freeholders of Hudson county, have practicesly abandoned for the time being the effort to secure cheaper ferriage on the various lines running from that in Hudson County to New York. The Freeholders asserted that a law passed by the Legislature in 1797 gave them the right to fix the rates of ferriage upon all ferries within their jurisdiction. Later they found themselves confronted by an act of the Legislature passed in 1823, fixing the rates of ferriage on all ferries running from Jersey City and Hoboken to New York. This left the Freeholders without remedy, so far as those two cities are concerned. In all other respects the law of 1797 is still in force.

The Union County Republican Committee have decided to hold the primaries to choose delegates to the State convention that will select Presidential electors, on Monday, August 24th. The convention will be held at Trenton on Thursday, August 27th. The several committeemen were empowered to attest the names of the various election officers, challengers, etc., in their several districts. The lists of names will be handed to the secretary of the committee before the first of September, so that they can be referred to the county board of election at its meeting in September.

DEATH OF ELIAS R. POPE.

"Elias Pope is dead!"

These are the four words that travelled with lightning like rapidity from mouth to ear all over Plainfield this morning. With lightning like rapidy because everything in which the people are generally interested seems to spread so much quicker than things in which they take but a passing interest. Elias Pope, a man whom every Plainfielder knows to respect because that was the spirit in which he lived, was somebody in which everybody was interested. For years he was to Plainfield what General Grant was to the civil war—he accomplished while others only planned and made fizzles. And this is what made the town, made Elias Pope and endeared him to all with whom he came in contact.

The news of his death was repeated in a voice of tremor and received with a thrill of surprise by everyone. Sad as was the intelligence it was all the more startling. But few knew that he was ill, none thought his condition the least precarious. Even though his hair was tinged with gray, as he perambulated the streets a few days ago, he seemed to be the personification of good health—robust and erect in figure. Unheralded by a long seige of sickness and racking pain, the hand of Death came silently and startled the community as a thunderbolt out of a clear sky. It seemed hard to believe, but, sorrowful as was the news, it had to be accepted, and with it came expressions of extreme regret.

Mr. Pope was a man who lived in the even tenor of his way and thereby he succeeded. A writer in the New York Herald sometime ago said of him: "He never claimed to know anything, never claimed to do anything but he got there just the same." This was a simply definition of Mr. Pope's character. He was unostentatious, reserved, and yet he accomplished where the great mass of people failed.

Congressman Howells, of the Third District, has no opposition to a renomination.

The current net debt of Elizabeth is $3,467,000. and of New Brunswick $1,219,000.

The finance committee of the Newark Common Council has decided to refuse to insert a gold clause in any of the temporary or other loan bonds issued by the city.

Deputy Revenue Collector P. H. O'Neill, who was expelled from the Hudson County Democratic Committee Friday night because he refused to vote for the indorsement of Bryan and Sewell and the Chicago platform, threatens to organize a new committee in opposition to the regular organization.

The New Jersey Law Journal, of which A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, is editor, has the following editorial urging the need of a Bar Association:

The settlement of a young lawyer at New Brunswick, for obtaining nearly $2,000 from a lady under the false pretense that he had influence with the court he was prosecuting for her a claim against an estate, resulted in his being found guilty and sentenced to State Prison. The effect of such a verdict cannot but be wholesome. It is astonishing how the bar of this and other States becomes lumbered up with practitioners who feel it to be their duty to prey upon weak clients, who entrust business to them, so opposite to be not only capable and efficient, but honest. It is of first importance that attorneys be honest with their clients, and were there a State Bar Association there might be a happy influence exercised in this direction upon attorneys, who are known to the profession to be unscrupulous. If the same with the other people, so that it cannot be said that the lawyers have a monopoly of it. There are unscrupulous doers and immorial ministers. Just such verdicts, hower, clear the atmosphere, and help the interests of the common people safer.

In Union county the expectation is that Senator Voorhees will be renominated. It was said at the time the Legislature adjourned that Mr. Voorhees would retire, and while he has not announced any intention of accepting the nomination, it is thought that he would be glad to have it. The hostility of John Kean, Jr., to Senator Voorhees nas not died out. Mr. Kean is taking no active part in Union county politics, but there is a suspicion that he is pretty well informed on what is going on. The explanation is that he appreciates fully the fact that any activity on his part would excite all the old hostility to his leadership. The belief is that he will keep in the background until after the primaries, and that then, with the aid of Senator Sewell and all the forces he can put into play, an effort will be made to control the convention. Of course, if it is known after the primaries that the case is hopeless, the Kean managers will not show their hands.—Newark Call.

Worried,

Memorial Society's Project.

The Revolutionary Memorial Society of New Jersey met in Somerville Friday to view the Wallace house, where General Washington had headquarters during the Revolution. The house is beautifully situated at the west end of the town. The society wishes to buy the property and convert it into a memorial like the Washington headquarters in Morristown. The owner of the property is George W. Cooper, and, although no positive agreement was made as to its purchase, Mr. Cooper accepted an option of $200 until January. A committe composed of Messrs. La Monte, Cornell, Hardwick and Ballantine was appointed to organize a society in Somerset county.

The Musical Baker Retired.

Emanuel Eckel, the Westfield baker, feels the need of a rest, and has sold his business to George Sheeland, of Plainfield, who took possession this week. Mr. Eckel is known among his friends as the musical baker. He plays the flute in a way that rivals Paderewski. When delivering bread in the morning it was his habit as the wagon stopped before each house to call up the customers by playing a few airs upon his flute.—Westfield Standard.

Plainfield Honored.

"Gazelle" is the name of a bicycle manufactured by N. C. Dunn, of Philadelphia, in honor of the steam fire engine company of that name in this city. Mr. Dunn was foreman of the company for several years during his residence in Plainfield, and being in need of a name for his wheels, thoughtfully named them after the company he spent many years of service with.

A MAN OF ENERGY GONE

Plainfield Suddenly Loses Its Most Prominent Citizen.

E. R. POPE PASSES OVER THE DIVIDE.

Had Been Ailing But a Few Days and Was Not Considered in a Precarious Condition—Died Sitting in a Chair—Born in Dunellen, But Had Lived in Plainfield Since He Was Fourteen Years of Age—Interested in All Local Enterprises for the Past Twenty Years—Great Influence.

If there was one man in Plainfield prominent on account of his solidity, shrewd business ability and wonderful judgment, that man was Elias R. Pope. And now Death has ended his career. In his handsome residence at the corner of Park avenue and West Fifth street, with all the conveniences wealth could furnish, he quietly passed away seated in the easy chair at the side of his bed. The end came very unexpectedly, for, although he had been ill for about a week, his family and and relatives had no premonition that death was so soon to call its victim.

Mr. Pope has always been known as an indefatigable worker unhindered by illness or worry. His life has been singularly free from illness until this summer when he began to be troubled with acute indigestion, which caused a short hacking cough. About a week ago Mr. Pope was forced to cease his constant exertions and remain at home. Owing to his cough, he found it easier to rest at night in a large easy chair than in bed. Last night, although feeling weaker than usual, Mr. Pope went to his room to retire. He undressed and sat down.

At 11.05 o'clock the spirit of one of Plainfield's greatest citizens passed into the world beyond.

Mr. Pope's loss was deeply felt by many for he had hosts of friends besides relatives.

He was a quiet man whose greatest pleasure seemed to be in work. He had an evenly-balanced judicial character that enabled him to look clearly at a subject and settle it fairly and without prejudice. He was cool at the most exciting moments and that sound clear judgment gave him the great political power that made him one of the leading spirits in the Republican party of this section. Although he did not hold many offices, yet his advice and direction was always looked upon as the best.

From a poor boy, he worked his way up, not by doing great things, but by carefully managing the details. And so his history is one of numerable small achievements that gradually raised him to the position of one of Plainfield's leading citizens.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, beyond the fact that it will be held Thursday.

Elias R. Pope was born in Dunellen March 8th, 1836, the son of John and Sarah R. Pope, and was the oldest of a family of seven children, only one of whom was a daughter.

Mr. Pope's antecedents were of the good old revolutionary stock. Samuel Pope, his paternal grandfather, was a man who spent his active life as a farmer in Washington Valley. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and after his death his widow, who was before marriage a Miss Moore, drew a pension in recognition of his honorable services to the country in its infancy. Their six sons were Samuel, Joseph, Squire, James, Henry and John, and their daughters were Rhoda and Sarah. Samuel and Squire emigrated to the west where they became wealthy and influential citizens. The rest of the family settled in the vicinity of where they were born.

John, the father of Elias, was born in 1807, and married Sarah Dunham, of New Durham. Their children were Elias R., David S., Sarah, Charles S., Howard A., Simion R., Asa D. and James D.

John Pope was a shoe manufacturer at Dunellen during his active business life and carried on a small farm there. He was a man who loved his family and took but little part in affairs of a public nature. His life was uneventful. He was a member of the Seventh-day Baptist church of New Market, and for many years served the church as a trustee. He died in 1874.

Elias was born in Dunellen and spent his boyhood days at home. His father had quite a large family, and while he reared them with great care as to their moral and religious training, there was but little facilities at the time for education in the neighborhood, and Elias, with the rest of the children, received only the elementary rudiments of English in the village school. But he grasped quickly whatever was taught him, and at the age of fourteen years decided to start out in the world for himself.

Plainfield was then a bustling hamlet, the center of the farming country for miles around, and the young lad naturally turned towards here, knowing that opportunities might be greater than to plod along in the little neighborhood in which he had been reared. At that time Isaac S. Dunham conducted a general merchandise store in Plainfield and also manufactured clothing. The young man secured a position with him in the store as a clerk, commencing at the bottom of the ladder. He was attentive to his duties and honest in all of his transactions, thus winning the esteem of his employer, who gradually advanced him until he became his right hand man in looking after his business. For fourteen years he continued in the capacity of a clerk for Mr. Dunham. Then his worth and long service was recognized by the latter taking him as a partner and establishing a branch store at Basking Ridge. The following three years he remained in that place, and in 1867 returned to Plainfield. Since the time he had left home he had amassed a sufficient amount of money to enter into partnership with Messrs. Parse and Mundy, and established a general mercantile store at the corner of Somerset and Front streets. They soon built up the leading business in Plainfield and for many years it continued as such. After six years Mr. Mundy withdrew, and for the following three years the firm was known as Pope and Parse. The business continued to prosper under the new firm, and then Mr. Parse withdrew and was succeeded in his interest by Howard A. and David S. Pope. The firm name was Pope Brothers, and the partnership was continued until 1881, when David S. Pope withdrew from the business.

Up to 1873 Mr. Pope had generally remained attentive to the one business in which he was directly interested in. Naturally, he was inclined to be more progressive than the ordinary citizen, but at the same time he was filled with enough conservatism and discretion not to branch out until he was pretty well assured of success, knowing that his capital at the time was limited and that an unfortunate investment was liable to leave him stranded on the rocks which beset every business man's career. And he it said right here that Mr. Pope was imbued with an exceptional insight into the business world so that he was particularly fortunate in all his enterprises.

In 1872, Mr. Pope foresaw the growth which Plainfield was to enjoy and he commenced to turn his attention to real estate and other business outside of the mercantile line.

In 1873, Mr. Pope was first elected to public office, being made county collector in Union County for that year. He ran for Assemblyman in the district in the fall of the next year and was elected. He was re-elected to the Assembly of 1875. He was nominated by the Republicans in 1879 for city collector but met with defeat.

His next political office was that of postmaster to which he was appointed in 1882, by President Arthur after a close fight serving six years. In 1890, President Harrison reappointed him to the postmastership and he held it for four years.

For twenty-four years he has been treasurer and member of the Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Fund and had just completed his report before his death to be presented at the Conference next week. Last Sunday he was unable to attend the quarterly meeting of the Board on account of ill health and it was the first meeting he has missed since he has been a member.

Mr. Pope has been intimately connected with the banking history of this city. He was the moving spirit in the party of men that organized the Dime Savings Institution in 1869, the idea of forming such a bank having originated with him. He was made treasurer and one of the managers of the institution, J. B. Coward being the only one of the latter that now remains. He was instrumental in the forming of the City National Bank in 1875, and was immediately elected a director and president. He held the last named office for three years, and then was made First Vice-President, which position he held until last January, when he refused re-election and turned his attention to the First National Bank. He was elected president of the latter and had been working hard up to the time of his death in advocating the interests of that institution.

After 1872, he gradually became interested in real estate, sometimes alone and sometimes in company with his brothers or his friend, J. Frank Hubbard. He made no large deals, however, but went about his transactions slowly and carefully. He owned at the time of his death a number of houses in this city besides considerable unimproved real estate.

When the Board of Trade was organized here, Mr. Pope was one of the principal men interested and he was elected president of that organization. He was also a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M. and the Union County Country Club but Mr. Pope was never known as a club man and all his time was devoted to his ever increasing business.

Besides his real estate business during late years, Mr. Pope was occupied tending the duties of two important positions in two corporations that would have occupied all the time of any ordinary man. Mr. Pope, however, was a wonderful worker and accomplished an immense amount of business.

One of these positions was the presidency of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, in which he was a large stockholder. The other office was that of director and treasurer of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, in which he owned considerable stock. Mr. Pope acted as receiver and administrator for several large estates, the most notable being the Job Male estate and Scheplin, Baldwin Tweedy & Co. He was, when he died, executor for the estate of Sarah Stout.

For over twenty years Mr. Pope has been a trustee of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city, although still retaining his membership with the church in New Market.

THE EARTH QUIVERED 12 YEARS AGO.

G. Thorn Recalls the Seismic Disturbance That Started Plainfield.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Twelve years ago yesterday, August 10th, 1884, New Jersey received such a shaking up as never before or since in its history. Many of your readers will readily remember the earthquake of that date, and the vast area of the disturbance. From Maine to North Carolina, fourteen States were wholly or partially in the paroxysmal throes of a vast seismic convulsion. Central as to the State of New Jersey, at a depth of many miles beneath the earth surface the vibrations started. Northward until dispersed in the hills of Maine, southward to the great marshes of North Carolina, westward to the great chain of lakes and seaward lost beneath the waves of the Atlantic Ocean.

At about six minutes past 2 o'clock the inhabitants of Plainfield heard a dull rumbling sound, attended by distinct wave motions from the northwest to the southeast, lasting from ten to twelve seconds. Window panes and dishes rattled, chandeliers oscillated while their pendants jingled, vases and bric-a brac on mantles violently trembled, and in instances were overturned, doors and window shutters quivered and swung on their hinges, buildings creaked and swayed, chimneys were toppled over and other manifestations of the disturbance were evident. The writer was in his bedroom standing before a mirror and will never forget the peculiar sensation felt, not alone from the seemingly billow like motion beneath his feet, but from the exaggerated movements of everything in the room as reflected by the quivering glass. Glancing a second he quickly turned his eyes out of the window and saw the foliage of the trees all trembling like aspen leaves, and at once realized that it was the shock of an earthquake; turning again to the room the bed upon its high springs was swaying from foot to headboard, showing quite conclusively the direction of the earth waves.

Earthquakes are a phenomena of longitudinal wave motion. Of their cause much is conjectural, but of few is known. Doubtless they are due to a subterranean concussion at a greater or less depth beneath the earth's surface. At great depths they are felt over a large area, like the one in question. At a less depth, the area is not so large, but may be more violent like the one in Charlestown, August 31st, 1886.

The summer of 1884 was cool and wet. The sky had a peculiar red tinge, decidedly pronounced near the twilight hour. Scientists attributed the cause to the passage through a dense belt of meteoric dust. Some learned minds are of the opinion, even to this date, that we passed through the tail of a giant comet and that the earthquake was but the result of some occult force thereby released.

The latter idea is about as chimerical as the 16 to 1 puzzle is to the uninitiated backwoodsman.

Still in the Borough.

The old borough fire bell has not been taken out of the borough as was reported. It has been laid away in a secluded spot and if it is ever needed, there are people who know just where to find it. The bell was presented to the engine company many years ago by John Taylor Johnston, and as long as there is a company in existence it will lawfully remain in their possession and will not go to any individual.

A Former Plainfielder Greeting Friends.

Mrs. John H. Honeyman, of Knoxville, Tenn., and her brother, William Y. Westervelt, of Isabelle, Tenn., are visiting at the home of Dr. D. C. Adams on Grove street. Many will remember Mr. Westervelt. He was a graduate of Leal's School, after which he entered Columbia College, where he was graduated with high honors as a mining engineer and chemist. He at once accepted a position as such at Isabelle, Tenn., seventy miles from Knoxville, a large copper and mining district owned by an English syndicate. His many friends in Plainfield will be glad to welcome him here and congratulate him on his success.

E. B. Day and family, of Central avenue, are summering in Maine.

IMPRISONED UNJUSTLY

NO JUST CHARGES TO HOLD JAMES CORRIGAN IN CUSTODY.

Kept in the Stuffy Little Lockup When No Charges Could be Substantiated—Discharged and Arrested on New Complaint

The borough court room was crowded to overflowing with people yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, who expected to witness the trial of Mrs. James Corrigan against her husband, but they were disappointed as the trial did not take place. It seems that James Corrigan went to his home Saturday night and took one of his children away. This caused trouble right away, as his wife thought he was trying to steal the child. It is also said that Corrigan swore at his wife and her parents. However, a warrant was issued and Corrigan was arrested Saturday night and kept in the lockup till yesterday afternoon. Lawyer Hetfield appeared for Corrigan. In opening the case Justice Crosley stated that the case seemed to be who should rightfully keep the child. The child, he thought, should be left with the mother providing she is able to take care of the child. If the case should be taken to a higher court, he (Crosley) said, it is not likely that the court would consider the case as there had been no proceedings for a divorce. The case was then dismissed. In the meantime a second complaint was made. It was charged that Corrigan had used indecent and foul language and was abusive. The defendant pleaded not guilty and Lawyer Hetfield asked for an adjournment of one week. It seemed to be the opinion of the crowd present that there was a considerable amount of injustice shown in keeping Corrigan locked up over Sunday, during this hot weather.

RAIDED LIVING PICTURES.

Borough Officer Swooped Down on Nude Boys in Swimming.

During this excessive warm spell it has been the custom of some boys to seek the brook in the rear of Assemblyman Reed's house on Willow avenue, for a swim.

This morning word was sent to Marshal Hansen that a number of boys in a nude condition were causing a disturbance at the above place. The Marshal went to the place and found the boys, but he was only able to catch one who was a colored lad about twenty years old.

He gave his name as Chas. Miller, and said he had come from New York last evening. He was given a hearing by Justice Crosley and the usual penalty in such cases was imposed. Owing to the fact that the other boys were in a moist condition the Marshal was unable to hold fast to them, and a lively time followed their detection.

WANT A THIRD TICKET.

NEW JERSEY GOLD DEMOCRATS DENOUNCE THE FREE SILVER IDEA.

A Committee Appointed to Consider the Advisability of Forming a New State Organization Pledged to Their Interests.

In response to a circular letter sent out by William J. Curtis, of Summit, a number of prominent Democrats and business men from all parts of New Jersey met Friday afternoon in Taylor's Hotel Jersey City, to consider the political situation. Some of those present have been Democrats for more than half a century. Among the conferees were ex-Senator Henry D. Winton, of Bergen county; James J. Parker, Perth Amboy; Judge John B. Green, Westfield; John Hone, Monmouth county; Otto Crouse, Robert Stewart, William R. Starrett, George L. Wilson, Jersey City; H. M. Bullington, Rutherford; M. V. Niven, Montclair; George Lichbridge, Orange; Hugo Munzel, Jr., Hilton; James Neilson, New Brunswick; Charles H. Baker, Montclair; E. H. Applegate, Monmouth county, and Dr. Karl Meyer, Newark. Mr. Curtis had a big stock of letters from sound-money Democrats in various parts of the State, who were unable to be present on account of the brief notice given, but expressed their sympathy with the movement. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Curtis, who explained its object. John Hone was elected chairman and Francis B. Polink, of Summit, secretary.

Mr. Curtis said he was not a politician, but after the adoption of the platform and the nomination of the candidates at Chicago he thought it was the duty of every sound-money Democrat to do what he could to avert the impending disaster. It was for that reason that he sent out invitations to the conference, and the result exceeded his expectations.

"The Chicago candidates and the Chicago platform," he said, "do not represent Democracy, either past, present, or future. This movement is intended to enable every Democrat to vote for a Democratic candidate and Democratic principles. A third ticket will afford an opportunity to Democrats to vote conscientiously. It is necessary to take prompt action, so that the sound-money Democrats of New Jersey can act in concert with their western friends. The Indianapolis convention is waiting to hear from New Jersey."

A declaration of principles, prepared by Mr. Curtis, was adopted. It denounced the free-silver proposition and other features of the Chicago platform, declared for the maintenance of the gold standard, and advocated the retirement of the greenbacks. It did contain a denunciation of the income tax, but this was stricken out on motion of George Sumner, who thought it unwise that it should be included The declaration further called for the nomination of a real Democratic ticket which could be supported by Democrats who would vote for neither Bryan nor McKinley. Wm. J. Curtis was selected for professional National Committeeman, and the result of the meeting was telegraphed to Indianapolis.

A committee, consisting of Judge Green, James J. Parker, ex-Senator Henry D. Winton, Henry H. Hart and Joseph M. Stover, was appointed to select a State Committee and State headquarters. Mr. Applegate thought this action a little premature. He said that if the movement for a third ticket materialized it will be necessary to hold a State Convention to nominate an electoral ticket, and that convention will have the naming of a State Committee.

Charles H. Barker, of Montclair, said that it must not be taken for granted that it would be necessary to call a State Convention. This was a movement within the present regular organization, and it was possible that the sound-money Democrats might control the regular State Convention and refuse to endorse Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform.

The committee appointed will report at a meeting to be held later.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

"Jed" Smalley, of North Plainfield, has purchased a new trotter.

Mr. Brower will take his fast stepper to Middletown, N. Y., this week, and he will also trot the horse at Port Jervis and Goshen.

On account of the extreme heat on Saturday afternoon there was but one trial of speed on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon. Aaron Brower's bay stud trotted a mile in 2 23. Next Saturday it is expected that Thomas Brantingham, Charles Boone, John Osborne and Mr. Brock will enter horses in one or more of the several friendly trials of speed which are being arranged for that day.

—There is perhaps no place in the city where politics and religion are more considered and discussed than in John H. Sayers' harness shop on East Front street. Some of the "old school" gather there and discuss current topics, including the gold and silver problem.

THE MAYOR ON FINANCE

MR. GILBERT TALKS TO THE YOUNG MEN OF MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Explains the Uses of Money and How Its Value is Fixed by the Commercial Demand For It. Deprecates Free Silver.

Mayor Gilbert addressed a meeting at Monroe Avenue Chapel Friday on finance, and said in substance:

He explained the early history of money and showed how mankind from time to time had used various substances as money, dropping one after another as the race grew in refinement and knowledge, until the use of gold and silver as money had become almost universal. He set forth very clearly the cause which led up to the demonetization of silver, and showed that instead of this being a great crime against humanity that it was brought about in a perfectly natural way.

He illustrated forcibly the idea that money should have value in itself, a value that is recognized in every place, and the capacity to hold that value through all the mutations of time.

No other kind of money would constitute a safe and uniform standard by which to measure the value of other commodities. Money, he said, is a measure of value, just as a yard, stick is a measure of length, or a pound weight is a measure of quantity, or a bushel is the measure of capacity, and it is just as essential that the measure of value should be always and in every place the same, as it is that the yard-stick or pound weight or bushel measure should be.

If you knew of a storekeeper in town who is in the habit of using two or three yardsticks of different length, say 24 inches one day and 30 or 36 another, you would avoid his store for fear of being defrauded.

Now a dollar of our money as expressed by law is of the value of 23 1-5 grains of pure gold so that as a measure of value every dollar is equivalent to 23 1-5 grains of pure gold, and the laboring man who works for wages, or has money in the Savings Bank or has money due him from any source is entitled to demand that it shall be paid him in dollars each one of which shall be equal in value to 23 1-5 grains of pure gold.

Any man who seeks to compel him to accept a dollar of less value than this seeks to rob him of what justly belongs to him. The gold dollar is a safe measure of value, because it has in every place in the civilized world and at all times the same uniform value of 100cts. under free coinage system, the silver dollar would be a fraudulent measure of value because its value frequently changes to day it is worth but fifty-three cents, next month it may be worth still less. To compel a man to receive a silver dollar as the equivalent of a gold dollar would be to rob him of 47 cents on every dollar paid him. The laboring man who sends from time to time a portion of his hard earned savings to the old folks in the old country can easily calculate to what extent he will be defrauded if he will keep in mind this one fact that under a gold standard every pound he sends to the old folks at home costs him about $4.90 and under a silver standard it will cost him $9.80.

Not Up in Articles of Food.

One of The Press readers thinks that the agricultural editor of the Dunellen Call must have been taking his duration when Editor Day wrote his pathetic tale of how he was duped by Manager Slape's "horse corn," or he must have informed his chief that fresh, young field corn is very good eating for man as well as beast, some even preferring it to sweet corn. It is said that in the south sweet corn is not known at all. If Manager Slape sends any more samples of farm produce to The Call he would do well to have the articles carefully labeled with instructions as to their intended use. By the way, does the editor of The Call refuse a morning dish of oatmeal on the ground of its being "horse feed?"

CYCLING COMMENT.

Cycling has certain advantages over horseback riding. Cheapness, accessibility, safety and the very small amount of preparation required are all on the side of the wheel.

Many out-of-town bicyclists do not follow fully the instructions and directions in the road book, which is gotten out by the L. A. W., and in consequence when passing through this city becomes somewhat mixed in the matter of roads. One bicyclist from Newark who left Allentown, Pa., early Saturday reached Plainfield, at 11 o'clock yesterday. He said he had been misdirected and rode about thirty miles out of the way.

—Not in a good many years before have so many people been noticed riding through here on the cars with out even hat or coat on. One party of men bound from New York to Easton yesterday afternoon had off their hats, coats, collars and cuffs, and some of them even had off their shoes. Yet they could not keep cool and comfortable.

DEATH FROM THE HEAT.

THOMAS AIKENS FOUND DEAD IN A BERRY PATCH FRIDAY.

Had Been in Good Health, But the Sun Beat Down Unmercifully on His Head and He Dropped in His Tracks.

This excessive warm weather has been the cause of much prostration among children and aged people, and one of the most affecting incidents was recorded Thursday afternoon, when Thomas Aikens, aged 80 years, who lives on Park avenue, just over the line in Middlesex County, was found lying prostrate in a patch of blackberry bushes. Life had almost left the body when he was discovered by one of the family. Dr. Simpson was hastily sent for, but when he arrived the man was dead. Mr. Aiken lived with his son-in-law, Samuel Johnson, and as the bushes were loaded with berries he thought he would try and pick a few of them. He left the house about 10 o'clock in the morning, and as he did not come home to dinner, something seemed to tell the family that all was not well and as the berry patch was not far from the house Mrs. Johnson walked to the place and there she was found, to find her father in a precarious condition.

He had not picked many berries and the intense heat must have done its work quickly. Mrs. Johnson informed the other members of the household, and Mr. Aiken was carried to the house, while there was yet life in the body. He was unconscious and in that condition he died soon after he reached the house, which was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Aiken was a man of good health, and only day before yesterday he was talking to Dr. Simpson on general topics of the day, when he seemed to be hale and hearty. He leaves three daughters married and one son also married.

Dr. Simpson sent word to County Physician Long, of New Brunswick, and the latter came over and granted a burial permit. The funeral was held from the house this afternoon.

DIED AT BALTIMORE.

Mrs. Margaret Fillmore Dies From the Result of a Fall.

Mrs. Margaret Fillmore, wife of John Fillmore, formerly of this city, died in Baltimore on Saturday at the age of fifty-six years. She had been ailing but three days and her death resulted from an accident caused by falling down a flight of stairs. Brain fever set in soon after the accident and her life from that time was despaired of.

The body arrived in Plainfield on the 6:04 train this morning, accompanied by the husband, one son, a daughter, and an undertaker from Baltimore, but the funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. They will in all probability take place from the house on Leland avenue tomorrow afternoon and interment will be made in the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Decedent only left Plainfield with her family about a year ago and since then has been living in Baltimore.

Former Plainfielder Dies at Elizabeth.

Fred Naylor, aged twenty-five years and a former well-known Plainfielder, and a son of Jacob and Elizabeth Naylor, of this city, was overcome by the heat near his home in Elizabeth, Sunday, and died before he could be taken home. A sister of the deceased, Miss Lillie, lives with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. VanSickle, of No. 313 East Third street, and she was notified by telegraph of her brother's death last evening. Miss Naylor left at once for the house of mourning. Fred was well and favorably known both here and in Elizabeth, and he leaves a large circle of friends to mourn his early and sudden demise.

Gaiety of Plainfielders.

A delightful picnic was held at the Waumbek, last Friday, when the party was driven to the Glen on Chas. J. Fisk's brake and that of the Waumbek. After their return the evening was spent in dancing. On Wednesday evening, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, gave a very pleasant German in honor of her daughter, Miss Louise Fisk, at her cottage, Onaway. The arrangement of the rooms was very pretty and the favors were dainty and appropriate.

—Another one of the street railway cars has been taken from the main line and laid up in the shop for repairs.

—A shoulder cape, belonging to Mrs. Sarah Warren, of Summit, lost in this city, last week, and advertised in The Press, was found by E. A. Laine, the barber, and will be returned to the owner without delay.

—Applicants for the free delivery service are already looming up in this city. Although the next examination for letter carriers does not take place until December, there are already several aspirants for the position.

—All the men on the Delaware and Raritan canal between Bound Brook and New Brunswick, with few exceptions, it is said, have been laid off. The men were paid last Friday and since then some of them have been hanging around looking for "brighter prospects."

THE OWNERSHIP FIXED.

AN IMPORTANT SUIT TRIED AT WASHINGTONVILLE LAST WEEK.

A Company Gets a Judgment and Try to Levy on Property Which Belonged to the Mother of Man Under Prosecution.

Several years ago Moller & Company, of New York, dealers in fertilizing material, brought a suit against Gerard H. Underhill, of Washington Valley, in Justice Crossley's court to recover the sum of $120, the price of three tons of fertilizing material. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer represented the New York firm. At that time judgment was given the plaintiff. Accordingly an execution was issued and Constable George Steward was authorized to make a levy on certain goods. When he attempted to make the levy Mrs. Underhill, mother of the defendant, claimed that the goods belonged to her and she refused to allow the goods to be levied upon.

This fact caused Lawyer Swackhamer to bring suit to prove right of property. The defendant secured Reed & Coddington and the case was tried before Justice Speer and a six-men jury at Washingtonville, Thursday.

One of the strong points made by the plaintiff was that if Mrs. Underhill owned the property why should her son produce a bill of sale showing that he had sold her the goods which defendant already claimed was her property. The jury composed of Geo. Bullman, Sam. Taynor, Mr. Coddington, Frank Mobus, Wm. Bicknell and Theo. Bartels, were out five hours and returned with a verdict for the defendant. The plaintiff will now take the case to the Court of Chancery for the purpose of having the bill of sale set aside as fraudulent. The defense made a strong plea and attempted to prove that the goods were owned by Mrs. Underhill. There was a large crowd of spectators present who were anxious to see Judge Speer try his first case. The trial was held at Demler's hotel.

A MURDERER'S SANITY.

Physicians Question It, But He Is Rational Enough to Escape.

Frank Freehill, the tramp who a year ago shot and killed Special Officer Jewell in Rahway, while resisting arrest, has escaped from the Morris Plains Insane Asylum, where he was confined. Several weeks ago Freehill began to act strangely in the State Prison at Trenton. For the murder of the officer he was convicted of murder in the second degree. His sentence was ten years' imprisonment and a fine of $1,000. Shortly after his conviction in October last he was removed to the Trenton prison. The physicians about two months ago noticed his strange actions, and after a careful examination pronounced him insane. He was removed to the State Insane Asylum. It is alleged that Freehill was not insane, but by a ruse he made the physicians believe he was, as he knew it would be easy to escape from the insane asylum.

NEW MARKET.

Samuel Luckey has been nominated as borough justice by Mayor Brakeley.

Miss Edna Garmin has returned to her home in Brooklyn after a several weeks' stay at the Nelson House.

The Dunellen-Stelton road has been macadamized as far as H. S. Garretson's farm.

Holy communion will be observed in the Holy Innocents Episcopal church on Sunday, August 16th, at the afternoon service.

Rev. E. Everett Jones, of Clinton, a former pastor, will occupy the pulpit at the First Baptist church at both morning and evening services.

Miss Birdie Gaskill has accepted a position as teacher in the primary department of the public school for the ensuing year.

—There was a wholesale exodus of *Plainfield people from town on Satur*day. Some sought the mountain while others were going to the seashore.

—It seemed Saturday night as though a large portion of Plainfield's population was riding on the electric street cars. It was the only place one could get a breeze.

—An incandescent lamp burns all day at the entrance to the station house. Some people must be nearsighted if they can't find the city jail. The police know where it is, however, day or night.

—The Daily Press is informed today on good authority that the proposed Watchung avenue bridge will be built this year if the street is opened and the bridge is required. The budget is made up for the year by the Freeholders, but the law gives them the privilege of borrowing money in anticipation of taxes.

HIS HEAD ON THE RAILS.

DESPERATE ATTEMPT OF A PLAINFIELDER TO END HIS LIFE.

Dr. Glenn, of Craig Place, Vainly Endeavors to Commit Suicide at Poughkeepsie—Suffering From Melancholia.

The New York Sun Thursday last published the following from Poughkeepsie:

"A well dressed man, 50 years of age, tried to commit suicide at the Hudson River Railroad station this afternoon by laying his head on the rails between the wheels of the 4:50 p. m. train for New York. He was discovered by the engineer of a freight train on the north-bound tracks and was pulled from his dangerous position by the fireman and Archie Plain, the Poughkeepsie Cab Company's agent at the station. The stranger turned out to be Dr. I. R. Glenn, of 48 *Craig place, Plainfield, N. J., a drum*mer for the Rumford Chemical Works of Providence, R. I. After visiting several hotels, where he asked for rooms with gas in them, and three gun shops and two drug stores, he was taken into custody by Policeman Miller. Sergeant Welton searched him and found on his person a brass check giving his name and address, $900 in cash, a gold watch, and a certificate of deposit of $2,000. Drs. Powell and Marill examined Dr. Glenn and give it as their opinion that he is suffering from melancholia. A despatch telling of his plight was sent to his home. He will be held until word is received what to do with him."

A reporter for The Press called at Dr. Glenn's home this morning and found that Mrs. Glenn had gone to Poughkeepsie. Miss Glenn said that they knew nothing more of the attempt to commit suicide than the brief telegram conveyed last night. She said that she could not account for her father's actions unless it was the excessive heat had affected his brain.

Dr. Glenn has been a resident of this city for a number of years but only practiced for a short time. For sometime he has been connected with Rumford Chemical Works, who prepare Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

THROUGH TWO FIRES.

The Famous Silver Moon Carriage to be Repaired.

The costly silver moon carriage, owned by Alert Hose Company, No. 1, which was so badly damaged in the recent Fisk fire, has been taken from Roberts' livery stable, where it has been stored, and transferred to the Fitzsimmons and Crisp Works at Trenton for repairs. Chief Doane was present and took charge of the transfer, and many persons gathered on the sidewalk and in the street to view the remains of the once famous, beautiful and costly hose carriage, which has in years gone by been the pride of the Plainfield Fire Department. The carriage went through the Crystal Palace fire many years ago and as its latest experience was the second time it has been in a fire, some people believe that the next time will surely be "three times an out."

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Miss Maggie Sculley, of Raritan, returned home Saturday after a two weeks' stay with friends.

P. Fitzgerald, and employe in the Midvale steel works in Philadelphia, is visiting his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee.

Miss Cora Gardner, cashier at the Prudential Insurance office for Manager Dawson, returned to her position this morning after a two weeks' vacation.

George Johnson is expected home from Seabright early next month, where he has been for some time superintending the mason work on a new building.

Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr., and two sons, returned to Brooklyn for a stay of a week yesterday with Mrs. Paff's mother, who has been visiting her son-in-law and daughter since Friday.

Robert Walpole's valuable hunting dog was bitten on the leg by a copperhead snake three weeks ago, and the dog's life was despaired of. But the animal, under careful treatment, is rapidly getting better.

The Scotch Plains baseball team will cross bats with the Somersets of North Plainfield at the Plains, Saturday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. Billy Lee, of Crescent League fame, will play short on the home team, and the nine will be strengthened, it is said, by the addition of an imported battery from Canada. The Somersets will have a pitcher all the way from Easton.

Evidently acting under suggestions in The Press a week or two ago, the authorities have caused the weeds and underbrush to be removed from the gutters and walks leading to the Fanwood station, and in some places the roadbed has been spread with crushed stone. The new stone will prove detrimental to bicycling interests for a time, but in the end will be a lasting improvement.

The Misses Jennie and Rachael De-Camp, of Linden avenue, are spending a few weeks at the farmhouse of John Sebring, Greenbrook.

A DAYLIGHT CARNIVAL

PLAINFIELD TO HAVE THE BIGGEST BICYCLE PARADE EVER ARRANGED.

All Business Men Interested, and it is Said That $1,000 Will Be Raised and Distributed in Costly Prizes.

"Grand Daylight Carnival" is the name chosen for what will undoubtedly be one of the largest, if not the largest, bicycle parade ever held in this country. It will be held in this city Saturday afternoon, Sept. 5th, at 3 o'clock, and plans are now under way to make the event one of triumph in the bicycling world. The original committee met last night at F. D. C. Martin's cycle store and the enthusiasm manifested was something remarkable, considering the warm weather. Those who compose the committee are among Plainfield's best business men, and there can be no doubt as to the success of the event. It was decided to invite all cycle clubs and riders within a radius of fifty miles, and as an inducement for them to come and join the parade elegant and costly prizes will be offered, including diamonds, jewelry, etc. Great care was exercised in the selection of committeemen, and they will all do their best to give Plainfield such a time as it has never seen before.

Nearly $1,000 has been subscribed toward the carnival, and there has scarcely been any effort made toward collecting money. There is a grand opportunity for Plainfielders, especially the business portion, to give the city a far-famed reputation, as there will be thousands of strangers in town that day.

Surely, Saturday, September 5th, will be a gala day for Plainfield, and nothing remains now but for everybody to put their foot to the wheel and give it a push that will count. Let everybody do something, no matter *how little, and the result will be re*corded in history as one of the greatest of events. Hereafter the meetings will be held in the Board of Trade rooms.

The next meeting will be held Thursday evening, August 13th, at 8:30.

DEATHS FROM HEAT

Great Suffering Caused by the Present Hot Wave.

MANY STATES ALMOST SCORCHED

Yesterday a Record-breaker at Numerous Points, the Mercury Climbing Above the 100 Mark—Mac and Beast Stricken Down.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—Dispatches received from various points throughout the country show that no point is exempt from the torrid weather. At Elgin, Ill., yesterday a son of Mrs. Loretta Mott died of prostration. Gerald McChesney died from sunstroke. Mrs. J. J. Hartman was stricken down and will die. Five others are in a serious condition. For three days the mercury soared above 100 at Evansville, Ind., and two deaths have been reported. At Kansas City yesterday 102 was reached, the highest point since the bureau was opened, eight years ago. Despite the intense heat, few prostrations were reported. At Anderson, Ind., there was intense suffering among the men in the nail factories. There were three prostrations in the city. Dispatches from Alton, Springfield and Belvidere, Ill., indicate the hottest weather on record. Outdoor work has been suspended at all these points. Vegetation is being burned up by the heat, and in many localities a water famine is threatened. The Wabash railroad officials have closed the shops of the entire system pending the heated term. At Alton the mercury ranged from 105 to 113 in the shade. Milan, Mo., reported yesterday 106 in the shade and much mortality among animals. Horses drop dead on the streets, and only necessary work was done. All records were broken at Jefferson, Ia., where the thermometer registered 106 in the shade. At Tiffin, O., Henry Downey, an aged and wealthy farmer, was overcome by the heat yesterday and dropped dead while unhitching his horses after a trip to the city. At Peoria, Ill., and Valparaiso, Ind., there were many prostrations. At Des Moines, Ia., a record of 92 degrees in the shade was reached and two fatalities were reported. At Milwaukee, Rudolph Salmon, treasurer of the Ernst Salmon Commission company, was struck by a bolt of lightning and instantly killed. The weather showed in which Mr. Salmon lost his life came in the middle of one of the hottest days of the year. At Springfield, Ill., the day was the hottest of the year, the maximum temperature of 98 degrees registered by street thermometers registering 102. The Wabash railroad shops, employing 350 men, closed indefinitely on account of the fearful heat.

Sweltering in Michigan.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 10.—The last five days have been the warmest ever known in western Michigan. The thermometer here was above 100 all day yesterday and towards evening only lost ten points. Several fatalities have been reported.

Many Deaths in New York.

New York, Aug. 10.—The heated term that has been almost without precedent in this city continues, and the general impression is that yesterday was beyond all doubt the hottest and most uncomfortable of the season. Many people left the city in the early morning for sea side resorts and suburban retreats, in the hope of escaping the torrid temperature of the city. The highest point reached by the official thermometer at the weather bureau was ninety-two at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This is the record of the instruments on top of the bureau, high above the streets, and fails to give the sensitive temperature to which the people of this city had to deal during the day. Many prostrations and deaths from the heat were reported in both this city and Brooklyn.

The Hot Wave in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—The weather in this city and throughout the entire state of Pennsylvania to-day is still extremely warm and sultry, but not so hot as yesterday when records at many points was broken. Many people and animals were prostrated, and the death ratio was unusually large.

Fifteen Deaths at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Aug. 10.—The thermometer record is about the same to-day as it has been for the past four. The maximum heat was not reached until half-past four yesterday afternoon, when 97 was recorded. The mercury was above the 90 point at 8 o'clock in the morning and did not descend below that mark until after 9 o'clock last night. Fifteen deaths and twice as many prostrations were reported up to midnight.

Suffering in the South.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 10.—For the past five days the heat in this city and at many points in the south has been intense, and numerous prostrations of both human and animal life and a number of deaths have occurred.

Health Officer To Visit Cuba.

Quarantine, S. I., Aug. 10.—Dr. Alvah H. Doty, health officer of the port of New York, has sailed for Havana on Ward line steamer City of Washington. Dr. Doty said he was not satisfied with the obtainable information regarding the outbreak of yellow fever and smallpox on the island of Cuba, and he expects to gather sufficient data during his stay to enable him to intelligently discriminate regarding incoming passengers.

Chinese Consul Recognized.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The president has recognized Sao Tsung Sze as consul of the Chinese empire at the port of New York.

COLLUSION CHARGED.

Award by New York State to the Savage Gun Company To Be Contested.

New York, Aug. 10.—The adoption of the Savage gun for the re-armament of the National guard at a cost of over $300,000 is to be vigorously opposed by the Winchester Arms company of New Haven, Conn., and other gun inventors and manufacturers who entered the test before the state commission named to select a gun. They claim that there was collusion practiced in the selection of the gun. There has been made to Gov. Morton a protest against his approval of the report filed by the commission named to recommend a gun for the use of the National guard of the state. The commission sent its report to the governor about a month ago, and it was in favor of the gun manufactured by the Savage Repeating Arms company of Utica. The protestants claim that there seems to have been collusion between at least two members of the commission named by the governor and the successful competitors in the test; that the commission was selected through political influence; that the governor was made an innocent party to the transaction, and that whether or not the report is approved by the governor the matter will at the next session of the legislature be made the subject of legislative inquiry. The Winchester Arms company has requested a hearing before the governor, and has retained Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy as its counsel in the case, with David Welch of the Syndicate building, Nassau street, New York city, as attorney to oppose the approval of the commission's report by the governor. The governor will receive the protestants to be heard, but will not consider the report until some time after he returns from his vacation. He will grant the hearing after Gen. Tracy returns from Europe, about September 15. It is expected that some sensational developments will be brought out at the hearing. The commission named by the governor consisted of Col. Albert D. Shaw of Watertown, R. W. Bliss of Brooklyn and Robert Hamilton of Albany. In detail what the claims of the protestants will be at the hearing is that direct connection can be traced between two members of the commission and the promoters of the Savage gun company, and that it was the promoters of the Savage company who were instrumental in getting the bill through the legislature, using certain political influence to gain their ends.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

Much Interest as to the Success of the Various Expeditions Yesterday.

London, Aug. 10.—Much interest exists in scientific circles as to the success of the several expeditions sent out to various parts of the world to study the total eclipse of the sun which occurred yesterday. A special dispatch from the United Associated Presses from Vadsoe, Norway, says that the members of the expedition sent to Varanger Fjord, near Vadso, by Mr. Downing of the British Nautical Almanac, were unable to take any observations that will be of value. The early phase of the eclipse was clearly seen, but its totality was obscured by thick clouds, which rendered the talking of observations impossible. The temperature at the beginning of the eclipse was forty-four. During the eclipse it fell to forty-two, and then rose again to forty-four, when the shadow passed from the sun. Among the observers at Varanger Fjord were Sir Robert Stawell Ball, Lowndean professor of astronomy and geometry in the university of Cambridge and director of the Cambridge observatory. News from the other stations, some of which are far from civilization, is anxiously awaited. It is earnestly hoped that the American expedition at the island of Yezo, Japan, and the expeditions at Nova Zembla and in eastern Siberia will obtain results that will be of great benefit to science.

ITALY AND ABYSSINIA.

German Diplomats Will Endeavor to Prevent a Renewal of the War.

Berlin, Aug. 10.—There is some anxiety in government circles regarding the final decision that will be arrived at by the Italian government concerning the Abyssinian question. The commander of the Italian forces in Eritrea has arrived in Rome and has had several conferences with Gen. Pelloux, minister of war. This is taken to indicate that it is the intention to again resume offensive operations against the Abyssinians, who in the recent campaign against them inflicted crushing defeats upon the Italian troops, and practically forced them to abandon the country and confine to the confines of the Italian colony. It is reported that King Menelek of Abyssinia has received stores of arms and ammunition, and that he meditates a surprise attack upon the Italians in October. Efforts of German diplomacy will be directed to prevent Italy from re-embarking upon a profitless campaign.

BRYAN'S TRIP EAST

The Presidential Nominee Left Chicago Late Last Night.

DUE IN PITTSBURG THIS EVENING.

Will Probably Leave the Latter City Early To-morrow Morning So as to Arrive in New York Before Nightfall—R. P. Bland Accompanies Him.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—William J. Bryan left Chicago for Pittsburg by the Pennsylvania road at 11:30 o'clock last night. Mr. and Mrs. Bryan departed from Clifton a few minutes after 11, after shaking hands with a large number of people gathered there to say good-bye, and were driven to the union station accompanied by the members of the Chicago reception committee. They had secured berths in the regular sleeper, and retired as the train drew out of the station. Hon. Richard P. Bland and wife will accompany Mr. and Mrs. Bryan to New York, and they occupied berths in the same coach. Yesterday was really a day of rest for Mr. Bryan—one of the few he has succeeded in passing since his nomination nearly a month ago. Mr. Bryan is a good sleeper, and despite the intense heat of Saturday night he rested well and did not leave his bed until nearly 10 o'clock. After breakfast he and Mrs. Bryan took a carriage at the Clifton house, where they were stopping, and drove to the Englewood Presbyterian church, a beautiful structure at 64th street and Yale avenue, where they attended divine service. They selected that house of worship because the temporary minister, Rev. John Clark Hill, of Austin, Ill., is to be the pastor of their church at Lincoln, and they wanted to meet him. Mr. Hill recently received a call to the First Presbyterian church in Lincoln, and will go there in a few weeks. After the service they returned to the Clifton and had dinner. At 6 o'clock Mrs. Bryan went to the main parlor of the hotel and received a large number of people who were waiting to see her husband. Mr. Bryan received in his room. Many of his local supporters called. One of his visitors was Gen. Warner of Ohio, president of the national bimetallic league, the father of the silver party. Mr. Bryan's visit to New York and for his New England trip are in a state of uncertainty. It is probable that while in New York he and Mrs. Bryan will be the guests of Williams '78. Col. Jones, treasurer of the democratic national committee, who recently resigned his position as president of a national bank because of his free coinage views. If they do not stay with Mr. St. John, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan probably will go to Archbold. Mr. Bryan does not know whether he will address or not to his schedule from Pittsburg to New York. He had decided to leave Pittsburg to-morrow morning at 7:20 o'clock, but he was informed yesterday that the national committee wanted him to reach New York on the afternoon and not in the night of that day. To comply with this desire he will be obliged to leave Pittsburg a 3 o'clock to-morrow morning.

TOUR OF CZAR AND CZARINA.

They Will Visit the Leading Capitals and Cities of Europe.

Berlin, Aug. 10.—A semi-official statement from St. Petersburg at length announces the itinerary of the czar and czarina on their trip to various European cities. They will start after the army maneuvers, which end on Aug. 24, and will successively visit Vienna, Berlin, Copenhagen, Balmoral, Paris, and Darmstadt. At Balmoral they will be the guests of Queen Victoria, and at Darmstadt, the czarina's birthplace, they will visit her majesty's brother, Grand Duke Ernest Louis, and other members of her family. Prince Lobanoff, the Russian foreign minister, will accompany the party to all the cities visited with the exception of Copenhagen and Darmstadt, where the visit of their majesties will be of a purely family nature. Much to the delight of the French government and Parisians generally, the czar and czarina will probably remain in Paris longer than in any other city, but the details of their visit there have not yet been fixed.

Butchered by Mussulmans.

London, Aug. 10.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily News telegraphs that a body of Musulmans have butchered thirty unarmed Christians within the precincts of the monastery at Anopolis, near Candia. One priest was burned alive. The correspondent adds that Col. Abdullah, a Kurd, who is now in Macedonia, will supersede Hassan Pasha, governor of Candia.

Raising Taxes on the Rockefellers.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 10.—The assessors of Mount Pleasant have made some radical changes this year. It is reported that William Rockefeller's assessment, which was formerly $150,000, has been raised to $1,200,000, and that the land owned by his brother, John D. Rockefeller, has been raised to $300 and $400 an acre. It was formerly taxed at from $60 to $100 an acre.

Four Men Drowned.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 10.—Jas. Butrick, F. M. Maneke, Frank Yarrington and Martin Manning were drowned while bathing in the lake yesterday afternoon. The bodies of all but Manning have been recovered. Yarrington's wife was bathing with him when he was drowned.

Wayne MacVeagh in Berlin.

Berlin, Aug. 10.—Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, United States ambassador to Italy, is in Berlin enroute from St. Petersburg for Rome.

SUMMER SUNs.

Mabel Grudnatze.

Mabel's coming home from college
With the "absepakin" that she's won;
I suppose she's learned a knowledge
Of all things beneath the sun.
I shall hardly dare address her
Now, she's got her A. B.
Would I were a grave professor,
Then perhaps she'd fancy me!

Wonder if Miss Mab's forgotten,
Has she quite forgotten me,
How we roamed beneath the cotton
Woods that bent above the creek?
Spent long afternoons together
When the corn was in the husk,
Wandering slowly back together
Through the twilight's dewy dusk?

Wonder if she still remembers
All the merry winter nights—
Chestnuts roasted in the embers,
Coasting parties on the heights?
Wonder—hang this jolty table—
Now her learning's such a "stack,"
If she'll let me call her "Mabel,"
If she still will call me "Jack"?

Mabel's coming home from college!
Mabel's coming home to-night!
Strange, but something in the knowledge
Makes the cloudy day grow bright!
It's absurd—I don't deny it—
But each time I think the some
Seems to know my joy, and cry it—
"Mabel's coming home to-night!"
—Barry Pelouse, in Detroit Free Press.

An' I'd marry some rich feller
Like gurls do.
Wish'I I was a gurl!

Wish'I I was a gurl,
I'd just chaw gum and talk,
An' wear my hair combed
I'd take up all the walk,
Like some gurls do.
Wish'I I was a gurl!

Wish'I I was a gurl,
All boys good fer is't
Ter carry coal an' run odd jobs
An' git off the walk fer dudy snobs
Like I did t'other nite—
Wish'I I was a gurl!

Wish'I I was a gurl,
Wish'I the Lord made all boys gurls,
An' made gurls boys, tud ben the same
An' I'd ben Lizy Ann by name,
An' she'd ben Mister Josiah of Jane,
Wish'I He had—
Wish'I I was a gurl!

Has Lavish Summer Brought the Rose?

Has lavish summer brought the rose?
Why did my heart not know,
When every gossip wind that blows
Made music as it flew?

And all the birds went mad with glee,
And sang from morn till night;
And then the stars came out to see
What all the world was bright?

But I missed something from the time,
And so I did not guess
The meaning of the summer's rhyme,
Or the year's happiness.

Can gladness be where she is not?
Can roses bud and blow?
Does all the world but me forget
What time it is, I know?

I cannot for the day's kind grace—
The magic of the night—
Since with them comes no more the face
That is my heart's delight.
—Louise Chandler Moulton, in Youth's Companion.

Sour Grapes.

When with a reminiscent view
I note the things I didn't do—
The rising stocks I didn't snatch;
The heiresses I failed to catch;
The fortunes that I might have had
Have been inspired somehow to write;
The pictures that I might have drawn;
The journeys that I might have gone;
The loads of fun I might have had—
It makes me blue, and green, and mad!

But when I see the chaps who got
The things I missed and envied my lot;
Who put their money into stocks
That turned out naught but paper blocks;
Who were going to be lawyers, which
And suddenly grew bald and thin;
Who published books (at their own cost),
And by the world were never sought;
Who on long voyages knocked about,
And turned their stomachs inside out,
I've come to feel that I envy you and me—
That grapes both sour and high may be!
—Paul Pastnor, in Detroit Free Press.

Be as Brave as You Can.

I was weak and despairing from illness and pain,
I seemed to be foiled in each wish and each plan,
When a friend gave me hope that yet all I might gain;
Through my sobbing I heard: "Be as brave as you can!"

Bright with cheer were the words, sympathetic and strong;
They conquered my weakness! New courage they sang
They may gird up some heart, so I pass them along
To all in sore need—"Be as brave as you can!"

When the night gathers round you, and gone is your light,
Believe in the morning, when darkness you scan;
The sunshine will come again, shadows to flight;
Trust the Lord and cheer up! "Be as brave as you can!"
—Emma C. Dowd, in Home and Farm.

The Flight of the Arrow.

The life of a man
Is a flight, a flight,
Out of darkness
Into darkness again;
Perhaps to pleasure,
Perhaps to pain!

There must be something,
Above or below,
Somewhere unseen,
A mighty bow,
A hand that tires not,
An arm that knows,
That sees the arrows
Fly, and fly;
One, surely,
Why we live—and die.
—Richard H. Stoddard, in Atlantic Monthly.

I Love You, Dear.

"I love you, dear!"
There is no phrase so worn and old
In all the world, nor one so sweet—
To lovers' ears, to maiden's ear,
As this refrain: "I love you, dear!"

"I love you, dear!"
There is no change as time goes on,
No new words seem to mean so much
As when they're uttered, fondly near,
In trembling tones: "I love you, dear!"

"I love you, dear!"
No night so dark, no day so long,
But hope behind it, comfort to the heart,
If only "some one" standeth near
To murmur, low: "I love you, dear!"
—N. G. Pickering.

DOG RINGS FOGBELL.

Clever Canine Employed at the Wood Island (Me.) Lighthouse.

There is a dog upon the Maine coast which is a valuable and valued assistant at a lighthouse. According to the Portland Daily Argus the animal is the only dog regularly employed at any lighthouse in the district, and he performs his duty in a manner that is perfectly satisfactory.

He is attached to the lighthouse at Wood island, off Biddeford Pool, and has been there for a number of years. He is the constant companion of the keeper, and has learned much of the duties of one of Uncle Sam's lonely watchers.

It is customary for vessels passing Wood island to give three blasts of the whistle as a salute. At such times the dog runs to the bell rope, seizes it in his mouth and tugs vigorously. The dog never rings the bell except at the right time, and never misses ringing it when it should be rung.

Capt. Oliver, of the excursion steamer Forest Queen, was the first seaman to learn of the four-footed helper that the keeper of the Wood island lighthouse had trained to ring the bell. Several hundred excursionists on the boat saw the dog tugging at the bell rope, and they afterwards made inquiries about the matter.

They learned that it was an old story with the dog, and that during a fog the patient animal rings the bell without complaining for hours at a time. He has never been known to desert his post, which is more than can be said for some of the men employed to ring fog bells and tend lighthouses.

At nearly every lighthouse that guards the coast there is one dog, and sometimes the keepers have several. They help to while away the long, lonesome days and nights and are good as human companions. But, so far as is known, the dog pictured herewith is the only one that has proven to be of any real service to his master.

It is perhaps needless to say that the dog is highly valued by his owner, and money would not buy him. He is a mongrel dog, being more nearly a shepherd than anything else. No particular effort was made to teach him his duty. He "picked it up" from observation, and it took few lessons to make him perfect.

The animal is perfectly contented with his lot in life, and, as he is well fed and cared for, he has no reason to complain that he has been forced to leave off the usual habits of doghood and tug at the end of a rope to ring a bell which will warn mariners who have lost their way in a fog.

PICTURE OF A TORNADO.

It Does Not Look Very Terrible, But Is Just as It Looked.

The Engineering News prints the photograph of a tornado of which the accompanying cut is a reproduction, and says that it will be examined with especial interest at this time, both by those who have had and those who have not had the fortune, good or ill, to witness one of these terrible storms. The photograph was taken by Mr. T. Croft, a local photographer, at Oklahoma City,

PHOTOGRAPH OF A TORNADO.

O. T., at about four p. m. on May 14. The tornado was about six miles distant when the photograph was taken, and a rough computation indicates a probable diameter of the funnel of about 1,000 feet. The negative is, unfortunately, exceedingly faint, and the print would show the sky much darker than it does, but a tornado is a difficult subject to photograph at the best of times, as most people who have witnessed one of these twisters have found other things to occupy their time than taking pictures of the threatening spiral. So far as known, this is the first actual photograph of a tornado ever published, and it is believed that only one other has ever been taken. This is referred to in Russell's "Meteorology" as having been secured at the Howard mines, Dodge county, Georgia, in 1884.

The cloud then being 23 miles away, and a rather poor pen picture is inserted in the book, drawn from the photograph.

A Glorious Fourth.

First we bought a lot of rockets,
With a box of Roman candles;
Then we emptied out our pockets,
Buying squibs and things that fizz,
Serpents, snakes and colored lights,
With a dozen colored balls,
And some Chinese things as long handles
That they called "Niagara Falls."
Half a gross of cannon crackers
And a dozen pinwheels whirling,
Regular old Barnum whackers,
Fit to use when Gabriel comes—
Had a hundred torpedo-whackers,
Showers of sparks in every one,
And a set of wheels within wheels,
Warranted to go alone.
Red lights, green lights, blue lights, flashes
In profusion and a box,
Things that slowly burn to ashes,
Things that dame like Martyr Knox—
Just the dandiest celebration
One no carping crank could scoff
At—then, by George! the night was rainy,
And we couldn't set 'em off.
—Somerville Journal.

Independence Day.

Bang! Boom! Rattle and sizz!
Fly sparks like thunder! How it is Dear Independence day!
A smell of powder in the air,
A sound of boy pranks everywhere,
Engaged in mimic fray!

A trumpet's blare, a drum's loud beat,
A quaint procession in the street
Of little "Continentals,"
A cheer, a shout, a proud buzza,
And patriot "Young America"
Applauds the march again!

A bright, bewildering array,
Of "goddesses" in ribbons gay,
The colors of the free!
A native flag on every hill-mast,
And in the heart, thank God, a fast,
Firm love for Liberty!

FRILLS OF FASHION.

White linen lawn vests, with hemstitched tucks and frill down the front and a turn-over linen collar, are one of the novelties to wear with the coat and skirt gown.

One of the perennials of fashion is the Figaro jacket, which crops up with great regularity. This season it is very short, to display the wide folded belt, and made of tucked embroidery.

It is rumored that coat sleeves are coming into favor again, and the duchess of York has really appeared with diamonds suspended from her ears. We are threatened, too, with the old-time bracelets and black velvet, with gold and jeweled clasps.

Red is the accepted color for golf suits, and red serge made with Norfolk jacket and skirt, finished on the edges with green leather, is very chic. Brown cloth skirts, with bright-red blouse waists, are very effective, and Russian crash is the material for hot-weather golf costumes.

Inconsistent.

He never would do a thing by rule,
And he heartily hated form;
He blew his meat, fingers to make 'em cool,
And, in winter, to make 'em warm!

CYCLING COMMENT.

Jay Eaton rode a great mile out west the other evening, creating a new unpaced indoor record. He covered the distance in 2:07.

Walter B. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, and Charles B. Morse, of The Daily Press staff, returned yesterday morning from their bicycle tour through New York State.

H. E. Rider, the well known sporting goods dealer of North avenue, has a complete stock of all kinds of articles for sportsmen, and a superior line of wheels. The prices are just right to suit.

The Evening Telegram, of New York, is arranging for a big century run to Patchogue and return on Saturday, August 29th. F. L. C. Martin, of this city, has been invited to be one of the pacemakers.

Herbert Randolph, Scott Terry and William Schaeffer rode down to Asbury Park last Saturday, spent Sunday, and returned Monday by train. In riding down, Randolph had his coat stolen and Terry had his tire badly cut.

Two cyclists from this city, both young men, had an exciting experience while touring up the Mohawk Valley this summer. They had expected to find the tow path of the Erie canal a paradise for wheelmen but were sadly disappointed. They were bumping along up the tow path, for it was very much like riding over cobble stones, when they encountered two canal boats. That was not anything unusual to find on a canal but the expression of the two drivers of the mules on the tow path looked vicious. They drove the mules clear to the left forcing the riders between the canal and the tow line. Then they eased up on the lines and the young man started to ride across. Whack! whack! went the clubs of the drivers on the backs of their mules. The tow lines suddenly tightened and over went both riders. One was shot out into the canal and the other slid along on the side of his face. They had just time to rise when the second tow line came along and repeated the operation, only neither took a plunge this time. Then the canal boats floated by the boat-men hooted at the dripping cyclist as he mounted his wheel, which had luckely escaped a ducking, and bumped along for seven weary miles to the next town.

AROUND THE BASES.

The West End base ball team which is to play at Scotch Plains, Saturday of this week, will be an unusually strong team, and everything points to the West End's victory.

WITH ROD AND GUN

Eugene O'Reilly, of East Second street, can be found today at Perth Amboy with a rod in his hand. He expects to bring back a majority of the fish in the water.

Verdict for the Plaintiff.

The contest case of Burke against McIntyre, which was tried before Justice Newcorn and a jury of twelve men Tuesday, was decided in favor of the plaintiff. The case was one in which Burke claimed $75 for grading work for Mrs. McIntyre around her property on New street. Lawyer Hetfield represented Burke, and Lawyer Meehan, of Somerville, represented Mrs. McIntyre. The following were the jurors: W. G. Baldwin, C. M. Fine, Abram Angleman, J. B. Martin, G. H. Bellis, W. G. Gray, Charles Bock, I. S. Lance, Charles Wyckoff, Frank Frazee, George Firstbrook and George H. Rockafellow. The jury was not out very long when they returned with a verdict of $15 for the plaintiff.

—The office of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company is draped in mourning, owing to the death of E. B. Pope.

Walter Harris, together with his wife and a party of friends from Newark, rode up to Watson Emory's house on Lyman place, Monday and pent the afternoon and evening there, returning by wheel the next day.

E. F. Deitrich, of Philadelphia, who has been in the hospital since Monday suffering with a contused wound of the elbow, the result of an accident near Bound Brook, was discharged yesterday afternoon, and in company with his wife and children who came to Plainfield, they returned home.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrocea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 147 West Front street.

HUGE TROLLEY PARTY.

The Street Railway Company Filled With Enterprise.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company have decided to introduce a new pleasure scheme for the benefit of the people, and it will certainly add life to the town. The plan is to give a huge trolley party to the public. They have hired the Plainfield Cornet Band, who will occupy one car, and while making a trip over the lines will discourse sweet music. Other cars will follow, and anyone can take the trip for the regular fare. The route will be from the North Avenue station to Netherwood, then to Dunellen, then back through Fourth street to Seventh street and Monroe avenue, and from there to the end of the Somerset street line and back to the North Avenue station. The party will be given on Friday evening, and the start will be made at 8 o'clock. If the affair proves a success they will be given every Friday evening during the summer.

Can Carry No More Packages.

A new order has just been issued by the Central Railroad company, and goes into effect today. There has been a common practice among baggagemen on passenger trains of carrying letters and small packages for friends, who would re-imburse the employe by giving him a cigar or twenty-five cents for his trouble. As usual, with all such customs, there has been an abuse of the privilege, notwithstanding the fact that it is in direct violation of the rules. This new order issued provides that if an employe of the road is detected carrying anything in the above mentioned manner he will be fined $'0, and makes himself liable to suspension.

Overcome By the Heat.

Morris Fitzgerald, a brother in law of Frank Linke, of West Front street, was overcome by the heat while on the way to his home, at the corner of Third and Liberty streets, a little before noon Tuesday. He staggered on the stairway and fell from sheer exhaustion. The unconscious man was carried to his room and Drs. Davis and Hedges were hastily summoned. The unfortunate man remained in an unconscious state for several hours, but after proper restoratives had been administered, the patient showed marked signs of improvement. Today he is reported out of danger, but he is yet very weak.

Accused Of Beating A Lad.

A resident of West Fourth street promises to furnish some excitement at the city court room Saturday morning when he will be tried on the charge of beating a lad named Clickner and disturbing the peace of West Fourth street. The above-mentioned individual is Thomas Marley and he was arrested this morning by Patrolman McCue on complaint of Mrs. Elizabeth Clickner, mother of the abused boy. He was brought before City Judge DeMeza and his trial set down for Saturday morning.

Ceases to Be a Daily.

The Passaic Daily Journal has suspended publication as a daily newspaper after an eight months' career. It will be issued as a weekly.

—A big bargain in choice peaches this afternoon at Demarest & Son's, 205 Park avenue.

—There is one thing to enjoy these warm days, and that is Tier's ice cream. Do not forget to try it tonight.

—Three stage loads of excursionists from this city and North Plainfield, were driven over to South Plainfield, this morning and helped to swell the party of picnicers from there who accompanied the Baptist church Sunday-school to Boynton Beach.

—Bowling on C. Shepflin's court at Dunellen has been on the wane for some time past on account of the hot weather. One week from next Saturday, however, the fall season will be formally opened on the courts by individual bowling contests.

—Up to hour of going to press the body of the late Thomas McFadden had not arrived in Plainfield, where he is to be buried. The delay, it is said, is due to the fact that the coroners in New York city are so busy that a permit to remove the body has not yet been secured.

—The foremen and representatives of the various companies of the fire department met with Chief Doane in his office in the City Hall building last evening, and talked over the proposed Exempt Firemen's parade to be held in this city next month. They were all heartily in accord with the Chief, but it was thought advisable to submit the matter to the companies before any final action was taken.

Mrs. Emily Leibe, aged 55 years, wife of Bertrand Leibe, died at her home near Dunellen yesterday from the effects of heat and over-exertion. The funeral will take place from the house Friday afternoon at 2:30o'clock.

It doesn't matter much whether sick headache, billiousness, indigestion and constipation are caused by neglect or by unavoidable circumstances; DeWitt's Little Early Risers will speedily cure them all. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

COLD AIR CAVE NO FAKE.

One Who Has Been There Tells of Its Wonderful Cold Atmosphere.

The Mt. Minsi Mountain Echo has the following from a correspondent concerning the cold air cave recently discovered on the farm of C.T. Nightingale, of this city, located on Mt. Minsi:

Believing that a word on the Cold Air Cave at the Gap will be interesting to your readers, I would state that this is one of the wonders of the vicinity, and probably the most interesting as well as the most mysterious.

"Where does the cold air come from and is it a fake," are the remarks of all visitors, "and why is it not as cold in the cave on a cold day as it is on a warm day?"

To more enlighten the visitors, last Saturday an exploring party, of which I was well known Philadelphia lady was one, crawled through the small opening at the rear, and traversed the winding labyrinth for some eighty feet. A number of expert mining men were then set to work opening up the passages so as to give the visitors a more thorough idea of what the cave really was, and if you are in search of adventure and desire to explore the interior of the grand old Mt. Minsi, call at the cave and put on the suits furnished by the attendants, and see for yourself where and what the Cold Air Cave consists of, and if your wish to see it when it is the coldest, take a very warm day for your search, and ou will be convinced that it is no fake, but a wonder of the Gap that is worth your while to visit. Where the thermometer registers from 38° to 55° farenheit, the lowest temperature is found on the hottest day, when there is hardly a breath of air stirring through the Gap, but when the wind is blowing hard to the north, and the day is cool, the temperature of the cave is liable to run to 65°, therefore take a hot day for the Cold Air Cave.

That Catarrh is a Local Affection of the membrane of the nose, throat, etc., is a fact established by physicians, and this authority should carry more weight than assertions of incompetent parties, who claim that catarrh is a blood affection, in order to make a market for their compound. Ely's Cream Balm is a local remedy, composed of harmless medicants and free of mercury or any injurious drug. It will cure catarrh. Applied directly to the inflamed membrane, it restores it to its healthy condition, affording quick relief and a cure after short continuance.

MUST LEAVE IT ALONE.

M'VEY OBJECTS TO THE CHANGES IN ROBERTS' STABLE.

He Paid For the Privilege of Using the Entrance and Now Mr. Roberts Would Like to Have It Closed Up.

An unexpected difficulty has arisen between ex Councilman Dan S. Roberts, the veteran North avenue liveryman, and J. H. McVey, whose restaurant on North avenue is well known throughout the State, which has many interesting features.

Mr. Roberts a few years ago sold to Mr. McVey the building on North avenue now occupied by the latter for his restaurant and hotel. The sale also included the right of way through the driveway from North avenue.

During the past few days Mr. Roberts commenced the work of closing up the driveway by putting in a store front. His intention was to arrange the driveway for a store, which he expected to lease to Ell Odam, and have the entrance to his stable from Second street.

Mr. McVey, learning the facts, consulted his lawyer, Assemblyman W. B. Codington, and the result was that an injunction was served on Mr. Roberts, but the work was only stopped temporarily.

In the meantime, Mr. Roberts had papers drawn which gave him the right to close the driveway, and gave Mr. McVey the right to a passage way through the stable office, also through the regular stable entrance from Second street. Mr. Roberts signed the paper, but Mr. McVey was not satisfied and would not sign it today. The latter says that its a question of right, and he purchased the right of way. The outcome of the trouble will be watched with interest. In the meantime the work on the store front is going on.

PRIZES FOR POPULARITY.

They Form a Pleasing Feature of a Successful Entertainment.

The festival of the German Beneficial Society was continued in Saengerbund Hall last evening and the attendances was much larger than on the previous evening. The singing section of the Germania and Turn Verein was present and opened the programme with a well-rendered selection. This was followed with a most laughable farce in one act entitled "How the Three Musicians Paid Their Bill." Those taking part were Mrs. H. Goelbert, August Wolf, Paul Postler and Otto Kellar. The parts were exceedingly well taken and Mrs. Goelbert was presented with a large and handsome bouquet. Another song by the singing section brought the entertainment to a close.

An additional feature was the several contests among the members of the society and their lady friends. The contest for the most popular member of the society was won by Fred Conde and in recognition of the fact he received a valuable gold-headed cane, also a bouquet. Frank Conde was awarded second prize, which was a silver-headed cane. Miss Julia Rupert was decided upon as the most popular lady, and she received a beautiful gold watch, and Miss Alice Kennedy secured the second prize, a silver watch. The third prize, a toilet set, was presented to Miss Pauline Sutterlein. Miss Ida Falker received a gold pin as fourth prize.

The floor was then cleared and dancing was enjoyed until 3 o'clock this morning. A delegation from New Brunswick was expected but owing to the death of one of their members they failed to put in an appearance. The affair throughout was very successful and the society will reap a good sum as profit.

NOT ENCOURAGING.

The Volunteer Firemen of New York Not Likely to Visit Plainfield.

The executive committee of the Exempt Firemen's Association, together with the board of officers of the fire department, met last evening to consider the advisability of inviting the Volunteer Firemen's Association to this city, Saturday, Sept. 5th. There was only one company represented that would guarantee to help out in the affair. The encouragement was very slight, and it now looks as though the affair will not be a success. The Exempt Association does not feel like assuming the responsibility and no substantial aid has thus far been promised toward helping them out. At present the matter will rest where it is.

A Good Chance.

If the person who stole the three wheels from George Leland's wagon and three more from Wm. J. Nelson's wagon, on West Second street a few nights ago, as told in The Press next day, will only return and leave their name or card they can have the other wheel in each case.

A NORTH CAROLINIAN

HONORED BY JERSEYMEN IN A RIGHT ROYAL MANNER.

J. C. Stanley, a North Carolinian, a Guest at The Netherwood Farm, Entertained by Jerseymen—A Clambake in the Woods.

Samuel B. Wheeler, Albert Irving Smalley and August Trust, guests of a warm-hearted Southerner at Wilmington, North Carolina, during a visit at that place with J. C. Stanley, Tuesday last honored that gentleman with a clambake in the woods at the Netherwood Farm. In the midst of the feast the shower drove the party to the gigantic barn on the farm where Caleb G. Thatcher, he of minstrel fame, made laughter for all. The bake was first-class and the spot was chosen by nature. All the party were nicely feasting when the rain fell in buckets full and the scattering was hasty to the nearby barn where under the shelter of mown hay and clover the knot was re-tied between the blue and the gray. Assemblyman "Deacon" Reed, Judge DeMeza, Ex-Judge Codington, J. C. Stanley, George O. Stevens and Caleb G Thatcher entertained and made a happy ending of a jolly party with speechmaking and song. The rich Southern dialect of Mr. Stanley, who is a noble, warm-hearted Carolinian, was indeed very pleasing to the ear. He invited the whole party to his seven room home saying it was built of India rubber and would stretch. There was among the party:

A. M. Griffen, Tax Collector Spencer, Street Commissioner Meeker, Councilman Tolles, David Smalley, Conductor William Clark, of Somerville; E. B. Mills, Harry Werzer, William Emery, C. George Thatcher, August Trust, A. I. and N.B. Smalley, "Barney" Williams, Bert Livezy, Freeholders Barkalew and Lutkins, of North Plainfield; Zergibel, of Warren; Vreeland, of Franklin; Baltantine, of Bernard; County Engineer Doughty, of Somerville; Judge De Meza, ex-Judge W. G. Codding*ton, Assemblyman Reed, J. A. Smith,* Millard Fillmore Elderten, of The News; George O. Stevens, Dr. Zeglio, J. Hervey Doane and several others.

A JUVENILE INVASION.

Frank Rich Advertises for a Baby, With Awful Consequences.

"The Cotton Spinner," which is the opening attraction at Music Hall Aug. 27th, was the innocent cause of a very amusing incident. In New York last week there was one man who had trouble to burn, and that man was Frank Rich. Mr. Rich is the very wide-awake half of the firm of Rich & Maeder, who are foisting Scott Marble's latest success, "The Cotton Spinner," upon the American world. The cast of characters of "The Cotton Spinner" calls for a baby. Mr. Rich, who is nothing, if not original, conceived the idea of "The Cotton Spinner" as a corporation adopting a baby. Through the medium of a chastely worded advertisement in the Herald, he made known his desire. Mr. Rich is well up in theatrical matters, but he is, or was, until recently, woefully ignorant concerning the alarming extent of the juvenile population of New York. The firm occupies an extensive floor of four large offices. On the morning after Mr. Rich had advertised for the baby these offices were filled to overflowing. Waves of humanity flowed up and down the hall and sweet down the stairs. Mr. Rich is firmly convinced that every baby in New York city was packed into those four offices. Some of the infants, evidently under the impression that they were to do a specialty, were piercing the circumambient air with shrill tenor notes. None of them had pitched their selections in the same key, and the result was far from pleasing to the ear. There were some babies of all colors and conditions. Some were black and some were tan, and there was one almond-eyed, Ah Sin, among them. It cost the progressive manager considerable peace of mind and a large amount of perjury to get rid of the infantile stage-struck coterie, and their respective and in many cases determined guardians. Mr. Rich has abandoned the adoption scheme, and is considering the feasibility of having a baby made to order by a well known toy firm down town.

Resulting Painters.

The enterprising Sycamore street painters, Rushton, Hanson & Luthman, are finding lots of business these dull days. They have just completed the outdoor work on the residence of W. Dodd, on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, and they are now fitting up the interior decorations of the Manhattan Hotel, on Somerset street. They have the contracts for the painting of William Claassen's house on Liberty street and the new house of the Sternberg clothing establishment on Central avenue.

LARGEST IN THE COUNTRY

POND TOOL MACHINE CO. JUST COMPLETED AN IMMENSE LATHE.

It Cannot Be Shipped at Present, However, as the Jersey Central Railroad Has No Car That Can Carry It.

The Pond Tool and Machine Company are at present in a most undesirable position, and the Central Railroad Company are not in a position just at this time to help them. For sometime past there has been in course of construction a lathe which is pronounced the largest piece of machinery of the kind in this country. Within the past few days the lathe was completed and it weighs 57,000 pounds. The lathe was made for a firm in Cleveland, Ohio, and of course they are anxiously waiting for it. But until other arrangements are made they will have to wait. The fact is that the Central Railroad Company have not a car upon which they can ship the lathe. Its construction requires that one car be used and the nearest they can come to it is a gondola of thirty-ton capacity, but that will not answer on account of its being partly enclosed. Officials of the railroad company and the Pond Tool and Machine Company have been doing some heavy thinking during the past few days as to how the lathe can be transferred. The only thing left to do is to build a car expressly for the job and that will probably be done before the lathe will be moved.

It is the first instance of the kind in this locality and the railroad company will probably be prepared in the future for all such large orders.

BOUND BROOK CELEBRATES.

The Borough Justice Unsuccessfully Attempts To Stops The Fun.

On last Monday the recently passed bicycle ordinance in Bound Brook went into effect, and accordingly the *youthful element arranged for a de*monstration to celebrate the event, early in the evening a large number of wheelmen assembled, having their wheels equipped with dinner bells, horns, cowbells, and large lanterns. One had a cowbell a foot in height and calculated to be heard nearly a mile. This bell was the cause of the disturbance, which occurried later in the evening.

Having assembled, the wheelmen in single file took up a line of march, through the streets, ringing the bells and blowing the horns. At about nine o'clock they were stopped on Maine street by the Borough Justice and two marshals, who preceded to place the enterprising cyclist with the cowbell under arrest.

They were immediately surrounded by a howling mob of wheelmen and their sympathizers, and a riot was imminent. At this point however, a permit signed by the Mayor, which one of the parades had had the foresthought to procure, was presented to the astonished Justice, who immediately released the prisoner. Then the Justice and his marshals retreated amid the geers of the mob, leaving the town in possession of the wheelmen who paraded till after midnight cheering the borough officials and ringing the bells.

Cycling Through Europe.

Miss Pansy Herring, of East Second street, has received a letter and postal card from her brother, Rev. C. E. Herring, who, with Fred Bettman, is traveling in Europe. He says that both are enjoying the best of health and that they average fifty miles a day on their wheels, over roads which are finer than Park avenue. They will sail from Genoa for home Thursday, September 3d. In the letter Mr. Herring speaks of the many pleasant people that have been met on the trip.

A Plainfield Baby Was There.

In the description of the Asbury Park "baby parade" in The Daily Journal of that city, a Plainfield youngster is described. The Journal says: "Verna Blanche Braker, of Plainfield, had her dress decorated with gold dollars made of gilt paper. Her parents are James and Blanche Braker, who are summering in Asbury Park."

Donations for the Children's Camp.

Donations for the children's camp of the local King's Daughters have been received from the following: Mrs. Hervey B. Newhall, the W. C. T. U., Esther May Lyon six months old, Florence King, Mrs. L. E. Kline, Mrs. Joe Bolsterli, Mrs. F. A. Smith, Mrs. Dickenson, Mrs. Adams, Mrs. W. W. Myers, Miss Martine.

If you have ever seen a little child in the agony of summer complaint, you can realize the danger of the trouble and appreciate the value of instantaneous relief always afforded by DeWitt's Colic & Cholera Cure. For dysentery and diarrœea it is a reliable remedy. We could not afford to recommend this as a cure unless it were a cure. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 142 West Front street.

A TROLLEY EXTENSION.

STREET RAILWAY CO. PLANNING ONE TO SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Lawyer Moffett Has Secured Consents on Second Street and Will Now Try for the South Plainfield Trolley Line.

The trolley road from Plainfield to South Plainfield now looks like an assured fact, although it probably will not be built until next year. Through the energetic efforts of Lawyer Chas. L. Moffett, of this city, more than enough consents have been secured on East Second street, from Park avenue to Leland avenue. Second street does not run any nearer Scotch Plains or Fanwood than Park avenue, but it is said that land owners along the line of the proposed street are much in favor of it.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company has another project in view that will be considerably to Plainfield's advantage, and that is the running of another line from West Fourth street out Plainfield avenue to the South Plainfield station. This will closely connect that outlying district with Plainfield and will also furnish the connecting link with the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

The officials of the street railway company were so well pleased with Mr. Moffett's work on East Second street that they have engaged him to secure a sufficient number of consents on Plainfield avenue, so that the South Plainfield extension may be made as soon as possible. He has been given two months to secure them.

The sentiment of the property owners along the proposed line seems to be in favor of the trolley, although there are, as usual, some objectors. The South Plainfield people will favor it as furnishing rapid transit between the two places, while the storekeepers will probably, as in Dunellen, object to it as carrying much of the local trade to Plainfield.

Another Concert.

The total receipts from the Martine Brothers open air Concert Monday evening amounted to $5.10. This was not very flattering to the managers and especially to Edward Martin, who advanced some five dollars toward making the affair a success. From a financial point of view, the concert was not a success, but otherwise it was all that could be expected and desired.

But the managers believe in the old time saying that "Nothing ventured is nothing gained," so they are determined to try again and they are already arranging for another open air blow out, two weeks hence on the same spot.

Want a Band Stand.

The members of the Plainfield Cornet Band are somewhat denunciative in the treatment they are receiving. True, it is, the Ford Furniture good natured and the audience is not either obliged or asked to pay one cent for the entertainment. Yet Prof. Guttman and his men think it would be far better to have an elevated stage, so the music could be heard more clearly and distinctly. Such a stage could be hired for $2 a night, and there are plenty of truckmen in this city who would be glad to remove it both ways for a dollar more.

"Count" Van Ness Talks.

"Count" J. K. Van Ness was in town yesterday and gave additional details concerning the new bicycle supply manufacturing company, which the "Count" says is soon to build on land purchased from him. Furthermore, the "Count" says, the buildings are to be heated with steam throughout and they will have all the necessary appliances. "Count" Van-Ness says he doesn't care what people say, he's sold the land all the same.

To Boynton Beach.

The Misses Lizzie and Katie Flanagan, the Misses Lizzie and Nellie Casey and the Misses Sarah and Minnie Sharkey, Miss Annie Kelly and Miss Kittie Flynn, all of this city, started for Boynton Beach in a stage at 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The party spent the day there in various ways and they returned home at about 9 o'clock last evening after an enjoyable day.

Result of Telegraphing.

P. J. McAndrews, yardmaster at the freight house, has been effected during the past two years with what is known as operator's paralysis. Mr. McAndrews was formerly night operator at the North avenue station and constant work with his hand produced the disease. Yesterday morning he went to Philadelphia where he will undergo treatment for the trouble.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 142 West Front street.

COLLIDED WITH A POLE.

A PLEASURE PARTY MET WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Miss Mary A. Brown, of East Fourth Street, Was of the Party But Escaped Serious Injury—Several Injured.

A very sad ending to a week's vacation occurred at Bristol, Conn., last Sunday. Miss Mary A. Brown, of the East Fourth street, together with her sister, Mrs. J. T. Armstrong and son, Howard, of Brooklyn, well known in this city west to Bristol Conn., a week ago to visit their brother, B. A. Brown, who has charge of an electrial plant at that place. Last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Brown engaged a three-seat wagon and a team of horses for the purpose of driving his guests to Hartford. There were in the party, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Brown and daughter Elsie Brown, Mrs. Brown's brother, Thomas Raritan, Mrs. J. T. Armstrong, Howard Armstrong and Miss Mary A. Brown. On the way, Mr. Brown noticed that the horses were to near the wagon, and one of them kept striking the wheel with his hoofs, but Mr. Brown, by careful driving, managed to hold the horses in, until Plainville was reached.

They came to a fork in the road and Mr. Brown wanted to keep on the straight road, but before he realized what had happened the team suddenly turned the corner, and at the same time increased their speed. Mr. Brown lost control of the animals and they ran at full speed into a telegraph pole. The horses broke loose from the wagon and got away. Mr. Brown was thrown out of the wagon and went headfirst through a picket fence. His face was scratched severely and he received several bruises. Mrs. Brown followed and her arm was fractured in three places. She was also bruised. On the next seat were Mrs. Armstrong and her son, Howard. She was violently thrown out and sustained a fracture of the limb and collar bone. Her shoulder was also sprained, and it is thought she received internal injuries. Her son was terribly bruised about the body and received an ugly cut in the head. Miss Mary Brown, Elsie Brown and Thomas Raritan were also thrown out but, aside from sundry bruises, their injuries are slight.

Nearby residents saw the accident and at once rushed to the scene where they did all in their power to relieve the pain of the suffering Physicians were sent for and came at once. The party was taken home later in a trolley car. The carriage was completely wrecked, the horses were caught sometime later. Miss Mary Brown returned yesterday to Plainfield and brought her sister's son, Howard, with her. He is being cared for and his speedy recovery is expected. The condition of Mrs. Armstrong is critical and she cannot be moved from Bristol. Her injuries are the worst. The others are doing well but it will be sometime before all recover.

Improvements at the Railroad Station.

Station Agent Raynes says that as soon as the work of elevating the main tracks in front of the North Avenue station is completed the attention will next be turned to tunneling the main and side tracks in an effort to carry off the surface water. As soon as the improvements are made here the attention of the trackmen will be turned to Grant and Clinton avenues, where similar improvements will be made.

Borough Republican Primary.

The Republicans of the borough will hold a caucus in the basement of the schoolhouse on Saturday evening to elect three delegates to attend the Republican State convention to be held in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, on Thursday, August 27th. Ten electors are to be elected from New Jersey for President and Vice-President of the United States.

Wiring the Fanwood Depot.

Allen Laing, of this city, has William Simmonds at work wiring the Fanwood depot for electrical lighting. In the depot there are to be five incandescent lamps and there will be four additional lights located conveniently about the grounds. Everything will be in readiness for lighting by tomorrow night.

Dunellen Juniors Celebrate.

The anniversary of William G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Dunellen, was celebrated in a most auspicious manner last evening. There were present delegations from surrounding councils, and about twenty-five members of Franklin Council, this city attended in a body.

The New Tax Rate.

According to Assessor Hubbard's figures the total assessed valuation of Plainfield's real estate is $7,500,000, or $280,000 more than a year ago. The rate this year will be 2.30, or two-cents less than last year.

EVOLUTION OF COINAGE.

The Lydians Were First to Coin Standard Money.

All Kinds of Metals Have at Different Times Been Used as a Medium of Barter and Exchange—Leather and Tree Bark Tokens.

[Special Letter.]

The all-important issue in the coming campaign is in a certain sense a color question. White or yellow, silver or gold, is the cry of the warring factions, and the country awaits with bated breath the outcome of the strike which will decide whether a gold standard or an unlimited coinage of silver is to be adopted by the government of the United States.

At this time it is perhaps opportune to throw a retrospective glance into the history and evolution of the coinage of the world. The object of this article is not to discuss the relative values of metals employed by ancient or modern nations, or the advantages of gold or silver standards, as the memories of the long-winded Harvey-Horr debate of last summer are still too vivid not to cause a shudder at the slightest thought of them. It is simply confined to a synopsis of the origin and gradual development of metal currency.

The first nation to deviate from the most ancient method of trading by barter and exchange were in all probability the Lydians, who first coined money of a standard weight about 1200 B. C. The metal employed was a mixture of three or four-fifths of gold to near two-fifths of silver. This mixture was called electrum. The coins had a pale straw color and bore the impress of a die on one side, while the other showed only a rude and irregular punch mark. Of this earliest class of coinage there is no specimen in existence, but the British museum boasts of specimens of Lydian money coined of gold about 800 B. C. These coins were found in the ruins of Sardis. They contain about five dollars in gold, are of oval shape and the obverse shows in juxtaposition the images of a bull and a lion, while the reverse simply bears the rough punchmark. Similar in fabrication is a gold coin of the Ionian city of Miletus, also preserved in the British museum. This specimen also dates from about 800 B. C., and the question of greater antiquity has never been fully decided, though the obtainable evidence slightly favors the Lydian coin.

The first silver coins were produced about 700 B. C. in Aegina, an island in the Greek archipelago. Copper was not coined until about 300 years later. The gradual improvement in the manufacture of coins consisted at first only in the more artistic treatment of the obverse side, and more regularity in the impression of the punchmark. The types employed on the obverse of coins of the ancient nations were at first invariably representations of animals or inanimate objects symbolizing the deities which were revered in the various cities. As the art of coinage advanced these gave place to idealized pictures of the deities themselves until the heads of the reigning rulers were generally adopted at the regal period. The first important improvement in the reverse consisted in making the punch correspond with the die, thus giving the design in relief on one side and an inversed impression of the same on the other. Coins with the obverse and the reverse in relief were first made in the Greek colonies on the Italian coast, about 510 B. C., and even previous to 400 B. C. this form was in general use.

Inscriptions on coins appeared at first only of one, two or three letters, placed either on the obverse or reverse, indicating the name of the government whose issue they were. The name of a prince appears first on a Macedonian coin of Alexander I., in the fifth century B. C. The first authenticated parliaments are those of the various successors of Alexander the Great.

As to the shape in which coins have been issued, it is the circular form which has been aimed at in ancient coinage, since it is this form which simplifies the process of manufacture and diminishes the abrasion to which coins are subjected to in circulation. The true circle, however, was not attained by the ancients, and it was not until the seventh or eighth century A. D. that this was accomplished. The ancient exceptions to the circular form are very few. Most all deviations from the round shape are of modern origin. They are of the square ducat of Marienberg, the square rupees of the Mogul he left Sparta never to return, for such an act of legislature was bound to bring down on him the unlimited wrath of the ladies of Sparta, who were thus compelled to use a cart and two oxen when going out on a little shopping tour.

The early Romans used copper and bronze in their coinage, and when Julius Caesar landed in Britain coins of brass and iron were found in use. Dyonisius I., tyrant of Syracuse, coined tin, and a leaden stater, preserved in the British museum, proves that even the baser of all metals was employed at one time as circulating mediums. The Carthaginians used a kind of leather money, and Numa Pompilius, the second king of Rome, is said to have made coins both of wood and leather. Frederick Barbarassa, of crusade fame, and John the Good of France, also issued leather money, as did several other rulers at a later period. The British museum has a specimen of Augustin in leather of Francesco Carnaro. (1656). In the 13th century the celebrated traveler, Marco Polo, found a money in use in China which was made of the inner bark of the mulberry tree, cut into round pieces and stamped with the mark of the sovereign.

Next in antiquity to the coinage of the Lydians and Greeks is possibly that of the Chinese, who ever claims priority by asserting that their well-known coin, the bronze cash, was coined as early as 1120 B. C. But there is no certainty of the existence of any genuine specimen older than 247 B. C. The Hindoo coinage is also of early origin, but does not antedate the Greek or even the Roman, which dates from the fifth century B. C. The Egyptians began to coin money, in the modern sense of the term, with Ptolemy Soter, the first Greek ruler, 285 B. C., while the Hebrews had no national coinage of their own until the time of the Maccabees, when Simon, 144 B. C., by virtue of a decree of Antiochus, issued the shekel and half shekel with such inscriptions as "Shekel Israel," "Jerusalem the Holy" and "Simon, Prince of Israel."

The civilized age of coinage dates back to the fourth century B. C., when the Greek cities in lower Italy and Sicily issued money which in point of art and skillful workmanship had not been surpassed by the best productions of modern mints. The art of coinage began to deteriorate in Greece shortly after the highest development; in Rome it dates from the third century B. C., and goes hand in hand with the debasement of silver. In the middle ages only barbaric coins, almost inferior to the early attempts of coinage, were made of silver and copper. Gold coins were unknown with the exception of the so-called Byzantines, which circulated in a very limited number in southern Europe. The modern age has witnessed a revival of the art of coinage and a steady improvement in the quality of metals employed, most civilized nations having readopted the most ancient standard of currency—gold.

S. KRAUSZ.

Sold the First Postage Stamp.

It is said that James Lafitte Smith, a clerk in the Washington post office, is the post office clerk who sold the first postage stamp and the first stamped envelope ever issued by this government, and who registered the first letters that were presented for delivery when that system of mail protection was introduced in the United States. He entered the post office as a clerk in 1847, and is now 79 years old.

Portable Military Crematory.

A portable crematory for military purposes has been invented by a Polish engineer. It has the appearance of an army baking oven, but is much higher and heavier, and is drawn by eight horses. It is intended for the disposal of the bodies of soldiers killed in battle, so as to avoid the danger of epidemics from the burial of great numbers of men.

PROUD OF HIS RECORD.

Gen. Van Vliet, Oldest Living Officer in the Army.

During the Closing Year of the War He Spent Many Millions of Dollars Without Losing One Cent.

[Special Washington Letter.]

One of the most familiar figures on the streets of the national capital is that of Maj. Gen. Stewart Van Vliet, retired. He is short and stout, growing very stout, and his beard and hair have long been silvered by the touch of time. Although the oldest living officer in the army, he is sturdy, strong and intellectually vigorous. Moreover, he is one of the most entertaining conversationalists in our social life.

As the general entered Chamberlain's club one evening recently, an army officer remarked: "There goes a man who spent more money during the last three years of the civil war than any other man connected with the government. He disbursed fabulous sums, and yet made no mistakes." This remark was pointed to Gen. Van Vliet, with the inquiry: "How much money did you disburse, all told?"

"That would be hard to say," responded the veteran. "I never thought that it would be neither interesting or necessary to foot a grand total. It was more than $100,000,000, and probably $200,000,000. It certainly was a big pile of money, come to think of it."

"How was it expended?"

"Well, you see I had been chief quartermaster of the Army of the Potomac, and Gen. Ingalls succeeded me. There was considerable money disbursed by me in that office; but when I went to New York city and was given entire charge of all transportation on the Atlantic coast east of the Allegheny mountains, I had a big job, and it took more money than I had ever dreamed of handling to properly carry on the business of my department. I not only had to look after ocean transportation, but all railway transportation of troops, ordnance material, quartermasters' stores and clothing, and all the supplies for the commissaries. I was obliged to make provision for every change of base and every expedition of the armies of the east and they were always on the move."

"Did you have authority over the lines of transportation?"

"Certainly. I virtually controlled every broad line east of the Alleghenies, and I controlled all of the shipping on the Atlantic coast, excepting the regular transatlantic steamer lines. It was in my power and discretion to take possession of every ocean-going craft, no matter how large or how small. All I had to do was to take possession in the name of the government, and the ship owners could but submit. Of course, when their business was injured, it was the duty of the government to indemnify them."

"Did you use many vessels?"

"Did I? Well I should say so. I had regular trip steamers. I had lines of towing-going vessels making regular trips to Southern ports, coming to all the fleets, and all of the naval and military stations along the coast. These vessels were organized and made regular trips to the various stations, as far as New Orleans, and each one had a specific duty to perform. I had 200 or 300 vessels thus regularly engaged on the ocean; but in addition to those boats I had hundreds and hundreds of steamers of all sorts on the rivers, sounds, bays and inland waterways. These were transports, dispatch boats, freight and supply boats some of them among the fastest craft afloat, and others under sail and under tow."

"How many ships were under your command?"

"Bless me if I know exactly; but there were more than 20,000 of them; more than were commanded by all the admirals in the world at times of war or in times of peace. The sailing vessels were of every description. No old sailor could name any class of boat but what it could be found in one of my fleets, somewhere, and doing some specific business for the government. The sailing vessels and steamboats named in the dictionary were all represented in my colossal navy; and it took considerable energy and a push to keep track of all of them, and to keep them all in line of active duty. But I was a generation younger then than I am now, and it never tired or worried me to keep things moving."

The old man lighted a fresh cigar, one of the kind the naval officers bring into this country without paying duty on them, and he continued: "The tugboats were as thick as flies on a dead army mule. There were tugs in the rivers, tugs in the bays, tugs on the sound and tugs far out at sea. To a large extent those tugs constituted the fug of war; for some of them tugged large war ships into position."

"How did you arrange for big expeditions?"

"I sometimes knew the facts concerning proposed expeditions before the commanding officers knew that they were to be ordered hither and yon. I was always privately notified by the war department concerning a proposed expedition, how many troops were to participate, how many days' provisions must be carried, how many field pieces, how many horses, and everything in detail concerning the proposed movement. With these facts before me I would secure the vessels necessary, concentrate them, take possession of railroad lines and have everything in readiness. Then, the officer commanding an army received orders to move, he would find everything necessary already arranged for his transportation, and thus things went along smoothly."

"Did vessel owners or railroads offer obstacles to your movements?"

"Never to my recollection. Occasionally a small shipowner would object, but it was useless. The large ship owners were always very glad to receive employment by the government, because they received liberal compensation and prompt payment. But in those days, when the military power of the federal government was everywhere displayed, it would have been foolish for any steamer or railroad manager to offer obstacles to the movements of the armies. It would have been somewhat hazardous, for men were frequently convicted of disloyalty and sent to prison on slight provocation. When the life of the nation was at hazard, we gave little thought to the views or opinions of individuals. We went right ahead and did business in our own way.

"I do not now remember how many transports were employed in carrying the expedition of Gen. Banks around to New Orleans, but it was a big job. There were naval vessels accompanying the expedition to protect the transports; but, of course, I had no control of any naval vessels. The transports carried all of the troops in Banks' expedition, all of the horses, cattle, batteries, hard tack and other food, and it cost lots of money. I don't remember anything about the total amount, but it was immense.

"Then there were two expeditions against Fort Fisher: one under Gen. Butler, and the other under Gen. Terry. I moved the Eleventh and Twelfth corps from Virginia to Tennessee. I sent the Ninth corps to the relief of Knoxville. I floated Schofield's Twenty-third corps over into North Carolina. In some of those movements, and they were in a hurry, I had to grab cars and boats wherever I found them. Then, when my cars went west loaded with troops I had to chase after them with my most vigorous assistants, in order to get them back for future movements. Oh, if we didn't work in those days, no fellows ever worked. The men in the field never knew how it happened that things went so smoothly. When Gen. Sherman reached Savannah he found my fleets outside awaiting him with mails, provisions and ammunition. The old man complimented me very highly afterwards, and said that he did not expect to get any assistance for a week or ten days after sighting land in desolation. But there was my fleet; and wherever a regiment, brigade, division or army corps was to be moved I had the transportation ready at the time and place designated in general orders from the headquarters of the army.

"I have signed many a check for $100,000 to $500,000, and handed it over to my assistants to disburse in accordance with specific orders previously written by me. During the last year of the war I signed checks for $1,000,000. And how much do you suppose I lost during those busy and trying years of civil war? I settled every account with the government without having a single cent missing or unaccounted for. That is what I am most proud of in my military career. Of course it was a great commission, a responsible position, and any man might feel proud of having been placed in such supreme command. But the system of business was such that not a cent was lost in the disbursements of all these millions; and that is certainly something which I may be proud of, and may even be excused for bragging about."

"While I was chief quartermaster of the army of the Potomac I signed all requisitions 'By order of Maj. Gen. McClellan,' and while I was commanding the army was responsible for everything done by me. Several years after the war was over, Gen. McClellan wrote me from Orange, N. J., saying that the treasury department demanded of $60 from him, on account of a disbursement which was not strictly in accordance with the army regulations. I looked the matter up, found that under strict constructions of the regulations of the army I was proper, no one but a namby-pamby would have found fault with the disbursement. No soldier would have objected to it. But inasmuch as the critical clerk in the treasury objected to that small amount I sent Gen. McClellan my check for $60, and let the matter go without taking the trouble to go to the treasury department and explain the matter. I don't often talk about war times, but you fellows have made me loquacious because you are such good listeners."

GUIANA'S BOVIANDERS.

Origin and Social Customs of a Remarkable Race.

They Inhabit the Disputed Territory Between Venezuela and British Guiana—Curious Admixture of Civilization and Primitive Savagery.

[Special Kingston (Jamaica) Letter.]

The Guiana boundary dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela has attracted considerable attention to the wild and practically unknown country about which it arose. For months past the press of the United States has teemed with more or less descriptive articles in which the word "Boviander" frequently occurs. It seems to be quite freely used without definition, on the assumption that the general reader understands the appellation. In point of fact, however, nine out of ten people in the states are at a loss to know whether it means a bushman, a boatman, a guide or a trailer—for it might mean either of these. In reality the word implies either, according as used, but means neither.

The Bovianders of Guiana are a distinct race of half-breeds, descended from the Intermarriage of the original Dutch colonists with the Indian women of former generations. There are also black Bovianders, descended from the intermarriage of Indian braves with runaway slave women, who fled to the wilderness in the days of slavery; but these are not nearly so numerous as the white class, by whom they are looked down on. These people inhabit the wild and indefinite region now known as the disputed territory, lying between the Orinooco and Essequibo, and maintain the freest relations with the native Indians on each side of the degrees of the British colony on the others. They are spread over the whole country, but their chief settlements are nearer to the English than the Venezuelan side.

In color the Boviander of Dutch extraction are a light brown-yellow somewhat like Mixer mulattoes, and with the European cast of features far more strongly developed. They are well formed, and, for the most part, handsome. The black class are of a dirty reddish black, less featured and ugly. In habit and manner, the white is tidy, clean, pleasant and attractive; the black slovenly, foul, sycophantic and repulsive. Their language is English, but is full of Indian and Dutch idioms and variations as to be a sort of Volapuk.

The customs of the Boviander, like his language, are an admixture of primitive savagery and civilization. In him socially as well as ethnologically the European and the native Indian meet; and it is often difficult to tell where the one ends and the other begins. Formerly the Bovianders lived their peculiar life pretty much to themselves, being but infrequently disturbed by wandering explorers. With the opening up of their country consequent upon the discovery of gold, they have been brought into immediate touch with civilization, and the dozen or so of years that have elapsed have wrought quite an interesting change.

Let us visit the Boviander and have a passing glimpse of him in his home before the first line of the catarete—which forms the natural boundary between the colony proper and its backwoods. What we wish to see is how he combines his inheritance of primitive customs with the new ideas of civilized life that he has imbibed, and nothing could be more apt to the purpose than a little experience of my own.

Bunting was to provide us with boatmen to go up the river, but on arriving at his settlement a delay occurred. Chloe, his daughter, was to be married, and all outstanding engagements must await the event. Now Bunting was a Boviander, and the groom elect was a white man of local celebrity, a Mr. Jenkins, of the Lower. Apart from its annoyance the incident was a very interesting affair. We were fortunate to be in the nick of time to witness a full dress (wedding dress) rehearsal, too. As we approached the Bunting homestead Miss Chloe emerged on to the balcony radiant in the best up-to-date wedding costume, fresh from the Georgetown milliners. She was a tall, slender and very pretty girl, and appeared in sharp contrast with her present surroundings. As she came forth to exhibit herself there was a rush of Bovianders, Indians and negroes.

What a to-do there was! Such a shouting and hand clapping! The press was set by an old negro granny, facetious, and a younger negro wench, who accompanied the bride from her chamber and danced around her whilst the naked Indians looked on in stolid astonishment. The wedding procession was about to start for the nuptial church miles up the river. Whilst the bride retired to doff her finery and prepare for the trip, Bunting explained that he could not attend to us till next day, as we decided to submit to the inevitable and attend at the function.

The hymeneal procession started consisting of a huge freight bateau, used as a packing case, but comfortably seated for the occasion, and filled with Indian canoes into which the guests overflowed from the state barge. The boat carried a flag, and the bateau had two. The scene was pleasing as it was novel, and not too brilliant to overpower the vivid sunshine that beat on the primeval river's rapid tide and the bordering greens, crimson, white, yellow and blue of the wild foliage and flowers along the steep banks. Shouts and song and laughter made the air resound, and woke the woodland echoes. The bride and groom sat together, and were far from resenting the personal remarks made about them freely joined in the jokes and laughter. The procession momentarily grew. Every descending canoe we passed joined it on the companionship, and during what was up a recession the blushing bride would shade her little hands and cry out in pleased welcome and—yes, and kiss the groom. A wedding is rare on the river, and the Chloe had no precedents, only the traditions of her heart; so judge her mildly.

The little chapel was radiant with flags and flowers and palm leaves, but the novelty of the scene lay in the people. After dressing up for the ceremony the negro and Indian women were something to look at. What with the unaccustomed boots and corsets, they could but walk in limps and breathe in gasps—but they were fashionably attired, and that was the point. They smiled, were admired by the men, and what more was to be wished?

There followed the wedding feast, and such a feast as it was. The forests had been ransacked by Bunting's Indian relations. Of fried, boiled, roasted and stewed, there was no end; the meats of deer, labba, acouri, parrots and other bush fowls steamed along with all sorts of fish from the river. Of fruits there were oranges, mangoes, pineapples and a lot else. Crowning all, on the bridal table, stood the mighty wedding cake specially ordered from Georgetown, and flanked with glass decanters containing wine, and a dozen or so of cheap porcelain dishes and calabashes, etc., and the bride's health was formally drunk. All hands then fell to feasting, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon at the head of the middle table, Bunting and wife at the foot. Those who could not find room at the tables squatted on the floor. A crowd of other guests did likewise outside. Plates were scarce, and knives and forks scarcer; but there was plenty of bananas bush and no lack of fingers. So the feast went on without a hitch.

The kitchen—plenty of them, too—came later, after half-dozen demijohns of rum began to circulate. The Indians were the first to be affected. A wild war-dance broke up the festal groupings, and thenceforward it was every man for himself. Gordon nearly cleared away with his bride, wishing to catch the falling tide and the Georgetown steamer. The orgy that followed baffles description. The curious mixture of savagery and civilization, of wedding gowns and nakedness, decanters and calabashes, plates and plantain leaves, toasts and swearings, got stirred to the dregs, and babbled up into a pandemonium. Then we saw the Boviander at his worst—and that is pretty bad.

I will not conveniently say, "let us draw a veil over that orgy." I see no reason to do so; the fact, honestly admitted, is that when I got to the pass of drawn knives, flourished clubs and flying stones, my companions and I determined that discretion was the better part of curiosity as well as valor—and we made tracks for the mission station. Returning to the settlement after dark, we met a gold diggers' supply caboo, deeply laden, adrift on the current with the crew fast asleep. They had been among the volunteer wedding guests, and I was able to make a morning start—and no more. The cataracts were a mile or two below.

MR. BRYAN'S SPEECH

He Defines at Length His Party's Policy.

DEFENDS THE CHICAGO PLATFORM

And Replies to the Attacks Made Upon It—Money the Paramount Issue—No Claim Made To Recon-struct Society.

New York, Aug. 13.—The following is the speech delivered by W. J. Bryan at Madison Square garden in response to the address formally notifying him of his nomination by the Chicago convention:

Mr. Chairman, gentlemen of the committee and fellow citizens: I shall at a future day and in a formal letter, accept the nomination which is now tendered by the notification committee, and I shall at that time touch upon the issues presented by the platform. It is fitting, however, that at this time, in the presence of those here assembled I speak at some length in regard to the campaign upon which we are now entering. We do not underestimate the forces arrayed against us, nor are we unmindful of the importance of the struggle in which we are engaged, but, relying for success upon the righteousness of our cause, we shall defend with all possible vigor the positions taken by our party. We are not surprised that some of our opponents, in the absence of better argument, resort to abusive epithets, but they may rest assured that no language, however violent, no invectives, however vehement, will lead us to depart a single hair's breadth from the course which we have marked out in convention. It has been charged by men standing high in business and political circles that our platform is a menace to private security and public safety; and it has been asserted that those whom I have the honor, for the time being, to represent, not only meditate an attack upon the rights of property, but are the foes both of social order and national honor.

Not To Reconstruct Society.

Those who stand upon the Chicago platform are prepared to make known and to defended every motive which influences them, every purpose which animates them and every hope which inspires them. They understand the genius of our institutions, they are staunch supporters of the form of government under which we live, and they build their faith upon foundations laid by the fathers. Andrew Jackson has stated, with admirable clearness, both the duty and the sphere of government. He said: "Distinctions in society will always exist under every just government. Equality of talents, of education or of wealth cannot be produced by human institutions. In the full enjoyment of the gifts of Heaven and the fruits of superior industry, economy and virtue, every man is equally entitled to protection by law." We yield to none in our devotion to the doctrine of equality before the law. Our campaign has not for its object the reconstruction of society. We cannot insure to the vicious the fruits of a virtuous life; we would not invade the home of the provident in order to supply the wants of the spendthrift; we do not propose to transfer the rewards of industry to the lap of indolence. Property is and will remain the stimulus to endeavor and the compensation for toil. We believe, as asserted in the Declaration of Independence, that all men are equal in their rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. We do not opp

Ex Congressman J. A. Geissenhainer is outspoken against the Chicago silver ticket.

The Cranford Chronicle, which has heretofore occupied a neutral position in politics, now announces that it will ally itself with the Democratic party. John Alfred Potter, the editor and proprietor of the Chronicle, resides on Jackson aveuue in the borough and we wish him the success in his new venture that he has had with his bright and newsy sheet in the past.

New Jersey had established a record for good roads, and County authorities from other States were wont to travel over our highways and study the schemes employed for purposes of adoption; but there is recent evidence of woeful neglect in the care of the macadam roads in Union and Warren Counties which must cease if the State is to gain by its past good reputation in this particular.—New York Press

In no way can the punishment be made to fit the crime better than by nominating James E. Martine, the Plainfield Farmer-Orator, as the Democratic candidate for Senator in Union County. James is an enthusiastic believer in Free Trade, Free Silver and Free Racetracks. And then defeat doesn't canter his scent as it does some men. He is used to such experiences.—New York Tribune.

Be just—we have heard Mr. Martine repeatedly say that he was opposed to race track and gambling; that he had never made a bet in his life, and had never been on a race track other than at a county fair, in this life. Mr. Martine's character and morals are known and respected by all people and parties in this city.

One of the big schemes of the future will probably be the syndicating of all the trolley interests of the State. There are yet several links necessary to complete the chain of electric lines between Jersey City and Cape May, but each summer witnesses the welding of a new loop and the grasping of contributary road franchises. Probably $100,000,000 in capital will be invested in such a pool, and about that time it will be necessary for the Legislature to step in to protect the farmers from absolute seizure of their lands.—New York Press.

John B. Drayton, of Franklin place returned yesterday from Poultney, Vt., where his family are spending the summer.

Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Sr., and daughter, Miss Lizzie Smalley, of Craig place, will return on Saturday from Tackawaxen, Pa.

J. H. Howells and family, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, are expected home from their summer outing this week.

Andrew Vanderbeck, of Second place, and Sydney B. Titsworth, left this afternoon for Beach Haven, N. J. Mr. Vanderbeck will stop at the Engleside Hotel, while Titsworth will board at the same house with his friends, the Messrs. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, who are already there.

Justice Vincent W. Nash was taken suddenly ill on Monday, after returning from a bicycle trip to Jamaica and other points of interest on Long Island. He left this city on Sunday and rode to Jamaica without incident. Remaining there over night, the Judge rode home on Monday, arriving here about 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, much fatigued. He was obliged to take to his bed and Dr. Berg has been in daily attendance ever since.

Up in The Catskills.

A letter to Geo. L. VanEmburgh, from Bev. Cornelius Schenck, who is in the Catskill mountains, at Spuceton, N. Y., tells of the terrible heat last week, it being the hottest weather on record in that locality. The letter reports Mr. and Mrs. Schenck and children well, and also says that at the present time they are sleeping under blankets and enjoying the cool morning mountain air.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhoea set in. She had tried a bottle of blackberry cordial but got worse. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

GOLD DEMOCRATS MEET.

CALL A STATE CONVENTION IN TRENTON FOR AUGUST 26TH.

A Provisional State Committee Named —Delegates to be Sent to the Gold Democratic Convention at Indianapolis

The gold Democrats of New Jersey held a meeting yesterday in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. Ex-Senator Henry D. Winton of Bergen county presided and Francis D. Pollock of Summit acted as Secretary. Ex-Judge John B. Green of Union county, Chairman of the Executive Committee, reported that a Provisional State Committee had been selected. Some of the counties were not represented, as the Executive Committee had been careful not to appoint anybody without first obtaining his consent to serve and his assurance that he was in sympathy with the movement. The Provisional Committeemen, so far as they have been selected, are: Bergen county, A. DeRound, H. D. Winton; Burlington county, J. S. Adams, W. D. Alloway; Essex county, Col. James E. Fleming, Hamilton Wallis; Hudson County, Dr. L. J. Gordon, Otto Crouse; Hunterdon county, W. H. Apgar; Mercer county, Gen. G. W. Wroon, John H. Blackwell; Middlesex county, George Neilson, James Parker; Monmouth county, John Hone, Henry S. Little; Morris county, Henry H. Yeamans, Paul Revere; Passaic county, William B. Gourley; Somerset county, James J. Bergen; Sussex county, John Morford, Samuel E. Smith; Union county, A. B. Carleton, S. M. Williams; Warren county, Charles F. Rittenhouse. At large—E. P. Meaney, Essex; W. B. Willis, Burlington; Dr. John A. Mellhl, Hudson; J. Howard Conow, Camden.

The committee was empowered to fill vacancies, and to increase its number if deemed expedient. The report suggested that the Provisional Committee be empowered to call a convention, to be held in Newark on Thursday, August 27, to elect delegates to the National Convention to be held in Indianapolis on September 2. Alderman Righter of Newark thought there would be some danger of the silver men capturing the State Convention if it was held in Newark, and he suggested that the Provisional Committee be empowered to name the delegates to the National Convention. He made a motion to that effect, but it was voted down.

The Provisional Committee organized by electing ex-Senator Winton Chairman, and A. B. Carleton Secretary. The committee named August 26 and Trenton as the time and place for holding the State Convention to elect delegates to the National Convention. The Committee will meet again in Taylor's Hotel on Saturday next.

AN OPEN AIR CONCERT.

Edward Martin's Quartette and Orchestra Give a Successful One.

The first of a series of open air concerts which bid fair to attract considerable attention was held in the vacant lot opposite the Cycle Academy on Watchung avenue, last evening, and fully five hundred people gathered on the green, the sidewalk, in the street and on the survey fence to listen to the sweet strains of Prof. Edward Martin's crack colored quartette and orchestra. And for an hour or more the crowd stayed right there, for they were well pleased with the sweet music which was both vocal and instrumental. The Martin Bros. quartette was simply "out of sight," so to speak, and the other members of the company acquitted themselves admirably.

The opening part consisted of a miniature show, with songs, witty sayings etc., interspersed with orchestral music. On the whole the entertainment was a pronounced success, and it is to be hoped that the quartette will again favor the pupils with one of their open air concerts.

Running On Time.

As illuttrating the degree of efficiency to which the present management of the B. & O. R. R. has brought its motive power equipment and esprit de corps of the operation staff, we call attention to the fact that during the months of April, May and June the passenger trains and fast freight trains have almost invariably arrived at their respective destinations on schedule time. The very few exceptions to the general rule were due to causes inseparable from railway operation, and against which no forethought can wholly guard. It may be safely said that during the period named no road in America, comparable in magnitude to the B. & O.; can surpass its record for punctuality in train movements.

The Craig Brothers Doing Well.

Many young people in this city will doubtless be glad to know that George and Will Craig, formerly of North Plainfield, are doing remarkably well in the Southwest. A letter just received by Alexander Shotwell, for many years a druggist and practicing pharmacist here, so announces.

The petition was cordially received and a very large number of people have signed it. THE CHEMICAL AT WORK

IT COMPLETELY PROVES ITS USEFULNESS AT TWO FIRES.

A Small Fire on North Front Street Saturday Evening—Residence on Rahway Road Just Escapes Destruction Sunday.

After a long period of quiet, Plainfield's fire department was suddenly roused into action by two fires within twenty-four hours.

One alarm came Saturday evening about 8:30 o'clock from Box 15, which is located at the corner of East Second and Washington streets and the other yesterday afternoon about 12:30 o'clock from Box 29, at the corner of Watching and Woodland avenues.

There was the regular Saturday night crowd on the streets last Saturday night when the sonorous tones of the fire-alarm whistle sounded an alarm from Box 15. There was a general exodus in the direction of the box from which the fire seekers were directed to North Front street. North Front street is a short narrow street opening at one end into Westerveit avenue and running parallel to East Front street. The fire was in a double house just off of Westerveit avenue and, in less time than it takes to tell it, the latter thoroughfare was crowded with the fire apparatus and the carriages and bicycles of curious spectators. The house is the property of Mr. Marcley, of New street. The side, where the conflagration was, was occupied by Mrs. Bird and family, and the other side was rented by Mr. Frank, whose mysterious disappearance was exclusively told in The Daily Press some time ago.

The blaze was a small one and was quickly extinguished by a stream from the chemical engine, the damage amounting to about $10. The cause of the fire was quite remarkable, however.

Mrs. Bird keeps a dog that is in the habit of sleeping on the table spread. When the spread is not removed, the dog pulls it off himself. Last night the family went out, leaving the lamp on the table and the dog in the room. From the appearance of things at the arrival of the firemen, it was evident that the dog had attempted to secure his bed and upset the lamp on the floor. The carpet and wood work were ignited but were only slightly burned.

The alarm was sent in by a lad named Armstrong, who lives in the Voehl flats on East Front street. He saw the blaze and, after making sure it was a fire, ran to the box.

The fire, Sunday afternoon, promised to be a destructive one and, had not the chemical engine worked so effective the loss would have been considerable. The alarm was sent in from box 29, but the house where the fire was, was about a half mile beyond on the Rahway road, just at the top of the hill and only a few hundred yards inside the city limits. It was the recently purchased residence of Edward E. Pray. Only on Saturday, Mr. Pray and family had started on their summer outing, leaving the house in the charge of a trusty couple.

Yesterday afternoon, just as the preparations for dinner were being started, the house gradually began to fill with smoke. Finding the back stairs all aflame, the woman hurried to the residence of N. P. T. Finch, on Belvidere avenue, to get a fire alarm key. Her husband remained, doing his best to extinguish the flames with a garden hose. The pipe from the kitchen range passes under the back stairs to connect with a chimney and the fire is supposed to have started there from an overheated chimney.

The flames rapidly spread through the partitions and by the time the firemen arrived after a run of about two miles, the interior of the walls were all ignited while the flames had broken through the walls in several places. The house was filled with smoke which rendered it impossible. After the windows had been broken open and some of the smoke allowed to escape, ready hands were soon at work tearing out the furniture and valuables.

Two streams from the chemical engine were used and the contents of nearly four tanks of the machine, gas and water, less than two hundred gallons in all, finally completely extinguished all the fire. It took almost an hour to do the work, but the very small amount of water used in that time is very remarkable. Had the regular streams of water been used it would have been necessary to completely flood the house to put out the fire in the walls and floors besides making it necessary to tear down a great deal of plastering and lath and sill. It may be remarked that 500 gallons of water are thrown by the ordinary stream every minute. The loss was only about $400 covered by insurance, and almost all of the furniture, including a brand new piano were saved. To the fire department deserves great credit for the very efficient work they did and for their judgment in only using the chemical engine, thereby probably reducing the loss by nearly $1000. The piano was a valuable one and would have been ruined had the water been turned on it.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

LOOKING FOR HIS BROTHER.

Otto Went West and His Brother Never Heard From Him.

Ewald Otto, of Netherwood, is in a quandary to know what has become of his brother, Hermann, who came to this country from Zuriskav, Germany, ten years ago and went to the far west to build up a fortune and fame.

So far as the brother can learn, Hermann, after arriving in New York, took a train to the west and located at Los Angeles, in Southern California, but not a direct word has been received from him since his arrival there. Three letters were, however, written back to Germany, and in due course of time were forwarded to this country. In one of the letters it was stated that Hermann had married and was doing nicely, but no mention was made of his brother here.

Ewald is employed about the H. O. Hermance mansion at Netherwood, and he is very anxious to hear from his long lost brother, whom he fears may be dead ere this.

That Very Remarkable Club.

After doing all the attractions in Asbury Park in a week, the "Private Club of Three" returned to this city last Sunday evening to settle down to business once more. This remarkable club is composed of Meredith Dryden, Fred H. Freeman and Albert Woltmann. A week ago last Sunday they left here on their wheels, rode down to Asbury Park and there stopped at the Hotel Albemarle. There was a progressive euchre party at the hotel on the second night, Monday, that they were there and they considerably astonished the would-be euchre players by carrying off all the honors, Woltmann winning first prize and Freeman second. Had there been another, Dryden would have undoubtedly won it. After a week of gayety that quite astonished the staid Asbury Parkites the club bagged it to an end, Saturday night by getting up a subscription dance that was the event of the season. The young men returned each about ten pounds lighter in weight.

On the Mountain.

Among the recent arrivals at the Mountain Park Inn are: Dr. and Mrs. Ray, Dr. Ethel Brown, J. Southard, J. McKane, H. B. Dorrance, Stuart Hart, H. D. Brown, New York; Mrs. and Mrs. Veltch, Howard Spelmon, Brooklyn; Dr. Joseph Young, Miss Grace Durand, H. B. Durand, Mr. and Mrs. Snyder, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Shotwell, Hempstead, L. I.; C. B. Strong, R. U. Strong, Major Kenney, John P. Street, William F. Myer, W. T. Parker, J. W. Parker, New Brunswick; George P. Van Vliet, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; George W. Tuttle, Bernardsville; Frank W. Bergen, Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGee, J. M. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller, A. B. Beers, Plainfield.

That's Right.

September 5 promises to be a great day for Plainfield. It is then that a bicycle carnival will be held, and the preparations are intending to make it a truly great and historic event. The general committee in charge of the carnival, which is composed of a number of the representative wheelmen and business men of this city, was organized over a week ago. It is performing its work effectively and an elaborate programme is being laid out. Plainfield will probably have more people within its borders on the day of the carnival than ever before in its history.—New York World.

The Report Unfounded.

A report was sent from Elizabeth, as per the Elizabeth Leader, and published in one of the New York papers, that Messrs. John D. Crimmins and B. M. Shanley were here looking for a trolley route to Plainfield. John W. Whelan, who was reported to be with the gentlemen, informs a Leader reporter that the report is untrue. Messrs. Crimmins and Shanley were here several weeks ago, and at that time gave up all idea of a connection with Plainfield. The road will never be built on the south side of the track.

Almost Too Late.

A sister-in-law of the late Maurice Fitzgerald, whose funeral took place from St. Mary's church yesterday morning, was delayed in reaching here from Asbury Park in time to attend the obsequies. She reached St. Mary's cemetery just before the body was lowered into the grave, and at her request the coffin lid was lifted and she was given a last look at her brother-in-law as he lay shrouded in death.

Cruising on the Shrewsbury.

Carroll L. Runyon, of East Ninth street, A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, and Clarence L. Lines, of Dunellen, returned last Saturday night from a week's cruise on the Shrewsbury river in the cat boat "Smole." They met with sundry exciting adventures, including several duckings. They encountered some rough weather near Seabright but passed through it successfully.

Among the guests at Avon by-the-sea, registered at the Buckingham, is Mrs. C. S. West, of Central avenue.

THROWN FROM A VEHICLE

MISS ARNOLD AND MRS. MARSH MEET WITH A SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

They Were Out Riding in Miss Arnold's Dog Cart When the Pony Became Frightened at an Object in the Road.

A narrow escape from fatal injury occurred yesterday afternoon on Manning avenue just east of Westervelt avenue. Miss Nellie Arnold, accompanied by her grandmother, Mrs. Marsh, who is well advanced in years, were enjoying a ride in the former's dog cart, to which was attached a pony. The pony has always been very gentle and easy to drive. Some one had left a box in the center of Westervelt avenue which frightened the pony. Before Miss Arnold could get control of the animal he made a quick circular turn in the road.

Both Mrs. Marsh and Miss Arnold were thrown out and the horse started off with the cart. Mr. Bailey, of West Fifth street, was nearby and attempted to catch the animal but failed and the latter ran up an embankment. The shafts were detached from the cart, and the horse ran down Manning avenue to Somerset street and through the latter street to the barn on Cleveland street. The broken shafts had cut the animal's leg severely.

The accident happened nearly opposite the home of Mrs. Andrew Kenney, and she appeared at once and assisted Mrs. Marsh to her home, where the best aid was given. Mrs. Marsh was unconscious for sometime and did not come to until after she was taken home. Her body is considerably bruised and she received several deep scratches and cuts on the face.

Dr. F. Fritts was sent for and gave proper treatment. He learned that no bones were broken, which is very fortunate. Miss Arnold escaped with a few bruises. This morning Mrs. Marsh is improved, though she is unable to move about much. Mr. and Mrs. Arnold feel very grateful to Mrs. Kenney for the kind assistance rendered.

Two weeks ago he came home and was imediately taken to his bed, which he never left and died as above stated.

Where the Blame Belongs.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper in relation to The Courier-News' account of Saturday's ball game. The writer of that article puts the blame of the loss of the game upon the back of Mr. Brown who acted as umpire. I have witnessed many games of baseball and wish to say that Mr. Brown's umpiring was impartial and very fair. I think all the spectators who were at the game will agree with me that they saw some of the "prettiest" playing on the part of the home team that they ever saw. Even "Krank" Mallinson left in disgust. The Y. M. C. A's put up a regular school-boy game, as a glance at the errer column will show. I do not wish to complain of the bad playing, as the best of teams are bound to have an off-day once in a while, but the baseball writer of The Courier-News attempting to place the game on Mr. Brown's shoulders is simply childish. I think others will back me up in my statement that Mr. Brown umpired the game as well as anybody who has filled that capacity here in this city. It was "yellow" ball playing that cost the game, not Mr. Brown. Please set Mr. Brown right before the people.

G. E. F.

Barry Defends His Cow.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Would you be so kind as to put this in your valuable paper. Marshal Whitely arrested my cow. I went with Chief Hansen to see Justice Crosley about it, as the Marshal arrested her just as she was coming in at the gate to be milked. Justice Crosley asked me if I had a halter attached to her, and I told him she had and he told me, in the presence of Chief Hansen, that Whitely had no right to arrest her at all, as she was being driven from the field by two boys. John Taylor, a colored man, made the complaint and they had me arrested and fined me $5, which I consider an outrageous shame as J. F. Wilson is allowed to drive his three cows to and from the field, as is also Mr. Jennings and P. M. French's cow is driven all the way down Duer street. Why don't they arrest the rich man's cow as well as the poor man's cow? That shows they are afraid to do their duty. After Justice Crosley told me the cow could be driven as long as she had a halter on and a rope attached. Then I was fined $5 for doing as he told me.

The Poultry Show.

Poultry and pigeon fanciers are ad*vocating a poultry show in the* Jersey Cycle Academy to be held this fall, as has already been told in The Daily Press. There are many choice birds both registered and otherwise, in this city and North Plainfield, and if such an exhibition was arranged the public would undoubtedly patronize it. John Angleman has some forty game fowls, some of them having come to him all the way from Walter Hopkins, the Augusta, Ga., chicken fancier, which he is willing to place on exhibition, and there are others who would enter their chickens for the sake of competing for the prizes if for nothing else.

THE DUNHAM REUNION.

THE SURVIVORS OF THAT FAMILY MEET AT THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

They Dined Together Under the Big Trees on the Lawn And Then Listened to Remarks by Different Speakers.

The reunion of the Dunham family was held at the old Dunham Homestead at Stelton last week. About one hundred of the decendants and friends were present. The day was fine and being the last day, according to weather prophets of the late unprecedented period of heat, it seemed to be on its good behavior. There was a refreshing breeze and under the shade of the large trees surrounding the old mansion tables were spread and all present partook of the tempting and bountiful supplies of good things provided.

After the dinner was served and a social chat enjoyed while the tables were being cleared, interesting remarks were made by Rev. E. Peterson, pastor of the Seventh-Day church, New Market, Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the First-Day Baptist church, of New Market, Editor L. E. Livermore, of Plainfield, and Joseph T. Dunham, of Plainfield.

Editor Livermore read a condensed history of the Dunham family written by one of this family who was present, also a beautiful parody on "The Old Oaken Bucket" that abounded in touching references to the "scenes of their childhood." This was also written for the occasion by one of the members of this famous family. There were present the four surviving sons of George W. and Phebe Vail Dunham, viz: William Dunham, of New Market, Henry V. Dunham, of New Market, George H. Duhham, of New York city and Charles E. Dunham, of Bound Brook.

Miss Dunham, daughter of George H. Dunham, of New York, sung two sweet songs, which added much to the pleasure of the occasion. Before the company dispersed it was resolved to hold another reunion at the same place next year, the date to be announced hereafter. Altogether the occasion was one of great pleasure and one long to be remembered. In the remarks and frequent references in social converse were made to those who have met on similar occasions at other times but have passed on to await the final and glorious reunion of all, both living and dead were not forgotten.

The following sketch of the Dunham family was printed in pamphlet form and distributed among those present at the reunion:

We meet today as one family at the old homestead. Years ago we left this old farm, one by one, to enter upon life's battles. Perphaps there are few families that have more pleasure in visiting their childhood home than we do, the children of George and Phebe Vail Dunham. Just how long this farm was owned by the Dunhams, the writer does not know. Four generations have lived here. George W. Dunham was born on this farm, also all of his children and six of his grandchildren. Benijah Dunham was the first of this family to take up a residence in the township of Piscataway. He was the son of John and Abigail Dunham, and was born in 1640, at Plymouth, New England. He married Elizabeth Tilson, and to them were born seven children. About 1672 or 1673, he with his family immigrated to this country, bought a farm of some one hundred acres or more in the township of Piscataway, and settled there with his family. He died on the 24th day of December, 1690, aged forty years. His eldest son, Edmund, was born July 26th, 1661. He is considered the father of the Seventh Day Baptist church of Piscataway. He was chosen their pastor the 8th day of September, 1705, and continued their leader until his death, March 7th, 1731, in the seventy-third year of his age.

Jonathan Dunham succeeded his father to the ministry He was ordained as pastor of this church in 1745, and continued to be their pastor until March 11th, 1777, when he died of smallpox, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. Squire David Dunham, son of Jonathan Dunham, was the father of thirteen children. He died March 23d, 1807. George W. Dunham, son of Squire David Dunham, was born December 19th, 1788. He married Phebe Vail, and brought her, a bride to this place in 1812. To them were born eleven children. He died June 28th, 1876, aged eighty-seven years, six months and three days. Phebe Vail Dunham died October 5th, 1881, aged eighty-nine years, six months and twenty-one days. The names of their children are as follows: David, Evaline, Elizabeth, James V., William V., Jane H., Daniel V., Henry V., Clarkson C., George H. and Charles E. They were all married except Jane, who died at the age of ten months. Daniel V. married Elizabeth Dunn, and brought her to this farm, a bride. To them were born six children. He was a soldier and served in the country with the nine-months volunteers, who in the fall of 1862 were accepted for nine months. He left his plough in the furrow and bade his family good-bye to help put down the Rebellion. He was spared to return home. Soon after his return, his brothers and sisters, with their families, made him a surprise. Well do we remember, as he met us where we now stand, his face all aglow, saying, "I surrender." This was indeed a happy reunion: Father, mother, brothers and sisters, an unbroken band. Brother Daniel had returned from the battle-field without a scratch, although somewhat impaired in health. He died May 30th, 1865, in the fortieth year of his age. As far back as the Declaration of Independence, the Dunhams have been known to be loyal to their country. About three years ago there was published in Harper's Monthly Magazine an article mentioning one Captain Azariah Dunham (a branch of this family) assembling the people at New Brunswick to hear the Declaration of Independence read; also of Captain George Dunham being present. It was first read at Trenton, then in New Brunswick, afterwards at New York. Of the family of George Dunham, only four sons are living, twenty grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren; the greater number having gone to their heavenly home, holding their reunions where parting is unknown.

Two New Cottages Started.

Contractor John Abbott, of this city, Friday staked out the ground for the erection of two more handsome cottages on East Sixth street, for the David M. Moore estate. The work of excavating and building will be begun at once, and will be pushed forward to completion on or before December 1st, next. The buildings are to be of the Anne style of architecture, and they will be equipped with all the modern appliances, including heat, ventilation and other sanitary arrangements. The cost of the new buildings is not stated.

Burned by Moulten Iron.

Patrick Lyons, an employe in the foundry at Ford's, was crossing the floor in the foundry with a ladle of moulten iron on Friday, preparatory to making a pouring, when he stumbled and fell, allowing the hot iron to be thrown about like water. Some of the hot metal struck him on the face, burning the flesh badly and singeing off his eyelashes. The wounds were dressed by the shop surgeon.

A Dangerous Place.

Complaint is made of a certain piece of sidewalk on West Second street near the engine house, where persons frequently stumble and fall on account of the uneveness of the surface. Saturday night one young woman stumbled and fell head-long on the sidewalk, but very fortunately she escaped with only a few slight bruises.

Where Is That Hose Company?

It now seems as though the residents of Prideville have no ambition regarding the formation of a hose company there. The Borough Council have certainly made them an excellent offer, in agreeing to erect a handsome fire house, and place a hose carriage in it, providing they organize a company. But as no steps have been taken in that direction it looks as if there will be no adequate fire protection in that vicinity.

EUCHRE PARTY IN CAMP

THUS MR. AND MRS. W. L. SAUNDERS CELEBRATE THEIR WEDDING.

The Charming Affair Was Held at Point Breeze Camp, and Many Plainfielders Enjoyed It—Wonderful Wedding Cake Given.

"Point Breeze Camp," which is located near Wolfeborough, N. H., was recently the scene of a delightful affair, when ex-Mayor William L. Saunders and his wife, of the borough, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding by giving a progressive euchre party.

The Granite State News, of Wolfeborough, says of it:

"The event had been looked forward to with much pleasure by the rest of the campers, and great preparation had been made to make it noteworthy. The large room on the first floor of the new camp had been tastefully decorated with green. In the evening it was brilliantly illuminated with lamps and lanterns. During the day there were many whispered consultations as to the progress that was being made in the manufacture of the wedding cake that was to be presented, and as to the securing of the mementoes which were to be offered to the bride and groom, to commemorate their tin wedding. Toward evening it was found that the wedding cake had turned out beautifully, and the messengers returning from Wolfeboro brought with them the tin trophies, so that all was in readiness at the appointed hour.

"About 8:30 o'clock the campers began to arrive and were soon seated at six tables, ready to battle for the prizes. Those who took part were Mayor Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., and wife, of North Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. James T. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Murray, Mr. and Mrs William J. Roome, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Vail, Mrs. William H. Kennedy, Mrs. F. H. Whitney, the Misses Lula, Anna and Gertrude Kennedy, LeRoy Brewster, Thomas Kennedy, C. E. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Brewster, of New York. The playing lasted until 10 o'clock, when it was found that the first prize had been won by LeRoy Brewster, the second by Henry D. Brewster, and the consolation prize by William J. Roome. The first ladies' prize was won by Mrs. William J. Roome, the second by Mrs. F. H. Whitney, and the consolation prize by Mrs. Charles H. Stevens.

"During the game music was furnished by Mr. Stevens' large Orchestrion, and at the conclusion an elaborate supper was served by Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, the health of the bride and groom being toasted in copious draughts of Pomeroy, which had been imported for the occasion by Mr. Saunders especially for the occasion. Supper finished, Mayor Hegeman appeared with the large wedding cake in a salver, and in a graceful and appropriate speech, presented it to the bride, and invited her to cut it that each guest might take home a piece to put under his or her pillow.

"To the horror and disappointment of all present, when an attempt was made to cut the cake, it was found to be made of a tin pan which had been carefully iced and lettered with the names of the bride and groom, and date of the event. After recovering from the astonishment the guests each in their turn presented some memento to Mr. and Mrs. Saunedrs. Then followed dancing until midnight, when, after a few parting songs, the campers lothfully wended their way to their respective camps, each wishing the groom and his beautiful wife many happy returns of the day which they had been able to celebrate so enjoyably at Point Breeze Camp."

Firemen Want to Parade.

Some of the firemen in this city would like to get off Oct. 1st and participate in the centennial parade of Humane fire company No. 1, of Easton, Pa. Forty-five fire companies from various parts of the country have already agreed to join in the demonstration, and if Alert's silver carriage was not in the shop for repairs it might be taken to Easton and win the prize.

A Private Club of Three.

Pleasant young people who are enjoying the refined attention of the Albemarle are Meredith Dryden, Miss Constance Parker and Miss Harriet Reese, says the Asbury Park Journal. Dryden hails from this city and is one of the private club of three" that are sojourning at Asbury Park. The other two members are F. H. Freeman and Walter Douglass.

An Unlucky Step.

Conductor Huxley, of the street railway, and his wife, returned Saturday evening from a week's vacation spent at Albany. While walking down West Front street Mr. Huxley stepped on a round stone which threw him down. As a result he received a slight cut on the head, but the injury is not a serious one.

An Appeal From the Hospital.

Muhlenberg Hospital makes a strong appeal to people of Plainfield for a quantity of old muslin, good sheets and pillow cases, which articles they are very much in need of. A quick response will be appreciated.

EDUCATIONAL CHANCES

PLANS OF THE Y. M. C. A. FOR NEXT YEAR.

All the Old Classes Will Be Continued and Some New Ones Started—When They Will Meet and the Instructors.

Ever since the formation of the Young Men's Christian Association in this city a number of years ago, the young men of Plainfield have been offered large and more complete educational facilities every year through that department of the association. When the association took possession of their new building last year, a number of new branches were introduced and the old ones improved. There were many who recognized their values and took advantage of them. This coming year, a number of improvements have been made and the members of the association are given a wide scope from which to choose. The educational department is open to all $5 and $8 members, who deposit $1 for each class they enter. This deposit will be returned at the close of their attendance averages eighty per cent.

The opening exercises of this department will be held on the evening of Tuesday, October 13, at the close of which there will be a short conference between instructors and pupils.

On Monday and Thursday nights, the stenographic department will meet. It will be under the constant supervision of Joseph A. Robinson, who is well known in that work, and will consist of phonography, typewriting, and dictation.

The students in the mechanical department will probably meet on Tuesday and Saturday nights, the day is subject to change however. Here those that have taken the first year's course will contiue to advance in their work while the beginners will start a new class.

The business department will meet on a day to be decided upon later. This course includes book keeping, commercial arithmetic, and penmanship. This is under the charge of George E. Fuller and Max Moraller. This latter has been connected with this department as student or instructor since 1890, and is a graduate of Coleman's Business College. These two instructors will be in constant consultation with E. H. Bonnell, who has worked with this department for so long.

The German department will meet on Friday night and will consist of two or, if necessary, three classes. Rev. E. Kionki, the instructor, will largely adopt the conversational method.

The Spanish department, which was such a success last year, will be continued and beginners as well as those who have already taken up the subject will be given a change. J. Antonio Costales will continue to act as instructor. If a sufficient number wish it, a class in business correspondence will be formed or such classes as the demand may be for. In addition to the class work, there is personal instruction that will be of great value.

The class year extends to April 18.

Wonderful Fishing.

W. J. Roome, of Sycamore avenue, now at Point Breeze Camp, Wolfeboro, N. H., for his summer outing, is sustaining his world-wide reputation as an expert fisherman by the great catches of bass which he is making. Willie calls it a poor day's sport if he does not come home with twenty or thirty two to three-pound bass on his string. John W. Murray can vouch for the truth of this, as he is also there helping to deplete Lake Wentworth of its finny inhabitants.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The following transfers of real estate by North Plainfield parties were recorded in this Somerset County Clerk's office between July 23d and August 4th:

Sylvester B. Scribner et al to Robt Rushmore, $1; John R. Marsh et ux to Loftus Hollingsworth, $1; Alvah A. Clark to Isaac N. Titus, $930; Jas. M. Cadmus et ux to Annette Vail, $3000; Annie A. Allen and husband to Henry N. Spencer, $4,000; Rebecca Stewart et al to Margaret E. McDonald, $500; Winifred VanWinkle and husband to John L. Darby, $835.

Want a Drinking Fountain.

The hackmen and others at the depot are clamoring for a drinking fountain for horses near the North avenue station. They say that not only do their own horses become tired and thirsty when arriving there but many people driving in from the suburbs and mountain would be glad to find a suitable place to water their horses.

Getting Ready for the Opening.

Doctor Robert Hunter, the new proprietor of Hotel Netherwood, is getting things in admirable shape for the opening and reception of guests on September 15th next. Contractor M. Uhdal is now engaged in connecting the hotel with the city sewerage system. The contract price is $150.

A New Award.

The Presbyterian church insurance difficulty at Bound Brook has been at last settled, the new arbitrators having awarded the church $8,200.

AN IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

THE LAST SAD RITES OF THE LATE ELIAS R. POPE.

Were Held at His Late Residence on Park Avenue Yesterday Afternoon and Were Largely Attended by All Classes.

Imposing and solemn were the funeral services of the late Hon. Elias B. Pope, whose life and actions were felt in nearly every channel of Plainfield's public affairs.

The high and low, the rich and poor thronged the house Thursday afternoon from 2 o'clock until 5 o'clock, the hour of the services, to look for the last time on the form of one whose influence was a marked factor in the lives of many Plainfield people. As one after another stood by the bier feelings of sadness would arise and would seem to almost overwhelm those who had learned to love and admire the decedent for his true worth, and there is scarcely a person who knew E. R. Pope that didn't admire him.

During the hour of the services business was practically suspended, most of the stores were closed, and citizens joined in mutual sorrow with the bereaved ones in their severe loss. An impressive sight was witnessed shortly before 5 o'clock when the directors and officers of the First, City and Dime Savings' Banks entered the saddened home and occupied seats in the parlor.

A quartette consisting of Mrs. Asa Collier, Mrs. Frank Hubbard, Andrew J. Gavett and E. E. Runyon rendered in a most touching manner a chant entitled "Thy Will Be Done." Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis then read a series of Scripture selections particularly fitting to the occasion. This was followed with an affecting prayer to the Throne of Grace by Rev. Mr. Peterson, pastor of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist church, of which the decedent had been a member since he was thirteen years of age. Rev. Dr. Lewis then spoke in part as follows:

"A most certain thing is the uncertainty of life. This hour teaches us that lesson, as everyone present is in sympathy and sorrow. Who knows what heart may be stilled tomorrow? Dear friends, if physical life was all, it were better not to live. Life does not consist in physical strength, nor in telling the rounds of the season. Life never ceases, it consists of deeds, thoughts, actions and attainments. God is all helpfulness and our lives are measured by the helpfulness which is in them. It is that which makes burdens light for others that consume. Our departed brother's life measures high. The hush of business, the presence of so many business men, and the crowds that have called to look on the face of one whom they loved, testifies highly. A single sentence spoken by two laboring men, (I only use the term accommodatively for our brother was a laboring man), as they were resting by the curb on the street the other day, as I passed, and their faces looked troubled. One of the men addressed me and said, 'Many a man in Plainfield feels as though he has lost his best friend.' It was strong testimony from the curb.

"There are two characteristics in the life of E. R. Pope of which I wish to speak. First, he had a judicial cast of mind, which few people have. Educated for the bar he could have filled with great credit a place on the bench. He was calm when others were excited. His unobtrusiveness made him appear not as a man of power, though he had power. Secondly, he was ready to help.

"I went to New Market this afternoon to look over the old church records at that place, and nearly every page bears the name of John Pope, father of our departed brother. I noticed that on February 13th, 1849, while in his thirteenth year, our brother was baptized at the New Market church by Rev. Mr. Gillette. When I came here, Mr. Pope told me that he was a member of the New Market church, which was his mother's church, and he would retain his membership there. He did so, though he attended my church regularly.

"It is the character back of life that counts. The elements of character founded on Christianity made Mr. Pope's life one worthy of trust. Business men I make a plea to you for a stronger introduction of Christ into your business, its the only thing that stands.

"Last Sunday the Seventh Day Baptist Memorial Board met, Mr. Pope was treasurer of the board for twenty-five years, and his annual report was presented as usual, but for the first time during the quarter of a century he was absent from the meeting. The board has a trust fund, which was loved for as well as men could care for it.

"Life doesn't stop. It goes on through the ages. The voice of our brother will be silent, but his influence will live. Life finds larger fruition on the other side, where there are no sorrows, or temptations. Look forward and God-ward at that home where there is help.

"To the sister, who must walk alone through life; to the sons, who bear the honored names, and to the brothers bearing the same honor, my counsel is, whatever there was lack in the life of the departed, emulate. May God, who gives abundant blessings, abide and fill this home and bring us all at last into that haven of rest."

Dr. Lewis closed his remarks with a comforting prayer, after which the quartette sang "Nearer My God to Thee."

The floral display was magnificent and beautiful, and an attempt to adequately give a description of it would be impossible. Among the large pieces were two columns, one from the Exempt Firemen's Association, and the other from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 36, F. and A. M. and by Charles Potter's tribute was a wreath of roses and galax leaves, and another beautiful wreath was offered by Hon. John Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth.

A touching tribute was a cross of Passion flowers which occupied a prominent place. Another very touching piece was a large pillow of roses bearing the word "Grandpa," which was given by Frank A. Pope, Jr. In addition to the above there was a countless number of smaller wreaths and bunches of roses, which were given by kind and loving friends. On the casket, amidst a profusion of flowers, was noticed an excellent likeness of the decedent. The natural, lifelike appearance of the departed, as he lay in the costly and handsome plain casket, was remarked by all.

There were a number of prominent men present, including the Mayor of Plainfield, members of the City and Borough Councils, and men from every walk in life. Hon. John Kean, Jr., of Elizabeth, was also present.

After the services at the house the remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside, and when the proposed mausoleum is erected the body will be transferred.

A LONG AND ESTIMABLE LIFE ENDED

Mrs. Sarah M. Sandford Quietly Passes Away at the Home of Her Son.

Peaceful and quiet were the last moments of Mrs. Sarah M. Sandford Thursday as she lay in her room at the home of her son, William H. Sandford, of 343 Sandford avenue. And then after a life filled with kindness and goodwill, she passed quietly away to that bourne from which no one has yet returned. Mrs. Sandford was one of the oldest residents of this city, and was very well known by the older citizens. She was in her ninety third year at the time of her death. Death did not come unexpectedly as she has been slowly failing in health for some time. At one time during last winter, Mrs. Sandford was taken out for a drive over the icy roads and enjoyed the afternoon very much. She has not been out since. She was very weak yesterday and the family knew that the end was near at hand. At 9:20 o'clock she fell into a deep sleep, from which she never awakened.

Mrs. Sandford was born near Rahway in 1804. She afterwards resided in this city with her mother, Mrs. Rebecca Webster, until sixty-two years ago when she married the late Charles Sandford. They afterwards moved to New York where they remained until the death of Mr. Sandford in 1874. Mrs. Sandford outlived all of the Webster family ten years. She had three sons, W. H. Sandford, of East Front street, J. W. Sandford, of West Seventh street, and the late Chas. Sandford, of North Plainfield. Mrs. Sandford's character was a very beautiful one and she was greatly beloved by all who knew her. She was a member of the Watchung Avenue Friends Society by birth and always attended Friends services in town until she became ill so long. Her death was not caused by disease but she simply faded away. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. J. W. Sandford and family are now at Poland Springs, Maine. They have been telegraphed for and are expected this evening.

The remains of the late Mrs. Sandford will be enterred at Greenwood Cemetery Brooklyn.

Not in Opposition to Voorhees.

The has been talk in Elizabeth about the Kean influence being inimical to the renomination of Foster M. Voorhees for Senator. Mr. Kean is taking no part whatever in any plan to deprive the Senator of a renomination if he should seek it, and no one knows this better than Mr. Voorhees himself. The Senator could not have been in public life at these years without making enemies, but Mr. Kean is not one of them now, whatever he may have been a year ago.—N. Y. Press.

A Nuisance on the Outskirts.

Residents living on the outskirts of this city and Dunellen are complaining about the rabbit hounds that are hunting near their homes. The hounds are killing all the young rabbits and disturbing the people by barking and rushing through their gardens.

A Wonderful Tomato.

Wesley Blaker, of 705 South avenue, has raised quite a curiosity in his garden. It is an immense tomato, weighing 3¼ pounds and it is a source of great astonishment to all who have seen it.

RAVAGES OF THE STORM

FURTHER DAMAGE DONE BY FRIDAY'S ELECTRICAL STORM.

A Number of Barns in This Section Struck by Lightning and Burned—A Dwelling House in Cranford Also Hit.

The severe electrical storm that visited Plainfield early last Friday morning was not confined to this vicinity alone. All through this section the storm raged with terrible fury doing considerable damage, especially to the farmers. It is said to be one of the most severe storms that have passed over this fertile district. Besides the numerous buildings struck by lightning, trees were blown down and the crops damaged somewhat.

Yesterday considerable damage was done to the fire-alarm system in Elizabeth by the lightning.

Early yesterday morning lightning struck a barn at Cranford, and it was burned to the ground. The building was owned by Gaynes Tipple, and with contents was valued at $2,000. A house belonging to E. W. Hart, on Berkeley place, Cranford, was struck, but the damage was slight.

The most severe thunderstorm, accompanied by high winds, vivid lightning and heavy rains, in the history of Whitehouse, passed over that section early yesterday morning. For five hours lightning flashed continually.

At Stanton it struck the barn of Jos. Anderson and burned it to the ground together with two cows and a horse. Wyckoff Vandorn's barn, near Whitehouse, was also destroyed, and a valuable horse, thirty tons of hay, all his machinery and several outbuildings were consumed. North of Whitehouse Thomas Bush's barn was struck, and four cows and three horses perished. Ex-Congressman J. Nelson Pidcock's barn and outbuildings were also burned with their contents.

Lightning struck the barns of Daniel Dowling, near High Bridge, they were burned to the ground. The hay and other contents of the barn were destroyed.

During the storm lightning struck a barn at Plainsboro, near New Brunswick, and burned it.

Patrolman Flanagan, of the city police force, thought his time had come at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was on the way to the station house for his rubber coat, and was passing under the network of wires at the intersection of Park and North avenues, when he was rendered almost speechless by a sudden flash of lightning. The officer was dazed for a time, and finally reached the sidewalk for a few minutes. In a weakened condition he managed to get to the station house, there to find the place in total darkness. The fuse in the electric light converter had burned out, and just as Officer Flanagan was seeing his way around by lighting matches, Roundsman Frederickson dropped in, fearing that someone was trying to make away with the cells.

The Yeamans Hall Club of Moore's family of Washington Valley were gathered in the family circle while the heavy shower was in progress, early yesterday morning, when Mr. Moore's son remembered that the barn doors were wide open. He hastened out to close the doors, and just at that moment there was a bright flash of lightning, followed by a heavy clap of thunder, and young Moore was thrown to the ground in a dazed condition. His eye lashes were burned off short and the hair on his head was singed close to the scalp. This considered as something unusual, inasmuch as the young man suffered no other inconvenience.

DIED FROM SUNSTROKE

MAURICE FITZGERALD ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE HOT WAVE.

He Was Prostrated Last Tuesday While Driving His Brother-in-Law's Wagon, and Never Recovered from the Effects.

Maurice B. Fitzgerald, aged 25, died at Dr. J. H. Cooley's sanitarium in North Plainfield at 5:30 o'clock this morning from the effects of sunstroke received on Tuesday last, as was told in the Press at the time. He leaves a widow, but no children.

The deceased was employed by his brother-in-law, Frank Linke, to drive his delivery wagon, and on Tuesday he started for his home at the corner of Third and Liberty streets, about dinner time. Arriving at the door he was stricken down and carried to his room and made as comfortable as possible. Drs. Hedges and Davis labored for hours, but the patient remained in a comatose state and was delirious for a day or two.

Yesterday he began to sink and it was found that his brain was affected, so it was decided to remove him to the private sanitarium, where he might find rest and quietude, and at the same time have the best of care and medical attendance. Accordingly the patient was driven to the sanitarium about 9 o'clock last evening and put so bed, but he never rallied, and died as above stated at 5:30 this morning.

Decedent was born in County Kerry, Ireland, twenty-five years ago, and came to Plainfield in 1889. He has since then been a member in his sister's household, and was respected and universally esteemed by all who knew him. He had a large circle of friends and acquaintances who will doubtless be shocked to learn of his early demise.

The body was transferred to his late home on Liberty street this morning from which place the funeral will probably take place on Monday, although the arrangements are not yet fully completed.

THE MARSHAL AND THE COW.

They Have an Exciting Time Together in the Borough.

The police force of the borough consists of three regular marshals and several specials. The chief marshal is away on his vacation. One of the regulars has been absent for some time in Colorado leaving only one regular now on duty and two specials acting in the regular's places with one of the former acting as chief. Well, the specials are a little unused to regular police work and as there is not been much business in the police court during the hot spell one of the specials yesterday with an eye to business made an arrest in the middle of the road on Grove street and allowed his prisoner to escape. That started all the gossipers in the Cracker Barrel Club to question how far the rights of the taxpayer goes when he and his are peaceable and not making any noise.

A hackman named Barry, living on Grove street, Friday, called at the station house and demanded his cow that one of the marshals arrested in the afternoon, while being driven by a boy. The cow when arrested didn't say a word, but sized up "Mr. Brass Buttons" and ran away from the old officer and lost herself. Of course her owner wanted "Old Brindle" back home, because he missed her milk, and was very mad.

Special Officer and Acting Chief Peter Hansen consoled with the cow, and also Justice Crosley. They told him that it was a mistake. He wanted the cow, however, and Special Hansen was given a free ride in the hackman's carriage around Washington Park last evening to assist in search for her.

She is now back home. Apologies were offered and accepted. 'Old Brindle" hasn't said a word, yet. She was found near Washington Rock.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL TRUSTEES MEET.

They Listen to Reports and Transact Routine Business.

A regular meeting of the North Plainfield Township School trustees was held Friday, at which all the members were present. By a request of the teachers it was decided to open the schools Monday August 31st. Miss Alice Needham, a teacher at the Greenbrook School, submitted her resignation and it was accepted. Miss Smith, of Dunellen, will fill the vacancy. It is understood that Miss Needham will teach in the borough public school. The committee on repairs reported progress in their work and stated that the schools would be in first class shape for the opening day.

An interesting fact was noted at the meeting and that is the decrease in the school membership at Washingtonville. Last year there were ninety scholars at this school and this year there is a decrease of twenty-five, which is due to removals, principally, while others are over the limit in age.

At the Greenbrook school the membership will remain the same. The other business transacted was of a routine nature.

—The Plainfield Cornet Band will furnish the music for the Cranford River Carnival at Cranford, Saturday evening of this week.

MURDER IN THE ALLEY.

IT APPEARS THAT A LITTLE JOKE ENDS WITH A TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Bertha Ericco's Favorite Was the Victim of the Anger of Tom Barber—All the Details of The Affair.

There was a murder committed in Paradise Alley last week, and Saturday morning the perpetrator of the crime was tried in the city court before City Judge DeMeza. The principal witness against the accused was Mrs. Bertha Ericco, a resident of the alley and mistress of the feline victim whose life was suddenly brought to an end by a heavy stone hurled by the brawny arm of Tom Barber, of East Third street. Through her testimony and Barber's own admissions, he was found guilty and fined $3.

The story of this tragedy is rather difficult to learn as each side has a different version.

At any rate, Barber visited the alley last week and happened in the vicinity of Mrs. Ericco's house. Mrs. Ericco is a newcomer in that neighborhood, having only lived there six months, but Roundsman Mattox counts her among his most promising pupils. Someone, by way of a joke, threw the cat at Barber. If the cat had been drowning and Barber's hand had been a straw the result would have been the same, for the cat clung to the hand with a mighty grasp. Long and deep scratches resulted, whereupon the indignant young man vowed vengeance.

A stone was near at hand and he proceeded to extinguish all the nine lives of the cat at once. Barber's language was one of the most choice, so Mrs. Ericco claims, and he used very unpleasant expressions. Like many good men before it, the cat had to die to be appreciated. After the feline had given its last kick, Mrs. Ericco remembered what a wonderful animal it was, and determined to hold its exterminator accountable. According to her, Barber wrapped the dead animal in a towel and threw it in a freight car. The latter claims that he threw the carcass on the track, intending to bury it afterwards.

The next act in this tragedy was when the owner of poor Pussy swore out a warrant for the arrest of the murderer and then came arrest. The trial came off this morning. Barber admitted killing the cat but not using improper language. The trial was rendered quite exciting by Mrs. Ericco, whose Scotch blood boiled over with wrath. Roundsman Mattox had his hands full to keep his pupil still for an instant. The Judge fined Barber $3.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Dime Savings Institution of Plainfield, N. J., held at its banking room on the thirteenth day of August, 1896, to take action on the death of Elias R. Pope, one of its directors, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father in his wisdom to remove from among us our number by death, so suddenly, our beloved friend, associate and fellow, Elias R. Pope, who from the organization of this Institution has served it so ably and efficiently filled the office of Secretary and Treasurer, and thereby aided and assisted his co-directors in watching over and protecting the affairs of this institution, it seems but proper and fitting that we should put upon record in remembrance of him and his faithful service with us as such director and officer suitable expressions of our regard for him, and of confidence with his bereaved family; therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby record our appreciation of his faithful and efficient service as director and officer of this institution during the full term of twelve years.

Resolved, That we hereby tender to his bereaved widow and family our heartfelt sympathy in this their deep affliction in the taking from their devoted husband and father so suddenly, in the prime of manhood, while planning for usefulness and devotion to his family and friends, and service to the community in which he has lived so long and served so faithfully.

Resolved, That we do hereby bear testimony to his efficient and upright service as a citizen, in the discharge of his duties in the several positions of trust and responsibility in which he has been called to fill by his fellow citizens, by appointment and election; that while in his professional duties were doing rest and recreation at the mountains, seaside and in Europe, he was always found at the post of duty and service, surely it may be said of him that he has laid down his life for his friends.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be entered in full on the minutes of this institution and a copy thereof forwarded to his family and published in the city papers.

A Model Residence.

The handsome new mansion of the estate of the late David K. Moore, which has just been completed on Stelle avenue near Central avenue, is a model in its style of architecture and interior designs. Contractor John Abbott has exerted himself to satisfy the owners so far as artistic carpenter work is concerned, and in this respect the building commands the attention of all lovers of fine architectural work manship. The grounds and driveways about the place are being put in first-class condition, and when the lawns are completed the place will be one of the most handsome in this part of the state. Mrs. Moore and her family will occupy the new house within a week or so.

A Poor Peach Crop.

Harry Campbell, of the firm of Clifton & Campbell, reports from Maryland and Delaware that the peach crop will not be up to the expectations of growers. The warm weather forced the growth and made all ripen at once. Parties wanting to can this fruit may find it advantageous to do so now. Daily shipments arrive almost every morning.

PUBLIC TROLLEY PARTY

THE STREET RAILWAY'S NEW VENTURE IS A SUCCESS.

The Cars Were Crowded at First and Remained Well Filled to the End—Enthusiastic Reception by the People.

As the hour of 8 approached last Friday a crowd began to gather at the corner of North and Watchung avenues. It was mainly a curious crowd that had come to see the start of the first of the street railway's trolley parties, but there were a number that wanted to go for the ride, with band accompaniment.

The Plainfield Cornet Band appeared a few minutes before the appointed time and was placed in one of the open cars. Then there was a scramble for the remaining seats. Another car soon appeared and that was immediately filled to overflowing.

Slowly these two cars moved up Watchung avenue to East Fifth street while the third car was collecting its load of passengers. A short stop was made at the Putnam avenue switch to allow the third car to catch up and the residents in the neighborhood were treated to some music. The scene was illuminated with colored fire, burned in front of the residence of Thomas H. Cuming, of Putnam avenue.

Then the ride continued, first to Netherwood, then to Dunellen, up to West Seventh street and Monroe avenue and concluded with the Somerset street branch. At first the cars were crowded but after the novelty wore off somewhat, they were comfortably filled and remained so during the rest of the ride. The band gave its selections in its usual excellent manner.

The party attracted attention all along the line and quite a number turned out to see it. Small boys cheered, girls and women waved their handkerchiefs and everybody seemed pleased with the first trolley party.

Could Not Find An Officer.

A drunken individual camped out on the front plazza of the Obitz house on Somerset street, opposite Mountain avenue last Friday. The lady residing there tried to find a policeman to remove the unwelcome visitor but there was none to be found. She walked down Somerset street as far Spencer's store and finding no officer left word there. During the night the inebriated man disappeared but whether a policeman or his own sweet will was the directing influence, it is impossible to say.

NATURALIZED CITIZENS.

Union County's Record for the Year Large One.

In order to be able to vote at the coming election all aliens in this county must file their applications with the county clerk by Sept. 15th. The number of applications this year has been far in excess of any previous year. The clerk's office will be kept open tomorrow and Friday nights, and all persons wishing to cast a vote should see to it that their applications are made. Last Friday night about 15 applications were received, and a table for the year proves very interesting, showing, as it does, the various foreigners who have foresworn allegiance to their respective mother countries. There are two sorts of papers issued; one to those who came to this country when under 18, and the other to those who were of age when they reached here. The table follows:

A Former Plainfielder Married.

The marriage of Charles P. Gelhaar and Miss Gertrude Marie Sharp, both of Jersey City, is announced. The wedding took place last Wednesday at the home of the bride. Many Plainfield friends will remember Mr. Gelhaar, who formerly resided in this city. The bride and groom are now enjoying their honeymoon at "The Neptune," Asbury Park.

BURNED TO THE GROUND

BARNS AND MILL OF THE EPHRAIM VAIL ESTATE DESTROYED.

A Bolt of Lightning Struck One Barn And All Were Soon Wrapped in Flames—There Was No Insurance.

Another thunderstorm visited this section last evening, and although the lightning did not seem severe in Plainfield, it managed to do considerable damage on the outskirts of the town.

A bolt of lightning struck one of the large barns of the Ephraim Vail estate on Greenbrook road, about a mile from Dunellen, now belonging to Abram Vail, of East Third street, and occupied by John Case and family. In a few moments the barn was all ablaze, the flames soon spread to the other two barns and the cider mill adjoining and, in an hour all that remained was a heap of smoking ruins from which the flames fitfully rose and fell.

Mr. Case, his sons and farm-hands succeeded in saving all all the wagons and live stock except two horses. The latter were supposed to have been burned to death, but were afterwards found in a neighboring lane in a badly burned condition, but still alive. There was quite a quantity of hay in the barns and the structures burned like tinder illuminating the country for miles around. The reflection of the fire was seen in the borough and it appeared so near that an alarm was sent in from Box 152, at the corner of Linden avenue and Grove street. The hose cart and firemen responded and went toward the fire as far as the water mains extended. Then another alarm was sent in from Box 154, at the corner of Rockview avenue and Rockview terrace, to bring out the steamer. The adventurous spirits meanwhile investigated and found that the fire was beyond the borough limits so that the department returned without waiting for the arrival of the engine.

The Dunellen fire department started to respond to the fire but it was beyond the limits of the borough also and the very muddy condition of the roads made the way almost impassible. No effort was made to extinguish the flames but only to save the surrounding buildings. Wet blankets were used and, despite the sparks that filled the air, the house and an open wagonshed escaped the ravages of the flames.

The house itself has quite a history. It was the first two-story frame building to be erected between New Brunswick landing and the Blue Mountains. It was built in 1774, and during the Revolutionary War, the lower floor was often occupied by the British soldiers, who would take possession late at night and leave early in the morning, before the family appeared.

It is rather difficult to estimate the loss, but those who should know estimate it at between $2,000 and $3,000. The cider mill, with its press and all the other apparatus, was a total wreck. Mr. Case had no insurance on stock or property, although he has been planning to for some time.

A large tree opposite the house was also struck by lightning.

OBITUARY.

James Francis Pearson.

James Francis Pearson, one of Plainfield's most highly respected citizens, died Saturday at his late residence on Clinton avenue, at the age of sixty years. He had sterling qualities and was very much beloved by a very large circle of friends and acquaintances. He scorned to wrong his fellowmen, was true to all his obligations moral and legal, was fair to the strong and helpful to the weak, was manly, faithful, honest and upright.

He was for many years a book and job printer in the city of New York, and carried on the business up to the time of his death. Mr. Pearson was a man who possessed the entire confidence of all who knew him in business matters as well as in his social relations. He faithfully discharged all the duties of a good citizen and was a very estimable Christian gentlemen. He was also extremely kind hearted and genial, so that his society was much enjoyed by his friends, whilst his enemies, if he had any, could say nothing to his injury.

Mr. Pearson leaves an aged mother, one daughter and four brothers to mourn his loss.

Rev. Mr. Kelly Leaves.

Rev. M. R. Kelly and family returned to Alfred, N. Y., Saturday evening after spending four months in this city. Rev. Mr. Kelly has been preaching in the Seventh Day Baptist church in this city during the absence of Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., on his missionary trip to the West and now that the latter has returned to his charge, Mr. Kelly has left Plainfield. He has been boarding on West Fifth street.

Disturbing The Salvation Army.

Complaint has been made by Constable George Rockafellow against Orrin Holmes for raising a disturbance at the Salvation Army barracks. He will come up for trial before City Judge DeMesa on Saturday morning.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS.

LAST SATURDAY'S BALL GAME A WRETCHED EXHIBITION.

The Home Team Not in It With the Murray Hill Boys—A Large Crowd Was Disappointed—How It Happened.

The uncertainty of baseball was never more clearly shown than on Saturday afternoon when the Y. M. C. A. team crossed bats with the Murray Hill team of New York. One week ago the Plainfield baseball loving public were given a superb exhibition of the National game when the N. Y. A. C., visited this city. Last Saturday fate sought the other extreme, and as a result one of the most wretched and heart-rending games was witnessed by an unusually large crowd, which was attracted by the game of a week ago. Enthusiasm was at ebb and a more thoroughly disappointed crowd it would be hard to find anywhere. From the start to the finish the Y. M. C. A. boys were clearly out-played, and in fact they were not in it. The Murray Hill team is composed of some of the best semi-professional players to be found in this section of the country, and they certainly gave the home team one of the worst drubbings they ever got. During the game they succeeded in getting three hits off of Graham, whose pitching was the feature of the contest. Burt pitched his usual good game, but his support was wretched, and it could not be expected that he could win the game alone. In the sixth inning MacLaughlin was put in the box, Burt in right field, Schenck on first base and Symons in left field. With this change the visitors failed to score during the balance of the game.

As will be noted by the score the home team made eleven errors, and they were all inexcusable ones. In the first place it would be wise judgment to take Sansom off of second base and put him in the field where he formerly played. Another advisable change would be to place Schenck on first base, as he plays that position with the utmost certainty and nothing escapes him. With these changes the team would no doubt be strengthened so strong, as the other players fill their positions well. In Saturday's contest the whole team was demoralized, and nothing under the sun could have prevented the landslide after the decline was started. The visiting team played a very strong game. Their batting and fielding was remarkable, though only eight hits were secured off of Burt and one off of MacLaughlin. O'Gorman who played in left field won hearty applause for making several phenomenal catches. A feature of the game was the work of the umpire, James Brown. On several occasions he favored the visitors, but on the whole his decisions gave satisfaction. It is to be hoped that the home team will not give another such exhibition. If they do, a notable decrease in the attendance will result.

Next Saturday the Elizabeth Athletic Club team will play a return game in this city against the home team, and no doubt a good game will be witnessed as the previous game between these two teams was close and exciting.

Below is the full score of Saturday's game:

Struck by Lightning.

The large chimney on the residence of Dr. W. E. Stelle, of Park avenue, was struck by lightning during the severe storm of last Friday morning. The chimney has a very broad top and one corner of it was shattered by the bolt. No other damage was done to the house.

Knows a Good Thing.

C. H. Lippincott, formerly of this city, but now of West Kinney street, Newark, has not lost interest in his old home. He writes The Daily Press: "Since I have moved out of Plainfield I miss your paper very much, and would like to have you mail it to me."

The Operation Was Successful.

Rose Marron, of the borough, who was taken to the hospital suffering with appendicitis, is very much improved. An operation was performed and the chances of her recovery are excellent.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Messrs. Feytel and Miller, of Newark, rode their wheels to this city yesterday and called on friends. They returned toward evening.

The revival of an old idea, by the Manhattan Bicycle Club, of a hill-climbing contest, at the old place, famous in the days of the ordinary—Eagle Rock hill—on Monday, September 7, (Labor Day) at 11 a. m. will evidently prove a success, but not so difficult as in the old times of a decade ago. Entries should be made with Jos. Oatman, 1556 Broadway, New York. No gear under 56 will be allowed.

Diversified novelties will be a striking feature of the Atalanta Wheelmen's meet at Waverly Park on August 22. The race between triplet teams for one mile will be an interesting feature. The Harlem Wheelmen, Vim Bicycle Club and Elizabeth A. C. will contest for three-cornered honors. The King's County Wheelmen's "quad" will be present for exhibition. It may be used to pace Earl and Ripley in record trials.

The Evening Telegram, of New York, last night published a good likeness of F. L. C. Martin, of this city, and a short sketch of his life. He is spoken of in high terms as a veteran cyclist and one of the most prominent bicycle dealers in the State. His kindness to cyclists passing through Plainfield is particularly noted. Mr. Martin, as the originator of the Newark-Philadelphia century run, and one of New Jersey's leading wheelmen, has been invited to be one of the pacemakers for the Telegram's big century run on August 29. He has accepted.

Now that the Louisville meet is over the riders will have an opportunity for rest until the Springfield meet, which is one of the most important of the year. It will take place next month, and all of the fast men, with the possible exception of Johnson, will be there to compete for the valuable prizes. Amateurs and professionals will be provided for on the programs, and as some of the latter are riding very fast and the track is in the best of condition, good time may be expected.

AROUND THE BASES.

The Bound Brook base ball team play a team from Trenton on Saturday at Bound Brook.

The Assessor's Book Correct.

Councilmen Tolles, Stebbins, Frost, Serrell, Westphal and Ginna, met in the City Council rooms last evening and examined the books of Tax Assessor Hubbard. They were found to be all right and were passed as correct.

A Lively Time Over a Dog.

A man by the name of Baldwin, who lives on the mountains back of North Plainfield, picked up a valuable dog on Somerset street last evening and took the canine home with him. The dog belonged to a man living at Springfield and he, hearing of his lost dog's whereabouts, came to North Plainfield this morning, and he with a boy named Duffy went to Baldwin's home, where they found the dog. It is understood that a lively time followed the dog's removal, but there were no arrests.

Frank Bowley and family, of Somerset street, left town this morning for Philadelphia, where they will visit for awhile.

Mrs. J. Hervey Ackerman, of West Seventh street, left town yesterday for Maine, where she will remain during the summer.

The condition of Mrs. Henry Bennett, of Scotchen, sister of J. W. Van-Sickle, of this city, has become most alarming. Drs. Baldwin, of New Brunswick, and McKingsley, of Metuchen, have been in daily attendance. Her complaint has developed into typhoid fever, and little encouragement is given of her recovery.

City Judge DeMeza began his two weeks vacation this afternoon when he drove his team up to Pluckamin. He will spend his evenings in the quiet of that little town and take a well earned rest, returning, however, to Plainfield every day to look after his judicial duties.

RESISTANCE OF A TRAIN.

At Sixty Miles an Hour It Is Four Times Greater Than at Thirty.

At 60 miles an hour the resistance of a train is four times as great as it is at 30 miles—that is, the fuel must be four times as great in the one case as it is in the other. But at 60 miles an hour this fuel must be exerted for a given distance in half the time that it is at 30 miles, so that the amount of power exerted and steam generated in a given period of time must be eight times as great as the fastest speed.

This means that the capacity of the boiler, cylinders, and other parts must be greater, with a corresponding addition to the weight of the machine. Obviously, therefore, if the weight per wheel on account of the limit of weight that the rails will carry, is limited, we soon reach a point when the driving wheels and other parts cannot be further enlarged, and then we reach the maximum of speed.

The nice adjustment necessary of the various parts of these immense engines may be indicated by some figures as to the work performed by these parts when the locomotive is worked at a high speed. Take a passenger engine on any of the big railroads.

At 60 miles an hour a driving wheel 5½ feet in diameter revolves five times every second; now, the reciprocating parts of each cylinder, including one piston, piston rod cross head and connecting rod, weighing about 650 pounds, must move back and forth a distance equal to the stroke, usually about two feet, every time the wheel revolves, or in the fifth of a second.

It starts from a state of rest at the end of each stroke of the piston, and must acquire a velocity of 32 feet per second in one-twentieth of a second, and must be brought to a state of rest in the same period of time. A piston 18 inches in diameter has an area of 254½ square inches. Steam of 150 pounds pressure per square inch would, therefore, exert a force on the piston equal to 38,175 pounds. This force is applied alternately on each side of the piston ten times in a second.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Power of Insects and Horses.

Few people have any idea of the wonderful amount of strength possessed by members of the beetle family. Felix Plateau has made experiments which show that a common door beetle can draw 500 times its own weight and a stag beetle has been known to escape from a box weighted with a book 1,700 times greater than the insect's body. If a horse's strength was as great comparatively as that of the common flea he could draw a dead weight of 800,000 pounds!—N. Y. Sun.

—When you see the sun drawing water at night, know that it will rain on morrow. The sun is said to be drawing water when its rays can be seen shining through rifts in distant clouds.

NEW JERSEY STATE FAIR

THE EXHIBITION AT WAVERLY TO OPEN ON SEPT. 7TH.

A Fine Premium List and Valuable Prizes to Be Awarded in All Departments—The Preparations Completed.

The State Fair at Waverly will begin on Monday, Sept. 7th, this being the 38th year, and continue for a week, under the auspices of the State Agricultural Society. The grounds will be open Saturday, Sept. 5th, for the reception of exhibits. The premium list is such that farmers and breeders from all parts of the State should be represented.

With the new classes and expert judge system, which will be made a feature this season, owners of show animals receiving the "Blue Ribbon" awards will have occasion to feel proud. The State Society rises above the mere idea of quantity in conducting an exposition of agricultural products and farm stock.

From promises received, the officers say they are encouraged to claim that this year's exhibition will compass all former ones, both as regards largeness of display and quality of the exhibits.

They have bent themselves to the work of perfecting the hundred and one details; the grounds have been carefully looked after and every building put in shape, so that when opening day arrives there will be a place for everything and something for every place.

The programme of the week has been so arranged that from the opening on Labor Day to the close of the fair, a series of attractive novelty performances will be given between each day's races. Every specialty to be one of the best obtainable.

The speed classes include fast work by some of the best horses on the Eastern circuit. Purses offered for the fourteen classes amounts to the handsome sum of $8,100, in addition to which the Society have arranged a grand tournament of bicycle races for Saturday, the closing day in which all the crack riders of the various clubs will take part, and from the great interest taken in the wheel it is predicted that the last day will be the most successful in point of attendance.

The accessible location of the grounds, added to the natural picturesque beauty of its park facilities, makes it a perfect place to thoroughly enjoy a day's outing. The whole enclosure of sixty acres by reason of its terraced and rolling lands, forms a natural grand stand, from which the visitor can view with comfort the various attractions and races, and at the same time delight the eye in gazing upon the quiet beauty of the landscape.

Besides the excellent service of the Pennsylvania, Lehigh Valley and Central Railroad of New Jersey, the electric cars from Newark, Elizabeth, Paterson and Jersey City deliver passengers at the main entrance to the fair grounds. These improved means of reaching the grounds will induce thousands to go there this year, giving exhibitors a much larger audience than they have had heretofore. The officers of the State Society always make it their business to please visitors, so that when leaving the grounds they are satisfied that they have had full value for their time and expense.

A Delightful Evening.

A very pleasant affair was given last Monday night by Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson at their charming home on Mountain avenue, in honor of their guest, Mrs. Suzelle Howat, of Philadelphia. The guests found the spacious veranda a delightful place for games and conversation and the time passed very enjoyably. Refreshments followed toward the close. Among those present were the Misses Jennie Simpson, May McLoughlin, Mamie Steiner, Allie Loomis, Jessie Coddington, Lena Smalley, and Minnie Smalley, and the Messrs Robert M. Clark, Edward O. Clark, Will Morrison, Harry Coddington, Will Titus, Bert Simpson and Theodore Lister.

BILLY LEE IN THE TOILS.

LARCENY AND RUNNING A DISORDERLY HOUSE THE CHARGES.

Joseph Block Accuses the Man of Baseball Fame of Stealing $240 From Him—To Be Tried This Afternoon.

"Billy" Lee, of baseball fame, who now keeps a road house on Front street, just this side of Scotch Plains, is in trouble. Wednesday he was arrested on two charges, both brought by Joseph Block, an employe of Abram, the shoe dealer. One was for grand larceny and the other for keeping a disorderly house.

Tuesday Block went out riding with Hattie and Sarah Jane Fottingill, of South Amboy, aged respectively twenty-two and twenty-five years. They went over the brook and then to Scotch Plains. There they stopped at Lee's place.

Lee states that they tried to hire a room and he refused to rent it. At any rate, there was some trouble and Block accused Lee of robbing him of $240 that he claims to have had in his pocket.

Finally Block and the young women returned to Plainfield where they were arrested by Sergeant Kiely for acting in a disorderly manner. The police state that the women have been here several nights without a place to sleep and bear an unsavory reputation.

Lee was arrested and held under $200 bail by Justice Newcorn for his appearance this afternoon. James Day acted as his bondsman.

The young women were brought before Judge DeMeza this morning and remanded until tomorrow to await the result of the Lee trial.

CAUGHT MILKING A COW.

Youngsters Who Get the Lacteal Fluid Direct From the Bovine.

Bolce's apple orchard, located on the northwest bank of Tier's lake, has of late been the rendezvous of a lot of boys. It has also been the pasture field for several cows, owned in the neighborhood. Tuesday one of the prematurely rapid kids was caught milking the cows in a tomato can and passing the milk around among his companions. Just then the owner happened along and milk can and boys beat a hasty retreat.

It may not be generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact, that such work is in the eye of the law considered malicious mischief and is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $50.

Our James in Great Demand.

Postmaster Oliver came all the way here from Milburn, Tuesday, in search of the Hon. James E. Martine, whom he was seeki g to deliver an address at a political meeting to be held there. Mr. Martine's reputation as the "Farmer Orator" has gained him wide spread notoriety and his good, sound and practical sense has made him the man that so many clubs are after to address. Mr. Martine regretted very much that he couldn't go to Milburn, but a meeting will probably be arranged for a future date, when the Farmer Orator may respond.

A YOUNG LIFE SAVED

LITTLE WILLIE STANBERY JUST ESCAPED BEING CRUSHED.

Became Confused on His Velocipede Between Two Wagons and Grabbed a Revolving Wheel—Was Unconscious

The life of five-year-old Willie Stanbery, of Fanwood, was narrowly saved from a sudden and sad end Tuesday by the presence of mind and prompt action of Mrs. John Cose, who conducts a milk route from Scotch Plains. Mrs. Cose delivers milk to Willie's father, Assessor W. R. Stanbery, each evening, and she is usually met at the top of Kyte's hill by the little lad on a velocipede. The distance from the top of the hill to the house is only a short distance, and it has been the habit of Mrs. Cose to drive along the side of the road while Willie pedals along the centre of the driveway, ostensibly racing with one another. Of course Mrs. Cose always lets the little fellow get to the house first and thus satisfies his boyish desire to win.

Last night she was met by Willie at the accustomed point in the road, but at another carriage was approaching from the opposite direction. She cautioned the boy to get out of the center of the road as she would not race while the other vehicle was approaching. She thought he had heeded the advice, but just as the other wagon, which was driven by Anthony Farley, drove past her, she was horrified to see Willie, velocipede and all, mount the rear wheel as it revolved. She was not going at a fast pace and she brought her horse up in a jiffy, and leaned out of the wagon and caught the little fellow by the arm before he fell under the wheels. But her strength was not sufficient to hold him and he fell with considerable force.

He was conveyed to the house in an unconscious condition. It was thought he had sustained mortal injuries and Dr. Westcott was summoned. After making an examination he said that no bones had been broken and the injuries would be but temporary.

It is supposed that the boy did not hear Mr. Cose's admonition and when he got between the two wagons he became confused. As he came in contact with the milk wagon it is thought that he grabbed the revolving wheel, which carried both he and the velocipede to the dangerous position when seen by Mrs. Cose.

VETERANS ARE COMING

OLD NEW YORK VOLUNTEER FIREMEN TO VISIT PLAINFIELD.

The Matter Settled Last Night When the Exempts Appointed Committees to Arrange Details—A Bit of History.

The first week in October promises to be an eventful one for Plainfield. During that week three large organizations will come to this city. Already the Knights Templar of the State have decided to hold their annual field day here on Thursday, October 1st, and the Christian Endeavorers of the State have decided on the following week for the annual State convention, and last night, at a meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, it was decided to invite the famous Veteran Firemen's Association of New York to come to this city on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 3d. The Veterans have expressed a desire to come to this city, so the matter may now be looked upon as settled.

The Veteran Firemen's Association, of New York, is an organization numbering about one hundred and fifty men. They were all members of the old volunteer fire department that fought so gallantly against the flames thirty or forty years ago in New York city, and from which Elsworth's famous Fire Zouaves were recruited. They were young men then, strong and vigorous, but several decades have greatly changed them. Although most of them are grey haired men now, they have not lost their jovial spirits, and once a year they gather for an outing. They charter a train, for the association is well off financially, and visit some city where the fire department is planning a celebration. This year they go to Easton on Thursday, October 1st, and take part in the grand parade and celebration of the firemen of that city. Friday they will spend at Mauch Chunk and riding up the "switch back." Saturday they return to New York, stopping at Plainfield on their way back and spending the afternoon here.

The meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, last evening, held in the Hook and Ladder Company's parlors, was one of the largest in the history of the association, over fifty members being present, besides representatives from the different companies that compose Plainfield's fire department. It was finally decided that the New York veterans should be invited and that the companies should guarantee part of the necessary funds while the Exempt Association should raise the rest by subscription. The arrangements for the affair were placed in the hands of a general committee composed of the following: Roger F. Murray, Joseph M. Hawkins, Joseph Blimm, Abner Bartlett, Burnett R. Rogers, Augustus Martin, D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, Edward Vermeule, J. A. Hubbard and Eugene M. Laing. Eugene M. Laing was elected chairman of this committee and Roger F. Murray, secretary.

The following sub-committees were then appointed:

Finance—Roger F. Murray, B. R. Rogers, August Saltzman, H. Newton Spencer.

Reception—D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, J. M. Hawkins, Abner Bartlett, Augustus Martin.

Collation—Joseph Blimm, Edward Vermeule.

The general committee includes representatives from all the companies and the Exempt Association as well.

Although no arrangements have yet been made, the general plan of the affair is understood. The special train, bringing the veterans, their band and their old "double decker" hand engine, will arrive here about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and, after a short parade, the veterans will be given a chance to see Plainfield and its fire department. Then will come a banquet, followed by speechmaking, at the Jersey Cycle Academy, and at about 6:30 o'clock the visitors will leave.

Elizabeth was very anxious to secure that famous old organization as her guest but two of the veterans, Mr. Glenzer and Jacob Blimm, reside in this city, and the rest had often heard of the beauties of this city and the excellence of her fire department, so they preferred this city to our neighbor down the road.

The general committee will hold another meeting on Friday evening at the Alert Hose Company's house on West Second street.

A Curious Visitor.

Mrs. S. P. Craig, of College place, has quite a curiosity. It is a small tree toad of tropical nature, and how it came to this part of the country is a great mystery. The toad was found on a rubber plant that now stands in Mrs. Craig's front lawn. It is a brilliant green color, very different from the dusty brown of the ordinary tree toad.

OPEN AIR BAND CONCERT

A LARGE CROWD HEAR THE MELODIES OF GUTTMAN'S MUSICIANS.

A Band Stand Was Used for the First Time—Many Strange Faces Appeared in the Crowd of Music Lovers.

Although many of Plainfield's residents are now enjoying life at the seashore, among the mountains or by the fertile shore of some inland lake, there still remained enough Tuesday to attend the open air band concert and crowd the streets in the vicinity. The concert was held in the open lot at the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street. A band stand had been erected against the side of the Schepiin block and here the Plainfield Cornet Band, with Nate Guttman as leader, rendered a delightful programme from eight o'clock to nearly ten o'clock.

The attendance was good but not as large as at the concerts held at the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church earlier in the summer. Perhaps this was owing to the number who are on their summer vacation. At any rate, the crowd was there, in holiday attire, although the chilly weather made the thin summer gowns rather cool.

The wheelman and wheelwoman, too, seemed to be more in evidence than at previous concerts and the stylishly dressed young man, in white ducks and high-standing collar, was conspicuous by his absence. It was probably too cold for him, however. All along Front street from the Schepiin block down past the Babcock building the cyclists lined up against the curb, and there listened to the music and chatted to a fair companion. The bicycle riders were not only to be found there, but at every point, threading their way through the crowd with skill only acquired by long practice.

The familiar faces were not numerous in the throng, for many of the listeners appeared to be strangers to the city or allured to the open-air concert. The natty uniforms of Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely were to be seen here and there through the crowd, and those officers kept an eye on the visitors.

It was a very peaceful crowd, however, and, aside from a mild flirtation here and there, all was quiet. There was a steady procession up and down the sidewalks that good naturedly jostled the crowd that preferred to line up along the sidewalk to listen to the music. The steps of the First M. E. church made an excellent grand stand, and they were occupied at an early hour, while the wide sidewalk at that point gave standing room to many.

The evening was a delightful one, and the little chill in the air was by no means unpleasant. The stars were unbidden by clouds, and later in the evening the moon chose to be one of the party. By moonlight the scene was a beautiful one, the usually ugly appearing sheds and buildings assuming strange and fantastic shapes. Gradually the throng dispersed, and when the strains of "Home, Sweet Home," floated out from the band stand, all disappeared and the moon and empty band stand were left alone.

Johnny Got Your Gun.

Somewhere in the rear of the Boice estate, or thereabouts, on East Front street, there is an owl, wild cat or some other specie of the hairy or feathery tribe, which makes no noise in the daytime, but at night it's a holy terror. The noise made is heartrending and is generally only tolerated in case of death. But there can be no case of death in this instance for the disturber of the peace seems to take a delight in yelling at night only.

Gang of Tramps in the Toils.

Eight tramps were arrested on Monday night in Elizabethport as a result of a raid made on a gang who have been committing depredations along the line of the Jersey Central. The men are supposed to belong to the gang that has been annoying the residents of Westfield, Roselle and Cranford, and are believed to be members of the same gang that set fire to and burned a freight car some time ago at the place where they were caught.

Dr. Lewis Asked to Lecture.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church in this city, has been asked and prevailed on to go into the lecture field. At the meeting of Seventh-Day Baptists held at Alfred, N. Y., and just closed, Dr. Lewis was urged to make a lecturing tour and spread his knowledge and intellectuality of religion. At the conference a year ago Dr. Lewis was urged to take a similar field, but no decisive action was taken at that time.

INTEREST GROWS APACE

ALL THE COUNTRY AROUND ANXIOUS TO SEE THE BICYCLE PARADE.

Plainfield Will Probably See a Crowd on Sept. 5th That Will Exced in Numbers Any Ever Before Gathered Here.

With a clear day, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival on September 5th will be a great event for Plainfield.

It is not so surprising that people in this city should be so enthusiastic over the carnival, but it is quite remarkable the amount of interest that is being taken in it by out-of-town people. A member of the advertising committee that visited Oak Tree and vicinity to post up the large bills of the carnival, found great enthusiasm shown among the people of that district. They stated that the residents were going to turn out en masse on the occasion of the carnival. Like interest is shown from all the surrounding towns and Plainfield will see a crowd that will quite surprise her. It will be a holiday crowd, too, dressed in holiday attire, and with money to spend. It will be the event of the season for many village swains and their blushing friends and Plainfield storekeepers will reap the benefits.

Frank L. C. Martin went to Brooklyn last evening to confer with several military wheel organizations to induce them to come to this city and parade. The conference seemed very successful and Plainfield will have its eyes opened to some of the modern uses of the bicycle.

One great advantage of holding the parade in the afternoon will be that the decorations of the houses can be seen. It is to be hoped that the residents will decorate early in the morning and allow their decorations to remain up all day and evening as Plainfield will be crowded with visitors and the city should present as pretty an appearance as possible. The coasting contest in the morning of Carnival Day will attract many who will remain all day and part of the evening. It will be a great day for Plainfield.

A meeting of the general committee was to have been held last night but the members were not notified and it was decided to adjourn the meeting to Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Board of Trade rooms.

TO HUSTLE IN THE FOURTH.

Republicans Fear Inroads Into Their West End Majority.

The Republican majority in Plainfield is very large, but they are preparing to do some active campaign work, especially in the West End, where they fear the other parties most.

A Fourth Ward McKinley and Hobart Club is already underway and will be organized shortly with the headquarters in the West End. The young men are to be rounded into line by a young men's club which William N. Runyon is engineering through. A Republican glee club to sing the campaign songs is the talk of the party leaders while several other campaign clubs are being discussed. No effort has yet been made toward organizing a campaign bicycle club but if the fight should grow at all hot here there will probably be one.

Ugly Customers.

In the memory of old citizens sharks have never been so plentiful as during the last few days in the waters of the Kills at Elizabethport, and boys have been warned by the police to keep from bathing, lest some of them might be attacked. "Bill" Levers an old waterman, Sunday shot a shark swimming off the Central Railroad wharf. It sunk to the bottom before Levers could reach it. Sailing parties on the Kills have been badly frightened by the sudden appearance of the ugly creatures alongside of their boats.

Prospering on a Pacific Isle.

Dr. Willis A. Anderson, of this city, has just received a letter from his brother, Dr. Robert Anderson, who is practicing dentistry in Honolulu, where he has been for the past five years. Robert has made a great success of his business, and has invested in much real estate there. He was expecting to visit his old home in this city this coming fall, but his large practice and other business engagements will not allow him the time off.

Death of an Estimable Woman.

Mrs. Florence VanWinkle, wife of Frank VanWinkle, died at her home in East Orange last Sunday at 11:30 o'clock. The cause of her death was consumption, and she had been ill for about three months. She has been married nine years. Before her marriage she resided in this city on West Front street. Her uncle, S. H. Peer, resides on West Front street at present. Her husband's mother, Mrs. Violet VanWinkle, resides on Central avenue, and he has several brothers in this city. Mrs. VanWinkle was well known in this city.

—The next meeting of the Borough Council will be held on the first Friday in September. A special meeting may be called sooner, but this is quite unlikely, the councilmen say, inasmuch as the Watchung avenue extension is about the only matter of importance to be considered now.

FOUND TIED TO A TREE

SENSATIONAL EXPERIENCE OF TWO YOUNG WOMEN OF THIS CITY.

The Story is That They Visited New Brunswick With Two Strangers and on the Return Were Tied in the Woods.

Two young Plainfield women had an experience Sunday night that they will not soon forget, according to a well vouched for report from that city, says the Elizabeth Journal. The story is told by Harry Peddington, a young man who lives in New Market and works in Plainfield, to which place he goes daily in a buggy.

Peddington says he was driving to Plainfield early Monday morning, and when passing along a lonely road past some woods he heard a woman's voice calling for help. The voice came from the recesses of the woods, and so he alighted from his vehicle and investigated. After going some distance into the woods he came upon two young women. Their wrists were tied tightly together and both were lashed firmly to a tree. It had rained over night and their clothing was soaking wet. The rain, the cold, and the tight cord about their wrists and bodies were causing them to suffer greatly.

Peddington cut the cords and freed them from their unpleasant situation. The girls were nearly overcome with the exposure and pain, and acted slightly hysterical, but nevertheless they refused all further assistance and declined to give their names. All the information that Peddington could get from them was that they had flirted with two strangers, who had taken them in a carriage to New Brunswick, and on returning home, when in the deserted spot where they were found, the men had taken out of the carriage, lashed them to a tree and deserted them.

Peddington offered to carry the young women to Plainfield in his buggy, but they declined, saying that they didn't intend to ride with strangers again.

The identity of the young women has not been learned, and the police have no information about the matter.

MRS. NINGER DIGS UP $6,000.

It Was in Gold, and Had Been Buried in the Cellar by the Counterfeiter.

The cottage at Flaggtown which was occupied by Emanuel Ninger, the expert counterfeiter, up to the time of his arrest, has been sold to Gustavus A. Weldenmayer of Newark, and Mrs. Ninger and her children have gone to live near the Erie penitentiary, where Ninger is confined.

The belief among Mrs. Ninger's friends that she had been left almost penniless by the confiscation of all the bonds and money found in the house was dispelled today, when, just before her departure, she dug up about $6,000 in gold, which had been buried in the cellar.

It has recently transpired that Ninger disposed of most of his penmade bank notes in real-estate transactions. Henry Reimer, a real-estate agent of this place, who sold Ninger the cottage at Flaggtown, says the Ninger made him a payment of $3,000 in new fifty-dollar bank notes. This money was taken without question by the local banks, and it was not until Ninger's arrest that Reimer became convinced that the notes given to him by the penman were counterfeit.

Ninger is known to have made other purchases of real estate, in payment for which he gave new bills. His real estate transactions were puzzling to experienced agents, and he was known among them as a losing speculator. But it is now believed that he made a practice of purchasing real estate with counterfeit money, in this manner being able to dispose of it in large amounts with little risk. The land was afterward sold, usually at a loss. Reimer has specimens of Ninger's writing in the shape of personal and business letters, which are marvels of fine penmanship.

The will of the late E. R. Pope was probated before the County Surrogate in Elizabeth last Friday by the following executors: James C. Pope, Frank A. Pope and Howard A. Pope. The document is as follows:

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal at Plainfield, N. J., this 10th day of April, A. D., 1895. [Signed] Elias R. Pope.

J. F. MacDonald and H. B. McDonald were the witnesses.

FAREWELL TO "CAMP LEVEE."

It Now Exists Only in the Memories of the Campers.

"Camp Levee" is no more but it ended Friday night with a blaze of glory. The "annex," as the board hut adjoining the tent, was called, was filled with inflamable wood late that evening and the torch applied. By the light of the brilliant conflagration that followed, the campers gathered about the camp fire and bid farewell to the site of that famous camp that will probably remain in their memories for many a day.

A grand dinner was given that night before the fire that would have astonished the most critical epicurian and the guests of the campers were greatly pleased with "Chef" Anglemann's final effort.

Miss Elsie Horne, of Willow avenue, has gone to Philadelphia for a week.

NOTHING TO LIVE FOR.

SO THOUGHT A SOMERVILLE BOY WHEN HIS LOVE WAS REBUTTED.

On His Knees he Begged For Her Promise to Marry, and When She Refused he Tried to End His Life.

Frank Pendington, of Somerville, in the presence of his sweetheart, Friday shot himself in the head with a revolver while on his knees begging for the renewal of their engagement.

Pendington and Miss Clara Beasley were to have been married in June, but at the former's request the wedding was postponed until the fall, although it occasioned a quarrel between them, during which Miss Beasley gave back his engagement ring and presents.

Miss Beasley has refused to entertain Pendington, although the latter has called at her home several times. Yesterday he called again, and sent a note to his former finance stating that he was about to leave the country and asking if she would give him a farewell.

This she consented to do, and while they were together Pendington begged for the renewal of their engagement, but was met with a refusal, whereupon he fell upon his knees and shot himself.

The wounded man was taken to his home in a carriage, where the wound was dressed. A surgeon was told that it was not fatal he declared that he would again make an attempt to end his life.

TIME IS LIMITED FOR ACTION.

Hudson County Sound-money Democrats Will Make a Vigorous Campaign.

Otto Crouse and Dr. Leonard J. Gordon, Hudson county members of the Provisional State Committee of the Sound-money Democrats of New Jersey, sent out a statement Friday that it will be impossible for want of time to hold the proposed mass meeting in Jersey City before the date fixed for the State Convention. They say in their statement:

"A fight for honest money and for the preservation of the Democratic party and its principles is to be carried on in Hudson county and throughout the State during the present campaign. A Provisional State Committee has been formed, subject to change at the State Convention to be held in Trenton on Wednesday, the 26th inst. At that time also delegates to the National Convention in Indianapolis on September 2d, will be chosen. Owing to the shortness of time it is impossible to hold a sound-money mass meeting before the date of the Convention. A meeting of the sound-money Democrats of Hudson county will be held at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, on Monday next, August 24th, at 8 p. m., for the purpose of conference, the selection of delegates, and for the consideration of other matters looking toward permanent organization and a vigorous campaign."

A MAN HUNT IN SOMERSET.

Chris Lovering, Accused of Assault, Captured in the Mountains.

Chris Lovering, the Sourland Mountain desperado, who has been hunted through the mountains for a week by Farmer William Blowers and a posse of his neighborers, was captured on the road between Rock Mills and Weartsville Friday night by Constable George D. Totten. Lovering who is the most desperate of the many lawless characters known in the Sourland Mountain region, was released from the Somerset county jail recently, after serving a short term for an attempted assault upon a girl in the mountains.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Josephine Blowers, the wife of a farmer of the Sourland Mountain, was found lying unconscious in the woods a short distance from her home. There were indications that she had been assaulted. She said she was picking berries at a lonely spot in the woods when Lovering suddenly confronted her from behind a clump of bushes. He held a dirk knife high in the air and threatened to cut her heart out. She tried to scream but fell fainting to the ground.

Lovering was brought to Somerville and placed in the county jail.

These Dogs Should be Muzzled or Shot.

Woe be unto the man, woman or child who has occasion to pass over Cole's hill, between this city and Scotch Plains on foot at any time during the day or night. There are a couple of vicious appearing and dangerous dogs, which take a delight in chasing, growling and snapping at drivers and other passersby. A little warm lead would put an end to the complaints, and a person would be perfectly justified in shooting them.

Dr. Talmage Still a Member.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, who has been spending a few days in Bound Brook, expressed himself as surprised and pleased that the clerk of the reformed church had found his name still on the church roll of membership, and offered to give an address at the church's semi-centennial celebration, which is to be held Thursday. The society will observe the occasion with anniversary exercises in the evening as well.

WHERE THE ACTORS TROD

A PROSPEROUS SEASON OF MUSIC HALL IS ANTICIPATED.

The House Has Been Thoroughly Cleaned and the Best Seats Will Be Sold For 75 Cents—Good Attractions Booked.

When the doors of Music Hall are thrown open to the theatrical public next Thursday evening to witness the first production of the "Cotton Spinner," the house will exemplify, in a way, that axiom which reads "A thing of beauty and a joy forever." "A thing of beauty" because water, brushes and muscle have transformed the house, from pit to dome, into a temple of cleanliness; "a joy forever" because the new management are here to make a success, and to accomplish that, will present meritorious performances at popular prices, with all the little details of the business cared for in a manner that their mature experience in the profession will prompt.

Messrs. Ball and Willey have taken charge of Music Hall with the intention of making it a continuous success to the end of the season. Their first step towards this was to give the house a thorough overhauling. Every nook and corner of the building has been washed and scrubbed, and yesterday when a Press reporter visited the auditorium not a dingy or sombre-hued spot met the eye.

The most important decision on their part, however, was the one to lower the scale of prices. It has been generally conceded in seasons past by those connected with the hall that one dollar for the best seats was more than the average Plainfielder would pay, and in many cases if they couldn't have the best they stayed away entirely. This disadvantage which former managers have labored under has been obvisted as much as possible by Messrs. Ball and Willey, who have made the best seats seventy-five cents and the gallery seats twenty-five cents.

The class of attractions which have been booked for the season is such as will appeal to the local theatregoer. The seats will be sold at the box office, regular hours for the purchase being maintained.

A TRAMP RAID.

Hobos Caught in Westfield Go to the County Jail.

A tramp raid Thursday night in the Ripley barn, near Westfield, led by Captain C. M. Hawkins, resulted in the capture of three men. As the men were being marched along the road in front of the Ripley homestead one of them named Murphy made a dash for liberty. Captain Hawkins gave chase and ordered the man to halt, to which he paid no heed. Then the Captain fired his revolver in the air, but Murphy only ran faster. The Captain did not fire again, but made a spurt and caught his man. They grappled and fell, with the Captain on top. Just as help reached him, Murphy struck the officer a powerful blow in the pit of the stomach that nearly caused him to collapse, but he held on until Murphy was safely ironed. Yesterday morning Murphy was sentenced by Judge Collins, of Westfield, to three months in the county jail. The other two men, owing to their good behavior during the fight with Murphy, were allowed to go after being cautioned not to be caught in the township again.

To Attend the Reunion.

The eighteenth annual reunion of the Fourteenth New Jersey Volunteers will be held at Jamesburg, this State, on Thursday, September 10th. Among the members who will attend are the following from this city: Edward P. Thorn, William N. Pangborn, A. C. Townley, C. D. Pope, Wm. B. Ayers and Abram King. These persons went from here to Elizabeth and joined Captain Harris' command at the breaking out of the war.

First Union County Bryan Club.

The first Bryan and Sewall Club organized in this county was formed in Elizabeth Thursday night. Just thirty persons signed the membership roll. Ex-Assemblyman Timothy M. Kelly was elected president; William J. Lansley and George Miller, vice-presidents; Peter Woolsey, secretary, and Oliver Conlin, treasurer; Joseph Mannifield, sergeant-at-arms.

Stopped on the Highway.

A middle-aged man who claimed to work for a Mr. Martin between Scotch Plains and Westfield, was stopped by a highwayman on East Front street, near Cole's hill, late Saturday night. The man had been to this city making some purchases, including a pair of boots which he carried in his hands. When the highwayman approached him and first asked for money and then for tobacco, it seemed to the Scotch Plains man that he was about to be attacked, so he dropped his parcels, and with his new cow-hide boots in hand made the highwayman beat a hasty retreat. The latter is described as a man of middle-age, with full beard and poorly dressed.

Another Proposed Trolley.

A trolley line is proposed between Elizabeth and Rahway. The Union and Middlesex Traction company, which lately completed a road to Boynton Beach, wants a connecting line to Elizabeth.

RATHER YOUNG THIEVES.

SONS OF RESPECTABLE PEOPLE LOOT THE BOYS' CLUB ROOMS.

Boldly Stole Two Wheelbarrow Loads of Tools and Books and They Also Divided the Booty Between Them.

Two lads, scarcely in their teens, have ended their short career, for the present, in the lockup. Their grand coup was to carry away a wheelbarrow load of tools and books from the new club house of the Boys' Club on Sycamore street and then take their plunder home to divide. They were seen, however, in the act and last week Chief Grant captured both the young offenders and locked them in jail.

One of the lads lived on East Third street and the other on New street, but, for the sake of their families, their names will be withheld for the present. They have both been members of the Boys' Club and, during the long vacation, they have had different amusements. Since the Boys' Club changed its headquarters to the old Plainfield Bicycle Club house the boys have been hanging around there watching the unpacking and arranging of the tools, apparatus and books.

Of course, everything was in general confusion and the lads took advantage of it. Sixty-six books, belonging to the club's library, whose total value amounted to between $50 and $60, were piled in a wheelbarrow and then a general supply of tools, hammers, saws, malletts, etc., usually two of each kind, was added to the load. The tools were worth about as much as the books.

This miscellaneous load was openly wheeled to the East Third street home of one of the lads and there the spoils divided. The parents were told that the books and tools had been given to them.

Complaint was made to Chief Grant by those in charge at the Boy's Club and he investigated. On inquiry he learned from the boys around there and the neighbors who the thieves were and he soon arrested them and recovered the books and tools from their parents.

The boys were brought before Justice Newcorn Friday morning and were held to await the action of the Grand Jury. They will probably be sent to a reform school.

ATTACKED BY DOGS.

Jacob Humes Has an Exciting Encounter on Cole's Hill.

Jacob Humes, of Scotch Plains, was walking home from Plainfield last Thursday evening about 7 o'clock when he met two very unwelcome visitors that made things lively for him for a few moments. His little encounter happened on Cole's hill. He was walking along the road when the two large dogs, belonging to Thomas Habell, sprang at him.

He defended himself as best he could with his arms, but one of the animals set its teeth in his arm before he could escape. His coat was badly torn.

Mr. Habell was very sorry when he heard of the attack and promptly settled with Mr. Humes.

Co-Operative Association Meeting.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Co-operative Association was held in the new quarters, corner of Central avenue and Second street, last week when new committees were appointed. The advisory committee was made up of Robert Gow, James Bell and James Chamberlin. Messrs. J. S. Forster, Charles Belknap and H. C. Nomer were placed on the finance committee, and the committee on discounts is made up of Messrs. W. G. Gray, Henry VanMiddlesworth and Arthur Hallard. The society is in a good condition, financially and otherwise, and is destined to do much good in this vicinity, especially among the laboring classes.

Gone Back for a Nap.

Warrenville has gone back for another nap. The excitement over the wonderful octa-pig case of Rents vs Baldwin, on contract, which was to have been tried this morning before Justice Austin, has died down as the case has been adjourned three weeks. Assemblyman W. B. Codington, of this city, was counsel for the plaintiff while Baldwin was represented by City Judge George W. DeMeza, of this city.

Left Their Own Mother.

Tax Collector H. N. Spencer, of the borough, has a curiosity in the shape of a black cat, and coal-black at that, which has two kittens of the gray and mongrel breed. By mutual consent the kittens have left their own mother and are now being nurtured by a neighbor's cat. Both cat and kittens are congenial toward one another. They are quite a sight as seen posing in Mr. Spencer's store.

Death of Alfred Woolfe.

Alfred Woolfe, aged twenty-four years, son of Rev. Mr. Woolfe, who is greatly interested in the Westfield Fresh Air Camp for mothers and children, known as Camp Woolfe, died at the residence of his parents on Grove street Thursday morning. The funeral services will be held this afternoon.

SUMMERING INLAND.

Salt-Water Girl Might Learn from Her Fresh-Water Sister.

Through a Log Jam in a Canoe—The Girl Who Is "Game"—Help Poke the Logs Her Way—Crossing the "Boom."

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Those people who spend all their summers at the seashore and never taste the joys to be had at inland resorts miss a great deal of pleasure which they might be glad to partake of if they only knew what possibilities for joy it exist in the vicinity of the little mountain streams that flow down from the wilderness of the Adirondack forests.

These little streams have a commercial value that compares very favorably with that of many more pretentious waterways. Every year thousands of logs are floated down to their respective mills to be sawed into the boards that make millions for the lumbermen.

But it is not with the millions nor the lumbermen that the pleasure seekers are concerned. The logs themselves form a very exciting and sometimes very annoying feature in their enjoyment. To be sure, there is a law which requires lumber companies to leave a waterway for pleasure boats, but such corporations are no more considerate than others, and they have small scruples about evading the law if they can.

So it often happens that when a gay young college man from one of the numerous colleges in that vicinity goes out for a quiet boating trip with his favorite summer girl he is suddenly confronted with a jam of floating logs that fill up the entire stream, or are scattered about in such promiscuous fashion that he has to perform a polka mazurka with his boat in order to get through. If the logs are very closely jammed together, the youth must land his girl and drag his boat until he finds clear water again. But if he sees a chance to poke his way between the logs, he does so, even at the risk of tipping his boat over in the effort, a risk which is always imminent, but which only lends spice to the adventure.

A canoe is better than a rowboat for the purpose of dodging logs, because, being narrower, it goes through smaller spaces; also because it has one long double paddle instead of a pair of oars that are always striking obstructions and getting in the way. There are many other advantages about a canoe, not the least of which is its picturesque quality. Nothing else appeals so strongly to the susceptibilities of the summer girl as the picture of a handsome college youth perched gracefully upon the deck of the stern of his canoe with the long, double paddle in his firm grasp. He is attired, say, in a pale blue negligee shirt and dark blue trousers, with a cap that sits on the back of his head and rumples his hair into a bang over his forehead.

The girl sits in a good position to view his fascinating figure. She leans back comfortably against the cushions that are supported by a sort of chair back that is chained to the sides of the canoe and rest on the bottom. One can almost recline in a chair of this kind, and nothing can exceed the comfort of it.

Then think of the possibilities of varied enjoyment! With a well-filled lunch basket and a warm wrap to fend off the cool night breezes, one can go up in the afternoon and float down by moonlight.

Your party starts about four o'clock and you have just settled yourself comfortably among the cushions when you begin to bump against loose logs that are scattered through the stream. The logs get more and more crowded, and the first thing you know your end of the boat is tilted up on a submerged tree trunk. Then, if you are "game," and not afraid of soiling your hands, you go to work and help push off; after which you will get a good deal of fun by reaching out as you come up to a big log and poking it out of the way. One can push the canoe through a tangle of logs much easier with the hands than with the paddle.

The greatest bugbear to the canoeist is the "boom," which is a line of logs chained together along the middle of the river and fastened to stone piers stationed at intervals of 30 or 40 rods. This is intended to pen the logs in on one side of the stream, but sometimes they get so thick on the canoeist's side that he is compelled to go over the boom to the log side, where perhaps it is entirely clear.

Sometimes the youth gets out on the boom and shoves the canoe on, girl and all; and sometimes a kind-hearted logdriver, who knows how to walk the logs, comes to your assistance and shoves you both over. More often you land at one of the stone piers and cling to the log frame, in which the loose stones that form the pier, are encased, while your hero of the paddle pulls the canoe across.

After you and his other members of your "fleet" have passed all the logs, you paddle on to a cool and shady spot where you land and eat your lunch, discoursing upon the scenery and other things until the sky begins to grow dusky, whereupon you start floating homeward, blissfully oblivious to the fact that those logs which were so easily poked aside on the way up have been huddling themselves into a raft which is impassable to boats and everything else except an experienced log walker.

But this oblivion cannot last long, for the youths and maidens are very soon made aware that the only way to get home is to land on the bank and drag the canoe past the jam. Here again, if you are the right sort of a girl, with a little muscle in your arms, you will take hold and help in the arduous task of moving a water vehicle on dry land. Perhaps you have two or three times, perhaps only once, but if you do your part in the emergency, you will find yourself several degrees better off for the exercise and several degrees higher in the estimation of your cancelist.

PREFER COUNTRY LIFE.

Iowa People Have Little Disposition to Herd in Great Cities.

The Hawkeye state of Iowa, admitted to the union in 1846, and having a population in excess of 2,000,000, is exceptional among western states in the absence of large cities within its borders. With the Mississippi flowing on one side of it and the Missouri on the other, with a railroad mileage of 8,500, and with few natural obstructions, it has long been a cause of wonder that in the 50 years which have passed since its admission Iowa has apparently not been able to set up on its own account a single first-class city—that is, a city having in excess of 50,000 population, though in New York state the test of a city of the first class is five times as great, or 250,000.

It was not until the year 1890 that the town of Des Moines, the capital of Iowa, reached a population of 50,000. By the census of 1870 (Davenport was then the largest city in Iowa) the population of Des Moines was 12,000 and Burlington was ahead of it with 14,000, Dubuque with 18,000, and Davenport had 20,000. Des Moines is one of the oldest cities in the west, having been first settled in 1850, and having a new state capitol building costing under the original contracts $1,500,000, and begun in 1869. The slow growth of Des Moines is typical of the growth of other towns in Iowa which seem to withstand the great increase of business in that state. In 1890 a federal census of the country was taken, and it showed only one city in Iowa having more than 50,000 population. In 1895 the state census of Iowa was taken, and so far from showing the same percentage of increase as marked the cities of neighboring states, there were several cities of Iowa which actually fell backward—an unusual thing in American municipalities, and especially in the great and growing west. Thus Sioux City, which had a population of 37,090 in 1890, had only 37,806 in 1895.

Council Bluffs, directly opposite Omaha and a city which would naturally partake of the growth of that thriving Nebraska town, fell off in five years from 21,000 to 20,000 in population. Clinton, on the line of Creston, with large interests as a railway repair terminus, fell off in five years from 7,200 to 6,600 population. Nor were these instances isolated, for the general tendency of the people of Iowa is to remain in the small towns or country districts and keep away from the large cities. In other parts of the west a city which once acquires importance enough to be prominent gains thereafter in steady ratio, but it appears to be the hostility of the Iowa people to city residence that after a town has become populous it is threatened with the danger of going backward again. This peculiarity cannot be with accuracy ascribed to either the lack of railroads, for Iowa has these in abundance, or the means of water connection, for these are many, or the conditions of crops, which of late years have been better in Iowa than in any other state—than in other states in the same section. In Minnesota, for instance, the population of Minneapolis has increased 28,000 in the last five years, of St. Paul 7,000, of Duluth from 33,000 in 1890 to 60,000 in 1895, and of St. Cloud from 7,600 to 16,000. But Iowa adheres tenaciously to her cross roads and village settlements, and seems to give a negative answer to the familiar query of literary sociology: "Is city life to be preferred to life in the country?"—N. What the Summer Girl Should Wear—Fashions for the Coming Fall—Two Types of Gowns—New Styles in Sleeves.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

The popularity of flowers is on the wane. As the summer sun dries the blossoms that grow in the sands of the south, so the blossoms of our hats seem to have shriveled up, for it is only too true that those which look so well in the cool days of spring quickly fade and droop under the summer heat.

Many of the flowers remain, however, and a favorite hat for the summer girl is a large white legborn, massed with

TWO TYPES OF GOWNS.

American Beauty roses and pink ribbon.

A hat whose length and width seem to be reversed is a broad-brimmed legborn, turned up sharply in the back, like a Napoleonic hat. The top is swathed with green tulle, and over each side hang vivid green paradise plumes.

Feathers and silk trimmings of all kinds will be fashionable. One hat is completely trimmed with cream white taffeta silk, accordeon plaited and tied in a huge bow at the center of the crown.

A charming design from London has a broad brim, turning up slightly at each side. A series of ribbon loops about the crown give the broad effect so essential to an up-to-date hat, while a stiff aigrette and ostrich plumes give it height.

With all the fluffs and furbelows of the present season, the tailor-made girl misses her native growing. It is in the pique costumes, however, that she finds consolation. They are now trimmed with military braid and buttons, and have all the severity affected by that type of girl.

A pique gown having some of the softness of the season is made with large velvet sleeves, green in color. It also has a loose velvet belt and a front of soft green chiffon.

The skirt is full and adorned with frogs, while the bodice shows a similar decoration. A large white hat, with dred. By none other could the new sleeves be worn, for how could a woman so much as put on her hat with her hand inclosed in a case of silk, softly lined with lace and tied with ribbon. Yet, with the fall, the new sleeve will be popular. It will be puffed above the elbow, skintight below, and bulging out at the wrist to make room for the hand and a ball of lace.

A jacket which combines the Louis and Empire modes is of white silk, striped broadly with heliotrope. It opens in front with narrow revers, and reveals a soft front of green crepe de chine. The heliotrope velvet belt is gathered softly about the waist, but is hardly so broad as that which we may expect.

And the sleeves! Nothing can describe them but the word "smart." At the very top a large puff, made as short as possible; a few inches of tight-fitting sleeve and a smaller puff of the white silk just above the elbow; then discarding altogether the jacketed material, a tiny puff of white silk, dotted with maidenhair fern, a tight-fitting lower sleeve, and a hand bell overflowing with lace until my lady might safely wear nothing but finger gloves, finishes this wonderfully designed arm covering.

THE LATEST.

GOWN OF TO-DAY.

green plumes, gives an exceedingly smart effect.

As an offset to this gown is one of lainty organdie, made with three deep tucks about the bottom of the skirt. These tucks, by the way, are the very latest thing. Hand in hand with them are triple cordings, which adorn skirts about four inches up, the are put in in a waving line.

To return to our muttons: This organdie gown has a plain yoke of yellow silk mull, with two flounces of the same on each shoulder, giving an extra fullness to the sleeve. A fall of lace is below, and partly conceals the plaited blouse.

Velvet is introduced in belt, sleeves and stock, for without that material about it would the costume be incomplete (at least so say our English cousins); for these gowns are now being worn by two of London's brightest gems.

It is the old story over again. Not a bastite, but the edict has fallen. No more does the empire succeed the reign of the Louis. No more is the hour glass waist fashionable. Jackets will be seen less and less, and finally disappear. Skirts now have lace flounces, bodices round waist, with tight-fitting sleeves, and short-waisted effects will prevail.

Of course, it will take some time to effect so radical a change, but surely are long waists going out.

Narrow belts are not now the latest. Into their domain has crept the loose velvet Empire belt, and before autumn is fairly here they will extend from armpit to waistline. Not below that, however, for under no circumstances will the long waists be countenanced.

But there is not much hint of this in the gowns worn at present. Here is a gown of to-day, whose vagaries might well be copied by the summer girl for her campaign.

A skirt of ample proportions; a sheer material, pale green in color. Beneath the shimmer of golden silk, and below a flounce of lace, creamy and soft, two tabs of the material—one each side the back—are edged with lace and fall stiffly to the flounce below.

DAINTY TABLE APPOINTMENTS.

How to Take Care of China and Silver Properly.

Ambitious young housewives often "set up housekeeping" with the idea that the delicate china and dainty appointments for the dining-table are quite a matter of course and do not require any special care. Perhaps in their mother's home the china and silverware always appeared in the same immaculate condition without any apparent exertion on the part of the housekeeper, and it is taken for granted that the same state of affairs will exist in the new home. But how soon are the eyes opened, especially if the beautiful wedding gifts and the treasured belongings that have accumulated during the interesting shopping tours are intrusted to the servant. Aside from the actual destruction of many treasured dishes, the "newness" of the remaining articles will be sadly ephemeral. But if the housewife early acquires the habit of overseeing the care of the fine table appointments their beauty may be made permanent to a great extent.

If there is a sideboard in the dining-room it will supply the necessary compartments for napery and cutlery, otherwise it is convenient to have a set of drawers arranged beneath or at one side of a shelf in the china closet. These may be easily hung by means of cleats and pegs. All plates of a certain kind should be piled together, or those who still hold the opinions of our mothers, that they should not be stacked, should have slats arranged that they may stand on their edges. The cups and saucers may be grouped in any way you may fancy for convenience and a pretty effect. It will be convenient to have a shelf arranged in steps for glasses. This not only produces a good effect, but renders easy the selection of a required size or style, does not disturb the others and there is less likelihood of breakage.

Some people think that in order to preserve handsome china without being nicked it is necessary to use "keelers" in which to wash it, but unless great care is exercised these soon become foul, and with careful handling two dishpans do quite as well. First fill the pan with hot but not boiling water, in which a little soap has been dissolved. Wash the glasses in this and rinse them in the other pan, which contains clean hot water. Then lay them on a drainer of perforated tin that fits into a pan to catch the water. Wipe them quickly with a cloth that is not linty. It is scarcely necessary to add here that every housekeeper is supposed to have a convenient receptacle for dish towels, glass napkins, polishing powder, etc. As soon as the glasses are wiped, wash and dry the silver, polishing whatever should require it. While attending to the silver the cups, saucers and dessert dishes may be soaking in the water, and as they are taken out and rinsed the plates and vegetable dishes should be washed and rinsed, leaving the meat platters and all greasy dishes until the last. All grease and particles of food should be carefully scraped from the dishes before putting them in the dishpan. A wooden scraper should be used for this, as fine decorations are often scratched and injured even on the china that has been perfectly "fired." Do not pile many dishes in the pan at once, as there is danger of chipping the edges. If the knives and forks have pearl or bone handles, only the blades should be wet. The silver should be polished with a damp cloth or silver brush, and the articles polished with chamois skin. If there is any engraving or repousse work on the silver a soft dry brush should be used to remove all the white dust, leaving the ornamental work warm and shining and free from the objectionable accumulation of dirt and powder.—Philadelphia Times.

HE DIED SUDDENLY.

Cannot Be Said That Anybody Was Very Much Surprised.

A Washington man who has recently returned from a six-months' visit in the great and growing state of Texas was talking to a reporter the other evening over a bottle of Potomac water. The writer was chewing on a mouthful of it with more or less satisfaction when the other man was reminded of a story.

"During my stay in Texas," he said, "my business called me off to the northwest, where original customs prevail yet to a great extent. One land case in which I was interested depended largely on its successful handling in finding a certain man from Massachusetts, who had come out there a dozen years before, and I was asking a justice of the peace about him.

"'Ain't never been a man out here by the name of Jinkins from Massachusetts that I've knowed,' he said.

"'Haven't you ever had any people from that state?' I inquired.

"'Thar wuz one about seven years ago.'

"'What was his name?'

"'Dunno. We jist call him Bean shooter Bill fer short.'

"'What became of him?'

"'He died sudden.'

"'Ah, that's bad. Death unexpectedly is such a shock to a community.'

"'Well, yes, I reckon it is,' he admitted, with slowness and precision; 'but, you see, Beanshooter's wunn't exactly unexpected.'

"'No?' I exclaimed in surprise. 'I thought you said he died suddenly.'

"'I did,' he hesitated; 'but, you see, it wuzn't exactly unexpectedly. He had stolen a hoss.'"—Washington Star.

EDISON'S NEW LIGHT.

Something About the Developments of Recent Weeks.

By the Use of Fluorescent Substances the Wizard Has Produced a Lamp That Gives Out Little Heat But Brilliant Light.

Edison's new white light, which he has called the fluorescent lamp, is about ready for the market. In form it is similar to the incandescent lamp now in use, but in principle it is vastly different. There is a glass globe from which a part of the air inside has been extracted, but there is no absolute vacuum. Unlike the electric lamp, the whole globe glows with a pure white light of marvelous illuminating power.

This powerful light comes from a metallic crystal known as "tungstate," which is a metal as heavy as gold. In Germany it is known under the name of "tungsteic." The illuminating property, says the St. Louis Republic, is due to a peculiar attribute of the tungstate crystal itself.

The fact that these crystals glow when slightly rubbed was known to the wizard of Menlo Park, and he set to work to use that property in the interest of science. The crystals are fused into a glass globe by heating the glass until it is soft. It then absorbs the tungstate crystals and holds them firmly when it cools.

Mr. Edison says that he could get the best results when using the crystals on the sides of the globe. Two wires enter the globe at one end, but do not meet. By means of an induction current generated in a faradic battery the molecules of the wires are thrown into motion and the impulse thus given travels along the wires until it reaches the ends inserted into the globe. This molecular impulse is communicated to the molecules of air in the globe. In turn the air molecules are driven with almost inconceivable rapidity against the crystals of tungstate welded into the inner walls of the glass. The impact causes the crystals to glow. The glow caused by a single blow of these air molecules is, of course, very slight, but multiplied thousands of times and the blows repeated continuously at an enormously rapid rate, they produce the new white light.

Every wire contains a latent electrical force. This line of force is distributed in every direction, but when an electrical impulse is imparted to the wire, although it may not develop into a current of electricity, the lines of force are all turned in one direction. They no longer run in all directions, but are parallel to the long axis of the wire. The wire is then ready to receive a current.

One molecule communicates its movements to another until the initial impulse given by the induced current travels along the entire length of the wire, and is caught up by the air molecules in the globe. It is the same as if a row of billiard balls are placed in a row. A blow is struck at one end of the row and all the balls will remain unmoved except the ball at the extreme other end. The ball will be driven away at a considerable rate of speed. The force of the blow was received by the first ball, communicated to the next, and so on, until it shot the last ball away from the row. This is the process that takes place in the globe and produces the light.

In explaining this process Edison declared that he was himself surprised when he found that the intense white light given off by the tungstate was not accompanied by a corresponding degree of heat. The incandescent lamp transforms 95 per cent. of the electrical force into heat, and only five per cent. is turned into light. This is a tremendous loss from a commercial point of view. The new lamp is absolutely free from heat. That was ascertained beyond peradventure with the most delicate instruments. This establishes the fact that nearly the whole force used in the new lamp is employed in producing light. Edison does not explain the why and wherefore; he simply accepts it as a fact.

The high amount of electricity required in the incandescent lamp to overcome the tremendous loss of electrical energy, and which is turned into heat, is not needed here. This means an astonishing economy in lighting and a consequent commercial gain. The new lamp will last as long as the globe lasts. It does not have to be refilled with expensive films, and it furnishes the best light that has yet been produced.

A two-candle new lamp gives out to the eye almost twice the illuminating effect that a two-candle incandescent lamp does. This is explained on the ground that the light is more pleasing to the eye than the incandescent lamp. It is a pure white light, the whitest light known. The globe looks like ground glass and is very clear. The curvature of the globe serves to intensify the light by deflecting the flying molecules of air from one crystal to another until the initial force is exhausted.

There are fluorescent substances even better than tungstate, but Edison is not yet prepared to make them known. If his experiments are as successful with these as they have been with tungstate there is no limits to the intensity and beauty of the light.

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local Committees, to select delegates to a State Convention, to be held at Taylor Opera House in the city of Trenton, on at 12 o'clock m., for the purpose of selecting presidential electors. The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the gubernatorial election of 1895 and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward, township and voting precinct shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9TH, 1896,

JAMES SMITH, Jr.,
Chairman State Democratic Committee.
WILLARD C. FISK, Secretary.

This has been a season of weather extremes.

Mr. Platt still rules the Republican roost in New York.

Mr. Bryan is still human. Yesterday he caught a fish and took a tumble off a bicycle.

Oliver Kelly is said to be slated for the Democratic nomination of Sheriff in Middlesex county.

Li Hung Chang must be somewhat of a Beau Brummel. He carries some 300 and odd pieces of baggage.

The Republican primaries will be held throughout Somerset county tomorrow night. Delegates to the State convention will be elected.

The call for the Democratic State convention has been issued. The date is Wednesday, September 9th, and the place Taylor's Opera House in Trenton.

The astounding assertion is made that there is more gold in the sacred vessels, medals, chans, etc., preserved at the vatican than in the circulation of the whole of Europe.

The contest between George Strong and ex-County Clerk Conger for the seat in the State Committee is likely to be settled by compromise, and the place given to Robert Carson, Republican leader in New Brunswick.

The Republican State Convention will be held at Trenton next Thursday. The indications are that it will be a large convention, and that Governor Griggs will open the campaign in the State by delivering a speech for the National candidates.

The consolidation of the Bell Telephone Company and Western Union Telegraph Company would make one of the most powerful combines in the country, before which small competition would stand still less of a chance for existence than they do now, and even now the conditions are not of a rosy hue for the small fry.

An appeal has been made by the Department of Agriculture at Washington for the observance of a "Bird day" in the schools throughout the country, the object sought being to set apart a day once a year, or to combine it with "Arbor Day," for instruction in the value of our native birds, and for discussing means of protecting such as are of value from wanton destruction.

According to the New York Tribune the Hon. James E. Martine declines to be a candidate for Senator in Union county. Mr. Martine has certainly been spoken of as the probable nominee of his party for this office, but it is understood that he prefers to be a candidate for Congress against Mr. Fowler. Four years ago Mr. Martine was entitled to the Congressional nomination at the hands of his party. He was defeated in the nominating convention, and Hon. John T. Dunn was nominated. Mr. Martine hesitated but a little at the injustice done him, then rolled up his sleeves and helped to elect his opponent. The next year his party threw him the Senatorial nomination when it was known he could not win, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees being his opponent, but he accepted the candidacy and worked hard but unsuccessfully. Now they are willing to nominate him again for Senator, because they think Mr. Voorhees will again run; but Mr. Martine is said to want a chance to become a member of Congress. He is entitled to that nomination, and we would like to see him nominated. He is a genial gentleman and a good speaker. He has come out so finely for free silver that a Congressional contest in this district between him and Mr. Fowler would show just what numerical strength there is in the fallacy. We do not think Mr. Martine would be elected, but he would make as good a fight as possible and would conduct a vigorous but courteous campaign.—Elizabeth Journal.

It is probable that the National Convention of Republican clubs, which convenes in St. Louis tomorrow, will support Col. E. A. McAlpin, of New York, for president of the organization.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees has declared that he will not be a candidate for re-election under any circumstances. This practically leaves the Republican honor to Sheriff George Kyte. Frederick C. Marsh will doubtless receive the Democratic nomination.

The Daily Press can authoritatively state that James E. Martine is not a candidate for any office in the gift of the people at the approaching election. His activity in the present campaign is not prompted by any desire for political recognition; it is a matter of advocating principles which he believes to be right.

For the first time in several years a North Plainfield Republican primary was not presided over by ex-Mayor Charles Place last Saturday night. For several years his executive ability in presiding over a body of voters has been recognized by the Borough G. O. P., but his absence from town last Saturday made it impossible for him to receive the honor.

The State Committee of the Sound Money Democrats met in executive session at Taylor's Hotel Saturday to discuss plans for the State Convention, to be held at Trenton on Wednesday next. It was decided to adopt the sound money platform adopted by the Democrats in May last. It was announced that ex-Secretary of the Treasury Fairchild would address the convention.

A section of the election law provides that no compensation shall be paid to any election agent or challenger, but requires Board of Freeholders to fix and pay a reasonable compensation for the services of County Boards of Election, and provides the secretary of the Board may receive one-third more compensation than the amount paid the other members of the Board.

There are about 300 newspapers published in New Jersey, of which 76 are Republican, 70 are Democratic and 46 nominally independent. There are 24 German newspapers, 4 Italian newspapers and 1 newspaper printed in Hollandese. Two papers are published by colored men. This is an average of one newspaper in every 1119 males of all ages in New Jersey, or to every 1,155 of the legal voters of the State that voted in the last Presidential election.

The new election law provides that a person who solicits from a candidate for elective office any money or other property, or who seeks to induce a candidate to purchase a ticket, card or other evidence of admission to any hall, fair, picnic or entertainment, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months, or both. However, the act does not apply to a request for a contribution by an authorized representative of a political party, organization or association of which such candidate is a member or by which he is nominated.

Teachers' salaries in New Jersey show some curious variations. The average for male teachers per month is $82.59 and for female teachers $47.04. Among the counties Essex pays the highest average to male teachers, namely $160.64 per month, and Sussex the lowest, $46.75. The highest average to female teachers is $61.65 in Essex, and the lowest $34.92, in Salem. Hudson comes next to Essex in salaries of male teachers, namely $129.54, and Union third with $117.10. Union pays female teachers an average of $49.33, and Hudson an average of $46.71. All other counties are below the hundredth figure in male salaries and below fifty in female salaries.—Newark Advertiser.

John J. Matthews was yesterday appointed Assistant Postmaster at Elizabeth for four years. Mr. Matthews is one of the most successful politicians, so far as getting office is concerned, that Union County has turned out. Although he will not be thirty-four until September 17 he has held an office ever since he could vote. He was elected School Commissioner in Elizabeth when barely twenty-one, served two terms afterwards as Secretary of the Board of Education, two terms in the Assembly, two as Clerk of the House, two as Engrossing Clerk of the Senate, and then the office of State Superintendent of the School Census was created for him, and he held it until a Republican Legislature abolished the office.

STILL TALK OF MARTINE.

Notwithstanding the Orator's Declaration the Sentiment is in His Favor.

Notwithstanding that James E. Martine has declared that he is not a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in this district, the talk in his favor still continues, as will be seen from the following taken from the Newark News yesterday:

It is announced in political circles by the friends of James E. Martine that the "Farmer Orator" of Plainfield is sure of the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eighth District. They claim he will have the delegates from Rahway, Plainfield and all the townships of Union, together with Orange, South Orange, and most of the townships of Essex.

Elizabeth, it is believed, will elect a majority of Martine delegates, but Bayonne is as yet an unknown quantity. It is thought that city will have a candidate of its own, perhaps Judge Thomas F. Noonan.

Politicians here declare that the talk of renominating ex-Congressman Dunn is all nonsense, and that the latter at present is out of politics. Mr. Dunn is unpopular with the Democrats of Plainfield and several of the Union County townships, and they would fight him should he seek a Congressional nomination.

Thomas F. Lane, of Summit, is spoken of as a prospective Senatorial candidate, as it is hinted ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh has no desire this year to be an aspirant for the place.

So far as Sheriff is concerned, the Democrats are all at sea and likely to remain so for some weeks to come.

A Big Stone Contract.

Messrs. A. I. and N. B. Smalley, of the borough, will have completed in a day or two their contract for furnishing 900 tons of crushed stone for the macadamizing of West Eighth street, between Plainfield and Grant avenues. AN AWFUL NIGHT OF IT

LOUIS MILLER CLAIMS TO HAVE FALLEN IN WITH A BAD LOT.

After Becoming Inebriated He Claims His Companions Stole His Valuables and Then Dumped Him Out into the Road.

It is not a usual sight to see a man, minus one shoe and with his clothes considerably rumpled, chasing a hack down East Front street, but that was what happened Saturday evening, and the pursuer did not seem afraid to use his voice. Patrolman Vanderweg was on duty on East Front street, near Richmond, late Saturday evening, when he heard the sound of horse's hoofs and the rattle of a carriage. They were coming at a rather rapid pace, while a voice sounded in the rear yelling "Stop!" "Murder!" and similar remarks. The officer stopped the hack and the man that was following it.

There were three men in the hack besides the driver and they all appeared quiet. The man who had disturbed the evening quiet with his yells was evidently a German, considerably worse after an encounter with some fiery liquid. One shoe was off, his clothes were torn and disarranged, while sundry blotches of mud suggested a too close contact with the road. He was greatly excited and tried to tell the officer that somebody had robbed him and threw him out of a hack.

It was too evident that the strong drink had gone to his head, so Patrolman Vanderweg marched him off to the lockup after ordering the men in the hack to appear this morning as witnesses in the case.

When the prisoner recovered from his temporary debility, he told the police authorities that his name was Louis Miller and that he lived on Rahway road, opposite the old Benton place. He is employed in Rheaume's planing mill.

His story was that Saturday evening he hired William Kennedy's hack and started out to spend a pleasant evening according to his own ideas. He was first driven to the Manhattan Hotel in the borough and tried to have a good time there. After getting outside of several glasses of a fermented fluid he returned to his hack and, so he states, Kennedy returned with three men who unceremoniously took possession of the remaining space in the hack. Then away went the hack up to East Front street and along that thoroughfare to the little village of Scotch Plains.

They all went into Emery's Hotel and evidently partook of more than was good for them as they all came up rather unsteadily. Into the hack they all climbed with difficulty and then the hack started towards Plainfield.

All went pleasantly for a time when poor Miller was suddenly pounced upon by the other men. They went through his pockets, removing watch, about $8 in cash, several insurance papers and Miller's honorable discharge from the navy. On several occasions Miller has carried considerable sums of money in his left shoe and the men evidently knew this for, according to Miller, they removed it. After thoroughly searching him they quietly opened the door of the hack and ejected Miller without further delay.

The rather damp and muddy place on which Miller landed effectively aroused him and he set out in pursuit of the hack, shouting lustily. Then Patrolman Vanderweg appeared on the scene and the rest has been told.

The three men who joined Miller without his invitation, consisted of Thomas Stephenson, Charles Nelson and Warner Pierson. All except Pierson appeared before City Judge DeMott Monday morning, pleading guilty to the charge of being drunk, owning up to his part in the affair, and made a counter charge against the witnesses. They, in turn, declared that they had done nothing and pleaded not guilty. Miller, they said, was drunk, removed his own shoes and fell out of the hack. His story was, according to them, the creation of a disordered brain. Miller was very sure of the contrary, how ever, and retained Lawyer Charles J. McMahon to fight the matter to an end. The men were held in $50 each to appear for trial Saturday morning.

DUNELLEN.

Miss Fern, of Brooklyn, is visiting Miss Carrie Hyle for a few days.

Albert Viles, of Front street, is spending a few days with friends at Atlantic City.

The Gun Club had a shoot Monday afternoon on their grounds, the score being 39 out of 45.

John Herbert, of Jersey City, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert, of Dunellen avenue.

Miss Edna Cordell, of High street, who has been visiting Miss Ethel Smith, of Bloomsbury, has returned home.

Miss Lillian Cockran of Jersey City, and Mrs. Hull, of Sing Sing, are the guests of Mrs. Slape and family, of Front street.

Mrs. Howard Fleming's mother and children, of Park avenue, returned to day from Flemington where they spent the summer.

SCOTCH PLAINS SIFTINGS.

A Pole Raising at the Public School an Event of Saturday.

Wm. Stelle, of Jersey City, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lee.

The Hon. George Kyte has been or will be asked to appoint deputy marshals for Fanwood.

The Young Stars go to Plainfield to play ball with the Fourth ward team on the Y. M. C. A. grounds, Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock sharp.

The main thoroughfare from Fanwood to Scotch Plains, it is understood, cost some $1,900. But it is a lasting improvement and one appreciated by advocates of good roads.

The summer guests about Flanders' boarding house held an informal dance Saturday afternoon. The weather was warm, but the dancing continued until the dinner bell rang out.

Quoit pitching is quite a favorite pastime for some of the guests at Billy Lee's hotel, and there is a movement on foot to have a series of games there for prizes within a week or two, if it can be arranged.

The rain on Saturday caused a postponement of the ball game between the Somersets of Plainfield and the Scotch Plains team. Next Saturday is the time now set for the Somersets to be wiped from the face of the diamond. So some of the local baseball cranks here think.

At Emory's there is a full-grown parrot which can do almost everything but wait upon the table. The bird can whistle far superior to an ordinary human being; it can say "Hello, Bill" to passing bicyclists, and "Ah, there," to ladies unattended by their husbands or best fellow. The bird is the source of much amusement for the guests and others about the hotel.

"Bob" Walpole and George Lyons inadvertently heard that there were a few more sunfish and bass in the Passaic river, so they went over for them early yesterday morning. But the fish evidently heard of their coming, so they stayed at home all day, and "Bob" and George returned home crestfallen and with the usual fisherman's luck. Then again it was Sunday, and the fish that they didn't get may have taken a day off on a tour through Newark Bay and the Kill Von Kull.

Capt. Tuso, of Terrill road, has presented a 60-foot flag-pole to the public school and on Saturday afternoon the pole was erected on the lawn directly in front of the school building. Members of the board of education and others of the village turned out to see George Adair and Randolph Drake put up the stately and beautiful pole, and there were a few appropriate remarks by the several members of the Board. The Stars and Stripes will hereafter float from the flag-staff, except in stormy weather.

Water is getting low at Scotch Plains. Within thirty minutes' time yesterday afternoon four persons, all residents of the place, went to the town pump and carried away a vessel of water. And with a single exception they were all women. It has been suggested that a tap be placed in the Feltville dam and the inhabitants supplied by means of hose. But this would hardly do, for the hose might burst some night and Plainfield would need another pyrotechnical display to let people know that a portion of the Feltville dam had given way.

DONS THE VICTORIOUS CAP.

Mountain Park Inn Has Enjoyed a Fairly Prosperous Season.

As the month of August draws to its close, the Mountain Park Inn does the victorious cap and looks out into a very promising future. There are a goodly number of guests at the Inn at the present time, and the demand for accommodations is continually increasing. The prospects for the months of September and October bid well to keep the house filled until a very late date in the fall.

During the oppressive weather of August the difference in the registrations of the thermometer in Plainfield and on the mountain shows that the new hotel is situated up where the refreshing breezes are always in circulation.

Among the amusements at the Inn, the guests have taken greatest pleasure in the hops which have been given frequently during the season. These were so popular that the management deemed it wise to institute a weekly dance, and now the fantastic toe finds pleasure and satisfaction every Saturday evening.

During the summer a number of the prominent people of Plainfield, Newark, New York and Brooklyn, have registered as guests at the Inn. The company is so well assured of the success of the new enterprise that it will make several improvements and build a number of additional cottages for the coming year.

The sympathy and co-operation which the Plainfield people have shown the new enterprise from its inception, are indicative of their appreciation of the benefits which are sure to follow such an undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Blatz are at their Somerset street home from a brief trip to Atlantic City.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE

LUCIE WILLIAMS HAS HAD HER LOVER ARRESTED.

She Says He Skipped With Her Money and Went to New York With Another Woman—And Now He Is Locked Up.

Jealousy is the cause of endless trouble among the colored denizens of Hetfield row, Arlington avenue, and now one of them, Richard Caldwell, is in jail, where he declares he will remain until he dies, rather than accede to Lucie Williams, while she has been "radical" ideas in her head.

Two years ago Lucie Williams came to this city from the south and soon after she met Richard Caldwell. It was apparently a case of love at first sight and they continued to keep company until now. He asked her to become his wife and swore eternal fidelity to her. Now, sorrowful to say, Miss Williams is of an exceedingly jealous disposition, so much so that Caldwell states: "Whenever I dress up and put on a clean white shirt she thinks I am going to see some other girl."

Last Friday, at her request, Caldwell packed her sewing machine on a wheelbarrow and carted it down to Wright's store on West Front street, where he sold it for $16. Saturday he left for New York with the money in his pocket and Miss Williams declares another woman by his side. It seemed a case of desertion and robbery to her and so she started a breach of promise case in Judge DeMott's court. When Caldwell returned this morning, Chief Grant awaited him with a warrant and took him before Judge.

He had the $16 in his pocket and declared that "the other woman" was another of his fiance's "radical ideas." She was at the Judge's office and proposed that they get married at once. He refused until she gave up those "radical ideas." The Judge sent them in his private office hoping peaceful settlement could be made but neither would give in and the law took its course.

He admitted her kindness to him, saying that she had loaned him considerable money, she says it amounts to $40, and he declared that he loved her; but objected to the "radical ideas."

He was locked up for trial Saturday morning as he could not raise the necessary $200 bail.

Capitalists May Locate Here.

It is stated upon most excellent authority that several capitalists are willing and about ready to place considerable money in this city for manufacturing purposes. This plant, it is understood, will eclipse the Singer Sewing Machine Works at Elizabethport, and most of the employees will reside here. So it seems that Plainfield is rapidly forging to the head as a manufacturing centre, and although its water facilities are limited, there is plenty of room for factories of this magnitude.

After the Garden Sass.

Daniel Vermeule, of Watchung avenue, takes great pride in his garden, which he has filled with a variety of choice vegetables. A night or two ago someone went into the garden and carried off about three dozen ears of fine sweet corn, besides a lot of horseradish. The thief left the corn stalks, but "Dan" has neither horse or cow to feed them to, so they are only now in the way. If the thief will exchange addresses with Mr. Vermeule the latter will send the cornstalks around to him free of charge.

SOON TO BE REMOVED.

The Old Freight House Will Soon be Transported to Another Spot.

The removal of the old freight house will soon become a reality, and in the course of a few months Plainfield's commuters and others from the southeast side of the tracks can drive to and from the North avenue station without molestation from puffing and snorting locomotives.

Station Agent Joseph Haynes assures The Press that a gang of men will be put to work today laying the necessary tracks and turnouts for the removal of the old and obnoxious looking freight house. This building, while it had served the public for many years, had become an eyesore to most of the commuters, and it was through their efforts that the building is to be removed.

The local truckmen, it is said, are about to organize among themselves and raise the price for carrying freight. This action, the truckmen say, is due to the fact that the distance is now three times greater than it was heretofore.

Bridge Needs Repairing.

An unsightly and dangerous plank protrudes from the driveway over the Washington avenue bridge. Last night one horse stumbled and fell, barking its knees. The bridge is supposed to be kept in repair conjointly by the Freeholders of both Union and Somerset counties, and just which body is responsible for the repairs now needed has not yet been definitely fixed. At any rate something should be done at once, and before an accident happens which may lay one or the other of the counties liable.

—The Plainfield Cornet Band will go to Rahway on September 4th, to play at an open-air concert for the members of Franklin Hose Co., No 2, of that place. Prof. Nathan and his band is becoming quite popular hereabouts, and he is already booking dates for the Presidential parade.

—Tom Martin, the colored politician, says he won't drum in the coming campaign unless an independent drum corps is organized and each one of the members owns his own drum. Then he says the members can play for either of the political parties, so long as the political pap is forthcoming and everything is congenial to the members.

Botanical Club to Visit Fanwood.

The outings of this club are free to all interested in the subject and local botanists who may go down on the train leaving Plainfield station at 2:30 will undoubtedly be in time to meet the party coming from New York and will receive a cordial greeting.

—Residents of Rahway are much interested in the projected new trolley line from Elizabeth to Rahway. It is stated that argument is being used with the Board of Freeholders to get the route through St. George's avenue, although the taxpayers in that vicinity object. It is also proposed to have the route through Elizabeth avenue, but on account of its being so near the Pennsylvania Railroad it will not be as acceptable for building purposes as other roads.

—Mrs. Thomas Clark, the janitress at the North Avenue station, says that a prominent New York business man and a resident of this city, will advocate and push her husband's claim for an increase of pension. Mr. Clark was injured while fighting for the preservation of the country, and now that he is laid up in bed sick there seems to be no reason why he should not get an increase. THE CLUBS WILL BE IN IT

VISITING WHEELMEN WILL BE PLENTY AT THE DAYLIGHT CARNIVAL.

Local Wheelmen, Too, Are Taking a Great Interest in the Decorated Part of the Parade and Will Surprise the People.

Less than two weeks now remains before Plainfield's great event, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is to take place. The various sub committees of the general committee are now hard at work preparing for it. The response from out-of-town clubs has been particularly favorable and Plainfield will have to entertain a larger number of wheelmen than she has seen for some time. The large number of valuable prizes has induced many of the large clubs to turn out to compete for the club prizes, while their members will try for the individual prizes.

A number of local wheelmen have promised the committee that they will give their fellow townsmen a big surprise. Elaborate decorations are being quietly planned and only a selected few are told of the secret. For Plainfield is going to be well represented in the parade and it will be strange if several of the prizes do not remain here.

One well known wheelmen came to a member of the general committee, one day last week, looking as if he had just passed through a long illness. He confidentially told the committeeman that the cause of his poor appearance was that a great friend had just confided to him his idea for a bur lesque getup for the parade and he had laughed so hard over it, "it was the funniest thing I ever saw" he explained, that he hadn't been feeling well ever since. And it is said that there are others just as funny.

DRINK LED TO DISHONESTY.

Baker Confessed to a Crime and Was Sent to Prison for a Long Term.

John Baker, of Bound Brook, has been taken to the State Prison to serve one year and nine months for entering the residence of G. DeWitt Garretson and stealing family jewelry.

No one suspected Baker, who for three years had been working for the farmers and was considered a capable and honest young fellow. To the surprise of all, he went to Mr. Garretson and confessed that he was the thief. He said that that evening he was intoxicated, and "rather guessed he must have done it." He proved his story by returning the property, and was promptly arrested.

The authorities, on taking charge of his effects, found that he is a young man with a very interesting history. His parents are wealthy and reside in a New York village. Becoming addicted to drink and feeling that he was disgracing his family, and especially his young sister, he left home and his boyhood associations with a determination to reform. After three years of sobriety he yielded to the temptation. An effort will be made by the temperance organizations to secure his pardon.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Michael Larkin Suddenly Stricken Down With Heart Failure.

Michael Larkin, aged 75 years and 8 months, died at the home of a relative, No. 237 Somerset street, yesterday at 2 p. m. His death was sudden and unexpected, inasmuch as he was about the yard an hour before his death, and he told some of his friends that he never felt better in his life. Suddenly he was stricken down with heart failure, and Coroner Ralfid Dr. Probasco was the attending physician, and he found the patient in possession of his faculties to the last. Two years ago the decedent was similarly stricken, but it did not prove serious.

Mr. Larkin was born in Ireland and came to this country to follow his particular occupation. For two years he boarded with J. B. Bovey, and was always considered a man of careful speculation and one of means. He was the last one of the family in this country.

Why is It,

if catarrh is a blood disease, as some claim, that physicians frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and is a real cure of catarrh.

Mrs. Rhodie Nash, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains, and the next day diarrhœa set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of DeWitt's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and I sent different remedies for diarrhœa but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Many a day's work is lost by sick headache, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most effectual pill for overcoming such difficulties. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

MARSH WANTS NO OFFICE.

The Elizabeth Man Declares That he is Not Looking for Honors.

Yesterday the New York Tribune as much as said that F. C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, had declared that he would vote for Bryan and Sewall because he wanted the Senatorial nomination.

An Elizabeth Journal man saw Mr. Marsh at his office yesterday morning, called his attention to this correspondence. The ex-Senator appeared to be amused, and in reply said:

"Well what do you wish me to say? I am not a candidate for any office. Will that do?"

Then he added: "I don't know where this came from, except it was written from a little interview I had the other day with a newspaper man, not a reporter of this paper. He stopped me on the street and said:

"'Senator, they say you are going to vote for Bryan and Sewall.'

"Well,' I replied, 'did you ever hear anyone say that I had said I was not going to vote for them?'

"'No' said he, 'but I knew you were a sound-money man, and I supposed you were opposed to Bryan.'

"I told him that it would be ungrateful for one who had been so honored by his party to oppose its candidates, who had been nominated so fairly as Bryan and Sewall were. There was nothing underhanded in their selection by the convention. I did criticise the platform, but I never said I would bolt."

"Then am I to understand that you will vote for Bryan?" asked the reporter.

"I certainly shall vote for the nominees of my party, I told him. Now that is all there is about it. Will that do you? You can say this, I am not a candidate for office."

HIS HAIR GROWS LONG.

Gen. Drake Says He Won't Have It Cut Till Bryan Is Elected.

Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, is astonishing everybody by the length of his hair. It now looks like that of an ideal football player, and the little General swears he won't have it cut until William J. Bryan is elected President. Gen. Drake is brim full of confidence in the Nebraska man's chances.

Nearly Fatally Burned.

Mrs. George Kesselring, of Chatham street, North Plainfield, was quite seriously burned yesterday afternoon. She was hanging clothes over a line in the kitchen when some of them fell on the stove. Mrs. Kesselring picked up the burning garments and threw them out of the window.

—Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis will preach as usual in his church, the Seventh-Day Baptist, on Saturday.

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the largest portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dissatisfaction will rest upon the work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

WITH THE POLITICIANS.

NEWARK ADVERTISER MAKES SOME UNION COUNTY GUESSES.

Foster Voorhees Wants to Stay at Home But Still he May be Induced to Take the Senatorial Nomination This Fall.

The Newark Advertiser recently published two columns of political comment about Union county, a part of which was as follows:

If the gold Democrats should decide on a Congressional candidate of their own kind, S. M. Williams, vice-president of the New Jersey Central Railroad, will be their selection. He is now associated with A. B. Carlton, as committeeman for the third party organization. His name has also been mentioned in connection with the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

The renomination of Charles N. Fowler by the Republicans is assured. It is simply a matter of time formality of the convention. He was endorsed last year by the Congress Convention that selected delegates to State Convention.

The Senatorial fight is much mixed. After Prosecutor Marsh and James D. Martine, comes Peter Eganwolf, a prominent German, who has several times been a candidate for Mayor and Sheriff.

The Republicans are urging the renomination of Senator Foster M. Voorhees, whose modesty compels him to decline the honor, but the majority of the Republicans think a little coaxing will put him in the field again. To The Daily Advertiser correspondent he said: "I stand by the position I took at the close of the legislative session. I prefer to stay at home and practice law. It pays better and then again I am getting old and must look out for the rainy days. You see, I have made up my mind to buy a farm, and if I go to the Senate again I am three years further away from that farm."

Sheriff George Kyte is a candidate who is now making an active canvass. He lives in Fanwood Township, and is the choice of a number of the townships. He was a candidate three years ago for Senator and now claims it as a matter of right.

Assemblyman J. Martin Roll, who led the trolley fight in the Legislature, will become a candidate if Senator Voorhees positively refuses to take it. There are some bicyclists who are not favorable to him because of his trolley agitation, but otherwise it is said there is no opposition to him. Former Assemblyman Codding is entirely out of the Senatorial contest.

There seems to be lots of men in the county who know a good thing, judging by the list of men who want to be the successor of Sheriff Kyte. William Hulskamper, of Elizabethport, who has been Freeholder for two years, heads the list, seconded by Robert L. Houston, of the same place. This friends of the latter claim that he is entitled to the nomination this year because Houston and his friends aided Hulskamper three years ago when the County Clerk fight was on. Hulskamper was to return the compliment this year, and the Houston people now demand that the terms of the compact made shall be carried out.

Lewis W. Miller, the under-sheriff, who lives in Fanwood, thinks he has served the people well and should be called up higher.

The others mentioned are Joseph Ogden, of Elizabeth, formerly a member of Council; F. F. Glasby, who was formerly Sheriff; William Kirk, a contractor in Plainfield; and J. Frederick MacDonald, a grocer in Plainfield.

The Democratic candidates are led by W. H. Hicks, the last Democratic Sheriff, Edward H. Sherwood, cashier of the Railway National Bank, has aspirations for recognition by the Democrats of the county. The selection of the Sheriff will be largely controlled by the place the Senator is picked from.

There will be a change in the members of the House. Henry Clauss is not desirous of being returned, and a renomination is being pressed on Chris. Burger, who has already served two years. Assemblyman Roll and Codington go back unless the former captures the Senatorial nomination.

John Kean has not lost his interest in politics. He has been attending the Congressional conventions and has had a flag raising that was so festive that the citizens of Union township still have a pleasant flavor in their mouth. When asked about politics he shyly remarked, "Don't know anything about it, just looking on and taking things quiet. No silver sentiment in New Jersey outside of Democratic circles. We will surely carry the State."

Afro-American Baptist Association.

The Afro-American Baptist Association of New Jersey will meet in the Union Baptist church at Montclair on Thursday, September 24. On the second day of convention Rev. Archie G. Young, of this city, will preach a sermon. Dominie Young is secretary of the association, and is making the preparations for the meeting. It met in this city last year.

DEATH TO CHEAT LAW.

ONE OF THE AGED DUNHAM ASSAILANTS FOUND ON HIS DEATH BED.

Though Weak and the Hands of Death Hovering Over Him, he Professed Innocence of the Serious Accusation.

Though death will doubtless remove him from the clutches of the law, Chief Grant is positive that he has located one of the two negroes who committed the murderous assault on Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Dunham, an aged couple living near New Market, on November 10, 1892. This crime created a great sensation in this vicinity at the time by reason of its brutal character. But lying on his back in a cot in the Mercer hospital in Trenton, his constitution ravaged by consumption, his face wan and haggard, his voice weak and faltering, with the hand of death ready to swoop him into eternity at almost any moment, James Johnson still protests, as vigorously as short breaths will permit, that all of the Chief's suspicions are wrong.

The story is this: On the morning of November 11, 1892, Officer Kiely was patroling his beat about 4 o'clock when he met James Johnson, colored, 24 years, carrying a bag that looked suspicious. He arrested him as a suspicious character and found that the bag was filled with a number of chickens. A further investigation proved that they were stolen property and that Johnson had taken them from the henery of farmer Peter Benwood, living in Piscataway. Benwood identified the poultry as part of his flock and on this evidence, and the general knowledge that Johnson's character was bad, he was convicted in the Middlesex County Court and sent to State Prison at Trenton for one year.

The day before his arrest the assault on the aged Dunhams had been committed by two negros. Chief Grant took hold of the case, and from the descriptions given by the victims of the assault, he concluded that Johnson was one of the guilty parties. But there was no convincing evidence to prove his connection with the outrage, and when he returned from serving the term in prison he was permitted to remain in this neighborhood without being persecuted by the officers of the law.

His inclination for wrong doing soon asserted itself, however, and in a few months he stole a horse and carriage belonging to Aaron Brower, of Piscataway, and sold it to a man by the name of Wolf, living ten miles from Stroudsburg, Pa. He was traced as far as this and the property recovered by Chief Grant, but Johnson escaped and, it was said, went to Virgina, where he was born. The Chief was unable to locate Johnson exactly, but thorough some of his relatives he learned that he was on some poor farm in that state suffering with consumption.

It seems, however, that Johnson recovered his health sufficiently to start North again, and he was prompted to come this way in the hope that the last crime of horse stealing had been forgotten and he would escape punishment. He succeeded in getting as far as Trenton, where the hardships encountered in his wanderings had overcome his health and he was forced to apply to the authorities and for help. He was subsequently admitted to the Mercer hospital and from there communicated with friends in this city. Through the latter, the Chief learned of his location and yesterday he went to Trenton.

In the public ward the Chief found the colored man a pitiable object to gaze at. Besides being in the most emaciated condition, the nurse said that his body was literally covered with abscesses. The Chief confronted Johnson with the charge of being one of the assailants of Mr. and Mrs. Dunham. Notwithstanding that Johnson could only speak in a whisper, and could utter but a few words before his breath was exhausted, he denied the accusation and claimed to be entirely innocent of implication in the crime which would have been likely to have resulted in a lynching if his detection had been made when public sentiment was aroused over the outrage. Chief Grant told a Press reporter this morning that he now had a chain of evidence which he was positive would convict Johnson of the charge if he was ever brought to trial. But it is only a matter of a short time when Johnson will pass to that greater and higher tribunal and the law will be cheated of its victim.

In the theft of the horse Johnson did not deny but what he was guilty, but he implicated Charles Moulding, of Piscataway, and Alexander Williams, of this city, as accomplices. The Chief is also positive that Moulding was with Johnson the night of the Dunham assault and that he was one of the assailants. His location is not known.

CHARLES S. A. DAVIS PASSES AWAY AFTER A LONG LIFE.

Had Not Been Seriously Sick and His Death Came as a Surprise—Known As a Man of Energy and Intellect.

By the death of Charles Sherlock Austin Davis, which occurred at his home, 1220 Watchung avenue, at 7:25 o'clock Sunday night, Plainfield loses one of its oldest and most respected citizens. Ailing as he was only for a short time, his death was not expected. But he passed away surrounded by kind and loving members of his household, and was conscious until the last.

The decedents illness was of long standing, but it was not until last Tuesday evening that he was considered in any way dangerous, Dr. W. C. Boone was called in, and did all in his power to save the patients life, but it was of no avail, and he passed quietly away.

Friday he was taken with a hemorrage of the nose, yet on Saturday he rallied and was apparently in the best of spirits. Last night at 6:30 o'clock his lungs effused and his death followed soon afterward. The funeral will be Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The surving members of the family are two sons Thomas H. B. Davis, of Sandusky, Ohio, vice-president of the Middletown Plate Co., of Middletown, Conn, and Major Charles E. L. B. Davis of the engineering Corps, U. S. A., who is now located in SanFrancisco, and two daughters Miss Louise S. and Miss Ellan Fitch Davis, both of whom live at home. Mrs. Davis departed this life some five years ago.

Mr. Davis was born in New Haven Dec. 11th, 1807, and he was therefore eighty-eight years and eight months old at the time of his death. He was the son of John and Mary Fitch Davis. In early life he took to the real estate and insurance business in the town of his birth, and had lived there up to seventeen years ago this spring when he came to Plainfield. Here he has lived a retired life, and until overtaken with infirmities was a prominent and much-beloved companion on the streets. His knowledge of national and other affairs has often been sought by politicians, although he never aspired for political notoriety.

In 1846 he was appointed by James K. Polk Surveyor of the Port at New Haven, which position he most honorably discharged. He served in this capacity for four years or more. What little interest he took in politics was from a Democratic standpoint and from his early life he had always advocated the principles of Democracy. He was an able writer, and among his latest productions was one entitled "The Political Situation and Colonial History."

OBJECTIONS TO THE TROLLEY.

Lawyer Hatfield Says East Second Street Property Owners are Resolute.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In your issue of last evening there appeared an article entitled "A Trolley Extension," in which it was stated that "more than enough consents have been secured on East Second street from Park avenue to Leland avenue." Just such articles have been appearing in our evening papers for the last five or six weeks, but still my young friend, Mr. Moffett, has been kept hustling to get more consents. Let me tell you, Mr. Editor, nor the people of East Second street, be deceived by the reports given out by the railroad company's employes, as a very large percentage of the residents and property owners on the street are unqualifiedly opposed to the road there, and justly, too, as the street is only 24 feet in width in some portions and 27 feet in other parts. If a car track should be laid there, it would be absolutely impossible to pass a car with wagon or fire apparatus. Then the street would need widening, and who would be at the loss of the shade trees and who would the expense of widening fall upon, answer the property owners. No, Mr. Editor, the railroad company cannot go up East Second street without a very large fight.

Walter L. Hatfield.

Absent for Sixteen Years.

Thomas Hand is in town from Duluth, Minn., spending a few days with his brothers, Captain William, David and Hezekiah Hand. Mr. Hand was formerly a resident of this city, but sixteen years ago he went to the west, and this is his first visit back since. He is a contractor by occupation and during his years of absence he has built the sixty miles stretch of railroad on the Pine Creek Railroad between Blackwells and a place known as the "Jersey Shore. At one time he was timekeeper on the D. L. & W. road, and at another time he was employed in Minneapolis and other places in the west. He was for seven years in charge of the Hillside cemetery at Minneapolis. Mr. Hand will remain in town over Sunday and then go to Williamsport, Pa.

—Belvidere avenue now has a flagstone sidewalk from the station to the Netherwood hotel. The last gap of seventeen feet was laid yesterday.

ENDORSE THE TICKET.

MOST OF THE DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE FOR FREE SILVER.

Resolutions Pledging Their Support Adopted With Four Dissenting Voices—State Convention to be Held Sept. 9th.

By a vote of ten to four the New Jersey State Democratic Committee, at a meeting held last Wednesday in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, declared for free silver. The four who voted against the resolution, which also indorsed Bryan and Sewall and the Chicago platform in its entirety, were E. F. C. Young, president of the First National Bank, Jersey City; General Richard A. Donnelly, of Mercer; ex-Senator William J. Keys, of Somerset; and Samuel M. Williams, Comptroller of the New Jersey Central Railroad. All are out-and-out gold men.

When the committee convened there were present: Richard J. Byrnes, of Atlantic City; Henry B. Paul, of Camden; Benjamin S. Cox, Gloucester; E. F. C. Young, Hudson; Paul A. Queen, Hunterdon; David S. Crater, Monmouth; Louis F. Braun, Passaic; ex-Senator William J. Keys, Somerset; Samuel Fowler, Sussex; Samuel M. Williams, Union; Johnston Cornish, Warren; and Richard H. Kuhl, of Hunterdon; General Richard A. Donnelly, of Mercer, and Rufus Blodget, of Monmouth, members at large.

In the absence of Senator James Smith, the chairman, who is in Europe, ex-Congressman Samuel Fowler was chosen to preside. A letter received from Abram DeRonde, Assembly man from Bergen, was the subject of considerable comment. Mr. Ronde declared against the Chicago platform and its nominees. Several thought Mr. DeRonde should be dropped from the roll. Ex-Chairman Young and Mr. Williams thought the letter should be accepted. The latter, in stating his reasons, made a speech for gold. The letter was finally tabled after a resolution that the matter be brought to the attention of the chairman of the Bergen county committee and that the committee did not approve of Mr. DeRonde's sentiments had been passed.

Col. E. L. Price, of Newark, made a short speech, in which he urged an early convention. The silver sentiment, he said, was rapidly gaining strength in the State. He also said that Senator Smith would return from Europe in time to assume the management of the campaign.

The committee finally decided to hold the convention Sept. 9th, in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton. Mr. Cornish introduced the resolution which indorsed the Chicago platform and its nominees. From the tenor of the remarks it is believed that all not in favor of the Chicago platform will be asked to resign, and in the event of their refusal will be forced out of the committee.

Arrivals at the Revere House.

The recent arrivals at the Revere House are: S. B. Tremaine, M. and Mrs. T. A. Singer, M. M. Singer, Jr., and Mrs. Chambers, C. A. Maum, New York; C. M. Cortell, Chicago; Thos. A. Howe, C. R. Pratt, Montclair; Chas. F. Abbott, C. W. Abbott, Plainfield; F. Downs, Mrs. L. Hodges, F. C. George, wife and maid, O. C. Alexander, Brooklyn; C. Hepp, M. H. Smith, Paterson; A. S. Finney, Bridgeport; G. F. Jones, New Haven; Miss May Howard, E. H. Smith, Jersey City; W. H. Thomas, Portland.

Cranford's Carnival Postponed.

The general uncertainty of the weather, Saturday, effectually stopped the street carnival at Cranford, that evening. A meeting of the committee in charge of the affair was held Saturday afternoon and it was decided to postpone it until next Saturday. Quite a number from this city had planned to go, but thanks to the Daily Press bulletin, they learned of the postponement in time. There will be quite a delegation to go next Saturday.

"Caleb Cobweb" Coming.

Amos R. Wells, who is known to the readers of the "Golden Rule" as "Caleb Cobweb," will spend the Christian Endeavor convention week in this city as the representative of his paper. He will speak on the Friday morning of convention week on the subject "Endeavorers that really enjoy it."

At the Westfield Fresh Air Camp.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church, of this city, will conduct the services at the Westfield Fresh Air Camp on Thursday evening. John V. Beekman, Jr., will act as leader. All who can are invited to attend the meeting.

Gunning for an Artist.

We understand that Frank L. C. Martin is gunning for the artist who drew his portrait in connection with an otherwise highly complimentary article that recently appeared in the New York Evening Telegram.—Westfield Standard.

Always Fattening After Plainfield.

Why can't New Brunswick have a bicycle carnival? Plainfield can have two and a half. Surely we have wheelmen enough and ability enough to successfully conduct one.—New Brunswick Times.

CLUBHOUSE SITE CHOSEN

HILLSIDE MEMBERS WILL HAVE NEW QUARTERS AT RANDOLPH ROAD.

The Structure Will be Ready For Occupancy the First Week in September and Will Have an Opening for Their Friends.

Unless something unexpected happens, the new clubhouse the Hillside Tennis and Golf club will be ready for occupancy during the first week in September. A meeting of the Board of Directors of the club was held the first of the week when the exact site for the clubhouse was decided upon. It will be placed on Plainfield avenue, one hundred and twenty six feet from the road and exactly at the head of Randolph road. The building is not large and work will be begun at once so that it is hoped that it will be completed before Labor Day. An opening has been planned when the Plainfield people will be invited to take a look at the new clubhouse.

The tennis courts of the club are to be changed from their present location on Watchung avenue to the ground directly in the rear of the new club house. They will hardly be in good condition for playing this year, however, and the old courts will probably be used. There will be the regular club championship tournament for the silver trophy on Labor Day, September 7, on the Watchung avenue courts. This tournament always brings out the best talent in the club and an exciting contest may be looked for.

There are no special golf matches arranged at present but the golf committee expect to have several more before the season is over.

A NOTABLE DECREASE.

The Borough Public School Membership Much Lower This Year.

According to the last census the decrease in membership in the borough public school this year will be about forty. If this is true it will make a difference of $200 less on the appropriation received from the State. The school has been thoroughly overhauled and is now in good condition for the coming year. The opening day will be Tuesday, September 8. Dr. Wardle, the new principal, is expected to arrive in a few days, and he will at once prepare to open the school. Among the new teachers at the school is Miss Alice Needham, who has been teaching at the Greenbrook school. She is thoroughly competent and has met with remarkable success in teaching. She will have charge of one of the lower grade classes.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATES.

North Plainfield Primaries Select Representatives to the State Conventions.

The Republican primaries in North Plainfield were held in the basement of the public school building on Saturday evening, and the attendance was unusually large. Assessor Spencer called the meeting to order and Peter A. Emmons was made chairman. Thomas H. Thomas was the secretary. The object of the meeting was to elect delegates to the State convention to be held at Trenton next Thursday. The following delegates were chosen: From North Plainfield township, Phillip Acker; from the borough, first district, John MacLaughlin; second district, H. Howland. There was no opposition to the selections, so they were made unanimous. Dr. Cooley was mentioned as a candidate, but he declined.

Water Runs Into the Street.

The drinking fountain on West Second street between New and Liberty streets, has proved a God-send to both man and beast during the hot days we have just experienced. But there should be some steps taken to prevent the children who play around the fountain and stop up the outlets in the basins with stones and sticks, thus allowing the water to flow over into the gutter, where there is no grade to carry it off. The fountain is almost directly in the centre between Liberty and New streets, and there is a sewer through each of these thoroughfares, yet the water from the basins of the fountain remains in the gutter and becomes stagnant.

Excise Violations.

The question of licenses will be open once more the second week in September. Again we call the attention of Prosecutor Voorhees to the fact that the violation of the Sunday law by both the taverns in South Plainfield is open and flagrant. He has ample time to send over and procure evidence on which to revoke their licenses and have indictments found by the next grand jury.—Me tuchen Recorder.

Warrenville Excited Again.

That controversy over the possession of a wagonload of oats and a pig, that has recently caused so much excitement in Warrenville, comes up again Saturday morning in Justice Austin's court in Warrenville. The case is that of Stein against Baldwin, on contract, and Stein is suing for the value of the oats. The story of the trouble was told some time ago exclusively in The Daily Press.

WILL FLOAT A BANNER.

THE OCCASION TO BE A SPEECHMAKING ONE FOR REPUBLICANS.

The Banner Will Be Hung on North Avenue From the Hotel Grenada—City Executive Committee Increased in Number.

The Republican City Executive Committee met in the Coward building last evening at 8 o'clock, all the members being in attendance. The main business transacted was the conference to the banner-raising and speaking cation which the committee has set down for some evening next week. Just what night it will be has not been wholly with "Dore" Vroom, who is doing the painting on the banner last week. Cobb, of College place, New York, is painting the portraits, and "Dore" is putting the artistic finishing touches on the netting. The banner itself is the same one that was swung to the breeze before the last Presidential campaign, and the total cost for the new production will not exceed $100.

The banner is to be strung over North avenue, from the Hotel Grenada building to D. W. Littell's building on the opposite side of the street. Or, perhaps, a pole will be erected in front of Mr. Littell's store. There will, in all probability, be speechmaking and fireworks from the balcony in front of the Grenada.

At the meeting, last night, the executive committee was increased to the extent of twelve, or three new members from each ward, making twenty four in all. The secretary was instructed and authorized to advertise the Republican primaries for next Monday evening.

RESPONSE IN MELODY.

These Verses to be Sung at the Opening of the Endeavor Convention.

The following hymn has been adopted by the committee on programme for the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Convention in October, and will be sung by the delegates at the opening session, October 7th, in response to the greetings of local societies:

Tune: "Vox Angelica" or "Pilgrims of the Night."

We hear, we hear, Endeavorers voices swelling
From Christian hearts, abounding in God's love;
We hear the promise of their welcome, telling
Of hallowed joys to lift their souls above.

Workers for Jesus
Clothed in His light,
Bearing our Crosses
Endeavor in the Might.
Working and Singing
Exalting Knowledge for the Right.

We come, we come responding to their voices
From radiant hills, and "oceans wave beat shore;"
All Jersey now salutes thee, and rejoices:
Glad Plainfield, through thine open gates we pour.

Workers for Jesus.—

With you we'll sit at Jesus' feet, awaiting
The Holy Spirit, God's most precious Gift,
That, neither faith, nor love, nor zeal abating
We may from sinful Earth its burden lift.

Workers for Jesus.—

Once more, dear hearts, we thank you for your greeting,
Your smiles, your songs, your salutations, all;
With you, Endeavor Hosts in Christ's name meeting
Shall feast, as in Christ's bannered banquet hall.

Workers for Jesus.—

These verses were composed by Rev. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, chairman of the '96 programme committee, to be sung in response to the to the song of welcome composed by Rev. Robert Lowry, of Plainfield.

OUR COUNTRY COUSINS.

How the Model Guest Conducts Herself When Visiting Them.

This is the season of the year when the city folk look about for a place in which to spend the summer vacation. We hear the mountains calling to us, and the seashore extending an invitation, and then others of us write to our country cousins, and in return for the brief visit they paid us last winter we announce ourselves ready to sojourn with them indefinitely. These country cousins are rather impressed with our grandeur, and nothing they have is too good for us. The best room is thrown open for our benefit, and the sunshine is allowed to pour in on the best brussels carpet and haircloth furniture. The neighbors give tea parties for us, and the wealth of the larder is spread out before us. They serve six o'clock supper, and the menu isn't at all like the meal we have been in the habit of having at that hour in the city. They have sauce and biscuit and spice cake and tea, and fill in the odd spaces on the table with plates of cottage cheese and cookies and fresh butter right from the churn that very morning. Those of us who are fortunate enough to have this kind of a summer come back to the city refreshed in body and spirit. The crickets and the katydids do not make the same sort of music that we find at the summer resorts, but they lull us to sleep rather early in the night, so that we are ready to respond to the cock's crow in the early morning. But the farm wife is up about her work long before we know it is day. She has done a day's work before sunrise, maybe, and even lazy old Sol peeps in at the kitchen door at her with a look of admiration on his guilty face. Simple country living affords a great rest for overweary nerves, and those of us who have country cousins had better rejoice in the fortunate inheritance, and leave our city hatchstring on the outside of the door for them during the winter season, when they come to town to see the sights.

The etiquette of visiting would fill a book, if it were set down in black and white, but a model guest is the woman who entertains a good many people during the course of the year tells me that there are but a very few of her list of guests who meet the requirements of the guest.

The model guest is one who comes when she is invited and goes home at the expiration of the time specified in the invitation. She makes her own bed, keeps order in her room and is all ready when the maid announces that the meal is served. In addition to these excellences, that she brings her own soap and scissors and comb and brush, and that is case she does not do this, she, at least, on departure, refrains from appropriating any of the articles mentioned. The model guest buries herself with a bit of attractive needlework, which she afterwards presents to the hostess. She makes friends with the dog and cat, and she tells stories to the children and admires the family baby and praises the cooking, and never forgets a little fee to the servants. She never intrudes herself during the housework hours, but settles herself in a snug corner with a book, and has the best kind of a time. Sometimes she busts around a little, just for exercise, and she claims only the privilege of being one of the family. She knows how to express appreciation in a way that puts quite in everyone's good endeavors, and she goes home while everybody is very fond of her and regrets her.

The model guest in the country anticipates a thousand ways in which she can help. Sometimes she churns just for the novelty of it, and then the solitary cousin washes dishes she wipes them for her. The model guest is a regular angel in the family, and she is always engaged for visits months in advance. It is all on account of her unselfishness and early sympathy, and because she has the power of adapting herself to modes of life that belong to others rather than to herself, and finds every situation fraught with human interest.—N. Y. Recorder.

He Knew the Story.

On neutral ground they met, the man from Kentucky and the one from Ohio. It was in the middle of the Newport bridge, and they shook hands and looked through the railing at the river below them.

"I heard a good story to-day," said the Ohioan.

"Something about a Kentuckian's dislike for water, I suppose," said the Blue Grass chap, with a tired look in his face.

"No, sheer, it were not. Fellow that saw it said he never saw such running done in his life. It was a foot race between a cowboy and a college graduate. They got together at a saloon down in the southern part of the state and ran to another saloon five miles away. The college boy beat the cowboy hands down, and—"

"And you told the man who told you," interrupted the Kentuckian, "that you could not believe the story because saloons in Texas aren't that far apart, eh? Yes, that was a good story when you and I were young."

Then the Kentuckian meandered Ohioward, while the man from the Buckeye state couldn't seem to get satisfaction out of his cigar that he did before. — Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

LITTLE BABY CARROLL.

Known in San Francisco as the Human Phonograph.

Although But Four Years Old She Can Repeat Anything She Has Ever Heard, and Sings Long Songs Without a Break.

Baby Ethel Carroll, of Oakland, Cal., is a human phonograph. Every word of a conversation—no matter how long—names, dates, figures and bits of oratory of all degrees of merit, songs and jokes spoken in her presence, seem to register themselves indelibly upon her brain, and by virtue of her remarkable memory she is able to recall them, word for word, even though it be weeks and months after. At her age—for she is only four years old—much that she hears no doubt is quite unintelligible to her as are the words of a phonograph to a wild beast. She simply repeats everything from memory, without knowing aught of the text of her words. At the Hotel Crellin, says the San Francisco Examiner, where she lives with her parents, she is the idol and wonder of all who know her, for she is as pretty as she is clever. The first time that the child showed her phenomenal trait was at the age of 11 months. At that time she was taken to see one of Hoyt's plays at the Macdonough theater. Upon returning to her home she surprised everyone by repeating word for word one of the popular songs. From that time until now Bittle Ethel has been a regular phonograph.

Now, at the age of four, her memory has developed so remarkably that it is a common thing for her, after seeing a new play, to sing, without a single mistake or the least sign of hesitation, one after song, that she has never heard before. She can also repeat the lines of the play with wonderful correctness. The child has a retentive memory for names and dates. In spite of the fact that large numbers of people come to daily, drawn by curiosity, she never forgets the name of anyone who is introduced to her, and can tell even the exact day when she first met them, though it may be months after.

It is strange indeed to hear Ethel talk about questions of public interest that have been discussed within her hearing.

LITTLE BABY CARROLL.

Several months ago, while the Durrant case was the one absorbing topic of public interest, tiny Miss Ethel heard her mother read several of the lengthy newspaper reports. Since then the subject has not been mentioned until one day last week, when for the purpose of testing her memory, the matter was recalled. She at once went over the entire subject, using language almost identical with that of the newspaper articles after answers of witnesses and lawyers in the form of a quotation of entire sentences, and these she repeated perfectly after the lapse of so many months without, perhaps, understanding their meaning.

Recently her wonderful memory was put to a severe test at a concert recital in Oakland. After the performance she was asked if she remembered a certain recitation on the programme remarkable alike for its length and peculiar phrasing. She had never heard it before, but with a thoughtful smile and a certain enchanting carelessness of manner, she recited the entire piece without a single break.

It will be interesting to note as this child grows older whether her memory broadens with age, or whether, as in the case of the famous Italian boy mathematician, it lapses altogether and leaves her more stupid than the veriest infant.

International Marriages.

According to London social authorities, the American girl has had her day in Great Britain. English girls have so profited by the stimulus afforded by American competition that they have developed an astonishing amount of social tact and brilliancy and can no longer be beaten on their own ground. The gloreies of the international marriage have been much prated of, and it will be a sad blow to the American debutantes to yield their aspirations to gilded British titles and poverty stricken British estates. The British mamma, however, and the American papa will, it is hinted, be of one mind in approving the new order of things. A system that would keep English lords and American heiresses and their dividually belong would instantly commend itself.

It is proposed to use asbestos in the soles of boots. Asbestos wool, pressed by hydraulic force into thin sheets, water-proofed on one side, is to be inserted as the middle sole. Asbestos is a non-conductor of heat, and, in conjunction with a water-proofed material, will have the effect of counteracting the influence of heat, cold and moisture.

EARTH'S GIANT VALLEY.

Fierce Natives Indulge in Strange and Cannibalistic Customs.

The greatest valley in the world, according to Dr. J. W. Gregory, an English explorer, is the Great Rift valley, which is an immense depression or trough which runs through eastern Africa from the Red sea almost to the cape. "The Great Rift Valley" is the title of Dr. Gregory's book, which has just appeared in London, which is the newest, most comprehensive and important of the works that has appeared on the region.

One of the most fascinating portions of this record of travel is that relating to the Masai, the most ferocious of the African races. You never can be sure of your Masai, even when you have spat upon him and he upon you. That is how they swear eternal friendship, Dr. Gregory says—the harder one spits the more the other feels flattered. How it is done and what the Masai equivalent for handshaking is the traveler explains in this wise:

"The chief came up, and for the first time held out a 'knobkerry' cut from a rhinoceros horn for me to shake. I, of course, shook it, glad of this expression of friendliness, though quite aware that if it stopped at this it meant nothing. But as I walked down the slope from the camp after the men he came up again, and this time not only held out his knobkerry, but as I shook one end he shook the other. After walking a few yards he repeated this more vigorously. Then at last he held out his hand; we shook hands at first coldly, and then more cordially. Finally, after we had walked a couple of hundred yards, he repeated the process and the chief spat upon me, a salutation which I returned with perhaps unnecessary vigor. I had been warned that when the Masai come to a conference without spitting the spit of peace squalls may be expected. I was, therefore, much relieved when the friendly rite had been performed."

But all spitting is nothing, for that very night a band of Masai warriors, led by this same chief, came crawling snakily through the grass, bent upon massacring the camp. But the traveler thought it was for them and they crawled back, leaving several of their dead upon the field.

Dr. Gregory's botanical and zoological observations are full of interest. He seems to have solved one of the problems which have vexed African explorers for a long time: Why there should be in some places vast heaps of bones of animals all mixed together. Some writers have attributed this to the action of a deluge, but Dr. Gregory says the bones are the remains of animals that in season of drought have fought around the water holes for their last drop.—N. Y. Journal.

HOW GUNPOWDER IS MADE.

The Part That Each of the Three Ingredients Plays.

Gunpowder then steadily developed as mechanical skill constructed better and better weapons in which to use it, until to-day it has reached a perfection of manufacture for various purposes which allows its effects to be foretold in any weapon, even to the time it takes a grain to burn, and to the distance it will drive a shot.

Roger Bacon's gunpowder was made of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal. Saltpeter is chemically called niter, and is a natural product found bedded in the earth in many countries of the world, chiefly in India and China. Sulphur, too, is found in a natural state in many volcanic countries, like Sicily, while, as is well known, charcoal is made from wood or woody substances by heating the material to a red heat in a close or airtight vessel, thus driving off everything in them but carbon.

Saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal are still the only ingredients of the gunpowder now manufactured, although the gunpowder made of different materials, is undergoing successful experiment. A mixture of saltpeter and charcoal alone would form an explosive, and sulphur is added chiefly to make it quicker, or capable of being pressed into cakes and shapes. All three ingredients have to be purified by the most careful chemical skill before they are combined. Then an exact proportion of each has to be measured out according to the kind of powder to be made.

For the gunpowder generally used you would find in every 100 pounds, if you could separate the ingredients, 75 pounds of saltpeter, 15 pounds of charcoal and ten pounds of sulphur; but it would be almost impossible to separate the ingredients, for they are not merely mixed together as you might mix pepper and salt, but they are ground and rolled and stirred and pressed together by special machines until they are almost sufficiently united to form a single new substance.

"This mixing process is called "trituration," and the powder is thus made into the form of big cakes, called press cake, and then broken up, and screened into grains of special sizes, or ground to the fine powder used for shotguns and revolvers. The large-grained powders are still further stirred together until the grains become highly glazed, and these are called cannon powders. A lighted match may be held to a grain of cannon powder and it will be found almost impossible to set it on fire, but once ignited it flashes off very suddenly and violently.—Lieut. John M. Ellicott, in St. Nicholas.

Young Seals Afraid of the Water.

Young seals do not know how to swim. They have to become gradually accustomed to the water, either by encouraging it to paddle about themselves, or by being carried into it in their mother's jaws. They have great fear of the waves that break into foam, and as soon as they see one approaching take to flight in terror, and do not turn round until they have ascended to a very high place above the sea.—St. Louis Republic.

FREE SILVER FAVORITE.

Clark Howell a Popular Candidate for Governor of Georgia.

Clark Howell, who is now being mentioned as the vice presidential candidate on the democratic ticket, is a newspaper man of national reputation. He is the leader of the free silver democrats in Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, and has done more to advance the cause of the white metal in the south than any other member of the party. To business men he is well known through his efforts to make the Atlanta fair an undoubted success and his strenuous endeavors to break the commercial barriers between the south and the northwest. He is young, and, though physically small, is an intellectual giant. He was born in Barnwell district, South Carolina, September 21, 1863. He is of revolutionary stock, the Howells, who immigrated to North Carolina in 1750, having furnished several brave soldiers in the war of independence. Mr. Howell was taught in the public schools of Atlanta and graduated from the University of Georgia in 1883. As soon as he left the university he served an apprenticeship on the New York Times as a reporter and afterward became the telegraph editor of the Philadelphia Press. From there he went to the Atlanta Constitution, on which paper he has been the guiding star since the death of Henry W. Grady. Mr. Howell first became night editor and then assistant managing editor under the great Grady. After the latter's death he became managing editor, and has occupied that position since then. But outside of his newspaper work he gained a reputation in the south for being a wise and astute legislator. He made rapid strides toward fame. He was nominated for the Georgia legislature before he had attained his majority and was elected by a handsome majority. He was reelected in 1888 and 1890. He was chosen for speaker of the house for 1890-91, being the youngest man to hold that important place in the history of the commonwealth. He was only 28 years old, and, with the exception of a great newspaper and the legislative body of Georgia with consummate ease and skill. As a newspaper man Mr. Howell is a strong and fluent writer, and has shown his athletic power in the management of the Atlanta Constitution. As a legislator he has the reputation of possessing a wide grasp of public subjects and superb parliamentary skill.

WASHINGTON IN MARBLE

A Short History of Horatio Greenough's Statue.

Critics and Connoisseurs Consider It Inartistic and Ridiculous, But the People Seem to Like It.

[Special Washington Letter.]

On the grand plaza extending along the east front of the Capitol building directly opposite the congressional marble staircase is the Greenough statue of Washington. Visitors study it as a work of art, or carelessly pass it by without giving it a thought beyond the fleeting moment occupied in casual survey.

The statue is meritorious, but there is much of demerit in it to the eye of an experienced art connoisseur. As a matter of fact, there is little artistic merit in the statues thus far erected here, and there is less artistic merit in the paintings which hang upon the walls of the Capitol building. The large paintings in the rotunda, representing the landing of the pilgrims, the discovery of the Mississippi, the signing of the declaration of independence and the surrender of Cornwallis are not works of art, but daubs.

But the Greenough statue has a history. It is sculptured from soft Italian marble, and is mounted on a granite pedestal eight feet high. The statue is ten feet in height, and represents the father of his country as a Jupiter Tonans in sitting posture. The figure is naked to the waist, and thence a Roman toga falls in graceful folds over the legs and knees, exposing the feet bound in sandals of most ancient pattern. The right arm is elevated, the index finger pointing to the meridian, and the right hand holds a sheathed sword. All critics condemned the artist for the likeness of Washington, for the head is modeled after the painting and molding of Houdon, the great French master of the last century. But the conception of Washington in Roman togs, with sandals on his feet, is regarded generally as a historical anachronism which ought never to have been perpetrated. The work is also subjected to severe criticism for the further development of the Roman idea, in that on the left side of the dais there is a bass relief of Apollo, the sun god, driving his chariot steeds across the heavens, while on the right side there is a representation of Hercules strangling the serpents.

Critics also point to the marble figures of an Indian warrior and Christopher Columbus on the sides of the seat, thus typifying the American Republic gently with mythical gods and demigods, with the discoverer of the fifteenth century and the aboriginal American of the seventeenth century. Altogether, the combination of artistic errors is discovered. The destructive criticisms which have been passed upon it.

Donn Piatt, when publishing his freelance paper called the Sunday Capital, referred to the statue caustically, saying: "Poor Greenough was thrown out in front of the capitol without any clothing in all sorts of weather, while a full suit of his clothes is locked up in a glass case in the patent office."

The artist had a hard time of it, and the delays which occurred between the conception of the design, its acceptance by the government, the meager appropriations and its final unveiling, all tended to the original mauling. When completed the statue was subjected to violent criticism by the men of that day and at the same time received encomiums from artists of renown, some of these comparing it favorably with the masterpieces of Athens and Rome.

On August 7, 1783, the continental congress, in session at Philadelphia, passed a resolution authorizing the erection of "a bronze equestrian statue of Gen. Washington at the place where the residence of the congress shall be established, to express in durable form the deep gratitude of the nation for his triumphant conduct of the revolution." That was the original inception of the Greenough statue. During the lifetime of Washington nothing further was done. But Washington died December 14, 1799, and nine days thereafter, on December 23, 1799, the continental congress passed a resolution ordering "that a marble monument be erected by the United States in the capitol at the city of Washington, that the family of Gen. Washington may have the right to cause his body to be deposited under it, and that the monument be so designed as to commemorate the great events of his military and political life."

President Adams on being communicated this resolution to the widow, Martha Washington, and she replied: "Taught by that great example which I have always had before me, never to oppose my private wishes to the public will, I must consent to the request made by congress, which you have had the goodness to transmit to me, and in doing this I need not, I cannot, say what a sacrifice of individual feeling I make to a sense of public duty." But it was developed subsequently that Martha Washington understood that her remains were to be interred beside those of her illustrious husband. In accordance with that idea, she directed that a feaden coffin precisely similar to that of her hus and should inclose her body. When it was ascertained that the intention of congress was that only the remains of Washington should be interred in the national capital, her compliance was withdrawn. Therefore the body of Washington was never brought to this city, but was interred at Mount Vernon, side by side with that of his wife. The Washington bones were preserved by George Washington Parke Custis, who said: "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their deaths they were not divided."

George Washington was in his grave 33 years and a new generation came upon the scene of life before any further action was taken concerning the erection of a suitable monument to his memory. Those who have wondered that congress has been so slow in providing for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of Gen. Grant at Riverside park, need not marvel when they learn that so many years passed before anything tangible was done in memory of the father of His Country. In 1832, 49 years after the passage of the first resolution by the continental congress, an appropriation of $5,000 was made for the beginning of a contract with a skilful artist for the construction and erection of a statue to be placed in the rotunda of the capitol. Edward Everett, from the committee on the library, made a report recommending the employment of Horatio Greenough, of Boston, and he was finally given the contract for the work, which he estimated would cost $20,000. President Andrew Jackson signed the contract, and it was specified that the head should be modeled after the Houdon cast.

In 1834 Greenough went to Florence, Italy, and there, after much travel and incessant study, began work upon his model. He worked steadily and carefully, and in 1840, after six years of painstaking effort, the work was completed. In 1841, after numerous vexatious delays, the statue was transported to America in the American ship Sea, of Norfolk, after the vessel had been altered so as to admit the bulky, boxed figure through its hatchway. No ordinary sailing vessel of that period would admit the statue in its hold, and there was not a ship in our navy which could transport it. There was considerable correspondence between Greenough and the secretary of the navy on this subject. Finally the Sea was chartered for $3,400 to bring the statue to Washington, with the privilege of stopping at other ports than Leghorn, for additional cargo. The anxiety of the artist to display this statue in the national capital, which was then a small, however, that out of his own private funds he paid the commander of the Sea $1,500 to speed straight to Washington city with his precious burden. Consequently, on July 31, 1841, the Sea anchored at the navy yard in the Potomac river, and preparations were immediately commenced for the erection of the statue in the rotunda of the capitol. The sum of $3,000 was spent for a pedestal and $2,000 more was expended in the removal of the statue from the ship to the rotunda.

Nobody liked the statue after it was placed in position. It filled the center of the rotunda, the light upon it was unsatisfactory, and finally, at an expense of $3,000, it was removed to the position which it now occupies on the east front of the capitol, and was surrounded by a railing. Twenty years ago, however, the railing was removed, and there it stands an object of admiration and of criticism. Concerning its merits, each observer must judge for himself.

Ten years ago it was discovered that the frost and rain had caused the back of the statue to crack. The soft Italian marble could not withstand the vicissitudes of the seasons. In 1889, by request of the senate committee on the library, the architect of the capitol was authorized to erect a temporary shelter, and since that time, in winter months, the statue is covered by a movable frame. Time and the disintegration of the marble has ceased. Early in July the house was removed, and the statue is now exposed to public view by day and by night. Greenough, the artist, during his lifetime urgently requested congress to erect over and about it a pavilion for its protection; but congress never does anything right, until compelled to by stress of circumstances; and hence the painting has never been erected, and is not likely to be for years to come.

Concerning the criticisms made by critics of his own day, the artist wrote a memorial to congress, saying: "The head was modeled after that which he was walking stick and preposterous queue; Louis XVI., with his redundant periwig, cumbrous robes and stilted shoes, were applauded by contemporaneous artists. The effect of those designs to-day is irrepressible laughter. I have been thereby influenced to avoid putting up in high places of this republic a colossal copy of an uncouth costume, which has already passed into disgrace."

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. B. Barnett, one of Plainfield's favorites on the bicycle track, is still riding in the professional class. He has joined the Orient team and is said to be riding in excellent form.

F. L. C. Martin is getting up a party of Plainfielders who are going to attend the century run of The Evening Telegram, Saturday. The party will go to Jamaica, L. I., Friday night and be ready to start on time next morning. All who can join the party should make their entries through Mr. Martin at once.

At a coasting contest held between Westfield and Rahway at which there were many entries the results were as follows: First, E. T. Hand; second, R. F. Douglass; third, A. H. Barnett; fourth, Chas. Seaborn. At the starting Barnett lead with Edward White of Summit, N. J., close to his rear wheel. Douglass and Hand gradually forged to the front which resulted in Hand's finishing fifty yards to the best.

A conservative manufacturer said the other day that in his opinion the output of 1897 wheels would be about two-thirds that of 1896. He estimated that the over production this year amounted to considerably more than a third, and that the losses in many cases were very severe. He thinks that all the original makers, that is, those who were in the trade two years ago, will be found supplying wheels next year, but that nearly half the new comers, who know little of the business, will give it up in 1897.

In the care of a wheel there is probably nothing more trying than to attempt to remove rust from the parts. Where the rust is of long standing the best method is to thoroughly cover the parts with a thick coating of grease and let them stand thus for a couple of days, then rub briskly and thoroughly with a cloth moistened with ammonia. If this does not quite remove the rust, wash carefully with a weak solution of hydrochloric acid, drying thoroughly with a cloth and polish with soft leather, being careful to remove all traces of acid from the metal.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Frank Forrester, W. C. Williams and Harry Williams, of East Front street, went to Sewaren today fishing.

Walter Douglass, of Sycamore avenue, and William J. R. Thiers, of Grove street, leave today for Westport, N. Y., on the shore of Lake Champlain, where they will enjoy several weeks of shooting and fishing.

J. H. Hallock, of East Ninth street, accompanied by his brother, W. P. Hallock, have gone to the banks of the Saganaw river, near the St. Lawrence, Canada, where they will spend two weeks fishing and hunting. They went by train to Montreal and from there the balance of the journey was made by boat.

A party of fishermen came here from Plainfield and another one from Bound Brook Tuesday, but they were "Not in it." The only time for fishing here is at night and early in the morning, and it requires an expert to land many fish then. There are plenty of "bull-heads," both in the pond and about town, but they require a different kind of bait from that in ordinary use.

FESTIVAL AT HARRIS' LANE.

The Proceeds to be Devoted to Purchasing a Memorial Window.

A festival and picnic for the benefit of the Presbyterian church of Bound Brook, was held at Harris' Lane, only a short distance from there, Tuesday. It was held on the lawn of Joseph Johnson, and the proceeds will be devoted to purchasing a memorial window for the new church.

The lawn was prettily decorated and illuminated with Chinese lanterns and electric lights, and these were placed in position by Charles P. Sebring. The effect of the varigated lights was very pretty, as they reflected on the tables and booths scattered about the lawn.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hand, of East Front street, is confined to her home with illness.

John Taylor, of Dunellen, is reported to be seriously ill from heart trouble.

The Hon. James E. Martine, of this city, will speak at Elizabeth tomorrow evening.

Richard E. Dwight, of Rockview avenue, has returned from a sojourn at Jamestown, N. Y.

Rev. Mr. Dyer, of Metuchen, has purchased a Crescent of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has sold a ladies' Cleveland Swell Special to William Gerhold.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Vail, of Duer street, left yesterday for a week's visit at Quakertown, Hunterdon county.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PROTECTION OF GAME.

The Tri-County Association Receive a Diagram of Their Preserve.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union, Middlesex and Somerset Counties' Game Society was held at Percy C. Ohl's office in the Babcock building, last night. It was fully attended and much business of importance transacted. Reports of various committee were received and also a diagram and drawings of the territory at present under control of the society, which amounts to upwards of 4,000 acres. The secretary also reported that all bills and expense for the game liberated had been paid. Also all the outstanding indebtedness had been settled and a healthy balance left in the treasury. Badges were ordered obtained for the use of all the members; also a seal for the use of the society. The constitution and by-laws were ordered printed.

Numerous complaints of hounds running at large and destroying quantities of game and young rabbits were received. Several applications for membership were received. The limited number for the year being full, they could not be voted upon at this meeting. The next meeting will be held the second Tuesday in September.

IMPROVEMENTS IN THE BOROUGH.

Residents Who Take Pride in Making Pretty Lawns About Their Homes.

It has been said that he who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor. Walking down Grove street the other day, our thoughts "going to grass," we concluded there were some people who should be called multi benefactors. The lot between Park place and Holywood place, separating the home of Mr. Grant and Mr. Parker, has been nicely paved, ornamented with a thrifty hedge and the bare, rather desolate field of yore is now covered with greensward. "Sweet fields arrayed in living green" the neighbors sing as they gaze on the delectable sight. On the block between Lincoln place and Craig place, Mrs. Dietrich has removed the pine trees from the front yard and a good lawn will be the result. The Town Improvement Society has many disciples, even if their names are not down in its list of members.

WENT TO SLEEP.

A Wrecked Buggy and Other Unpleasant Features Resulted.

John Barry indulged to freely last night and fell asleep while driving his old blind horse down from Dunellen. The horse couldn't see a buggy standing in front of the Schepflin block on West Front street, and a collision followed resulting in demolishing a wheel of the buggy. Two young girls also narrowly escaped being run over. He was arrested by Patrolman McCue and arraigned in the city court this morning on the charge of reckless driving and being drunk and disorderly. This was not his first offence and he was given his choice between a fine of $25 or 60 days in jail.

BARNUM'S LONG PROCESSION.

How He Faithfully Kept His Billboard Promises.

"I was traveling with P. T. Barnum once," said Mr. Stow, "long before the railroad shows were in existence. We traveled by wagons from town to town in those days, halting on the outskirts of the town to enable the circus people to put on their show clothes and prepare for the parade. We were to show in a small town in Pennsylvania, and I had noticed that a bridge over which the wagons were to pass was weak. I sent word to Mr. Barnum to put the rhinoceros wagon at the rear, but he did not do so, and as it was in advance it broke the bridge. The show did not reach the town in time to make much of a parade.

"That night Mr. Barnum was seated in the village hotel when an angry lot of people who were disappointed at the size of the parade waited upon him and told him that he was a fraud.

"'How so?' said Mr. Barnum.

"'Well,' replied the spokesman for the crowd, 'you advertised two miles of parade and there was only one.'

"'Yes,' replied Barnum, 'there was one mile of parade and another mile of caused fools following it. That makes two miles, doesn't it?' — Syracuse Courier.

AUTUMN EVE WEDDING.

FIRST MARRIAGE CEREMONY IN THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Ceremony of Making Miss Grace Lewis the Wife of Henry Parsons Was Performed by the Bride's Father.

Resplendent in all its beauty, the Seventh-Day Baptist church was filled Tuesday night with a large number of Plainfield's society people who had gathered to witness the marriage of Miss Grace E. Lewis, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis and Henry Parsons, of Chicago. It was the first marriage that had been solemnized within that edifice. It was a beautiful wedding because of its marked simplicity in every particular. The decorations, consisting of golden rod, ferns, ivy and asparagus fern, were arranged in one massive bank which completely hid from view the pulpit platform. Seated at the organ was Arthur L. Titsworth, who, while the guests were arriving, rendered the following choice programme:

Offertoire in E flat, Driffield; March in B flat, Pabst; Allegro Pomposo, Harriss; May Waltz, Anderson; Marriage Fanfare, Gilbert; Bagpipe, Ryder; Grand Offertoire de concert, Thayer; Waltz, Ellenberg; Gavotte, Messenger.

At precisely the appointed hour, 7:30 o'clock the first notes of the wedding march from Lohengrin were heard, and at the same time the bridal party appeared at the left of the church. The ushers preceded, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Lulu Lewis and Miss Evlyn Lewis and maid of honor, Miss Mary A. Lewis, all sisters of the bride. Then came the bride leaning on the arm of her father. They walked to the rear of the church and approached the altar through the next aisle. A circle was formed about the altar, and as the bride and her father entered the circle they were met by the groom and best man, James Everitt Kimball, who entered from the right of the church. The bride's father performed the marriage and used a modified form of the Episcopal service. The responses were very distinct and especially impressive was the portion when the ring was placed on the bride's finger. During the ceremony, Pastorale, by Wormman, was executed with rare skill on the organ.

As the bridal party retired from the church, Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered. Immediately after the ceremony the doors separating the church from the Sunday school room were thrown open and in the latter room the bridal party stood, ready to receive the congratulations of their many friends assembled.

The brides' gown was white silk, with chiffon and pearl trimmings. A veil was also worn, and a beautiful pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaid and maid of honor were gowned in white organdie, with yellow silk trimmings. A chiffon collar worn by the maid of honor, was a mark of distinction.

There were guests present from Plainfield, Elizabeth, New York and the New England States. The ushers, F. J. Hubbard, Asa Randolph, Harry L. Maxson and S. R. Titsworth.

The bride and groom had planned to take the 9:15 Royal Blue Line train, but their young friends had it arranged so that they missed it and were obliged to take the 10:17 way train to New York. A company of the young people accompanied them to Netherwood where Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were showered with rice. Today noon they left Jersey City on the Black Diamond Express over the Lehigh Valley railroad. They will stop at Detroit and Cleveland. From the latter place they will go to Chicago where they will at once go to housekeeping.

The ushers received as favors from the groom very handsome stick pins while the bride presented her bridesmaid and maid-of-honor with similar pins.

The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Parsons were many and of great value.

The out-of-town guests present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Naughton, of Elizabeth; Mr. Holden, Mr. Fisher, of Boston; Miss Woodhouse, Mr. Cutter, of Woodbridge; Miss Patterson, Mr. Patterson, New York; Mrs. Taylor, of Chicago; Mrs. Clark, Willets, Clark, of Alfred, N. Y.; Mrs. Russell, Master Paul and Ernest Paul, of Bay Shore, N. Y.; Miss Tomlinson, of Shiloh; Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, of New Market.

Redistricting Local Mail Service.

On account of redistricting the city by the postal authorities the merchants and others south east of the railroad on Park avenue, will hereafter have four mail deliveries each day. Heretofore they have only had two a day—one in the morning and another in the afternoon. North Plainfield also gets increased facilities by extending the service to Coddington avenue and to Rockview Heights.

GAME SEASON OPEN.

Local Nimrods Can Now Go Fourth With Their Guns.

According to the provisions of the New Jersey game law for 1896 the open season for shooting railbirds and reedbirds began yesterday and closes with September 30th. Inasmuch as the first half of October often affords the best shooting at these delicious migrants, there is a strong sentiment among New Jersey sportsmen that the season should be extended at least until October 15th, if not for the entire month. Indeed, some of the fish and game wardens do not hesitate to say that its inclusion was intended, and that it was left out by oversight.

Reedbirds, although fairly plentiful in their haunts already, are not yet fat, as the seeds of the wild oats which form their food are still unripe. The scarcity or abundance of railbirds is almost always a matter of uncertainty until a high tide resulting from an easterly wind and perigee moon enables the gunners to penetrate the reeds and rushes in their shallow boats. The week beginning with Labor Day, September 7th, ought to be a favorable time to "get onto the marsh," as well as that beginning on the 21st, when the moon is at the full.

Squirrels, doves and plover may also be lawfully killed in September. They are reported to be in large numbers this year in Hunterdon and Morris counties, and afford excellent practice before the opening of the quail season on November 10th.

UNION BIBLE CLASS.

Rev. D. M. Stearns, of the church of the Atonement, Reformed Episcopal, Germantown, Pa., has consented to conduct a series of Bible classes for the study of the International Sunday-school sessions, in Plainfield, at the rooms of the W. C. T. U. on Watchung avenue, commencing Monday, September 7th, and every alternate Monday evening at eight o'clock. Bright Kaps for Reuben.

Reuben Ray, the elevator manipulator in the Babcock building, is still getting signers to his petition to the Babcock estate asking that he be retained in that capacity there. Rev. L. E. Livermore, Postmaster Hetfield and twenty-four others in the building have signed the petition, and this seems like a reasonable demand to have Reuben stay. Since he has been running the elevator no accidents have occurred, and his adaptability for such a position is plainly seen.

Found Ice and Snow.

A letter has been received from Rev. C E Herring, who at the time of writing was in Italy. Both he and Fred Bettman were well and enjoying themselves. Mr. Herring stated that in riding over one road in the Alps a considerable amount of ice and snow was found and they were obliged to walk with their wheels. They are now gradually nearing Antwerp, from which place they sail for home on Thursday.

Fair and Dance Proposed.

The Sons of Veterans held a very interesting meeting Tuesday night at which time the members thoroughly discussed the subject of conducting a fair or dance. It seemed to be the general opinion that the camp should at this time do something. The matter was laid over until the next meeting when a committee will be appointed.

Never Considered a Candidate.

Joseph O. Osgood, secretary of the Board of Trustees of All Souls church, writes to The Press, referring to the statement published in the New York Journal, that Rev. W. L. Udey has never been considered as a candidate for the successor of Rev. Hobart Clark.

CARNIVAL PREPARATION.

THE GENERAL COMMITTEE OF THE DAYLIGHT BICYCLE PARADE MEETS.

Favorable Reports From the Companies—The Cycle Academy May be Transformed Into a Bicycle Headquarters Then.

You will not know this quiet suburban city next Saturday afternoon. A vast army of cyclists and other visitors will invade the town and all to see the Daylight Bicycle Carnival that is to be held here next Saturday afternoon. As the time approaches, the probable size of the parade grows larger and larger as the different clubs in the vicinity are heard from. Even the members of the general committee are beginning to realize that their anticipations will be more than fulfilled.

The souvenir badges for the committee are expected to arrive today. The badges for the marshals will be very handsomely gotten up and will be of red, trimmed with gold. Special badges for the marshal's aids have also been ordered. They will be of very pretty design.

The advertising committee is still at work and the large posters have been scattered broadcast throughout the surrounding country. Their work will continue up to the time of the parade.

Secretary F. B. Stevens read acceptances from the following judges: Mr. J. H. Howell, Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman. Several of the others will be out of town on that day and replies have not been received from a number. The judges will meet at the Revere House that day at 3 o'clock from where they will be conducted to the reviewing stand.

The general committee met again last evening at the Board of Trade rooms, Babcock building, and made the few necessary arrangements that have not already been looked after. Most of the meeting was spent in a general discussion of the carnival and listening to the reports of the work done.

The work of the parade committee was told in yesterday's Daily Press and need not be repeated. The report of the finance committee was a cheerful one, as almost all the necessary funds have been subscribed or promised, and, if the other dealers who have not yet been seen by the committee, respond to the call as generously as the others, the committee will have no need to worry.

Several of the visiting clubs have communicated with the entertainment committee and asked to be assigned to hotels. It was left to the discretion of the committee as to whether the money be refunded or should be secured as a bicycle headquarters, where a lunch could be procured and wheels checked.

One change was made in the route, and that was where the parade goes over into the borough. The original line was down Grove street from West Front street to Craig place, to Somerset street, etc. The revised line is down Grove street from West Front street, to Park place, to Duer street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, etc.

The question of music was discussed and the parade committee reported that the Independent Fife and Drum Corps had been secured and they were authorized to hire a band. It is understood that Drake, of Elizabeth, is very anxious to come to Plainfield and give the people here a chance to hear what kind of music he can furnish.

The committee adjourned to meet again Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Board of Trade rooms

Philadelphians Enjoying a Good Time.

J. C. Dreifus and Misses Amelia and Bertha Dreifus and Miss Bertha M. Schinder, of Philadelphia, friends of Miss C. J. Debele, for the past week have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Debele, of Pine Grove Farm, and Mr. and Mrs. William G. Debele, of Somerset street. They were much pleased with their visit to Plainfield and vicinity and greatly admired the many beautiful drives as well as the scenery nature spread before them, as viewed from the mountain tops. Mr. Dreifus, who is a wholesale merchant of Philadelphia, returned feeling greatly benefited by the change and much needed rest from business cares. He was much interested in farming and country life in general. Mr. Debele drove the visitors down to Duke's Farm near Raritan, and also drove to Cranford on Saturday evening to witness the carnival, with which they were delighted, and returned by moonlight. The entire party were so much pleased with their visit that it will not be surprising if they summer here every year, especially near Pine Grove Farm. The Debele's being originally Philadelphians they knew just how to entertain and show their friends a good time.

HOME FOR THE NURSES.

CONTRACTS AWARDED FOR THE ADDITIONS TO THE HOSPITAL.

To Accommodate Pupils as Well as the Working Corps of the Hospital—Will Give More Room For the Patients.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital met in the Public Library, Monday evening to receive the report of the committee on the proposed home for nurses. There was a quorum present, notwithstanding the fact that a number of the members are away. The committee reported the various bids and went over the plans the second time. They were instructed to accept the lowest bid and go on with the work at once. The new building will contain thirteen bed rooms, beside a parlor, dining room, and other equipments necessary for housekeeping. It is expected that the building will be completed and ready for use by January 1, 1897. The accommodations provided will relieve the pressure on the hospital and permit the accommodation of a considerable number of patients. During a large part of this year the nurses have been obliged to give up their room for patients, but the new building will obivate this difficulty. The building will be a two story structure, brick, and will be placed at the western end of the hospital plot. It will be in the same general style as the regular building. It is designed, not only to accommodate the working corps of the hospital, but pupil nurses who are receiving their education as such. It is expected, too, that the building will become a central place for professional nurses, where they can be secured through the proper course. Five bids were received from responsible contractors and the lowest bid was accepted. The name of the successful bidder is withheld for the present. However, William Pangborn has the contract for the mason work. The building will be a hand*some and substantial one and an or*nament to the west end. Other business of importance was discussed, but action was deferred until the other members return from their vacation.

FOUGHT FOR A STEAK.

"Slippery Jim" Drew a Bonner, the Constable a Club.

He calls himself James Fitzpatrick, but the people of Westfield call him "Slippery Jim." He had a lots of liquor aboard Wednesday when he went into Woodruff's butcher shop and demanded a porterhouse steak.

When it was refused he started in to demolish the shop. Constable Todd went at him with a club. James fought back with a razor. He stripped off his clothes and said he would die before he went to the lockup. He was put in a strait jacket, and Justice Ingram sentenced him to Elizabeth jail for ninety days.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The case of McVey against Johnson has been adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court for one week. The case of the Sherman Outfitting Company against Kennedy was tried this morning and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff. Justice Newcorn issued a summons this morning in the case of Pratt et ux against Vetterlein et ux, which is returnable September 10th.

Fishermen's Luck.

"Al" Vail, otherwise known as the "Quaker," Wm. Pierson and James Manning constituted a party of fishermen from this city to Canarsie, Tuesday. They had unusual luck, for when they got home they did not have enough fish to make a respectable showing, and to make matters worse there was none on the dock to sell. So they landed here emptyhanded.

Husband and Wife Don't Agree.

On complaint of Mrs. Geo. Voehl a warrant was issued Monday by Justice Newcorn for the arrest of George Voehl, her husband. The complaint charges the defendant with assault and battery, and he was held in the sum of $200 to appear before the Grand Jury. Lawyer Angleman represents the plaintiff and W. A. Coddington the defendant.

To be Tried For Illegal Liquor Selling.

The trial of Nathan Richmond and Samuel Kline, on the charge of illegal liquor selling on Sunday, will take place at the city court rooms tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

Will Recuperate at Somerville.

Richard Barnes, from the mountains, who was arrested by Chief Wilson Monday night for being drunk and disorderly, was sent to Somerville yesterday for ten days.

WEDDED THIS AFTERNOON.

Pretty Nuptial Event Solemnized in a North Plainfield Home.

A very pretty September wedding was solemnized Wednesday at 3:30 when Miss Mary F. Giese, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Giese, of Elm street, became the wife of Caspar Waglow, of New Market. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large number of guests. The decorations consisted of maiden hair fern and golden rod. The former was prettily festooned around the ceiling and in the centre was suspended a wedding bell. Attached to the clapper, which was made of golden rod, was a broad band of satin ribbon, and, as the bridal party entered, Ruth Stauffer, of Westfield, a cousin of the bride, rang the bell. The bridesmaid was Miss Ida Giese, of Rahway, and the bestman was Conrad W. Giese, of Elizabeth, both cousins of the bride. The bride was richly gowned in a pearl gray costume with chiffon and pearl trimmings. She also carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The gown worn by the bridesmaid was pink silk with spangled trimmings, and she carried pink roses.

The bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, while the wedding march was being rendered on the piano by Mrs. Stauffer, of Westfield. Congratulations followed the ceremony, after which a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. Mr. and Mrs. Waglow left six o'clock amid a shower of rice for Asbury Park where they will spend the honeymoon. On their return they will take up their residence with the bride's parents on Elm street. Among the gifts was a beautiful and costly dinner set from the clerks in White's store where the bride was formerly engaged, a handsome silver water pitcher most artistically engraved, a beautiful clock and many other articles, both of costly and unique design. Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Westfield, Newark, Orange, Rahway, New Market and Plainfield.

The committee will hold another meeting this evening.

The parade will be reviewed from the Hotel Grenada balcony.

Harvest Thanksgiving Sale.

The local corps of the Salvation Army is making a hard effort to clear away their indebtedness, and to that end they have arranged to conduct a Harvest Thanksgiving sale on September 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th. For this sale they solicit gifts of any thing used on the household table, a list of which is printed on the bills which are being distributed about town. The gifts will be received at the barracks on West Second street, next Saturday and the sale will open on Labor Day. Ensign and Mrs. Brewer are the officers in charge.

DISCORD IN SOMERSET

DEMOCRATIC LEADERS AT VARIANCE WITH THE NATIONAL PLATFORM.

The Chairman of the County Committee Says That He Will Resign—James J. Meehan to Be the Leader.

The Newark News publishes the following about the political situation in Somerset county:

Scarcely a single Democratic leader of prominence supports the Chicago platform. Alvah A. Clark, ex-Speaker James J. Bergen, ex-Judge Bartine, Joseph W. Ballentine, George Pace, ex-Senator Wm. J. Keys, are among those who openly declare they will not vote for Bryan and Sewall.

The chairman of the Democratic County Committee is Joseph W. Ballentine, a wealthy carriage manufacturer of Somerville. "Nearly one-half the Democrats in Somerset county," said Mr. Ballentine, "repudiate the ticket. I shall not vote for Mr. Bryan; I do not like the platform upon which he stands, nor the company he keeps. I shall resign as chairman of the county committee at the first opportunity, which will be at the county convention. I would not be surprised if the Republican majority in Somerset would reach 1,500 or even more." Mr. Ballentine denounced the Chicago platform as un-Democratic, and said that he did not see how any self-respecting member of the party could support it. The course Mr. Ballentine will take is shown by a large flag bearing the names of McKinley and Hobart which floats from a rope stretched between his factory and a building across the street.

William H. Long, secretary of the Republican County Committee, placed the Republican majority at 1,000, and said that there is no Republican defection in the county. This, too, was the opinion of Editor Charles H. Bateman, of the Somerville Unionist-Gazette. County Clerk Frank Somers said that he had made a canvass of the county and had only found nine free silver Republicans, while three townships of Bridgewater, North Plainfield and Franklin alone, nearly 300 Democrats were found who would not vote for Bryan.

The leadership of the free silver Democrats seems to have fallen upon the shoulders of former Prosecutor James J. Meehan, and if the party do not make a good showing in the county it will be through no fault of his.

"I am very much pleased with the outlook," said Mr. Meehan, "the masses of the party are thoroughly loyal to the ticket and will not follow the men whom they have formerly *honored in deserting the party's can*didates. Throughout the country districts the farmers are enthusiastic and many Republicans have come over to Bryan. At Neshanic, in Hillsborough township, a number of Republicans have joined the Bryan and Sewall Club; in Warren at least a dozen Republicans are for free silver and the same is true in Montgomery. I know at least twenty-five Republicans who have assured me that they will vote for Br an. It is my firm be*lief that the Chicago ticket will get* the votes of very many workingmen who believe that neither party has ever cared for their interests and who see in Bryan's nomination the prospect of a new era in our Government. I hardly expect to see Somerset go for Bryan, but it is given more than 200 Republican majority I shall be very much disappointed."

Lawyer Geore W. Anderson agreed with Mr. Meehan that the silver prospects looked very bright in Somerset, and that the Chicago ticket was sure to receive many converts from the Republicans.

Neither the Somerset Messenger nor the Somerset Democrat, the two party organs published at Somerville, has as yet come out for the ticket, and the Bound Brook Democrat is the only newspaper in the county that is supporting Bryan and Sewall. It is believed, however, that the others will give at least perfunctory support to the electoral ticket named by the Democratic State convention.

At Raritan, which is really a suburb of Somerville, are located the large cloth mills owned by Adolph Mack, who is one of the Republican Presidential nominees. The mills employ a large number of Italians, who have been formed into a McKinley and Hobart Club. It is claimed by Democrats that this action of the Italians will drive many Republicans into the Democratic ranks, owing to the feeling which exists against the Italians, who, it is said, have taken the places of American workmen at much lower wages.

Some unknown person, either with malicious intent or otherwise, has broken off the handle of the town pump at Pumptown. So those thirsty horses that pass there now have to go dry.

AN AUSPICIOUS OPENING

MUSIC HALL OPENED BY THE PRODUCTION OF THE COTTON SPINNER.

Under the New Management of Ball and Willey the Attendants Greatly Pleased—Creditable Performance Given.

No theatrical season in this city in recent years has been commenced under more favorable circumstances for the management and public than was the opening of Music Hall Thursday. To many who have been patrons of the theatre in the past—and have been accustomed to accept the same condition of the house season after season until they expected it as a matter of course—the general air of neatness and order came as a pleasant revelation. Those who had not been there often before sat back in their chairs with a satisfied demeanor, and if it is to be judged by an absence of scowls and words of criticism, their opinion was one of approval. The audience was large and representative.

Before the curtain arose on the first act, Mr. Rich, of the firm of lessees of the theatre, made a little speech to the audience from the stage, in which he promised a season of good things in a dramatic way for Plainfield. He referred to the fact that many poor attractions were presented in Music Hall last season, but not because of their selection. Assuming the management of the house just as the season opened, he said they were compelled to fulfill many contracts that had been made by men not experienced in the business. But this season he promised good attractions from start to finish. He paid a graceful tribute to the ability of Messrs. Ball and Willey, the new local managers, and retired amid the plaudits of the audience.

With a wealth of scenic effects and capable acting "The Cotton Spinner" was produced for the first time in a creditable manner. It was written by Scott Marble, a well-known melodrama author. The programme conveyed the information that the characters and story of the play were taken from real life as viewed by Mr. Marble in Georgia. Typical as it was of the cotton belt, it struck the popular chord of the audience and received plenty of applause as the climaxes at the end of each act were worked out with clever dramatic skill. The plot of the piece has already been published in The Press, so it is needless to reiterate it at this time. The principal role is "Heath Honlore," a character peculiar to the South. Born without prestige and reared without education, he made his way up the rounds of the ladder of success till he became the principal storekeeper in his native town by sheer force of character. He was aggressive and honest, and yet a diplomat and a plotter. In a word, the character exemplified "the end justified the means." The role was impersonated with force and realism by P. Aug. Anderson. Albert Lando as "Godfrey Harding," the mill owner, acted the part of the man whose past always blighted all pleasure of the future, but he lacks energy in his gestures and action. Arthur Sprague was a villianious villian whose plots for ruin were balked until in the last act his wrongdoings culminated in his utter rejection by those whom he had inveigled into the idea, by cunning and deception, that nothing but honor was his motive. Paul Menifee, as "Jack Perry," honest but poor, portrayed the character with heroic effect. The part of Owen Meech, as "Timey Corser," was a difficult one, but he went through it in the methodical manner in which its counterpart in life in the Cracker State lives, and pleased the audience immensely.

Miss Eileen Moretta played the emotional character, with a good conception of dramatic effect. Miss Alice Trudelle, as "Randy," had a character that was popular with the audience, because it was new to the stage, and was portrayed in a quaint and odd spirit. "Sukey," the homeless waif, was acted in a pleasing way by Miss Jennie Wyatt. The rest of the characters were well acted.

The scenery and mechanical effects were designed and built by Lafayette W. Searey. They are extremely realistic, the explosion of the cotton mill being especially graphic. The music was furnished by George Rogers. Between the first and second acts William Bartow rendered a pleasing cornet solo.

A Young Life Cut Short.

Announcement is made of the death, in North Plainfield on Saturday, of Miss Marion Louise, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Anderson. Decedant was young in years, and was the favorite in the community in which she lived. Her death resulted after a six months' illness from consumption. Funeral services with requiem his mass were celebrated in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, Tuesday morning at 10:30.

George Rowland, a brother of John Rowland of this city, will leave today as a delegate from Elizabeth to attend the annual convention of locomotive firemen to be held at Galvaston, Texas, this month.

PREPARATIONS GOING ON

DAYLIGHT BICYCLE PARADE ENTHUSIASM STILL KEEPS UP.

Money is Being Subscribed Liberally by the Merchants—Local Clubs Will Make a Good Showing in Numbers.

Blue skies or dark clouds, the preparations for the Daylight Bicycle Carnival, which is to be held in this city on the afternoon of Saturday, September 5th, still go on. The support the committee is receiving is excellent and all the merchants that the finance committee has interviewed have contributed generously to the subscription fund. The meeting of the general committee last Tuesday evening has started the work forward with renewed vigor.

While Plainfield will have a whole army of unattached wheelmen in line, she will not be unrepresented among the clubs. The officers of the Crescent Wheelmen are hustling to get a big turnout and hope, if possible to have the club secure a prize. The Y. M. C. A. cyclers, who made such a splendid showing at the evening parade in this city, promise to far excell their previous effort. They have invited the Y. M. C. A. cycling clubs of eight other cities, all the other clubs in the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League, to be present and hope to have nearly two hundred men in line.

The Alls Athletic Association of this city has decided to send its football team in full uniform in the parade and they expect that their remarkable appearance will them a prize.

One great advantage of holding the parade in the afternoon is that the lady cyclists can turn out without escorts. Arrangements will be made so that all can ride in perfect safety without fear of accidents from crowding or collision.

It will not, of course, be necessary to decorate your wheel if you intend to parade but it will be preferable. It is hoped that everybody will decorate to some extent for it will add much to the success and pleasure of the Carnival.

The cyclists can be thankful that it is the Jersey Central that runs through here and not some railroad company that is at odds with the wheelmen. The Central transports wheels for nothing without the bother of check or release and will make special provision for carrying bicycles on the day of the Carnival. Large parties coming to this city and taking their wheels should notify the station agent so that special provision can be made for their wheels. Clubs are specially requested to do so. Parties of over ten can obtain a special rate of two cents a mile for each person.

CAPTURED A LUNATIC.

A Philadelphia Man Had Been Wandering With His Mind Wholly Blank.

Rumors had been reaching here for several days of a crazy man who had been seen on what is known as the Island Farm, situated at the junction of the Raritan and Millstone rivers, near Weston. It was stated that the man was not clothed and that he avoided every one. The authorities yesterday took the matter in charge, and Policeman Sebring, of Bound Brook, went over to the island and captured the wild man.

He found the man in a terrible physical condition. He was unable to take any food or drink, and after being properly clothed was brought to Somerville and lodged in the County Jail. He says his name is George L. Horner, that he resided until last month at No. 910 Cherry street, Philadelphia, and was in the glass business at No. 626 Arch street. On July 25 his wife, to whom he was greatly devoted, died. Disheartened at his loss, he sold out his business and disposed of all his household goods. He left his home with the last vanload of goods, and since then his mind has been a perfect blank.

He was taken to the hospital at Somerville yesterday afternoon and is being looked after by the Order of Foresters, of which he is a member. He is a middleaged German, apparently well educated.

—A meeting of the Directors of the Y. M. C. A. will be held on Thursday evening.

—The open street cars were shunned to a noticeable extent last evening the weather being entirely too cool for their use.

—Some eighteen or twenty of the carpenters in this city will be temporarily laid off this week, on account of the nearing to completion of the Garwood steel tube works. The men are at work now laying the floors in the extensive new buildings, and it is thought by the middle of the week, the buildings will have been completed.

—John Angleman, of 1018 East Front street, has entered a batch of his much-coveted game fowls in the State Fair, at Waverly. The birds have been entered in classes six and seven. The entries were a little late in going in, but the secretary has notified Mr. Angleman that they will all be classed without opposition. His entries will include six trios and three additional male birds,

PURE AIR FOR WEE ONES

A DELIGHTFUL RECREATION PLACE FOR THE CITY POOR.

Westfield Fresh Air Camp Located in a Cool Grove of Trees, From Which the Visitors Return Greatly Invigorated.

Seven representatives of the Congregational Christian Endeavor Society went to Westfield, Thursday, to conduct the evening service at the fresh air camp.

The meeting was led by John Vanderveer Beekman, Jr., whose talk on the Scripture passage beginning "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above" was very practical and helpful. Two duets, "Savior, More Than Life to Me," and "Take a Stand for Jesus," with autoharp accompaniment, were sung by Miss M. G. Morse, of Plainfield, and Miss Genevieve Gilman, of Brooklyn. The meeting was participated in by several Endeavorers and several of the guests at the camp.

These short, helpful services are held every evening and on Sunday afternoons. The whole atmosphere of the place is spiritual; the matron, Miss Curry, is a thoroughly consecrated young woman, whose influence over the women and children under her charge is of the best.

A visitor, the camp presents a very attractive appearance. The tents are erected in the midst of a pretty grove, just outside of the town of Westfield. The first thing to attract notice is the large tent where the meetings are held, and which also serves as a dining-room and living-room during the day. Here may be seen the mothers resting, talking or reading, while the children play among the trees or romp in the hammocks. Just beyond is the cooking tent, with its two big cookstoves and also its piles of provisions. Twenty or thirty loaves of bread are often used at one meal. Now we come upon the dormitory, a large wooden builing with two long corridors, from which open many tiny rooms, with large beds for the mothers and small ones for the babies. At the back are the bathrooms, with several large tubs and washstands.

Perhaps the prettiest thing on the grounds is the day nursery, a white tent, containing dainty little white cots, where the wee ones of the camp can be cared for during the day without trouble to the tired mothers. September 3d the camp will be closed for the season, as the cool nights make the life in the open air unsafe. The mothers will go to their homes rested and refreshed, taking rosier, healthier children than they brought with them, and taking also many practical lessons for use in their own households, and best of all, many of them will carry away a memory living faith in the Saviour in whose name this beautiful charity in conducted.

RUNAWAY IN A CROWDED STREET.

No One Was Hurt, However, and Little Damage Was Done.

There was plenty of excitement on Park avenue yesterday afternoon shortly before five o'clock when a runaway horse, with a delivery wagon attached, made his appearance and it seems almost a miraculous that no was injured. The wagon belonged to Demarest & Son, the grocer, and the driver was James Daly. He was just turning from Manning avenue into Somerset street when some boys asked for a ride. Daly refused and the lads began yelling and waving their hats. This frightened the horse and he ran up Somerset street. Daly pluckily hung to the reins and succeeded in guilding the frightened creature through the crowd of wagons. At the corner of Somerset and Front streets, the horse turned suddenly, throwing the wagon into a hitching post and upsetting it. The animal then turned into Park avenue and, with many narrow escapes, ran as far as Eighth street when Daly brought him down to a trot and a man caught him by the head. The only damage to the rig was the breaking of the breeching strap.

Not Burglars After All.

Mrs. Electra Craft, of Kensington avenue, noticed last Wednesday that the front door of the residence of Mr. Fredericks, opposite, was slightly open. Mr. and Mrs. Fredericks are away at present and so Jacob Rodman, brother of Mrs. Fredericks, and D. W. Martine, a neighbor, made an investigation yesterday. They could not discover that anything had been taken and everything appeared in perfect order. It is thought that some boys entered the house and left the door open as a joke. The burglar theory seemed hardly possible.

Now They Are Happy.

John Peterson, of East Sixth street, was arrested Wednesday on a complaint made by his wife which charged him with assault and battery. The defendant was arraigned before Judge Mosher, but as the evidence was weak, Peterson was released. Lawyer Miller represented the defendant, and he, with Judge Mosher, succeeded in effecting a reconciliation between the man and his wife.

Miss Try Mattox, of Webster place, is very ill at her home.

WORDS OF WROTH FELL

COLORED SERVANTS IN FANWOOD INDULGE IN DESULTORY REMARKS.

Cook and Waiter Disagree and Make Uncomplimentary Remarks About One Another—The Latter Pays a $10 Fine.

There was war at "The Homestead" in Fanwood last Monday morning and the principals in the affair were two negro servants employed at the house. One was Henrietta Freeman, the cook, and the other was Benjamin Harkins, one of the waiters.

There has been no love lost between these two for some time and last Monday morning Henrietta was talking about Harkins to one of the other servants. She maintained that what she had said about Harkins, and it wasn't very complimentary either, was all true while she declared that his remarks were perfectly slanderous. There is a saying about an angel whose wings can be heard to flutter when spoken of, and although Harkins isn't exactly an angel, yet he appeared in the doorway at this most inopportune moment.

He heard the remarks and his blood began to boil. He used language that wasn't the most polite and which the indignant cook declared was very threatening in its nature. So she declared, threatened to strike her.

The battle was finally called a draw and each side retreated resting on their arms. But the cook's brain had been at work and she planned a coup to completely rout her enemy. She came to this city and made complaint to Justice Newcorn against the aforesaid Benjamin Harkins for using threatening language and acting in a disorderly manner.

Justice Newcorn set the trial down for yesterday afternoon and at 2:30 o'clock the principals arrived, each followed by a train of witnesses. Harkins owned up to swearing at the cook, but declared he made no attempt to strike her. The Judge settled the case by fining Harkins $10 and sending everybody, except that individual, away happy.

CONFISCATED THE DOG.

But There Will Be Trouble Because Taken From Private Property.

Stago driver Thomas Neuman rents a barn on the French property in the rear of Somerset street, between Race street and Manning avenue, which has an outlet to each of the above-named streets. Thursday afternoon, shortly after four o'clock, dog catcher Squire Greyson saw a dog roaming aimlessly about on that private thoroughfare and quietly slipped a noose around the canine's head and brought him to the dog pound. Thomas Newman, the dog's owner, expostulated, but Squire Greyson was determined. The Squire was around last night taking different citizens whether he did right and said that a prominent borough official told him that he had. Now Newman threatens to bring suit against the borough for his dog. The dog catcher last night was considerably worried when Marshal Whiteley advised him to bring the dog back to the owner, saying that he was himself liable to be incarcerated. Squire did not know what that meant and said, "I didn't do dat boss, I only took the dog, dats a'l."

Litigation May Result.

Council John A. Frech has reported to the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders that in the matter of the application of the Hunterdon County Board to the Supreme Court to compel the Somerset Board to join them in erecting a bridge at the county line near Riverside, that Justice Gummere had decided that the Somerset Board could only be compelled to fill in the approach leading to the proposed bridge. This decision was made in face of the report of the surveyor that both the approaches and the bridge were outside of the county line. By a provision in Justice Gummere's decision the Somerset Board is afforded an opportunity to plunge into a costly litigation over the affair.

It is rumored among business men in Elizabeth that the Central Railroad shops next month will be run four days a week and that nine hours will constitute a day's work. Many men have been discharged the past month and the working force is smaller now than for years. It is also rumored that the bosses wages will be cut 10 per cent.

WEDDED IN ST. MARY'S.

MISS MAGGIE FLYNN BECOMES THE WIFE OF GEORGE MCUSKER.

Wedding Ceremony Performed by Rev. Father Smyth Before a Large Assemblage—Reception Held—The Guests.

Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock St. Mary's church was filled with friends and relatives of Miss Maggie Flynn, daughter of Peter Flynn, of West Third street, who were there to witness her marriage to George McCusker, of East Second street. The altar was handsomely illuminated and decorated, presenting a grand sight. Promptly at the hour named all were agreeably surprised to see Rev. Father Smyth, the pastor, who had just returned from his European tour, and he performed the ceremony according to the impressive ritual of the Catholic church. After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. McCusker were driven to the bride's home, where a reception was held later. The bride was attired in a brown traveling dress, trimmed with chiffon and jeweled trimming.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mary A. Loftus, and the best man, Michael Flynn, brother of the bride. The ushers were Edward Flynn, John Carney, Michael Whelan and John Flynn, and the groom's gift to each was a handsome scarf pin. At 7 o'clock, after the bride and groom had received the congratulations of their many friends on their continued prosperity and welfare through life, the guests sat down to well-laden tables and did justice to the many good things set before them. When all had partaken to their satisfaction, the remaining part of the evening was passed in a social way, one of the best entertainers being Uncle Peter, who sang "The Ghost" in a very creditable manner.

Among those present besides Mr. and Mrs. McCusker were Peter Flynn, Sr., Mrs. Thomas Roan, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. Moses Carney, Mr. and Mrs. John Flynn, Mr. and Mrs. John Neary, of Johnsonburg, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. John Millet and family, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gardner, of Hornellsville, N. An Invitation Accepted.

The meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., held last Thursday, was an unusually large one. There were present delegations from Pioneer Council, Bound Brook; Central Council, Westfield; and Winfield Scott Council, Elizabeth. The latter council extended an invitation to Franklin Council to attend exercises in connection with the presentation of a flag to a public school in Elizabeth on Labor Day. The invitation was accepted. The excursion committee made their report and the members were much gratified to learn that $150 had been realized as profit. The council received two propositions for membership and the rest of the evening was devoted to speechmaking and a general good time.

A LITTLE MOSES FOUND.

A COLORED BABY LEFT IN A CLUMP OF BUSHES BY ITS MOTHER.

The Infant Found by a Pet Dog Belonging to A. R. A. Woldt, of Westfield—The Mother Finally Found in This City.

Jeweler A. R. A. Woldt, of Westfield, made a remarkable find Tuesday night while walking on Westfield avenue, near the railroad bridge. He had his pet dog with him, and the little animal discovered a package lying in a clump of bushes, and attracted its master's attention.

Mr. Woldt found a two-months-old colored girl baby wrapped in soiled clothes. It was alive, well formed and had evidently been in the bushes but a short while.

The infant was carried to Justice Collins office and afterward turned over to Poormaster Decker, who placed it in charge of Mrs. Jane Brown, a colored woman living on Rahway road.

Poormaster Decker immediately commenced a search for its mother and by a series of inquiries in the neighborhood and among the colored residents he learned that a young colored woman by the name of Clara Jones, of this city, had been in Westfield that day with an infant answering the description of the one found by Mr. Woldt.

Constable John M. C. Marsh came to this city last night on the case and sought out Captain Grant. The Captain detailed Officer Saunders on the case, and he soon located the young woman staying with a friend on Richmond street. Constable Marsh took her in custody and returned to Westfield, where she admitted up to the parentage of the child.

The woman has no permanent means of support and left the child in the clump of bushes, knowing that it would not remain there long without being found, and with hopes that the authorities would provide a place for it.

THE BOW IN THE CLOUD.

All day long the clouds had lowered,
And the rain had swept the earth,
Till it lay all fair and lovely
As when God first gave it birth;
And the sunset splendor falling,
Set a rainbow in the sky;
And I learned life's hardest lesson,
As the clouds were drifting by.

For the radiant sunset glory,
Falling on my raptured eyes,
As the clouds were lifted, thrilled me
With a rare and weird surprise.
And our hearts are all the purer
For the Father's chastening hand,
While our faithful trust is prover,
Where we cannot understand.

So if hearts were free from sorrow,
Eyes were never filled with tears,
We should never know the rapture
When the Comforter appears—
When we rest upon His bosom,
As the weary child at home,
And the Father's smile caressing,
Sets a rainbow in the soul.

A RECONCILIATION.

BY MARY CLARKE HUNTINGTON.

The grass in the front yard had been newly mown, lending an added trimness to the well-kept place. Tulips in the borders on either side the long gravel walk made glorious patches of color under the morning sun. Suggestion of lilies of the valley drifted from the south garden wall. Above the open front door tall lilac bushes touched tops, and the heavy, sweet odor of their blooms spilled itself upon the hush that seemed to hang over everything.

In the instant during which he glanced about the familiar surroundings this hush smote keenly upon the senses of the young man coming from the rickety stage, but he turned with an unchanged face to assist his companion a slighting. She was a tall, well-built woman of 35, whose eyes and mouth betrayed habitual dissatisfaction, and whose vivid coloring was set off to advantage by her fashionable black. She kept step with him as they went up the walk.

"I feel quite tumbled to pieces from driving the whole way that enervating stage. It is ridiculous that the people here in Bloomingdon do not insist upon a better conveyance from the station to the Center. It is positively a penance to have to come here."

She spoke petulantly, glancing at her husband as though he were to blame for the occasion that had brought them. He did not seem to hear, and from an irritated desire to gain his attention, she went on: "Do tell me, Gerard, if there is no one in sight."

"You can go at once to your room and attend to your toilet," was his brusque reply. Then he went eagerly up the steps to meet an elderly woman who appeared in the doorway.

"Aunt Ann!" He stopped to kiss her, still keeping her hand.

His wife held out the tips of immaculately-gloved fingers, and, only waiting for affirmative answer to question as to their rooms, swept by with the soft draperies upstairs. Miss Ann Boynton led the way into the sitting-room, and sank upon the long haircloth-covered sofa. Gerard took a large chair opposite.

"I began to fear you were not coming," she said, tremulously.

"Only illness would have kept me from coming. Your telegram reached me duly, but Marguerite thought it necessary to order new black, and that delayed matters. I was sorry to hear of impatience in his voice as he said this. "Is there not something I can do? Are all preparations made?"

"Ah."

"At what hour is it to be?"

"At three this afternoon."

"I ordered some flowers sent on."

"They have come, and are arranged. Will you see them?"

He made an almost womanish gesture of dissent.

The sweetness of lilac bloom filled the silence that fell between them. Gerard remembered many springs ago of picking every blossom, and cutting the bushes, which were slender then, as white as the picture of a pretty young woman with flowing curls—his mother. She had died while he was very young, leaving him only a dream-like recollection of kisses and soothings, and touch of loose hair against his cheek. Aunt Ann was the only mother he had known. She, seeing now where his gaze turned, took a small leather case from the old-fashioned stand beside her.

"This is the best picture your father ever had taken. He was 40—just your age. The sands of his life ran a long time. He would have been 88 in June."

Gerard took the case. The grave eyes seemed looking back into his own with familiar kindliness.

"Tell me about it. Was he ill? Did he suffer much?"

"Had he been ill I should have written so. My letters told you of his gradual weakening of body and mind through many months. He missed you and Henry greatly as he failed. He would sit hours at a time by his window here and look down the road. I think he was watching for one or both of you to come. And then, toward the last, he sat oftenest on the back porch, with a lingering expression in his eyes. He seemed to be taking a farewell of the hills he had always known and so soon must leave. He did not speak often of you or Henry. You know he was a reticent man. The morning of the day he died he asked when you were coming home, and then he said: 'If I could only know them reconciled—my two boys.' An hour so later I came in, and he was sitting where you sit now, with the album on his knee. I spoke, but he did not answer." Tears were falling fast over Miss Ann's withered cheeks. "He had died looking at the pictures of you and Henry, taken together as children."

A blur passed again before Gerard's eyes. He could not see the tintype in his fingers.

"Do you think that Henry will be here—in time?"

"He has been here through it all. He came the day his father died."

The pronoun "his" touched Gerard. It seemed to put him at an immeasurable distance from all tenderness, without asking, he knew lay in the closed parlor. As mischievous little boy, as wild young lad, he had received the larger measure of tenderness, perhaps because followed by the largest measure of anxiety, but in the ten years of estrangement between the brothers Judge Boynton had turned most to the elder son. This had not been unnoticed by Gerard, though his rare visits home kept him from knowing the definite thrill of new interests had crowded out the old. Excitement of hours spent on 'change had put the even tenor of Bloomingdon days far in the background. Until this moment it had not realized how vital strong bonds home associations still held him. The life of which he had grown to think as narrow and primitive and slow now seemed to have held the essence of true existence. The rich luxury, almost sensuous beauty of his wife's keenness and sagacity, having an influence that extended widely beyond his palatial home and that had brought him many responsible positions, suddenly fell lightly about him alone. He thought of the woman upstairs with the beautiful face and the haughtily-poised head, but the thought brought no sense of nearness to any human being. Then he met his aunt's eyes—still wet and shining with the unstanched tenderness. He was not alone, after all. He got up and went over to her, putting a hand on her shoulder.

"I will go in and see him now."

Shades drawn darkened the parlor—before him only that coffin covered with the costly flowers which he himself had chosen. Gerard Boynton stood still. He felt something keeping him back—something that lay between him and the dead man, and that would not let him look upon the quiet face. And he knew what it was. The estrangement that had grown between two brothers through years of pride was visible to it. It was taunting him with its power to hold him away—it was reminding him that his was the blame.

He remembered well how it began. He had come for a summer vacation, and found Henry in love with a girl whom Henry had brought as his fiancée—a girl delicate and shy, with the sweetest smile in the world. And because of the smile, because Miss Ann petted her, and his father talked of her, and Henry followed her with looks of devotion, he had slipped into a way of trying to please her more than anyone else could please—succeeding so well that one day Henry paused in the doorway of the room, with grey eyes blazing black in colorless face, and quivering lips hurling such words as "traitor" and "scoundrel" at the brother who stood thus holding a frightened girl in his arms and glaring back defiance for indignation. There were tears from Miss Ann and reproaches from the judge; Henry shut the bitterness of a heart made void into his own room for days; the girl with shy smile went back to her people, and Gerard went also.

But while with Henry it had been the love of a life time, with Gerard it was only a phase. His passion dulled with distance; his letters grew less frequent, and stopped altogether. Then one morning at a club reception when a pair of magnificent black eyes looked into his own. He married the eyes and a fortune with them. The fortune invested had been many times doubled, had brought him a reputation for being a speculator who always came out gilded, but the eyes had brought him only a splendid creature, who threw over her fan at some ballroom gallant such smiles as had once been for him; upon whom had after the novelty of married life had worn off, and left his great house to the devices of servants for months at a time while she flung herself into the gayety of watering places and resorts, or visited in some more foreign city of note. What disappointment Gerard Boynton might have felt concerning his marriage he accepted with consciousness of a girl's smile chilled into death and a breast that remained cold because of his faithlessness.

It was knowledge of being in the wrong that made Henry's intense, pained words so rankle in his mind. He had never forgiven that last interview. Years of bitter truths compelled his ear. He had gone out from his brother's presence with a sad and sullen face, and had never spoken to him again. If the two chanced to meet on home visits they avoided each other, and neither Miss Ann nor the judge deemed it best to notice their averted eyes. Under stress of such emotion as these sad hours aroused, Miss Ann, for the first time, had spoken to Gerard of the long estrangement. She had touched upon this subject often with Henry, but he always answered that he could not be reconciled to one who did not wish reconciliation.

Gerard knew that the attitude of the one injured had been his. After that last interview there was no reproach in his brother's manner, simply a waiting for such confession as was his due to receive. Gerard's stubborn pride had kept him his confessor—but he was making it to himself now with a bitter sense that wrong-doing brought the heaviest penalty on the wrong-doer. Surely Henry's life could not be more empty of something to be desired than was his own.

A door closed so softly that he did not connect the sound with entrance. He heard the piteous whine of a dog in the hall outside, and knew that Shep was impatiently waiting at and voice of his master. He turned to quiet the animal, as though sound could disturb the sleeper's eternal calm, and saw his brother standing inside the room with hands full of lilies of the valley. It had been Shep's confession he had met. With a kind of shock Gerard noted the slight stoop of shoulders, the eyes spectacled from close study, the hair beginning to turn grey. But Henry looked the stronger for his increased prosperity rather than the few wrinkles upon the handsome face. Shep whined again, more insistently. Henry spoke to the dog without turning, but the quieting sound of the voice in the room, but both heard the patter of soft dog feet turning obediently away.

The elder man went around to the further side of the coffin and placed the lilies upon the white satin pillow. In a breath Gerard was conscious of some boys searching for these same blossoms along the sunny slopes of a garden wall, and shouting over each fragrant token of spring as only children can shout. The freshness of the thrill, ing every pulse can shout. The feeling of old comradeship swelled up in his heart, breaking down the last barrier which was keeping him afar from that still figure. He went quickly forward, and bent over the coffin a face in which every best emotion struggled for the mastery.

Henry did not lift his face from that fine old countenance, touched with the unmistakable dignity of death, yet holding such semblance of life that it seemed those closed lashes must lift and the sealed lips speak. A look of the thin white hair fallen over the forehead, and Gerard put it reverently into place. The motion stirred Henry to perception of a difference in the man standing opposite. He looked up and their eyes met in a way that brought their hands together.

Shep scratched at the door. A woman's voice spoke sharply to him from the landing. Mrs. Gerard was coming downstairs, and she disliked dogs. Shep's feet pattered slowly away to the sitting-room where Miss Ann still sat with the judge's picture on her lap. In the darkened parlor, amid the hush and perfume of rare blossoms, the brothers bowed with clasped hands over the open coffin, and the aged face within seemed rapturous in its divine content.—Springfield Republican.

AN AWFUL TICKLING.

The Trying Ordeal Undergone by an Unfortunate Swimmer.

Young Plunk Sladdock, a prominent society swell of Hawville, O. T., had just finished whispering into the rosy ear of Miss Gladys Mork, the village belle, the sweet story, old, but forever new, and the maiden's soft cheek was reposing trustfully on his manly bosom, the while he was filled with emotions so joyous and so sublime as entirely to prevent whether his head was on straight or not, when suddenly a deep, solemn groan of misery gushed in at the open window of the dimly-lighted sitting-room of the Mork villa wherein the young couple were.

"Oh, mercy," fluttered the maiden, in sudden fright. "Somebody has been listening."

"Wal, I'll soon see about that!" ejaculated Sladdock, grimly, jerking out his ready revolver with the deftness born of long practice. "Who the dev—that is, who are you, out thar?"

"All that is left of Henry J. Tiddicum," replied a cavernous voice, and a dark, hairy paw was then reached by a collar, were dimly seen rising outside of the window. "Don't mind me. I have no objections to offer."

"What are you doin' out thar, an' what in thunder do you want?"

"I just went to ark a favor of you, an' then I'll slink away. I hope you will excuse me for mentionin' it in the presence of a lady, but I went in swimmin' down at the creek late this afternoon, an' my clothes, an' all, got away to me now—an' some diabolical boys stole my clothes or the cows ate 'em up, or something. Anyhow, they disappeared, an' while I was pryin' around launtin' for a pleasant couple of young ladies an' gentlemen an' a preacher or two got betwixt me an' the creek before I noticed 'em. I have been prognosticatin' around, so to speak, from one slight nidin' place to another ever since.

"I have been blistered by the sun, torn by brambles, chased by dogs, stung by hornets, incerated by red ants, shot at once or twice by near-sighted gents, an' burned to a ragin' fever with shame. I lost my bearin's entirely at ark, an' finally slipped up to this window in time to hear you propose to the girl I've been engaged to for the last six months, an' whom I loved quite a good deal.

"Now the ark is that, in the name of pity, you'll wake Miss Gladys' brother, Hank, an' borrow enough clothes from him to cover me sorter half way decently while I sneak home through town, or if he hain't here, please fling me but a blanket or a barrel, an' let me go. I have nuthin' to live for now, but I don't want to be found dead in the awful an' unsightly condition I'm now in."—N. Y. World.

HELPFUL AUNT MARY.

She Was Always Looking Out for Other People's Interests.

There is a dear old lady who visits her nephews and nieces in New York occasionally, whom we may call Aunt Mary, and who, while expressing her appreciation of the delights of city life, finds much fault with certain phases of metropolitan existence.

"You never know your nearest neighbors," she protests. "The folks next door may be robbers, and pickpockets, and everything, for all you know."

"But, Aunt Mary, I don't want to know them, auntie," returns a favorite nephew. "Fancy calling on a friend, and when you go to leave your card find that he has picked your pocket of your card-case, not to mention your watch and purse."

"And as for recognizing that a stranger exists in public, why, it's a crime," Aunt Mary will continue, warming up to her subject. "A body might be killed right here, and no one would speak to him."

"But, auntie," goes on the incorrigible, "there are so many people here that we can't go round with splints and adhesive plaster and that sort of stuff in our pockets, and if we see a stranger's head wobble rush up and offer the things to him with the idea that he's just snapped off his neck."

But recently, in returning home on the train, Aunt Mary has had cause to demonstrate her theories. In the seat ahead of her was a young couple who enlisted her favorable attention. She conceived them to be newly married, and her heart warmed toward them without delay. The train soon stopped at a small station, and they left the car. She observed them on the platform outside, and just before the train started she happened to spy a pasteboard box, which the girl had, during the rush of leaving, left behind. Anything in the seat they had deserted. "Goodness," thought Aunt Mary, "they're so intent on each other that they've forgotten their bundle." She seized it and leaned out of the open window. The girl stood by the baggage-room door, the man having apparently gone inside. Aunt Mary waved the box at her. She answered, but the clang of the engine-bell drowned out what she said. The train started. The girl threw up her hands in despair. The train started; there was nothing

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local C. mmittees, to select delegates to a State Convention to be held at Taylor Opera House in the city of Trenton, on

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 9TH, 1896,

at 12 o'clock m., for the purpose of selecting presidential electors. The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic v tes cast at the gubernatorial election of 1895 and o e for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward, township and voting precinct shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

JAMES SMITH, Jr.,
Chairman State Democratic Committee.
WILLARD C. FISH, Secretary.

For the first time in several years there will be a contest in the Democratic primaries in this city next Friday.

The Newark News says that there is some talk of ex-Judge W. A. Coddington being nominated for Senator by the Democrats.

Garret A. Hobart's letter formally accepting the Republican nomination for Vice President is ready now, but will not be issued for a week.

Joseph W. Ballantine, chairman of the Somerset Democratic County Committee, says that he intends to resign the position at the county convention soon to be held. He is a gold standard man.

The elaborate reception and entertainment of the great Li Hung Chang is a striking exhibition of one of the idioms of this country, when it is considered to what restrictions the rest of the almond-eyed people are subjected when endeavoring to enter this country.

Mrs. Charlotte Smith, president of the Woman's Rescue League of the United States, has arrived in New York from Washington with a big job on her hands. She intends to convert the feminine bicyclist that to persist in wheeling is spinning to ruin. She is on the unpopular side.

John Kenny, one of the lay Judges of Hudson County, who was legislated out of office by the Voorhees act, disputes the wisdom of the decision of the Supreme Court and will, with several other lay judges, appeal the case to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

Everybody will be anxious to witness the big bicycle parade next Saturday afternoon, and that all the employes of The Press may view it in its splendor and glory, this paper will be issued at noon on that day. Correspondents and advertisers should govern themselves accordingly.

In another column today The Press gives space to a long and needlessly bitter communication from Lemuel W. Serrell anent the finding of a sewer running from his property, and the Borough officials claim, polluting Green brook. In this letter Mr.Serrell does not, as reason would dictate in bringing the matter into print over his signature, attempt to establish his right to maintain the sewer, but instead he heaps abuse on everybody in general. So far as his reference to The Press is concerned, we can only say that The Press has no interest in the matter either one way or the other beyond the publication of the news. If in doing this we have erred, we intend to "continue in the error of our way."

Senator Foster M. Voorhees has authorized the Elizabeth Journal to state that he is in no sense a candidate for State Senator in Union county, but that if the nomination comes to him practically unanimously he will accept it. This is considered a very important decision in view of the fact that Union county and the Eighth Congressional district have unanimously supported Ernest P. Ackerman, of Plainfield, for Presidential elector on the National Republican ticket. Senator Voorhees has not heretofore made any formal declaration on this subject, but at the earnest solicitation of his many friends throughout Union county he has finally consented to make this formal announcement.—Journal.

The call for the Democratic primaries in this city is published in another column.

Mat Quay is now at the head of the Republican National Committee in the Eastern States.

The New York Herald is pushing Henry Watterson, the noted Kentucky editor, as a candidate for the gold standard people at Indianapolis.

In the news columns today, The Press publishes some political gossip concerning Somerset county. Both sides of the Democracy are given.

Elizabeth is anxious to have its name emblazoned on a war ship now being built at the Nixon shipyards in that city. The Mosquito City is not bashful.

The Trenton Daily Globe, as a Democratic organ, has made its appearance. It has thirteen columns of editorial and one column of news. We fear that it will not revolve very long at that proportion.

The New Jersey delegation to the sound money convention at Indianapolis is headed by W. J. Curtis, of Summit. He says that a money plank similar to the one in the May convention of the New Jersey Democrats will be satisfactory to the delegation.

The Trenton Daily Globe, a Democratic daily newspaper, will commence publication this week under the editorship of ex Mayor John Briest. It will advocate and support the regular Democratic nominees and doctrines of the Democratic party. There is not at the present time a single paper in Mercer county supporting Bryan and Sewall.

Those Democrats in Trenton who are steadfast to the Chicago platform and candidates are an aggressive lot, as will be observed by the statement that they have adopted a resolution providing that the gold standard Democrats must take an oath to support Bryan and Sewall befose being permitted to elect delegates to the State convention.

In his address to the Elizabeth Democrats, Thursday, James E. Martine quoted a New York paper who ridiculed W. J. Bryan because he appeared in an alpaca coat and wore pants that bagged at the knees. Mr. Martine then caused a laugh by saying: "I have been a candidate for public office once or twice, but failed to connect, and I have just found out that I was defeated because I had no crease in my pants."

The Supreme Court decision declaring constitutional the law legislating the lay judges out of office is an important one in two ways than one. One effect it will have is the destruction of a campaign argument which the Democrats would have used to throw discredit on the last Legislature if the decision had been an unfavorable one. There is a probability, however, of the case being appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The Summit magistrate who compelled the Italian to pay $10 for keeping two robins confined in a cage is commended for his act by the New York Mail and Express. It observed that the case will serve as a timely warning to the wanton destroyers of our native birds. Sentiment in favor of protecting the feathered tenants of the fields and forests from extermination is steadily increasing, and its growth will be promoted by the vigorous enforcement of the law against every offener.—Elizabeth Journal.

I have been a candidate for political office once or twice, but failed to connect, and I have just found out that I was defeated because I had no crease in my pants.—J. E. Martine.

If Mr. Martine has his way he will be a candidate again this year. In that case his efforts at connection will fall worse than ever. Creases or no creases.—N. Y. Tribune.

This remark in Mr. Martine's speech was prompted from a statement in the New York Times that Mr. Bryan appeared before the convention "with his pants bagging at the knees." Again we authoratively state that Mr. Martine is not a candidate for office this year. His zeal is not from selfish ambition or hope of political advancement.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DETAILS OF THE PARADE

FURTHER ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR THE DAYLIGHT BICYCLE CARNIVAL.

The Parade Committee Settles on the Line of March and How the Parade Shall be Divided—Meeting Last Night.

One of the most perplexing questions in connection with Plainfield's great event, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival, which is to be held in this city next Saturday afternoon, was the arranging of the line of march of the bicycle parade so as to cover the city and borough as thoroughly as possible. That and the grouping of the paraders into divisions, besides other important business, was looked after at a meeting of the parade committee held last evening in the Board of Trade rooms.

The great crowd of cyclists that is sure to be present necessitated the dividing of the parade into numerous divisions. The divisions will be by no means small, however, and it was decided that each marshal should have two aides to assist him in keeping the line in order.

The headquarters of Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin and the press and information bureau will be at the Revere House, corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street. In front of the hotel on Park avenue the head of the procession will form with the different divisions forming on the other streets and falling into line in their order as the rest of the column passes them.

The line of march will be as follows: From the corner of Park avenue and West Eighth street, to Crescent avenue, to Watching avenue, to East Fifth street, to Richmond street, to LaGrande avenue, to Franklin place, (reviewing stand) to Putnam avenue, to Hillside avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Seventh street, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to North avenue, to Watchung avenue, to East Front street, to West Front street, to Grove street, to Park Place, to Duer street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, to Jackson avenue, to Westervelt avenue, to Fairview avenue, to Linden avenue, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Washington avenue, to West Front street, to Grant avenue, to West Seventh street, to Plainfield avenue, to West Eighth street, to Madison avenue, to West Fifth street, to Park avenue, to East Ninth street, and countermarch on Park avenue to East Sixth street, to Watchung avenue, to Crescent avenue, and disband in the square in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

The formation of the divisions with the marshals in command will be as follows:

First Division—Ladies and escorts, commanded by Marshal Lewis G. Timpson, will form on Park avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets facing Eighth street.

Second Division—Military cycling clubs, commanded by Marshal C. P. Staubach, captain of the Eighth Regiment Cyclers, N. G. S. N. Y., will form on West Eighth street, facing on Park avenue.

Third Division—Uniformed clubs of New Jersey, with the Crescent Wheelmen having the right of line, commanded by Marshal Charles C. Lister, captain of the Crescent Wheelmen, will form on Park avenue between Eighth and Ninth streets, facing Eighth street.

Fourth Division—Other uniformed clubs, tandems and tricycles, commanded by Marshal Charles B. Morse, will form on Third place, facing on Crescent avenue.

Fifth Division—Uniformed clubs, with the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers having the right of line, commanded Marshal Thomas A. Cuming, captain of the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers, will form on Second place, facing Crescent avenue.

Sixth Division—Junior division, with the Crescent Wheelmen, Juniors, having the right of line, commanded by Marshal F. R. Stevens, will form on First place facing Crescent avenue.

Seventh Division—Plainfield unattached wheelmen, commanded by Marshal R. B. Titsworth, will form on Watching avenue between Seventh and Ninth streets, facing Seventh street.

Eighth Division—Visiting unattached wheelmen, commanded by Marshal M. F. Elderton, will form on Watchung avenue, between Seventh and Ninth streets, facing Seventh street.

Ninth Division—Business floats, commanded by Marshal J. Hervey Doane, will form on LaGrande avenue facing Crescent avenue.

Tenth Division—Colored cyclists, with the Victor Wheelmen having the right of line, commanded by Captain Israel Jones, will form on East Seventh street facing Crescent avenue.

The reviewing stand is to be placed in the square formed at the junction of Franklin place, La Grande and Putnam avenues.

Now that the line of march has been selected, the preparations for decorating will go on immediately. It is therefore expected that every house along the route of the parade will decorate to some extent and every residents in the city should give his house a gala appearance as the visitors will pass through all the streets whether the parade does or not. The business places will also be well decorated for the occasion. The crowd will begin to come early in the morning and it will be late in the evening before they leave.

The reports from the out of town clubs are particularly pleasing, as well as from the local clubs, for all of the latter are going to turn out in full force. The well-known Clio Wheelmen, of Jersey City, who took a number of prizes at the bicycle parade on Hudson county boulevard, last Saturday, have promised to be present and will try to win as many as possible at Plainfield's great event.

The coasting contest, which is to take place in the morning, was discussed and N. R. Titsworth was appointed referee to have general charge of the affair. Any information regarding it may be had from Mr. Titsworth at H. E. Rider's sporting goods store on North avenue.

It was remarked at the meeting that the only thing needed to make the success of the carnival complete, was the presence of Li Hung Chang. But as that great Chinese statesman is receiving similar invitations by the dozen and will be at Washington Saturday, it is not likely that Plainfield and her guests will have to entertain him and his suite.

PHYSICAL DIRECTOR HERE.

C. E. A. Heywood Ready to Start the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Work.

C. E. A. Heywood, the new physical director for the Y. M. C. A., arrived in town Saturday evening. Mr. Heywood comes from the Springfield Training School, which institution affords the best physical training, theoretical and practical, that can be had in the country and turns out the most competent physical directors. Dr. Gulick, who is at the head of the physical department in the school, strongly recommends Mr. Heywood. Mr. Heywood was also class leader for three years at the Twenty-third street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A., which is one of the best-conducted gymnasiums in the country, and which was under the direction of Dr. McCurdy. Mr. Heywood is thoroughly competent to make physical examinations and to make the gymnasium work interesting and attractive to all.

Depression of Spirits

so common in summer-time, accompanied by loss of energy, lack of thought-power, means a deficient supply of nourishment. The vital force is lost. It isn't a question of muscle and sinew, but of resistance and endurance. At any age but especially in youth, it involves the risk of lung disease. Loss of flesh and a cough are threatening signs.

AN ARMY FUNERAL.

The American Volunteers Hold Services Over the Remains of a Comrade.

The first funeral to be held by the local post of the American Volunteers, took place Saturday evening at Reform Hall. Mrs. Edith May Felter, a member of the local post, quietly passed away last Thursday after a lingering illness, and her fellow-workers observed the last sad rites over her remains.

Captain Mimms, who is a great favorite in this city, acted as leader at the meeting, which was a very impressive one. Unlike the usual meetings, it was very quiet, and there was a solemnity about it that impressed all. Captain Mimms made a few touching remarks about the departed soldier, and the services closed with a consecration meeting. A significant fact was that one of the Salvation Army officers assisted at the meeting. The floral tributes about the white casket told of the sorrowing relatives and friends.

The body, accompanied by the family and near friends, was taken to Yonkers on the 11:28 train Saturday night, and yesterday morning a short service was held at the grave previous to interment. A very touching incident was witnessed Saturday evening when the bereaved mother of the decedent was looking for the last time on the face of her daughter. The scene touched every heart.

Those who served as pall-bearers were P. B Laire, Theo. Harman, G. H. VanNest, Alex. Grant, W. L. Sharkey and F. Pangborn. All of the above are members of the local American Volunteer Post, No. 6.

FUNERAL OF MISS ANDERSON.

Last Sad Rites Enacted at St. Joseph's Church This Morning.

The last sad rites following the death of Miss Marion Louise Anderson, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Anderson, who entered into rest on Saturday, August 29th, after a lingering illness from consumption, took place from St. Joseph's church Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

The church, which had been beautifully decorated with flowers, trailing vines, etc., gave evidence of the high esteem in which the young woman was held by her many friends.

Solemn high mass was said by Father Pere Septier, of the Order of Mercy, of Brooklyn, assisted by Rev. Father Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, and a visiting priest. The body reposed in a beautiful white casket, covered with flowers. Sweet and appropriate music was rendered by Organist A. Lansing, of St. Columbus church, New York, and Mrs. McComb, of New York, was the soprano, assisted by the church choir. The pall-bearers were Edouard S. Loizeaux, Will S. Loizeaux, William De LaRocne Anderson, Robert W. K. Anderson, Thomas H. Taylor, Jr., and Irving Wayne Clark. The body was taken to Greenwood for interment.

COMPETED WITH THE CHURCH.

Private Individuals Sold Goods for Their Own Profit at a Church Picnic.

Judge Austin, of Mount Bethel, is to try, on Saturday next, a case which brings in Sunday-schools, teachers and others. The facts, as stated, are these: On August 12th, there was a union picnic of the Sunday-schools from the vicinity of Mount Bethel. Some outside parties from North Plainfield, so the Judge says—William Demier, George Mobus and H. Speer, went to the place and erected a stand for the sale of soda water, cream and cake. The proprietors were warned that they had no right to sell there but the stand continued business just the same with its full quota of clerks.

Now an action on contract has been started and Justice Austin and a jury will decide upon the merits of the case on Saturday of this week. This is, perhaps the first case of the kind ever brought into the New Jersey courts, and the result is anxiously looked forward to.

Another Hen Roost Robbed.

James Kane, of West Third street, has been corraling a brood of fine young game fowls and they were just "getting ripe" for winter business. But on Saturday night someone, as yet unknown, looted his hennery and carried off an even dozen of his choicest birds. James thinks he would be able to identify his fowls if he could get a glimpse of them. There seems to be a propensity at present hereabouts for robbing hen roosts, and the much-admired game breed is suffering from the unexpected onslaught.

Received a Lecture and Let Go.

Peter Benford, son of Maggie Benford, of Paradise Alley, who was arrested Saturday charged with stealing buttons from J. T. Vail's office on North avenue, was arraigned before Justice Newcomb yesterday. After the Judge had given the boy a good reprimand, he discharged him with a warning, that the next time he would receive the full penalty.

MURRAY HILLS WINNERS

LACK OF JUDGMENT LOST THE GAME FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

For Four Innings They Did Not Score, Then They Rallied Up for, But Were Equalled by the Opponents in the Next.

The Murray Hill baseball team made its second appearance in this city on Saturday afternoon last, and for the second time they returned home with a victory. The attendance was excellent and every one was confident that the home team would win, but it was not to be, and the cranks were downhearted. The game was a peculiar one in many respects, and the Y. M. C. A. boys should have won. Up to the fourth inning they failed to score, but in that inning they succeeded in placing six runs to their credit, and that was all they got. In the first half of the fifth the visitors, through a combination of errors and two hits also secured six runs. These runs, together with two more previously made, proved to be the winning runs. The hits were even, each side making seven, and the errors stood seven to six in favor of the home team. A few slight changes were made in the playing of the Y. M. C. A. boys. Schenck played first base and MacLoughlin covered left field. Best did not appear and in consequence Warren MacLoughlin occupied the box. He pitched a good game and struck out eleven men, while his opponents only struck out six. Just when the home team needed a few hits they were unable to get them. Good coaching in the first inning pushed two runs which they could have had with ease, but the desire to reach home was too strong and they lost the runs through poor judgment. In the field, at times, the Y. M. C. A. boys gave a good exhibition of juggling, but then they have not played in two weeks and their joints were a little stiff. In all, however, both teams played a creditable game, and the crowd seemed to enjoy the contest. Graham was not so effective as in previous games, and he was touched up pretty lively at times.

Mr. Kenny, the old Princeton player, covered first base and put up an ordinary game. He did nothing remarkable neither in the field or at the bat. There was no heavy batting as on the previous occasion, although the home team secured more hits. T. H. Keller umpired the game and gave excellent satisfaction. Tom is all right, and when the crowd gets the best of him they must be well up in the game. Several attempts at bluff on the part of the visitors were dealt with properly by Tom. The Plainfield people would no doubt enjoy another game between these teams, and would probably patronize it largely. Symons distinguished himself by making a three-bagger and reaching home, while Schenck made a two-bagger, which brought in two runs.

Next Saturday the home team will play the Plainfield Athletic Club team. The latter team has been playing good ball, and their defeats are few and far between.

The full score of Saturday's contest is as follows:

SETTLING THE AVENUE EXTENSION.

Most of the Affected Borough Property Owners Sign the Papers.

In connection with the opening of Watchung avenue, Borough Counsel Chas. A. Reed has succeeded in effecting a settlement with the following people who are to be affected by the opening: G. L. Taynor, L. M. Bird, Harriette Richardson, M. E. Mayer, C. W. Taynor, Mary E. Adams, Chas. Taynor, Elmer V. Taynor, Margaret T. Daley, Mary E. Daley, Elizabeth Mayer, Fred Becker, T. Rutledge, G. F. White, St. Joseph's church, Mary E. Schenck and Emil Messersmith. It will be remembered that The Daily Press published the figures allowed each ope sometime time ago, and the settlement was for the same figures.

There are remaining eight persons who have not settled, but this is due to the fact that several of them are away. However, it is confidently expected that a complete settlement will be made by Friday so that a report of the work can be submitted to the Borough Council Friday evening. All of the above who settled made no objection to the amount set against them and they accepted the terms as satisfactory.

PASTOR TO TALK FOR BRYAN.

Unitarian Minister to Take the Stump for Ten Weeks in Connecticut.

The New York Journal has the following dispatch from this city: Rev. W. L. Utley, the Unitarian clergyman who was prominently mentioned as a probable successor to Rev. Dr. Hobart Clark, of All Souls church, when Dr. Clark first tendered his resignation, will not be able to come to Plainfield, at least, for the present. He is located at Darien, in Fairfield county, Conn., where he is regarded as one the the most talented preachers of his denomination.

A letter received states that the pastor has entered into an arrangement with the National Democratic Committee to take the stump in Connecticut for Bryan and Sewall, and that he will devote the next ten weeks to campaigning.

All Souls church is nothing if not liberal, and had its preference taken the shape of a formal call, the matter of the minister's politics might not have made any difference. As, however, the call has not been given, no action will follow at present.

WAS IT PREMEDITATION?

CLAWSON SAID TO HAVE THREATENED HODGETT'S LIFE BEFORE.

The Murdered Man Once Horsewhipped Clawson's Brother and There Was Bitter Enmity — Funeral Observed Tuesday.

Bedminster township has not recovered from the stir occasioned by the murder of Harry Hodgett Saturday morning. There is rumor current among the farmers of that district which, if proven, will make the case go hard with Elmer Clawson, who at present stands accused of the murder. On good authority, it is stated by the neighbors that Elmer Clawson told his father, the night before the tragedy, that he intended to shoot Hodgett's in the morning. His father told him not to do it as it would not do any good and he would have to swing for it.

Further details of the cause of the quarrel between Hodgett and Clawson have been made public.

It seems that Clawson's older brother, Charles, was also employed by Hodgett on his farm at one time, but Charles did not have the best reputation and is said to have stolen some money from his employer. Hodgett, it is said, was very angry at the time and horsewhipped him severely for it. From that time the Clawsons' had shown considerable enimity toward Mr. Hodgett.

The Somerset county authorities have now place Charles Clawson under arrest on a suspicious character.

The funeral of Harry Hodgett was held from his late residence near Pluckamin, yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended. Mr. Hodgett had always been well thought of in the community, and his friends were numerous. A great number were also attracted to the services out of curiosity.

Mr. Hodgett leaves a wife and three children in almost destitute circumstances, for his small savings from the farm had been used to bring his family from England about a month ago.

CLAWSON IS THE ACCUSED.

Such Was the Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Murder Case.

According to the Coroner's jury in the inquest held over the remains of Harry Hodgett, the young English farmer, who was murdered near Pluckamin Saturday morning, as was told in The Daily Press that afternoon, Hodgett came to his death at the hands of Elmer Clawson.

The inquest began last Saturday afternoon and was adjourned until today. At 11:30 o'clock, after about fifteen minutes deliberation, the jury brought in their verdict.

The accused man was brought into the Court at Somerville, where the inquest was held, and appeared very calm and collected. He was dressed in dark trousers and a white sweater. By advice of his counsel, Steele & Meehan, of Somerville, he refused to be sworn when asked if he would by Coroner Stillwell.

County Physician Wagoner told the result of his autopsy. The first bullet, he said, entered the left breast and penetrated the lung, causing a hemorrhage and resulting in the death of Hodgett. It lodged in his spine. The second bullet lodged under his shoulder blade. The third was picked up on the floor. The bullet and the shirt of the murdered man were produced in evidence.

The courthouse was crowded, but the audience was a very quiet and orderly one.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spencer, Iowa, Reporter, says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. These medicines have been in constant use in Iowa for almost a quarter of a century. The people have learned that they are articles of great worth and merit, and unequaled by any other. They are for sale here by T. S. Armstrong druggist.

WILD COAST DOWN THE MOUNTAIN.

A Young Lady Lost Control of Her Bicycle and Was Badly Hurt.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees Laing, of East Front street, narrowly escaped being instantly killed on Saturday afternoon last. Early in the afternoon she rode her wheel to the mountains and had ridden some distance along Johnston's drive. On the return she passed the Mountain Park Inn on her wheel and started down the road toward Somerset street. When she first struck the decline she had good control of her wheel, but as she went on the speed increased rapidly and she was fast losing control of the bicycle. When less than half-way down the mountain the wheel got the best of her and she was riding at a high rate of speed. She retained her equilibrium until a turn in the road was met. At this time Miss Laing was thrown with great force from the wheel. For a few minutes she was dazed.

Miss Laing was picked up by a passer-by and taken to the end of the drive where she was put in a trolley car and sent home. Dr. Jenkins was called and learned that Miss Laing had sustained severe injury. Her head was badly cut and about her body there were bruises and several smaller cuts. She has been confined to the house ever since and probably will be for some time. That she was not killed is a miracle.

Theories of cure may be discussed at length by physicians, but the sufferers want quick relief; and One Minute Cough Cure will give it to them. A safe cure for children. It is "the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results." For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

From all accounts Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a Godsend to the afflicted. There is no advertisement about this; we feel just like saying it. The DEMOCRAT, Carrollton, Ky. For sale by T. S Armstrong, Druggist.

THE SMITHS GATHERED.

THE GREAT FAMILY REUNION AT PEAPACK YESTERDAY.

The Clans Came From Far and Near and Spent the Day in Renewing Acquaintances and Having a Good Time.

Peapack is sleeply for just 364 days in the year. Then the town with the unpoetical name wakes up and takes on a gala day air, which is only equaled by a "salt water" day at Asbury Park. Wednesday was the day of awakening from the sleepy season of 1896. It was "Smith Day." "Smith Day" means anything to Peapack except sleepiness. It means brass bands, it means peanuts, it means red lemonade by the barrel and ice cream in lumbs like icebergs. Above all it means Smiths. The Smiths are in possession of the town, the bands and the refreshments.

The invading army of celebrants took charge of the grove on the farm formerly owned by the late Peter Z. Smith. There were friends of the Smiths among those who gathered there, but, as was meet and right, the Smith name was dominant among those present.

Isaiah Smith, the president of the Smith family organization, made a speech of welcome to the family and the friends of its members. He told every Smith there to make free with the lemonade and ice cream and everything else they saw, and enjoy themselves, as only Smiths could. From that time on there was naught but joy for the Smiths at Peapack.

The older Smiths, the Papa Smiths and the Mamma Smiths, sat under the big trees and revived memories of their youthful days when the Smiths were just as good American citizens as they are today. Great big awkward young Smiths made love to rosy-cheeked, laughing girls whose names were the same as their own. Ten-year-old Smiths and four-year old Smiths climbed trees that were planted years ago by patriarchal Smiths of other generations. Two-year-old Smiths rolled around and soiled white dresses in soil that has always been sacred to the ownership of Smith. There is a legend that a great Indian chief named Smith—greater in his day than any other of the chiefs—held sway over the acres on which the later generation of Anglo-Saxon Smiths gathered yesterday.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon all of the assembled Smiths heard a masterly address delivered by Rev. Dr. Mason, of Basking Ridge. In his address Dr. Mason told of the glorious achievements of the Smith family in this and past generations. Dr. Mason talked of Captain John and all the other Smiths who have been great in their days and generations. He closed with a brilliant peroration in which he prophesied that a Smith would next occupy the White House and direct the affairs of the great nation as only the brain and cunning of a Smith could administer its executive functions.

When the hour came for the breaking up of the great gathering there were many Smiths whose eyes were wet with tears. The hands of many Smiths trembled as they clasped those of other older members of the family. Many a maiden Smith blushed as she smiled a good-bye to a handsome young Smith whom she had only met today.

There were several persons among those who came here today who were obnoxious to the Smiths. They were not Smiths at all. They were New York fakirs and swindlers, and no Smith ever engaged in any such nefarious occupations. A committee of two Smiths who had at one time been purchasers of gold bricks looked after these gentry and as far as known not a single Smith was robbed during the day.

With the exodus of the Smiths to their homes Peapack went to sleep again to reawake at the blowing of the Smith bugle next August.

Among the Plainfielders present were Gus Smith, H. O. Hance, Mrs. Philip Kreitling and Mr. Carey. Gus Smith says that a straw vote of the political preferences of the farmers was taken and they were found to be almost to a man for free silver.

RUN DOWN BY A ROAD HOG.

Wm. Schaffer Has Three Fingers Broken and Sustained Other Injuries.

William Schaffer of Second and New streets was spinning along on his safety, on Park avenue, near the Randolph road, last evening, when some wreckless driver from Metuchen, deliberately ran into his wheel, almost completely wrecking it. The driver must be inhuman for he never even stopped to ascertain the extent of the injuries inflicted, for he drove rapidly away.

Schaffer was picked up by some passing bicyclists and assisted home. Dr. Long was summoned and it was found that besides a badly lacerated face, three fingers had been broken, and he was badly injured about the chest.

As near as can be ascertained Schaffer was on the right side of the road but the driver was not.

BROKE IN HIS OWN HOME

THAT IS WHAT MRS. MONAHAN SAYS HER HUSBAND DID.

He Said That He Was Going to Leave, But She Says That He Returned in the Night—That Trouble Commenced.

While Patrolman Myers was following his lonely beat in the vicinity of Clinton avenue on the south side of the Central railroad, early this morning about 3 o'clock, he heard a woman's voice breaking the stillness of the early morn. The unseasonableness of the hour led the officer to investigate and he found the owner of the voice on Halsey street near West Third street. From an upper window of a house leaned Mrs. Monahan while below stood her husband, Michael Monahan. She was evidently scolding her husband and in no gentle terms from what the officer heard. As Mrs. Monahan saw the officer, she immediately requested him to look up her husband who, she declared, was drunk and was acting in a dreadful manner, and promised to appear against him at the city court later in the morning.

It was evident from Monahan's actions that he been drinking so Patrolman Myers arrested him and locked him up.

Mrs. Monahan appeared at the city court this morning, accompanied by her daughter, both of whom appeared very respectable. Monahan appears to be a respectable man. H. B. Reed was present to represent his brother, Assemblyman Reed, who was Monahan's counsel, and asked for an adjournment. The Judge first heard Mrs. Monahan's story.

She said she has been supporting him for nearly a month and that last night he said he was going to leave. He packed up a few clothes and left. According to her he came back intoxicated some time after midnight and broke into the house. He told her he had come after his things and carried the kitchen table and chairs out into the yard. When he tried to take down the stove and carry it away she put him out of the back door and locked it. Then, according to her version, he tried to get in the front door and broke the glass. Soon after that the police man appeared. Reed would not allow Monahan to say anything at present, and the trial was set down for a week from tomorrow morning. Monahan was held in $50 bail.

STOLE BICYCLE BUTTONS.

E. Frank Vail Catches a Young Thief Who Entered His Office.

E. Frank Vail was in charge of the real estate office of his father J. T. Vail, on North avenue, this noon, and stepped into Herbert's store next door for a minute. When he came back he noticed that a number of the bicycle bottons in the collection that hangs in the window, were missing. He ran over to the station and saw two boys walking down the track. He set out in pursuit and captured one of the lads with the tell tale buttons in his hand. The lad was turned over to Chief Grant who locked him up. He was about twelve years of age and said that his name was Peter Benford, son of Mrs. Maggie Benford, one of those who have made Paradise Alley famous in the annals of the city court.

CHAIN AND BALL FOR TRAMPS.

They Are Getting Too Numerous and Too Bold at Rahway.

Acting Mayor Holmes, of Rahway, realizing the necessity of bringing the tramps that invade his district under control, has ordered the arrest of every one found within the city limits and a ball and chain attached to him. They will be put to work on the public streets.

A tramp went to the home of Thomas F. Martin, on Commerce street, Wednesday and demanded something to eat from the servant. As she handed the man food, he demanded hot coffee, and became abusive when told there was none. While the young woman was trying to secure a policeman the tramp escaped.

MILLER'S CHARGES NOT SUSTAINED.

The Complainant Made the Defendant and Had to Pay a Fine.

The racket on East Front street last Sunday morning, which Louis Miller accused four other men of robbing him and then throwing him out of a hack, was the cause of a trial in the city court this morning. Miller was arrested at the time by Patrolman Vanderweg, who charged him with being drunk. The other four, William Kennedy, Thomas Stephenson, Chas. Nelson and Warren Pierson, were arrested Monday on the same charge brought for Miller by his counsel, C. J. McNabb, after hearing a statement from Wm. Emery, of Scotch Plains, at whose place the men had been. At the trial, however, Emery, as well as Vanderweg, stated that Miller was very drunk and the others sober. The latter were represented by ex Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. Judge DeMeza dismissed the complaint against the four and fined Miller $5.

Mrs. Sarah Harpence, of Berekman moved today to 130 North avenue.

THE PARSON A PUGILIST

A COLORED MINISTER BECOMES OBSTREPEROUS AT THE STATION.

Refused to be Quiet at the Suggestion of an Officer of the Same Complexion and Finally Lands on Ed Martin's Jaw.

There was quite a crowd loafing at the lockup Saturday awaiting the arrival of City Judge DeMeza. But with the Judge came a more interesting couple. There was Chief Grant and he was hustling along a very short colored man surmounted by a very high silk hat. The prisoner was wildly expostulating, while the Chief kept a firm grasp of his arm. Bringing up the rear were Special Officer Edward Martin and his brother Tom.

In a few moments the crowd filed into the stuffy little court room and the anxious little colored man was brought before the bar.

He explained that he was Rev. A. H. Chase, of Whitewater, Wis., aged thirty-six years, who is at present conducting the colored Methodist camp meeting near Netherwood. The ministerial cut of his clothing supported his claim.

Then Ed Martin, who appeared a trifle excited, explained that this man had been holding a very loud at the North avenue station, and had said that all Plainfield's colored pastors were ignorant, and finally, when Martin told him to keep still, used his fist on the side of Martin's jaw and swore. Martin then threw him down when Chief Grant appeared. Tom Martin's account was the same with slight variations and then the reverend gentleman was given a chance to talk for himself, which he had been vainly attempting to since the trial began.

He declared that Martin misrepresented his statements and gave his real meanings. He stated that Martin had become very officious and had thrown him down. He denied having sworn. Chief Grant stated that Chas. H. Lyman, who had seen the racket, had told him that Martin was at fault.

The Judge decided that there had been trouble of some kind, declared Chase guilty and suspended sentence.

THE POOR MAN'S CARRIAGE.

Shall We Have a Trolley Road From Elizabeth to Plainfield?

Hon. J. Martin Roll never minces matters and keeps as close to the people as he can get. When he said that the trolley was the poor man's carriage he hit the nail on the head. A Daily Leader reporter has been among the business people of Elizabeth for the past few days making inquiries, and all are of one opinion namely, that the greatest good to the greatest number should prevail on the question of a trolley from this city to Plainfield.

The cars of the Consolidated Traction Company take much business to Newark. Our tradesmen want this offset by the business that would naturally come this way. Bicyclists should remember that there are miles and miles of telford roads for them to scorch on elsewhere, and they might as well submit now to the inevitable, for it is only a short time when there will be a popular uprising of the people demanding that a right of way on the northside of the track be given for the construction of a trolley road from this city to Plainfield. What helps the people is building houses. What builds houses quickens and improves land and develope property are trolley roads. What we want is more men in public places who favor the "poor man's carriage."—Elizabeth Leader.

BAD TOWNSHIP ROADS.

North Plainfield Highways Getting Into a Wretched Condition.

The residents of North Plainfield Township still continue to complain regarding the wretched condition of the township roads. Formerly there used to be a very heavy travel over the roads, but their present condition has changed the course of travel so that its a rare thing to see a wagon go by. The blame is laid solely on the township committee for they have failed to do their duty. Early in the spring the expenditure of $10 on certain portions of the road would have saved $100, which amount will now have to be spent to put the roads in their proper condition again. Something will have to be done very soon or else the citizens will seek the courts for redress.

Well Known Here.

Charles Stanley Reinnart, the well-known draughtsman and illustrator, who was taken suddenly ill at his studio, Twenty-third street and Fourth avenue, New York, last Thursday, and was removed to the Players' Club, on East Twentieth street, died there yesterday morning. He gained a reputation as an artist of considerable talent in Paris and New York. He was a member of the Century Club and of the Academy of Design, and was a popular after-dinner speaker. Mr. Reinhart was the brother of Jos. W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, this city, and was well known here.

C. E. CONVENTION PLANS

THE '96 COMMITTEE AND REPRESENTATIVES FROM SOCIETIES MEET.

Reports Made of Work Accomplished and Plans Laid for Future Work—Sunday Afternoon Vesper Service Also.

Amid the interest in the numerous events that promise to make this an important year for Plainfield, preparations for the big State Christian Endeavor convention, to be held here October 7-9, are steadily going ahead. The chairmen of the '96 committees and representatives from fifteen societies in Plainfield, New Market, Dunellen and Oak Tree, held a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building last night and reports regarding the preparations for the convention were listened to. W. E. MacClymont, chairman of the music committee, reported that the leaflets to be used at the convention by the choir would be here in time for the next rehearsal of the choir, Thursday evening at the First Presbyterian church. It is hoped that all who can sing at all, no matter whether members of the Christian Endeavor society and the church or not, would attend the next rehearsal. The finance committee told that the different societies were at work missing their share of the necessary funds and that all looked bright.

The assignment cards were distributed. They are to be given to all the members of the local Endeavor societies to be filled out by them and returned, telling how many delegates and under what conditions they can entertain them.

The evangelistic committee reported that they are preparing to hold evangelistic meetings at the factories, shops, Children's Home and other like places during the Convention, at which time portions of the choir will assist in the singing. The other chairmen reported progress in their various lines, and then followed an informal discussion on various topics relating to the Convention.

President E. E. Anthony, of the Local Union, presided and the meeting opened with a short prayer service in which nearly everyone took part. The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Bogardus, of Dunellen. About twenty-six were present.

Some Sunday afternoon before the Convention at 5 o'clock an open air vesper service will be held, probably in the City Park. The choir will assist and sing some of the songs from the Convention Leaflet.

HUSBAND IS SUSPECTED.

Someone Fired at Mrs. Fleming and Her Escorts.

A. C. Fleming, a commissioner of deeds and notary public, of Peapack, was arrested yesterday charged with attempting to shoot his wife and her escorts.

Mrs. Fleming was returning to her home from a festival at Gladstone. She and her party were in a wagon and were driving along a lonely stretch of road. At a particularly dark point a man began shooting at the party from behind a tree. He fired seven shots. One of the bullets slightly wounded the horse and the animal ran, carrying the party out of danger, but not until several bullets hit the carriage.

It is said that Mr. Fleming fired the shots. This he denies and says the arrest is the result of a conspiracy. He and his wife have been living apart for some time. He was bailed.

Stealing Sun Flowers, and Melons.

Andrew Huff of Park avenue has gone to considerable time and expense during the summer planting potatoes and sunflowers. He also had a fine patch of watermelons, but situated as the patch is on Randolph road, not far off from Park avenue, out of town bicyclists and depraved youths have every access to the place. Only a night or two ago some mean thieves got into the patch and broke off nearly all the sunflower blossoms, and carried away the largest of the watermelons. Mr. Huff was only raising the sunflowers for chicken feed, but the melons he expected to put on the table.

PRETTY AND CONVENIENT

DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW HOUSE OF THE HILLSIDE CLUB.

To be a One Story Structure, With Four Rooms, and Fitted up With a View to Providing a Pleasant Place.

While there has been considerable talk about the new club house of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, which is now in the course of erection, there are comparatively few that have any idea what sort of a structure it is to be. Architect Evarts Tracy was recently interviewed by a Daily Press reporter and the general plan of the club house was explained.

The club house, which is now being erected on Plainfield avenue at the head of Randolph road, is to be a low one-storied building with a shelving shelve roof and a piazza on three sides. The entire building is forty-one feet by thirty-two feet, and is divided into four rooms while a small attic, to hold the water tank, is situated over head.

In the main or front room is a large open fire place, just the thing for the cool autumn weather that is approaching. The room will be finished in yellow pine and window seats will be included in the arrangement. The rear room is to be devoted to the gentlemen. It will serve as their dressing room and here will be found lockers and shower bath. The ladies' room will be the one on the left. The other room to the right will be given up to the storage of bicycles, golf clubs and tools of the members. Each of the rooms will connect with commodious toilets.

The building is a frame one and the exterior will be of cedar shingles left to weather. Already the walls have been partially raised and the house will be completed in a few weeks. One tennis court will be put in some kind of condition for playing very shortly.

REV. DR. TALMAGE AT BOUND BROOK.

He Attends the Fiftieth Anniversary of the First Reformed Church.

Last Thursday marked the fiftieth year since the organization of the First Reformed church of South Bound Brook and on that day it was duly celebrated by fitting services extending throughout the day.

The church was prettily decorated with golden-rod and in the rear of the pulpit was the inscription, "1846—1896. Ye shall hallow the fiftieth year." The congregation was especially honored in having present one of its former members, now noted throughout the civilized world, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., of Washington, D. C.

The morning service was opened at 10:30 with a few well-chosen words of welcome by the pastor, Rev. Chas. T. Anderson, after which prayer was offered by Rev. David D. Demarest, of New Brunswick Theological Seminary. After a responsive reading, Rev. James Le Fevre, D. D., delivered an address congratulating the congregation on the completion of the first half century of its existence. Then following addresses by former pastors, of whom the following seven were present: Revs. George J. Van-Vau Neate, Henry V. Voorhees, John E. Lyall, Augustus F. Todd, David N. Talmage, James T. Shock and Albert L. Mershan.

The fact that Dr. Talmage was to preach in the afternoon, brought to that service a large gathering of people, not only from the Bound Brooks, but from the outlying districts also. The edifice was soon filled to overflowing, and many heard the sermon and caught a glimpse of the celebrated divine through the windows. The sermon was a masterly discourse worthy of its author, who held the attention of the large congregation for over an hour. Among other things, Doctor Talmage said very touchingly of the time when he came before the consistory of the church for examination for admission to its membership. After the service Dr. Talmage held a reception, scores of people crowding forward to grasp the hand of the great preacher.

In the evening the following addresses were delivered: "The Early Dutch Settlers of Bound Brook," by Rev. T. E. Davis; "The Influence of the Dutch," by Rev. Joseph W. Dally; and "Material Aids to Spiritual Work," by Rev. John C. Jones.

The church was benefited to the extent of over $100 by the collections of the day and by the sale of refreshments on the church grounds.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Edith DuBois Gives a Party in Honor of Her Guest.

Miss Edith DuBois entertained a number of her friends last Friday at her home on Park avenue in honor of her friend, Miss Susan Buckman, of Brooklyn. The evening passed pleasantly with games and social chat while one of the guests tried his hand at mind-reading and told some wonderful facts. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Besides the Misses DuBois and their guest, there were present the Misses Lucie Palmer Davis, Lottie Corbett and Jennie Quick. Will Symons, Robert Davis, W. Gordon Williams, and Charles Mattis, of Dunellen.

MURDERED AT DAYBREAK

A Mere Boy Shoots Down a Bedminster Farmer.

DISPUTE OVER WAGES THE CAUSE.

The Murdered Man Was an Englishman, Thirty Years of Age, and Only a Month Ago Was Joined by His Family From the Old Country—Elmer Clawson, Just Out of Jail, Fired the Fatal Shot, Then Jumped on a Bicycle and Rode Away—Hunted Down by Vigilance Committee and Threatened With Lynching by the Neighborhood Mob—Is Captured and Takes to the Somerset County Jail.

The little township of Bedminster, Somerset county, was roused from its wonted quiet Saturday by the deliberate murder of Harry Hodgett, one of its citizens. The community was horrified by the crime and a body of determined farmers pursued the murderer, captured him and would have lynched him but for the opportune arrival of Constable Thomas Moore, of the township.

Harry Hodgett was a young Englishman of about thirty years of age who came to this country seven years ago and finally settled on a farm about seven miles from Somerville and a mile from Pluckamin.

Sometime ago he employed a young man named Elmer Clawson to help on the farm. Hodgett and Clawson did not agree very well together and a dispute arose over the matter of Clawson's pay. The affair ended in Hodgett's English pugnacity getting the better of him and he ordered Clawson off the premises.

During this time Clawson, whose stepfather's home is not far from Hodgett's farm, has been employed on a farm near Bernardsville. Hodgett, in the meantime, had saved enough money from his farm to be able to send for his wife and three little children, who have been living in England. A little over a month ago the loved ones arrived and since then until this morning everything has been going well at the Hodgett farm.

Hodgett was out early this morning and at about 6 o'clock was busily employed in harnessing up his horse, expecting to drive to town. He was working in the stable yard at the side of the house when his old farm hand, Clawson, rode up on a bicycle. Clawson is about twenty years of age. He leaned his wheel against a tree and came up to the barn.

The people in the house included Hodgett's family and the servant girl, while a hired man was working around the barn. They heard Clawson's opening remark, which was "How many cows have you got now?"

"Three!" was the answer.

Then followed other remarks. It is not known whether Clawson asked for his pay or not but, at any rate Hodgett's voice was again heard, this time in a tone of anger. He was heard to order Clawson to leave the premises at once. Then followed the sound of a pistol shot.

Clawson had deliberately pulled a revolver and fired at his former employer, the bullet striking him in the breast. Hodgett followed Clawson as far as the road when he dropped to the ground and died a few moments after. Clawson mounted his wheel and rode away.

The neighbors were notified at once and the members of the Vigilance Society, of Bedminster Township, gathered together and started in pursuit in wagons. The roads in that section of the country are not in the best condition for bicycle riding, and after about an hour's chase Clawson was captured near Far Hills. The enraged farmers gathered around and were preparing to take summary action by stringing Clawson up to a tree, when Constable Thomas Moore suddenly appeared on the scene and hustled the prisoner away before the plans of the society could be executed.

Clawson was lodged in the county jail at Somerville at 9 o'clock. County Physician Wagner, of Somerville, went to the scene of the tragdy and viewed the body of the murdered man, and the coroner's inquest will be held this afternoon.

Lurking Around in the Dark.

Three fairly well-dressed men were noticed hanging along the roadway near Scotch Plains for several hours on Thursday evening passing insulting remarks about passersby. Two women happened to pass along at twilight and the indecent phrases directed to them were anything but pleasant. The women were alone and consequently went on their way.

Nothing Definite Decided On.

There was no definite action taken last evening at the meeting of the committee in charge of the reception to the Volunteer Firemen's Association of New York. The committee had little to report as they have just been appointed, but the various plans were discussed and a definite programme will be laid out in a few days.

MOST VENGEFUL OF BEASTS.

More Hunters Slain by the African Buffalo Than Any Other Animal.

How He Rushes from Ambush—Returns to His Spoor to Lie in Wait for His Foes—Perilous Experience of a Boer.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

It is agreed upon all hands by experienced hunters in Africa that the buffalo (Bubalus Caffer) is one of the three most dangerous four-footed foes that man can attack. Most men class this animal with elephants and lions, as game that requires the highest attributes of skill, courage and caution to bring to bag; and, as a matter of fact, it may be laid down that more deaths and dangerous accidents happen annually in Africa in hunting the buffalo than in the chase of any other species of heavy game. In regions where large numbers of these splendid beasts still wander in herds of 200, 400 and even more, and where they have been little disturbed, the hunter has no great difficulty in shooting as many as he requires. In fairly open country, where scattered covert exists, and where they can be readily approached—for they are to be means keen-sighted creatures—a man may shoot buffaloes as easily, he begins to think, as he can oxen. But when a buffalo is wounded and his blood spoor has to be taken up, and the hunter has to follow him in the dense covers to which he retreats, the business is entirely changed. Then you may prepare to look out for yourself, to take up your heaviest and most reliable weapon, and to follow the track of your game with every sense alert, and your rifle hastily for an instant and most deadly charge.

You will find, too, that the native spoorer, who trotted in front of you readily enough on the blood spoor of elephants, and even the lion, would now greatly prefer to follow in your rear, and leave you to take upon your own person the first and most dangerous risk in the dark and shadowy thickets into which you are advancing. He knows—none better—the dark, murderous fury, and the lurking, noiseless ways of the beast of which you are in search. The buffalo, when once he is wounded, seems, indeed, to think of little else than a bloody revenge. Unlike most kinds of game, which, when wounded, will almost invariably betake themselves in flight as far from the pursuer as possible, he usually retreats some distance into the densest bush, and then either hides up in some dark corner, where the shadows are deep and dense, or, turning upon his line, takes a parallel path back, and so waits for his foe; or he will even follow back upon his own spoor and conceal himself. Sometimes he will stand, lurking amid the dark thickets; at another time, if badly wounded, he will lie down; in either case prepared and determined to inflict a bloody revenge for the hurt under which he is smarting.

I cannot better illustrate the character of these plucky animals than by an adventure narrated to me not long since in the hunting veldt by a Boer hunter from the Transvaal. He had been tregging with some other companions far to the northwest of Lake Ngami. Flesh was badly wanted in camp, and as Tsetse fly was prevalent in the marshy country, north of the Okanango river on which they were outspanned, and the natives reported large herds of buffaloes, he left his horses behind him, ferried across the river, and spent the next two days in hunting. He had with him his own Hottentot servant, a good and reliable hunter and a fair shot, and he had as well several of the natives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and ready to show him the game.

On the first day the Dutchman came across some 50 buffaloes grazing in fairly open veldt. Getting behind some convenient covert, and with the wind in the right direction, he had little difficulty in shooting two fat cows and a young bull. The cows were quite easily secured, but the bull, although shot through the lungs, jumped on his legs from some long grass and bush when approached, charged fiercely at the sporting party, and was only killed within a few feet of the hunter.

Large numbers of buffaloes were still reported a little further ahead among lagoons and marshes of this region. The Dutch hunter, therefore, camped for the night, ate a hearty supper by the roaring fire, and slept soundly till early dawn. Before sun-up the party were again stirring. In less than two hours' time the natives had led the way to a broad, marshy lagoon, or "vlei," as Boers call it, surrounded by drier ground, upon which grew bush, acacia trees and a few tall palms. Part of this lagoon was shallow open water, the remainder consisted of a dense bed of tall reeds which led to further swamps and lagoons beyond. The sight that met the Dutchman's eyes as he and the natives crept cautiously towards the edge of the "vlei" and surveyed the scene from behind a screen of bush, was a wonderful one. In and about the "vlei" stood a troop of not less than 200 buffaloes, some rolling in shadows, some drinking, some standing belly-deep in the water, dark and motionless.

Concealed behind a mass of bush, to which he and the Hottentot had crept, the Dutchman waited patiently till the troop moved and a fair shot offered.

At last several fat cows, for which he had been waiting, together with a tremendous old bull, came within 30 yards. Selecting the best cow, the Boer aimed behind the point of the shoulder and brought her down. She fell instantly to the shot, struggled a little further and soon lay dead. The Boer had hoped and expected to bring down another cow. His intentions were frustrated, however, by the bull, which charged upon the instant directly towards the rifle smoke. Within ten yards the Dutchman, who was kneeling, fired again, hitting the grim beast in front of the chest and turning it. Meanwhile, at the sound of firing, the whole immense herd stoundered out of the "vlei," and went off, crashing through an angle of the reed beds, and thence far into the bush. As they fled the Boer shoved in another cartridge, took aim at a retreating cow 80 yards off, and by a lucky shot broke her back. She fell, bellowing, and was quickly dispatched. Leaving the natives to skin and cut up these carcasses, the Dutchman now took up the pursuit of the wounded bull, which he had marked in his flight through a dense patch of reeds to the right of the lagoon. The beast had turned off alone, and the greatest care had to be taken in following it through such a covert. But the Dutchman had hitherto always had the best of it with buffalo and was determined to finish his task. As soon as the reeds were reached the blood spoor was easily followed. The heavy bullet had evidently raised the lungs, as the bull was bleeding freely, and large patches of crimson marked the path. The reeds were very tall—12 or 14 feet—and thick, and the spooring seemed so dangerous an operation that the Hottentot, who was carrying a second gun—a Martini-Henry—fell behind, leaving his master to take the first risk with his heavy eight-bore. At every step—they were wading knee deep in water—the hunters stopped to listen. They had not penetrated 50 yards through the avenue of broken reeds afforded by the passage of the bull, when in an instant and without warning the beast was upon them. The Boer was knocked flat upon his back by the charge, but the bull had miscalculated his distance; he had no doubt charged for the sound, and had struck his enemy with his nose, which was held high, as is the habit of these brutes when charging. Galloping over the prostrate Boer, the buffalo veered straight for the Hottentot a few paces behind. This unfortunate the brute struck with his horn and tossed on one side some yards into the reeds. Then, continuing its career, the bull passed on out of the "vlei," and took shelter in some thin bush, where it was afterwards found dead. The Boer, all the wind knocked out of him, and severely bruised, picked himself up, recovered his rifle, which was flung yards away, and then sought the Hottentot. The unfortunate servant lay among the reeds and water, a terrible wound gaping just below his left chest, breathing his last. He lived only a short time, and died a pathetic and unwilling object lesson in the risks and dangers of following a wounded buffalo into thick covert.

TO THE BLACKBIRD.

Bird with the saffron bill,
Like close-furled crocus bud in early spring,
Thou whilst all the black and dreary wold
Melodiously to ring.

Thy sanctuary gleams like burnished gold;
This thin, larch copse that fronts the waning sun,
This is the haven that thy soul has won:
Its chaste, pure manifold.

Warm on its banks the shortening sunbeams lie,
Its trembling spires are kindled into flames;
And thou, thou art the voice that proclaimest
The night fast drawing nigh.

There, where the shadows yet more closely cling,
Those flutter notes of thine are swift outrolled,
And the tired shepherd, leaning o'er his fold,
Lingers to hear thee sing.

The rill that babbles on its tortuous way
Steals noiselessly along thy calm retreat.
And night draws nearer with reluctant feet,
Fearing to hush thy lay.

The amber light fades out along the west,
The pearls of heaven, like a half-spent bolt
With dipping flight thou skir'st the quickening holt,
To seek thy new-built nest.

The thy fond mate awaits thee; there ere long,
With head close-tucked beneath thy chon
Thou'lt hide thy pips of gold till dawn shall bring
The round world back to song.

TRACKED.

Rogers fell a victim to his enthusiasm, for the new wheel. Added to the ecstasy of the devoted cyclist was also the passion of the inventor. Rogers had plenty of money, and so could indulge his fads. He had an ingenious brain, and consequently when his craze was photography he invented several perfectly unworkable cameras and finally he had taken to cycling with all the fervor of youth, he had naturally conocted many improvements, so-called, upon the machine.

The wheel upon which he was now mounted was practically his own invention. It was exceedingly light and strong, the framework being made of aluminum, and its pneumatic tire had a covering which he was positive would make it absolutely non-slipping. The ordinary mechanical rubber work on the average non-slipping tire, he held, was inartistic, and so he drew a design for a non-slipping tire which would leave his own autograph, as it were, along the roads, and which would prevent the wheel from going sideways on turning a muddy corner. A celebrated rubber manufacturing company had constructed a tire, faithfully following Rogers' designs, at tremendous cost, and now the young man was for the first time mounted on his new machine, finding, to his delight, that it worked beautifully.

In his eagerness to test the machine fully he went further afield than he had intended and was somewhat tired when he came to the forking of the road, where it branched off in three directions with never a finger post to guide the bewildered traveler.

Night was coming on rapidly and earlier than the season called for, because the clouds hung low in the sky, and the weather seemed threatening. Rogers had come too far to return home that night. He knew it vague and general way that Saddlesberry was ahead of him, and he thought he must be within ten miles of the place, but which of the three roads led to it was a question he could not answer, and there was no one ahead that lowering evening from whom he could make inquiries. After a moment's hesitation he again mounted his wheel and took the road which appeared to be the most traveled, but after following it a mile in increasing darkness this road again branched and neither of the new ways seemed particularly inviting.

It was now so dark that he resolved to light his lamp, and then discovered that in his intense absorption regarding the improving qualities of his new wheel he had neglected minor details; he had no oil with him, and his lamp, a new one, was entirely empty. He concluded to risk arrest by the local authorities, so great was his desire to get home and drove ahead. The rain now began to come down steadily, and the moon, which he knew had risen, was entirely obscured by the clouds. The roads became wet and slippery, and he found that his new invention was still capable of improvement, for on turning an unexpected corner somewhat suddenly, the wheels slipped from under him and he sprawled on his hands and knees in the mud. Somehow the non-slipping tire by has yet conocted is so treacherous as the absolutely non-slipping tire on a slushy corner. Rogers picked himself up and struck the mud from his clothing and face as well as he could, groped about in the rain and darkness for his machine, put it on its wheels once more and trundled it along, trudging by its side. He longed for a habitation of any sort, but the road seemed absolutely deserted.

Tramping gloomily in the downpour he cursed his inventive faculties that had led him astray, and the bad weather which made his journey a misery. Suddenly on one side of the road machine and tried to make quicker progress, but the darkness was so intense and the roads so bad that he finally abandoned all thought of wheeling. At last he came to a grove of trees whose thick overhanging branches formed a kind of shelter from the storm. He stood his machine up against one of the tree trunks, filled his pipe, and, after many futile attempts, succeeded in getting a match to burn long enough to light the tobacco.

Although it was a wet night, it was not cold, and he had some thought of remaining till daylight under the shelter of the trees. He smoked a pipe or two, and rested for perhaps an hour, when, with a sigh, he made up his mind that anything was better than this, even the pitiless storm, which showed no sign of abating. So still trundling his machine, he tramped on in the slush along the lane until he came out in the open once more where half an hour in the pelting rain made him wish he had remained under the shelter of the trees. Another grove presently gave him the shelter he had abandoned, and there he relit his pipe and smoked gloomily. It seemed to him that daylight would soon reappear, but, on striking a match and looking at his watch he found that the night was not yet half over, it being but little after twelve o'clock. He was hungry, wet, tired and thoroughly miserable, in a condition to welcome the roughest fare.

As he stood under the trees Rogers noticed that the rain slackened, and finally it ceased. The moon now poured out its fitful beams among the clouds, and, yearning for the comforts of home, the young man pushed off with a determination to make a final effort to reach civilization of some sort.

Shortly after leaving the grove he came to a gateway that led from the road to a house. As there was no porter's lodge beside the gateway, he came to the conclusion that the house could not be a very important one, and that perhaps the inmates had not been disturbing aroused at that untimely hour to give shelter to a weary fellow creature. Pushing open the gate he wheeled his machine into the avenue and after a ten minutes' tramp along the winding road saw before him a large, old-fashioned country house with numerous outbuildings, and, what was more to the purpose, a light still burning in the windows of what was apparently a kitchen. He was cheered by the thought that perhaps some of the servants were sitting up late.

Coming to a gate that led to the kitchen door, he entered it. Passing a shed he saw, partly in the watery moonlight and partly by their own lights, which were still burning, two bicycles in a corner of the shed. He placed his own beside them, and, tired as he was, he looked with an expert's eye at the machines. Both, he saw, were of an old pattern and did not have pneumatic tires. He was astonished that such machines should belong to a house so pretentious as the one he was about to enter, but gave no particular thought to the matter at the time. A moment later he knocked at the kitchen door. He thought he heard voices within just before he knocked, but now there was intense silence, and no response was made to his demand for admittance. After waiting a reasonable time he raised his hand to knock once again, when the door was cautiously opened a few inches and a man peeped out at him.

"What do you want?" said the man in a hoarse whisper, and seeing Rogers' hand still on the knocker, added: "Don't wake up everybody, it's late, you know."

Rogers apologized, and said that all he wanted was shelter and something to eat.

"Wait a minute," said the man, and he partially closed the door. Rogers heard a whispered consultation inside, then the door opened, and the man said, quietly: "Come in."

Rogers entered, and saw there were two occupants of the kitchen. One man sat by the table, on which there was a huge joint of cold meat, bread and butter, and foaming flagons of beer. This evidence of good cheer was most grateful to the feelings of the cyclist.

"Come in," whispered the man, "but don't make a noise. We don't want master wakened at this hour of the night. He'd make trouble if he was."

"I'll be very quiet," whispered Rogers, "but I want a cut of that beef, and if you can give me a place to sleep I'll make it all right with you in the morning, and get away unseen by anybody."

The man at the table had not spoken, but he now made a motion toward the cold meat, as if he invited the cyclist to help himself.

While Rogers ate and drank with the energy of a healthy, hungry man, nothing was said. The other two sat looking at each other, seemingly in some dismay. At last the younger of the two men rose, opened a door cautiously, listening fearfully, as he passed through, opened another door. He returned with a lighted candle in his hand and nodded to the elder man.

"Now," he said to Rogers, "if you have finished your meal, come this way, and I'll find you a bed."

He led the tired cyclist up the stone passage, and to a small opening off, in which was a small cot bed.

"That's the best we can do for you to-night," said the man, setting down the candle. "If you'd come earlier, we could have found you a better place."

"Oh, that's all right," said Rogers "I couldn't ask for anything better and I hope I shan't get you into any trouble on account of staying which he slipped some money into the hand of the servant, who took it without comment, bade him good night, and retired.

Rogers took off his wet clothes, spread them out so that they might be reasonably dry by the time he needed them in the morning, and fell asleep as soon as he had thrown himself down on the cot bed.

He was awakened in the morning was somewhat of a surprise to him. He found himself rudely shaken by the shoulder, and on opening his eyes beheld an elderly man of gentlemanly appearance standing over him with a pistol in his hand. Two countrymen, one evidently a groom, stood near the door regarding him with every appearance of fear and horror. They both held cudgels, and were apparently ready to attack him should he make a dash for the door.

"Why, my man," said the elderly gentleman, "I hope your sleep has been refreshing."

"It has indeed, sir, thank you," answered Rogers. "But why these warlike preparations? Am I a prisoner?"

"Well, something of that sort," replied the old gentleman, astonished at the language and coolness of his guest.

"You are the master of the house, I take it."

"You are quite correct. Is that your bicycle out in the yard?"

"Yes," answered Rogers. "At least I placed it in the shed last night."

"Oh, did you? Well and the wretched machine there this morning, and it led to our search for you."

"Wretched machine!" cried Rogers sitting up in bed. "Oh, come now, I'll stand no such nonsense as that. I'll be hanged if I'll allow the bicycle to be slandered. I want you to know, sir, that this is probably the finest and most expensive bicycle that exists in this country. Its frame is aluminum, and the cost of it is as great as if it were made of silver, and I flatter myself that the non-slipping tire, although it skids rather badly in the mud, is a unique invention, if I do say it myself. I want you to know that I am the inventor of that bicycle. It was constructed under my supervision, and if you will allow me to show its merits, I fancy you will change your opinion of it."

That night Rogers explored the old man, putting his pistol in his pocket, for he saw that this was not the criminal he thought he had captured. "I don't know very much about bicycles, so perhaps you will be good enough to explain and give me some explanation of how you came to be here."

"Oh, that's very simple," said Rogers. "I lost my way last night, and came up your place, and saw a light in it. There was a light in the kitchen and I found two of your servants having a late supper. I asked them for shelter and they put me in here."

"Ah, I see," said the old man. "Well, those two were burglars, and have made off with all they could lay their hands on that was valuable and at the same time portable. My son has gone to town for the police and has not yet returned. From what you can tell us by giving a description of the men, I thought at first that you were one of the gang who had perhaps taken too much drink and overslept yourself, but I see you are nothing of the kind."

"I am sorry I was not able to give you every assistance in my power," said Rogers.

In a few minutes he was up and dressed, and on going outside saw that the burglars had a keen appreciation of his invention, and had taken away his new machine, leaving one of their own in its place.

"I am sorry," said the old man, courteously, "that in seeking our hospitality you should have been robbed of a valuable cycle. Let us hope we may catch the rascals. Here is my son and two policemen."

Rogers went out to the lane and walked a short distance from the house, critically examining the ground as he did so.

"Look here!" he cried to the old gentleman, as he came hurriedly back. "These men have taken what they didn't know was an autograph bicycle. Here you see the name in the mud: 'Rogers,' marked quite distinctly. That was a little idea of my own. In making a non-slipping tire I had the name written, as it were, in raised letters all around the circumference of the wheel. It was reasonably certain there will be no trouble in tracing the thieves. I shall mount this wheel they have left behind, and if your son and the officers will follow me I think we can track them."

He had my name on the tires largely to identify my machine if it happened to be stolen, but it never struck me that it might write my name all along the road."

Rogers, after a hasty breakfast, sprang on the burglar's bike, and put his best licks along the lane and down the byroad he had traveled the night before. Even when they came to the main road ten miles away he could still descry his name in front of the many spots of the road. Before noon they had run down the burglars, much to their surprise, and Rogers, pointing out the merits of his machine to the captured man who had ridden it, explained to him in the most kindly manner that if he had not stolen that particular bicycle he would very likely not at that moment be in custody. Whereupon the burglars loudly cursed the automatic autograph registering bicycle, which conduct the indignant Mr. Rogers resented. All of which goes to show that burglars have no real appreciation of talent.—Detroit Free Press.

Prison Mailgerring.

A case showing great cunning and perseverance, and the tolerance of much self-inflicted pain continued for many months, is worth telling. The convict was most determined and resourceful in his efforts at mailgerring. After having sawed off a piece of copper wire into his knee, by which he nearly lost his leg. He then produced a number of sores round the knee joint and kept up a great degree of swelling and irritation by means of rag and thread pushed into the wounds. Upon the discovery of this he took to introducing lime below the skin. On another occasion a bandage was found firmly fastened round the thigh; the result being, in medical phraseology, "extensive swelling and lividity of the thigh." The doctor ordered his limb to be enveloped with a large piece of gutta-percha, and to obtain a piece of paper's malpractice. The latter, however, by means of a strip of sheeting and the skewer to which part of his dinner was attached formed a tourniquet and by it compressed so much blood during the night as to quite neutralize the medical treatment it had received during the day. The imposture was at length detected by an order of the doctor to examine the limb outside the bed clothes to the view of the officer by day and night, and from that hour progress was toward complete recovery.—Chambers' Journal.

—Genuine and innocent wit is surely the flavor of the mind. Man could not direct his way by plain reason, and support his life by tasteless food; but God has given us wit, and flavor, and brightness, and laughter, and perfumes, to enliven the days of man's pilgrimage, and to charm his palsied steps over the burning marl.—Sydney Smith.

GREATEST METEORITE.

It Lies Buried on the Shores of Melville Bay.

Lieut. Peary and Prof. Dyche Both Claim It and Will Make Haste Thereto the North Pole to Get Possession of It.

Two men, both of whom know from experience the perils of the ice-bound oceans to the north, who have traveled over the snow-covered wastes that keep eternal watch and ward around the pole, are racing thither, each determined to bring back, if any power can be found to raise and to transport it, the greatest meteorite that science has any knowledge of.

This gigantic mass of solid iron, weighing at the least estimate hundreds upon hundreds of tons, lies on the shores of Melville bay. Explorer Franklin was the first white man who ever set eyes on the marvel. The Esquimaux who showed it to him told him that it had been there forever, and all through those northern regions the fame of it has lived among the tribes from time immemorial. They call it "the great iron stone."

How big this monster mass of soft iron is not even the Esquimaux know, for only a small portion of it protrudes above the ground. It is, judged only by what is visible, worth a fat fortune, even in these days of multimillionaires.

The two men who have entered on this swift race, with this huge iron goal, are Lieut. R. E. Peary, of Arctic fame, and Prof. L. L. Dyche, of the University of Kansas. There is a dispute between the two explorers as to which is the real owner of the meteorite. Lieut. Peary insists upon the priority of his claim, but Prof. Dyche says that when he went to Greenland in 1891 to carry back from his ill-fated Arctic expedition, the natives showed the wonder to them both, and both spoke then of the feasibility of bringing it to the United States.

Now Prof. Dyche has disappeared, bound on some far, mysterious mission, and the wise ones at the west say he has gone to get the meteorite. From his home in Kansas the word comes that after leaving there, which he did quietly, he went to Chicago and then came to New York. In both cities he has wealthy friends who have promised to back him with money in his big undertaking.

But the latest explanation of the whole matter, says the New York Journal, is even more startling. Last winter Prof. Dyche said to a reporter for a Kansas City newspaper that he was secretly planning for this summer a journey of arctic discovery, which, if it should prove successful, would be one of the greatest ventures of the century.

His programme was, he said, to go to Alaska, and from there make a trip across the very northernmost boundaries of North America, coming out somewhere in Labrador. He would gather on the way specimens of animals, flora and geological formations for the Kansas university, and, besides all these, would bring back a treasure from the north that would startle the scientific world.

Now, bearing in mind the declarations he made before his departure about the bringing of the meteorite and his indignant claim to the discovery, and if the theory which his friends admit may be the right one is that while he is journeying across the continent from Alaska, reasons equipped by his wealthy New York friends, Lieut. Peary has gone to the north, that he and his party are to join them there and proceed to the site of the meteorite and stay right by it at any cost.

Meantime Lieut. Perry is not remaining idle. He is conscripting a party, and pushing the work of equipment forward with all the haste consistent with security. He expects to be ready to set sail for the north some time in July.

Pennsylvania Village Bell.

For more than 20 years Bowmansville, Pa., has had what is known as the village bell. It is swung between two high, upright poles, and was paid for by public subscription. Every day the bell is rung three times—at 5:30 o'clock a. m., 11 o'clock a. m., and four o'clock in the afternoon. The leading object of its ringing is to announce to farmers and other working people the time of day. The first bell in the morning at Bowmansville is the signal for the people to arise, and in many parts of the residents are out that early. The 11 o'clock bell announces that it is time to leave the fields and prepare for dinner. At four o'clock in the afternoon they prepare for supper.

A Safeguard in Ballooning.

The dangers of ballooning are to be slightly mitigated by the invention of a Frenchman, which invention provides for the equipment of a cylinder membrane to the car, so arranged that by the pressure of a button it may be automatically filled with air in the unfortunate event of the balloon falling into the sea.

Webster's Spelling Book.

The first spelling-book printed in this country was entitled: "The American Spelling-Book," by Noah Webster. It was issued in 1783, and for considerable more than half a century was the standard work used in all American schools.

Housed Up In a Sanctuary.

A half-starved cat, maltese in color, and presumably the pet of some one in the immediate vicinity, is housed up in the cellar of the Unitarian church on Park avenue. The feline, so B. G. Perkins says, has been there since Sunday, and it is now becoming emaciated for want of food. Of course the janitor didn't know about it or the cat would have been liberated ere this.

TROTTING AT ITS BEST.

HOTLY CONTESTED RACES AT THE DRIVING PARK LAST SATURDAY.

One Dead Heat Trotted and all the Other Contests Caused Great Interest—A Big Crowd Was Present at the Events.

The patrons of the Gentlemen's Driving Park were given a great day's sport, Saturday afternoon, when a hotly contested programme was carried out. The news that there was to be some fine trotting, spread rapidly and as a result there was fully a thousand people present to enjoy the racing. The crowd reminded one of the old fair days when the crowds used to gather and watch with intense interest the races between their favorite horses. The races were called soon after two o'clock and it was dark when the last one was finished.

The first number on the programme was the race between "Jamie" and "Vesta," owned respectively by James Carpenter and Samuel Kelly, of Woodbridge. Both heats were won by "Jamie" in 2:30¼ and 2:30¾. The next race was between John Brown's "Boy B," of Rahway; James Carpenter's "Are Boy," of Woodbridge, and Edward Ames' "Prince" of Woodbridge. The time was 2:41¼, 2:36¼ and 2:37. The run off between the first two resulted in a dead heat, 2:37.

William Cartwright's "Harry," of Rahway, James Arkell's "Vanity," of Westfield, and Thomas Brantingham's "Myrtle Twig," of South Plainfield, were matched in the third race and "Harry" won both heats in 2:38 and 2:36¼.

The most important race of the afternoon followed and all interest was at fever heat. It was between Joseph Sweet's "Newton B.," of Perth Amboy, J. M. Osborn's "St. Alban," of Plainfield, and W. E. Brock's "Archie," of North Plainfield. All three horses are very fast and a close race resulted. The time was 2:26¼, 2:30¼ and 2:26¼. The run off between "Newton B." and "Archie" was won by the former in 2:26. Peter Osborn drove "Archie" for Mr. Brock.

The last race was between D. Darby's trotter and Harry Gwynette's "Fanwood," both of Fanwood. The time made was 2:36, 2:36¼, 2 39¼.

The crowd present thoroughly enjoyed the afternoon's sport and while the racing was purely for pleasure it did not lessen the interest in the least.

VACANCIES FILLED BY THE CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The Question of Finances Considered and It Is the Idea to Issue Bonds Instead of Mortgages—Other Matters Acted On.

The City Board of Education met in regular session in the High School building Tuesday, with President Dr. J. B. Probasco in the chair. Messrs. Lounsbury, Lovell and Abbott were present when Clerk F. B. Clark read the minutes, and Dr. O. L. Jenkins came in later. The minutes were approved and the regular routine of business was taken up by the presentation of the following claims:

R. H. Galpin, $130.50; S. R. Hope, $4.55; D. W. Littell, $40 and $15; F. A. Dunham, $9; H. B. Smith & Co., $1; J. H. VanWinkle, $1 60; Milton, Bradley & Co., $145.16; Maxury, Young & Co., $18; A. M. Griffin, $123.04; Joseph Kingston, $1.79 and $16.47; W. B. Hartrig, sundry claims amounting to $30.65; Jos. S. Barrows, $5.63; F. B. Clark, $2; Cortlandt and Wayne Parker, $50; and sundry other bills amounting to $54. These were all ordered paid.

The following claims, sent in late, were ordered paid if found to be correct: G. Q. Packer, $42; E. Lazzi, $418.13; New York Belting and Packing Co., $6.30; Chas. M. Wilson, $66.63; TenBrook & Harris, $1.650.17.

C. P. Carr in a communication asked for the first payment of $250 for services on account as architect on the new school building, and the request was granted.

The City Collector communicated with the Board to the effect that back taxes accruing since 1881, to the extent of $602.02, had been collected and with interest the amount reached a total of $542.93, which had been deposited to the credit of the Board of Education.

Applications for the janitorship of the new Lincoln School building, each with a long list of signatures recommending the applicants, were received and filed as follows: B. W. Hand, George B. Allen, G. H. Bellis and Isaac S. Lance.

President Probasco made a verbal report on some of the necessary repairs to the several schools which he had casually observed on a tour of inspection.

The matter of macadamizing four feet in the gutters on each side of the Irving School, at Fourth street and Monroe avenue, at a cost of about $50, was left at the discretion of the committee on buildings.

Mr. Lounsbury, from the building committee, had no report to submit, inasmuch as the bills for repairs were not yet all in.

The matter of grading about the Lincoln School was considered at some length, and it was the sense of the board that the work should be done before the cold weather sets in. It was stated that fully a foot of dirt would have to be removed from the Second street side of the building, but this could be utilized to advantage in filling in about the grounds. B. W. Hand had agreed to do all the grading for $200. The matter was left to the building committee.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that a petition had been sent to the Council asking for the extension of the water main from Front street to the Lincoln School building, a distance of about 675 feet, so as to furnish city water for the school. The cost per year would average $62.50, and if the city would place a fire hydrant on the corner the cost for school purposes would be $10 less.

The committee on teachers reported that L. R. Allen in the High School, Julia A. Butler in the Franklin School and Mary Allen in the Irving School had declined a reappointment. The following new teachers were announced to fill the several vacancies: A. J. Knowlton, of Bridgewater, Mass., in the High School; Lottie B. Strong, of Gennessee, N. Y., in the Franklin School; Carrie E. Randall, of Easthampton, Mass., in the Irving School; and Kate A. Reemer, of Amsterdam, N. Y., in the Bryant School.

The matter of fencing in the new school was discussed at some length, Mr. Lounsbury favoring a neat iron fence, but the whole matter was left to the building committee with power.

Mr. Lounsbury said he had received a petition from the Street Railway Company asking for permission to extend the line to and pass the new school building on East Second street, but both he and Dr. Jenkins were of the opinion that the Board had no controlling voice in the premises. After a little friendly discussion the president was authorized to sign the petition giving the assent of the Board.

The question of issuing school bonds,

THAT UNRULY TONGUE.

IT CAUSED LOTS OF EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY COURT.

And Finally Landed Its Owner in the County Jail—It Also Made a Great Deal of Trouble in Fairchild's Alley.

There are other distinguished characters in the city court records besides those from "Paradise Alley." This morning, Fairchild's alley, which runs from East Front street beside the old postoffice building, sent one of its liveliest colored residents to the stuffy little court room in the city lockup for trial. And the offender was a woman, and she had a tongue.

Now other woman have tongues and some of them can manipulate them with considerable vigor, but they are not "in it" with Mrs. Lizzie Thompson, for such was the name of the woman from Fairchild's alley. Her tongue was the cause of her arrest. She used it so freely on her neighbors that, at last, Mrs. Leander Brown, a colored resident of the same thoroughfare, decided that Mrs. Thompson had gone too far and appealed to the police. Mrs. Thompson was ordered to appear before Judge DeMeza this morning, and she did so, accompanied by about one-half the female population of the alley.

It was only too evident that she had been brooding over her arrest and was ready for war. From the moment she entered the court room, her tongue began to wag, despite the efforts of Chief Grant and Patrolman McCue. She would subside for a time only to explode with more vehemence soon after. The trouble, she claimed, was over the children but the court had heard enough to realize the cause.

As it was impossible to send the tongue to jail alone, the owner of that unruly member had to go also. When the Judge declared her guilty, she gave him an example of life on Fairchild's alley. The Chief came in for his share of abuse. She was sentenced to pay a fine or $15, and go to jail for forty days. As she was led away to a cell, she shook her fist at Mrs. Brown and yelled, "I'll get even with you when I get out." And then, she continued to make life miserable for those in the building by her yells, ejaculations and remarks which she interspersed between the puffs at her pipe.

CELLAR THIEVES IN THE NOTCH.

Eatables Were Evidently the Only Thing They Were After.

Some time during Monday night a sneak thief or thieves got into Geo. Demlers cellar in the Notch, and were helping themselves or himself to bread, cake and sweetmeats, when Mrs. Demler happened to open her eyes and was startled to see the reflection of a lantern outside of her bedroom window. She quietly aroused her husband, but the robbers evidently hearing them moving about in the room beat a hasty exit through the cellar door, which was afterwards found open.

The same night the cellar of the house on the "Billy" Spencer farm was also entered and cleaned of the eatables. Judging from the looks of the cellar the next morning it would remind one of the song, "After the Ball is Over."

There is no direct clue to the perpetrators of the deeds, but one or more persons living in the neighborhood are suspected.

Country Roads in Bad Shape.

Ex-Chief Marshal Wm. Pangborn drove through Washingtonville and several adjoining villages a few days ago and afterward told a Daily Press representative that the roads around the Valley had suffered terribly from the recent storm. The storm, together with the fact that the breaks in the road had not been opened, will cause an expenditure of several hundred dollars. The township committee has failed to open the breaks as they should do and the roads are now suffering in consequence.

Trade Encouraging.

Edsall reports that trade at the Commercial Palace is very brisk, and from the present encouraging start out for September bids fair to come up to the usual amount. The new fall and winter goods coming in, and the nice cool weather, together with the people coming home from their summer vacations, sets the ball a rolling. All that is needed now is a little confidence and a look on the right side of things, instead of all the time croaking on the dark side to make a genuine business boom.

The whole system is drained and undermined by indolent ulcers and open sores. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve speedily heals them. It is the best pile cure known. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE SITUATION IN UNION

JAMES P. LOGAN TALKS WITH THE LEADERS OF BOTH PARTIES.

Foster Voorhees Prophesies a Plurality of 3,000 for McKinley in Union County—Democratic Leaders Confident.

James P. Logan, who is making a canvass of the State for the Newark News, has the following about the political situation in Union county:

"Union county is in good shape," said Senator Foster M. Voorhees, when questioned upon the subject. "Chairman Codding, of the Republican county committee," he continued, "says McKinley will have 2,500 or 3,000 majority in the county, but I think that is too high an estimate. Taking the most conservative view, however, I think we shall carry the county by a large majority. There seems to be little silver sentiment among Republicans, and the Democrats who will not vote for Bryan can be counted by scores. Among the leading Democrats here for sound money are City Comptroller A. B. Carlton, ex-City Treasurer John Whelan, School Commissioner Timpson, S. M. Williams, auditor of the Central Railroad company; Frederick E. Levy, Theodore Tembroke, James Maguire and hosts of others."

"How are the workingmen, Senator?"

"I believe they are for sound money," replied Mr. Voorhees. "At first it was feared that the labor organizations were against us, but I learn that they are not; in fact, the tide is setting our way everywhere."

Ex Speaker Joseph Cross agreed with what Senator Voorhees had said, and thought that there is no fear of any serious free silver defection among Republicans.

Ex-Senator Frederick C. Marsh, chairman of the Democratic committee, was one of New Jersey's delegates to Chicago, and was considered a sound money man. He still disapproves of the Chicago platform, but in the past few days has announced that he will support the ticket. "With my party affiliations and connection with the organization," said Mr. Marsh, "I feel it my duty to support the ticket regularly nominated, however much I may disagree with the platform."

"Do you find the free silver sentiment very strong in Union County, Senator?" I asked.

"No I do not," was the reply. "I hear that the farmers throughout the country are all for free silver, but for some reason I do not run across them. Maybe it is because they do not come to my office, and I don't go out hunting for them, but at any rate I haven't found any of that overwhelming free silver sentiment we hear so much about."

J. A. Kiernan, a bright young lawyer, is one of the most active workers for Bryan and Sewall. "The silver sentiment is very strong among the workingman," said Mr. Kiernan. "Of course a good many wealthy Democrats and business men are out for gold, but not the great mass of voters. The common people feel that in Bryan and Sewall that they have a ticket which more fully represents them than any they have had a chance of voting for in many years, and I have never seen the rank and file more enthusiastic."

Mr. Kiernan thought that many Republican workingmen and farmers would vote for the Chicago nominees, but admitted that the German vote in Elizabeth would be practically solid for McKinley. He was not very hopeful of carrying the county.

Ex-Assemblyman Timothy Kelly, while an earnest advocate of Bryan and Sewall, thought that the gold Democrats of Union would outnumber the silver Republicans, and that McKinley and Hobart would probably carry the county. He also spoke of enthusiasm displayed among the working classes for the silver ticket.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following cases are being considered in Justice Newcorn's court: Lawler against Jones, adjourned to September 16th; Miller against Watts et ux; Watts et ux against Miller, adjourned to September 15th; McVey against Johnson, settled. Summons issued: Thickstun against Keeding, returnable September 10th; Lawler against Bitgliti, returnable September 21th; Lawler against Chase, returnable September 18th; writ of attachment on contract of A. M. Griffen against George C. Evans.

Accepted an Invitation.

The members of Warren Engine Company met Tuesday night and accepted the invitation extended by the Exempt Firemen's Association to participate in the festivities Saturday, Oct. 3d. The company decided to turn out in full force and have secured the Independent Fife and Drum Corps for the occasion. Much enthusiasm was manifested.

THE LAST OF THE SEASON.

THE FREE OPEN AIR CONCERTS COME TO AN END.

The Last One Was Held Last Night in the Vicinity of the Babcock Building and Was Quite Largely Attended.

The open air concerts are over, that is for this year, and altogether Councilman Frost's scheme of giving the people free music has been very successful. The last of the concerts was held Tuesday on the southwest corner of Front street and Madison avenue. The attendance was good, but not as large as at previous concerts. Perhaps it was too chilly to stand around for an hour or two, for many of the visitors came only for a few moments and then strolled away. There was the usual throng on the sidewalks and the policemen on duty there were kept hustling in their efforts to keep the passage way clear. The cyclists were not out in as large numbers as on previous occasions, and if they were, they left their wheels in some safe place.

It was a cool night, and wraps were in abundance. The sweater was prevalent among the young men, while the light brerooat began to make its appearance among the others.

The Plainfield Cornet Band furnished the music as usual, and the selections were rendered in their usual excellence. The bandstand was a great improvement, but the place itself does not seem as well fitted for an open air concert as the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church, or at the intersection of Franklin place, LaGrande and Putnam avenues. It is evidenty not as popular as the crowds at the last three concerts which have been held near the Babcock building, were in no case as large as the crowds at the former concerts held in front of the church.

It is to be hoped that the concerts will be continued next year as they have proved a very popular feature of summer life in Plainfield.

FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

A Pleasureable Sociable Event Held in the Borough.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wheeler, of Linden avenue, celebrated their fifth wedding anniversary Tuesday night, in a pleasant manner. It was their intention to have all those present who witnessed their marriage, but this was impossible as various reasons kept several away. The evening was passed in a delightful social way, interspersed with excellent vocal and instrumental music, which enlivened the gathering very much. Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler were the recipients of many presents useful in keeping house. At a late hour refreshments were served, after which the guests left for home wishing the host and hostess many years of health and happiness.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, of Cranford, parents of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Warren C. Squires, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. George C. Squires, Mason and Elsie Squires, Alice and May Squires, Miss Maggie Sheppard, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Whitely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Walker, Miss Mamie Squires and Isaac Squires.

RETURNED ONLY TO GO AWAY AGAIN

Dan Jones, the Rolling Stone, Pays His Semi-Annual Visit to Plainfield.

Dan Jones is in hard luck, at least the average man would consider it so, but maybe this "knight of the road" thinks that the free board overbalances the effect of bad company. Tuesday our friend Jones got out of jail after a stay of 159 days. He had been sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and go to jail for 59 days. As he had no money he paid the fine in time instead, $1 a day. This morning he came back to Plainfield, as he promised to do when he was locked up. He thinks this a great town to work and the guileless housekeepers, that have hitherto taken care of his bodily wants, are too good friends to be deserted. He has already been arrested twice before and returns to Plainfield immediately on his release. The police found him this morning working his old game and Judge DeMeza repeated the sentence, $100 fine and 59 days in jail. Poor Dan, how the housekeepers will miss him.

Meeting of the Catholic Club.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Catholic Club was held in the club rooms Tuesday, with President M. Mack in the chair. But little or no business of importance was transacted outside of the regular collection of dues. A special meeting of the club has been called for Friday evening of this week when some important business is to be transacted. The club now has a total of 140 members in good standing on the roll, and it is thought this number will be largely increased during the fall and winter months.

OFFICIALS FOR THE MEET

THE CRESCENT WHEELMEN SELECT THEM FOR THEIR RACES.

The Entries are Coming in Rapidly and Include Many Fast Riders, Both Amateur and Professional—The Prizes.

You have no idea of the extent of the reputation of the Crescent Oval as a bicycle track. There is hardly a racer in this part of the country that does not know of its smooth surface. The scientific manner in which it was built make accidents infrequent, and when such a fact is known it is bound to make the track popular. The promoters of the national circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen, which is to be held on the Oval on Saturday, Sept. 26th, have not failed to remind the riders of that fact. The entries are coming in surprisingly fast for so long before the meet and everybody is delighted. Ray MacDonald, the young American professional who did so well across the water, has entered, as has also the famous Morgan and Wright team.

The officials have been invited and acceptances have been received from most of them. Those that have been invited thus far are: Referee, Robert Gentle, chief consul of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.; judges, Fred C. Keer, president of the Newark Cycle Board of Trade; F. P. Frist, editor of the "Wheel;" J. C. Tattersall, secretary-treasurer of the New Jersey Division of the L. A. W.; W. N. Pittman, of New York.

Scorer, Robert A. Meeker, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Timers, C. E. Vall, of the Crescent Wheelmen. Charles Brown, of the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, and Robert Stahl, of New York.

Starter, A. H. Chamberlain, captain of the Union County Roadsters.

Announcer, A. S. Fritts, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Clerk-of-the-Course, Clarence E. Teel, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

Assistants, N. R. Titsworth, Casper Kirkner and J. H. Rogers, of the Crescent Wheelmen.

S. P. T. Wilbur is the chairman of the prize committee, and that assures excellent prizes. The amatuer prizes will all be diamonds of full value, and the professional prizes will of course be hard cash and gold at that.

SURE TO BE SATURDAY.

The Bicycle Carnival Will Not be Postponed Longer than Saturday.

According to the usual custom, Saturday ought to be a clear day. It is the day to which the Daylight Bicycle Carnival has been postponed and we usually have pleasant weather for the postponement. Let us hope so, at least. The general committee are hoping as hard as possible and expect to arrange suitable terms with "Farmer Dunn."

The committee held a meeting last at the Board of Trade rooms but there was very little to be done. All the arrangements have been completed and the meeting changed into a general discussion of the prospects of the Carnival for Saturday. It seemed to be the opinion of all that while New York might not be represented as numerously as before, the wheelmen of this part of New Jersey will turn out in great masses.

There was some talk of changing the date of the Carnival from next Saturday to September 26th, the date of the national circuit meet of the Crescent Wheelmen. The general sentiment was against this, however, and no effort was made to further postpone the Carnival.

N. R. Titsworth made his report as referee of the coasting match. There were fifty-six entries and the expenses were trifling so that the three leading men will receive excellent prizes for their exertions that morning.

DIFFERED ON FINANCES.

A Lively Debate Between Councilmen Over Committee Appropriations.

During the session of the City Council Tuesday night, Councilmen Ginna and Moore participated in a lively debate regarding the appropriations for the different departments. It was brought out through the opposition made to granting petitions for electric lights.

Mr. Moore claimed that $600 additional had been granted the lights and trees committees, and that the amount had not been used.

Mr. Ginna stated that the aims committee wanted $4,500, but the amount had been reduced to $4,000, and with that sum the committee would have to do the best they could, though it was not enough.

Mr. Dumont finally stated that the street committee alone had received an appropriation of $15,000 and that no appropriation had been made for the lights and trees committee outside of the usual allowance.

MONEY IS GETTING LOW.

COUNCILMEN TALK ABOUT CUTTING CURRENT CITY EXPENSES.

Councilman Ginna Says Economy Must Be Practiced or Else the Appropriations Will Run Short This Year.

Councilman Fisk was the only member absent from the regular September meeting of the City Council, which was held Tuesday evening.

After the minutes were read and approved, a petition was received from the Town Improvement Association asking that the Council prohibit the burning of leaves, as it was a menace to health. Mr. Dumont wanted to know what disposition could be made of leaves, except to burn them. Mr. Barrows thought that if it was not a detriment to property, people should be allowed to burn them. The petition was finally referred to the police committee.

J. W. Van Sickle asked for the privilege of erecting an iron frame of gas pipe in front of his meat market, to be used for an awning. The matter was referred to the street committee.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company asked that the petition presented to the Council at the August meeting, asking for a franchise to erect a garbage-disposal plant, be returned to them. It was so ordered and another similar petition was presented. It was referred to the sewer committee with instructions that they consult the Corporation Counsel.

J. E. Martine and others petitioned for an electric light on East Ninth street between Park avenue and Third place. This was referred to the lights and trees committee. A crosswalk was asked for by Thomas Callahan and others to be located on Richmond street at the southeast corner of East Third street. The petition was placed in the hands of the street committee. The Board of Education asked that one two-way hydrant be located at the corner of Berckman and East Second street, and their request was referred to the fire and buildings committee.

All claims were received, audited and ordered paid. The reports of the City Treasurer and Collector were received and filed.

Street Commissioner Meeker reported that he had granted thirty-one sewer permits and had received $31, which amount had been turned over to the proper person.

The Building Inspector reported that fourteen permits had been granted during the past month. W. W. Coriell and a host of other citizens asked the council to repair the town clock, and they, the petitioners, would keep it running and in order. The matter was referred to the finance committee, and Mr. Dumont asked that the City Clerk be requested to learn the cost of repairing the clock and report as early as possible.

In a resolution Mr. Dumont asked that $4,000 be borrowed in anticipation of taxes for the general fund. It was so ordered. Mr. Tolles, from the committee on lights and trees, recommended that the four electric lights asked for to be located on North avenue between Berckman street and Leland avenue, be granted. All voted for the lights except Messrs. Ginna, Dumont, and Frost. Mr. Dumont objected seriously to the additional expense owing to the financial condition of the treasury. He stated that the council was now within a small amount of the limit of the appropriation and the street committee had passed the limit.

Mr. Tolles thought the lights should be granted, as there had been very few lights asked for this year. Mr. Barrows wanted to know if the petition came from the freight house officials. Mr. Tolles informed the inquiring member that it did not. Mr. Ginna thought it unwise to grant the petition on account of the depleted condition of the funds. On a vote the petition was granted, but a similer petition for four lights on South avenue between Leland avenue and Terrill road, was not granted. Messrs. Sec. Barrows, Dumont, Frost, Serrell, and Westphal voted in the negative. There being no further business council adjourned.

"The Burning of Leaves."

An important meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall on Friday, at 4 p. m., when the subject for discussion will be "The Burning of Leaves." This is considered an important subject just at this season, when the leaves will soon begin to fall. There will also be a special meeting of the executive committee at 3 p. m., in the same place.

"Boys will be boys," but you can't afford to lose any of them. Be ready for the green apple season by having DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure in the house. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SHOOTING AT CLAY BIRDS.

Plainfield Knocks Out Dunellen Crackmen to the Tune of 16.

There was some exciting shooting on the grounds of the Dunellen Gun Club Thursday afternoon. The match was between the Independent Gun Club, of this city, and the Dunellen Gun Club, of Dunellen. Ten men were to have contested on each side, but some didn't show up, so the number of shooters was limited to seven. No prizes were offered in the contest, the only consideration being that the loosing club should pay for the clay birds and other expenses. Henry Haumand, of this city, ac ed as referee, and Messrs. Fletche and Gray alternated in keeping the scores.

The following is a summary of the shoot:

A New Trolley Line.

Papers have been signed organizing the Elizabeth and Rahway Traction Company, with the consent of Franklin Post and Mr. Zeigler, the largest property-holders in Linden, to lay tracks through Elizabeth avenue, Linden, has been secured. All the property owned by these gentlemen, which amounts to nearly 1,000 acres, will be cut into building lots. Articles of incorporation of the company will, it is said, be filed in the County Clerk's office in a few days. It is expected that the new line will be built before winter and be operated between Elizabeth and Rahway, connecting with the Union and Middlesex County Traction Company for Woodbridge, Seawaren, and Boynton Beach. The power, it is expected, will be furnished by the Suburban Electric Company of Elizabeth.

Vicious Dogs Running Loose.

There were two cases in Westfield recently of children being bitten by dogs. Alexander Simpson, aged ten, was bitten by a bulldog belonging to W. J. Bogert. His clothing was torn and he was scratched, but his skin was not broken. George LaMatty, aged thirteen, was badly bitten on his leg by a dog belonging to an Italian living on South Broad street. Dr. Kinch dressed the bite. The assessor reports 208 dogs in the township, and of these twelve have been registered according to law. At the next meeting of the township committee they will be asked to take some measures for the protection of children from vicious dogs.

The marriage of Rev. Henry James Johnston, pastor of the Grace M. E. church, to Miss Mary Edwina Smith, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George W. FIGHTING IN PARADISE ALLEY.

Two Young Fellows Disagree and Come to Blows.

Special Officer Dennis Carney has a hard time keeping order on Paradise Alley, so he says, and this morning one of the residents of that famous thoroughfare, James Harden, and a young man from West Fourth street, who has the name of Thos. Sheridan, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza for fighting. Carney says that Sheridan is one of the fighting men of the alley, while he gives Harden a fairly good reputation.

The testimony was somewhat contradictory and very amusing in some cases, but it was evident that Sheridan went to Harden's house and asked what time it was. A quarrel followed in which several blows were struck and Sheridan had his lip badly cut. They were arrested and the trial came off this morning. Charles J. McNabb represented Harden and entered a plea of not guilty. The Judge decided, after hearing the evidence that both men were guilty, and fined each $3.

MAY ENTER THE MINISTRY.

Charles B. Brown Has Received the Offer of an Associate Pastorship.

The following item of news regarding a former Plainfielder was noted in the Minneapolis Penny Press of a recent issue:

Charles B. Brown, until recently secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, of this city, has been offered the position of associate pastor of the new inter-denominational mission on Washington avenue south, and will probably accept the same, entering upon the duties at an early date. Mr. Brown's large acquaintanceship in the city and long experience in church, mission and Y. M. C. A. work peculiarly adapts him for this new field of service. It is proposed to plan the work of the mission, in all its departments, and to extend its influence over the entire city.

Settled Out of Court.

The case of Opdyke against William Demler, William Bicknell, George Mobus and Justice Spier has been settled out of court. The summons was returnable at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, before Justice Austin and a jury at the Mt. Bethel Hotel. The action was brought in tort for the keeping of a bogus stand at the Union picnic, held at Washington rock, August 12th. By the settlement the fact that the defendants were wrong in principle is well established. Their expression of sorrow for the transgression had much to do with the settlement.

Dead Dog Causes a Lawsuit.

John F Crist, Borough Marshal of Roselle, is to have a suit on his hands as a result of his late dog killing expedition. Among the animals killed on Friday was a valuable fox terrier belonging to Edward Stevens, past district deputy grand chancellor of the Knights of Pythias. The animal was accompanying Mr. Stevens's sister-in-law to the postoffice, and was a special pet of the family. Mr. Stevens has retained a lawyer to bring a suit for exemplary damages at once against Marshal Crist.

A Change in the High School.

There will be one change in the regular staff of teachers at the Plainfield High School this year. Lyman R. Allen, who has had charge of the science department for the last two years, will not return. In his place, there will be A. L. Knowlton, of Massachusetts. He brings excellent recommendations and is the graduate of several of the New England educational institutions.

In the Same Regiment.

John M. Palmer, nominated on the National Democratic ticket from Illinois, served during the late rebellion in General James S. Negley's command. When General Thomas gave up his command at Nashville, John M. Palmer was transferred to General Negley's command.

The Disturber Not Found.

Patrolman Freleigh was called to the residence of Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., on Crescent avenue, late last Thursday, as it was thought that a burglar had entered the house. A careful search by the officer failed to reveal any signs of one, however.

Few More Shares Needed.

The Co-operative Association held a special meeting held recently at the store, corner Central avenue and Second street. Over forty members were present. The need of the association for more money was stated. With a few more shares taken, the store can be opened for business this month. A special meeting for ladies will soon be held.

It Never Does.

The assured success of Plainfield's bicycle carnival proves that if New Brunswick were to undertake a similar project it could be made just as great a scenic and social triumph. New Brunswick can outdo Plainfield in anything if it only will.—Times.

Dismissed the Complaint.

Eppie Wilson was brought before City Judge DeMeza recently in the city court on the charge of being disorderly and riding a horse on the sidewalk. He pleaded not guilty, and after hearing the testimony, the Judge dismissed the complaint.

The marriage of Rev. Henry James Johnson, pastor of the Grace M. E. church, and Miss Mary Edwina Smith, of East Orange, will take place next Thursday evening in Calvary M. E. church at East Orange.

MADISON AVENUE WIDENING.

Some Figures of Expense That the Improvement Will Make.

In connection with the widening of Madison avenue, the following taken from the commissioners' report will be of interest to Plainfield people:

The damages allowed for property taken from Front street to the Central Railroad crossing is $16,809.70, while the benefits assessed on the property fronting on that portion of Madison avenue to be widened is $954.79. The commissioners' fees amount to $251.21. The property fronting on Madison avenue from the Central Railroad to Seventh street has been assessed $1,160.78 by the commissioners. The other assessments are as follows:

Front street, east and west of Madison avenue, $3,191.37.
Second street, east and west of Madison avenue, $697.36.
Third street, east and west of Madison avenue, $1290.70.
Fourth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $1253.29.
Fifth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $1117.31.
Sixth street, east and west of Madison avenue, $198.54.
Seventh street, north side of Madison avenue, $121.94.
City of Plainfield, balance, $2,333.15.

The commissioners state that the principal item of damage is the value of the brick building on the east corner of Madison avenue and Front street, a portion of which must be destroyed, and the damage is fixed at $5,280. Other property on Madison avenue, between Front street and Second street, by changing what is now not much more than a lane into a wide street, making the same available for business purposes, adds greatly to the market value, and this property in the judgment of the commissioners should bear a larger portion of the cost. The commissioners met last evening, but no business was transacted and an adjournment was made to Thursday evening, September 17th.

A WAR FOR THE BALLOTS

REPUBLICANS ORGANIZED A CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE LAST NIGHT.

To Float a McKinley and Hobart Banner Tonight—Ex-Mayor Saunders, a Democrat, May Deliver a Speech for Them.

The Republican Executive met in their rooms on East Front street last Wednesday to hear reports from the various committees. It was stated that the McKinley and Hobart banner would be raised this evening on North avenue, opposite the Hotel Grenada. The committee reported that they expected ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders to make the speech of the evening. He was obliged to go to Albany today and if he can return by 8:30 this evening he will address the crowd present. Mr. Saunders is a Democrat, but believes thoroughly in the gold standard, and if he speaks he will probably talk on the currency question.

The Plainfield Cornet Band has also been secured and will previous to the meeting parade the main streets and discourse patriotic music. They will also furnish music at the meeting. A liberal display of red fire will also be burned.

After the reports had been received the meeting adjourned and another meeting was held immediately afterward at which time the committee organized themselves into what will be known as the Republican Campaign Committee, and the following officers were elected: Chairman, Charles J. Fisk; secretary, J. B. Coward; treasurer, J. Fred MacDonald.

The appointment of committees was left to the chairman. The committee decided to meet in the parlors of the Hotel Grenada this evening, at 8 o'clock. It was also decided that the committee will meet every Tuesday evening during the campaign. The meeting then adjourned till next Tuesday evening.

Birthday Surprise.

A birthday surprise party was tendered to John Carl, at his home on Manson place last week, and there wers some twenty-two young persons present. During the evening there was singing, dancing and refreshments. The vocalists were Miss M. Martin, Miss K. Benson, Frank Shattle, J. B. Martin and F. W. Bowden. The party met at the residence of J. B. Martin near by, and it was one or after before the party dispersed. Mr. Carl was in town during the evening, and when he retirned was surprised to find the house brilliantly lighted up and the guests making themselves merry.

The lieutenant will be promoted to captain and with his wife will have charge of the Volunteer post at Scranton, Pa.

Now They Are There.

As will be seen by the following the G. A. R. boys are at their destination:

St. Paul, August 5th, 1896.

The G. A. R. train just arrived and all hands are well and in the best of spirits, though Smith is calling for Mayor and Moore. Several comrades are asking for Corlies and Morse, because the comrades did not use up all the commissary supplies. Sneh says it is all right, and that we need more Jersey apples in liquid form. The ladies of the Relief Corps are happy and enjoying themselves hugely at the jokes of Commander Snell. They now say they would like to have a kye with them, not to arrest them but to guard them.

ALLEGED WIFE BEATER

JOHN LASSITI, COLORED, CHARGED WITH TRYING TO CHOKE HIS WIFE.

She Also Claimed That He Struck and Beat Her—He Has a Good Reputation and He is a Nice Offender.

Family quarrels are the cause of many of the cases in the city court, last week when Mr. and Mrs. John Lassiti, of East Second street, both colored, revealed their household troubles to City Judge DeMeza. Lassiti was the prisoner and his wife the complainant. They have both lived in Plainfield about eight years, and about three years ago they were married and went to live on East Second street. Neither name has ever appeared on the city court records and they were unknown to the police until Roundsman Frederickson was called in by Mrs. Lassiti yesterday afternoon. She is a slight woman, very light skin and quite delicate. She told the officer that her husband had come home early in the afternoon after drinking heavily. He abused her, she said, and beat her and finally tried to choke her.

Frederickson arrested him and locked him up for trial. He appeared before Judge DeMeza and the wife's story was repeated. It seems that this was not the first instance of the kind. Lassiti claimed that he had not been drinking and had not badly abused his wife.

He is a laborer and has a good reputation as a quiet and respectable citizen. The Judge declared him guilty, but suspended sentence on condition that he promised to leave his wife alone in the future.

They Hid His Wheel.

A. Willis West, of Crescent avenue, has been made the victim of a practical joke that has made him vow to purchase an immense padlock from some hardware store. Tuesday evening he stopped at the home of a friend in the borough and some other friends (?) found his wheel leaning by the fence. They took it away and hid it at the Park Club house. West came out later but could not find his wheel, and finally walked home completely disgusted. This morning, on walking over to the Park Club, he saw his bicycle in the rack. He is going to get a lock and chain, and is thinking about purchasing a club for the benefit of his friends. The club will not be of the style of the Park Club, however.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—During the period of the confederation the power to coin money was vested not only in the continental congress, but in the several states, many of them taking advantage of this to issue copper coins.

—The Massachusetts legislature has appropriated $600,000 for good roads. The farmers of the state have watched the road building operations of the last two or three years and have concluded that there is money in going ahead with the work.

—Canada has just bestowed names on its territory bordering the Arctic ocean. It will hereafter appear on the map in four districts or provinces—Ungava, Franklin, Mackenzie and Yukon. The four combined contain 1,081,000 square miles, or nearly seven times the area of the province of Ontario.

—One of the largest life insurance corporations in New York is discharging a number of its clerks owing to unusual dullness in its business at the present time. The custom is to make changes and raise salaries in March. It is the first time in the history of this company that clerks have been discharged at this season of the year.

—The lash was recently applied to the back of a man in England who had committed highway robbery. He knocked down a young woman and stole her purse. Justice Day, of the Kent assizes, expressed his disapproval of long sentences for first offenders. He thereupon sentenced Ellis to a month's imprisonment and 30 lashes from the "cat."

—The Yankee Notion arrived in Belfast, Me., recently. It is a frail, nondescript-looking vessel, 20 feet long, 10 feet wide, with a house amidships, and is constructed of odds and ends of lumber. The pecunia are Cobbler William Cottrell, of Swan's island, and his yellow dog. Capt. Cottrell proposes to navigate the Maine coast, earning his living at odd jobs of cobbling.

—The women of the early years of New Netherland and New York differed from the women settlers of Virginia and New England. They had other traits than those of domestic housewifery; they partook frequently of the shrewdness and business sagacity and capacity of their Dutch husbands. Widows seem to have felt no hesitation and experienced no difficulty in carrying on the business affairs of their dead partners; their ventures were as extended and as fearless as those of the men. They traded in peltries with the Indians with marked success. Perhaps part of their profit may have come through the Indian braves' serene confidence in their own superior sagacity in bargaining and trafficking with the "white squaws."

Elephant Hunting Profits.

By the slaughter of elephants in Africa an annual profit of more than £1,000,000 is realized. If the elephants, instead of being left a prey to the hunter, were tamed, they would bring an annual profit of some £135,000,000, according to authorities.

Cream Shape.

A delicate dessert is made as follows: Whip a pint of cream to a stiff froth, adding to the last a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and either a tablespoonful of essence of vanilla or two dessert-spoonfuls of any liquor you please. Have ready some good isinglass (one-half ounce), previously dissolved in a gill of boiling water, and as this cools and is just beginning to set, whip it in lightly to the whipped cream, and as this thickens turn it into a mold to set, leaving the mold in a cool place on ice. The secret of whipping cream is to have it cold.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

WIND, RAIN, LIGHTNING.

A TERRIFIC STORM VISITED PLAINFIELD LAST NIGHT.

Lightning Struck in Several Places, But Did Not Cause Much Damage Except to Telephone and Electric Wires

Violent thunder storms seem to be unusually frequent this year and the third and most severe of all visited this section last night. Although the damage may not have amounted to as much as that of the last storm, yet the rain was simply a deluge and the thunder and lightning was continuous and of extreme severity.

It was really quite warm Thursday in comparison to the recent cool weather and there was a touch of humidity in the air. In the afternoon a thin haze partially obscured the blue sky, but the sun continued to shine. As the afternoon drew to a close and the crowded trains began to deposit their loads, the clouds began to gather over the Watchung Mountains. At 5:30 o'clock, the dark line of clouds began to move slowly onward.

A quarter of an hour later the grey cloud had changed to inky blackness and it approached rapidly. Out from under it rolled banks of ashy-colored clouds, boiling and raging as they came. Then the blackness of the upper strata of clouds assumed a coppery color, as though reflecting the light of a fire in the distance.

On came the clouds with remarkable rapidity and in a few moments the sky was obscured. The quickness with which the storm approached was unusual, but the approaching signs were not as portentious as on previous occasions.

Plainfield did not seem to realize that a storm was soon to break until it was almost here. The commuters scurried from the station to carriage or trolley car or else hurried homeward on foot, hoping to reach there ere the storm broke. Cyclists scorched along the streets dodging in and out between the throng of carriages that filled the streets. Young yelping curs ran for shelter only to get in the way of pedestrians, while the loud clang of the gongs on the bicycles added to the general turmoil.

First came the wind. It gathered the dust up in clouds and blinded the struggling pedestrians, while whirling away their hats. Trees swayed and bent to the ground, while blinds rattled and everything seemed to portend a severe storm. In a moment the rain came. First in large drops that stung almost like hail and then in a perfect sheet. The wind still continued to blow, and the pourdown was uninterrupted. Pedestrians and cyclists scattered for shelter and then for nearly half an hour the rain came down in torrents. The thunder roared and crashed continuously, while the brilliant flashes of lightning seemed incessant. Gradually the storm went over, the rain ceased and the grumblings of the thunder in the distance was the only sign of the deluge.

Underfoot it was very evident that it had rained. The streets were flooded for a time until the dry ground soon soaked it up.

The street railway felt the effects of the storm. During the severest part of it the current was shut off and the cars were stalled. A lightning arrester on Richmond street was struck and traffic on the Netherwood extension was delayed for nearly an hour.

The Republican banner that was to be slung across North avenue last night, was all ready to be pulled across when the storm came. The wind and rain wrapped it around the guy wires that supported the pole and entangled it there.

Limbs were blown off numerous trees all over the city and some weak structures that had escaped other storms, collapsed at this one.

Evan Jones, of Kensington avenue, says that it was the most severe storm that has visited Plainfield in 35 years.

During the heavy shower last evening some of the electrical fluid ran over the incandescent wires leading into John Rafferty's sample room, on Park, and set fire to a lace curtain hanging in one of the front windows Almost in an instant the light material was in a blaze, and it was with no little difficulty that the curtain was hauled down and the flames extinguished before igniting with the woodwork.

A big limb was blown from a tree at the corner of Linden avenue and Duer street so as to almost completely obstruct travel on the sidewalk.

Warren Engine Company's house on Somerset street suffered slightly from the severe lightning. The fuses were burned out and at the same time a curtain was burned considerably. The curtain hangs very close to where the wires enter the building and the texture caught fire in consequence. Before the flames were extinguished a large hole was burned in the curtain. The lightning also caused trouble with the borough fire alarm wires, and after the storm it was discovered that there was a ground somewhere in the western part of the borough. Julius Stahl and Thomas McGann at once started out in search of the trouble and they tested a large majority of the boxes before they could locate the trouble. In chief Fairchild's house the electric flush played a lively tune around the indicator, but no damage resulted. Mr. Fairchild has decided to have a lightning safety arrangement placed on the apparatus. In Washington Park nearly all of the telephones were thrown out of use, but the trouble was soon repaired and this morning the telephones were all right.

Quite a quantity of drift wood was deposited in the gutter and on the sidewalk at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue during the storm. This morning nearly half a cord of wood was found there.

Fleischmann's barns and hay barracks at Millstone near Bound Brook, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground last evening. The loss is said to be very heavy.

One large hickory tree standing at the base of the mountain, near Westervelt avenue, in North Plainfield was struck by a bolt of lightning last evening, and split from top to bottom.

The break in the fire alarm wire in the borough was found on Sycamore avenue, between Willow and Mercer avenues. It was repaired this morning.

It was thought during the storm that Trinity Reformed church on West Second street was struck, as the shock was distinctly felt by the neighbors but no damage was done. Chief T. O. Doane says that the electricity probably utilized the complete system of lightning rods that protect the church. A severe shock was also felt at the meat market of Ulrich and Blatz on West Front street.

A barn in the vicinity of South Plainfield was struck by lightning last night and burned to the ground. The light could plainly be seen from this city.

Mrs. George Whitlock, of 214 West Second street, went to look out of a side window in her house, during the storm when she was stunned by a flash of lightning. Mrs. Whitlock was so overcome by the shock that she fell directly into the arms of her son, who stood by her side when the flash came. Today she has partially recovered from the shock.

FELL TWENTY FEET.

Frank Conshee, of Pearl street Thrown from a Tree,—Probably Fatally Injured.

Frank Conshee, an old and respected resident of Pearl street, North Plainfield, met with an accident Friday afternoon which may prove fatal. Drs. Schawan and Ziglio attended the injured man and did all in their power to alleviate his suffering.

"Frank," as he was familiarly known, was sawing off limbs on a black walnut tree, near his home preparatory to having a building moved from the premises, and the erection of another one thereon, when the limb he was sawing, a good sized tree in itself, snapped off without a moment's warning. The limb struck the ladder and the unfortunate man was thrown to the ground. Mr. Conshee was picked up in an unconscious state and carried to his home, half a block away, on a stretcher. There he lay in a camotose state for several hours, and finally rallied. During the evening he was occasionally in a stupor and when the two physicians arrived he was scarely conscious.

Mr. Conshee will be 69 years old in October.

Dr. Clawson, one of the attending physician, this morning reports Frank Conshee in a critical condition. If inflamation sets in, the doctor says, paralysis will in all probability follow and death will soon result. His advanced age is so much against him that the chance for recovering are slight.

INSANITY LED HIM TO STEAL.

Assistant Postmaster Who Embezzled $2,500 Discharged From Custody.

George B. Jenkins, formerly assistant postmaster at Short Hills, who was committed to the jail in Newark by United States Commissioner Whitehead for embezzling about $2,500 of the money of his office, is insane, and yesterday he was turned over to the care of his friends to be taken to an asylum in New York State. Jenkins was examined this week by a commission of physicians who pronounced him insane, and yesterday District Attorney Rice in New Brunswick received an order from Attorney-General Harmon to have him discharged from custody. It appears that the malady developed while Jenkins was in office, and that he was under the delusion that the Government owed him money. Jenkins is thirty-three years old, and was sent to jail in July. Most of the money taken has been recovered.

Holy Cross Church Services Again.

The church of the Holy Cross having been newly carpeted and some interior repairs made will open again for divine service on Sunday night. Morning prayer sermon and the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. On the second Sunday of the month the Sunday school will resume and afternoon service will be held.

SMALL, BUT IMPORTANT

MANY LITTLE THINGS ATTENDED TO FOR THE BOROUGH'S WELFARE.

New Sidewalks Ordered Laid—One Man Threatens to Shoot Salt Into Anyone Touching His Dilapidated Sidewalk.

In the main the business transacted at the regular meeting of the Borough Council, last Friday, was of a small but important nature, and all of the members were present except Mr. Peck, who was detained at home by illness. The clerk's monthly financial report was presented as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$ 467.81
Fire Department		$54.95
Lights	222.49
Roads	548.27
Poor		77.74
	$1,238.61	$132.69
	132.69
Total balance	$1,105.92

The clerk also reported that $131.73 had been collected as fines, licenses, etc.

Warren Engine Company notified the Council that Alonzo Brokaw and J. Sheppard had been elected to membership, and the matter was referred to the proper committee.

A. E. Faber and others asked that Grove street, beyond Greenbrook road, also Howard street, be repaired and put in good condition. Jonathan Clawson and others asked that Brook avenue, from Westervelt to Sandford avenues, be macadamized. They stated that $75 had been subscribed as the property owners' share of the work. The Crescent Wheelmen petitioned for the privilege of stretching a banner across Somerset street to advertise their race meet, to be held the latter part of September. This petition was granted, and the others were referred to the street committee.

The usual batch of claims were presented and in the regular order was paid.

Mr. Woolston, for the street committee, reported that Westervelt avenue and the continuation of Mercer avenue had been macadamized. Mr. Valiant offered a resolution that J. Higgins and S. Rosenfeld be confirmed as members of Warren Engine Company, which was so ordered. The same councilman offered a resolution, which was adopted, that exemption papers be granted to the following persons who have served seven years in the fire department: J. J. Stahl, Eugene Pope, J. P. Emmons, W. C. Smith, Geo. Schlereth, Wm. Emmons, L. B. Woolston, J. F. Buckle and Peter Hemmons. Mr. Valiant offered another resolution that the four fire hydrants recently located on Harrison street be accepted. It was so ordered, as was also the resolution that a loan of $1,000 be negotiated and charged to the light account.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a similar resolution, which was adopted, that the Council negotiate a loan of $1,000, the same to be charged to the borough account. Another resolution by Mr. Lounsbury provided that a warrant drawn for the sale of taxes be granted to Collector Spencer.

Mr. Valiant objected to the payment of Wm. T. Kirk's bill amounting to $117, as he was not sure that everything was satisfactory in connection with the work on the fire *bell and tower, and then the bill in*cluded a charge of $7 for cleaning a cesspool to allow for the erection of the tower. The bill was withheld for investigation.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the Council negotiate a loan of $1,000, the same to be charged to the road account. It was so ordered. Another resolution was offered by Mr. Woolston that L. N. Coddington's petition to have Coddington avenue accepted by the borough be granted; also that the petition of J. W. Mundy and others for a crosswalk on Grand street. Both of the above petitions were granted. Mr. Woolston offered resolutions to the effect that Rose Verdon, Ada M. Grant, J. L. Hunt, of Somerset street, and Gustave Sutterlein and Mr. Smith, of Greenbrook road, having been duly notified to lay walks in front of their property and failing to do so, that the borough put down the walks and effect a lien on the property for the amount. The resolutions were adopted. Councilman MacLaughlin voted no. The latter thought that some of the people were not able to pay for the laying of walks and they should be considered. Mr. Woolston and Mr. Sutterlein had said he would not put down a walk and if anyone tried to do so in front of his place he would shoot them full of salt. The Councilman thought it was time something was done in regard to sidewalks.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that the street committee be authorized to advertise the Watchung avenue property for sale, and that the best price possible be secured for the same. It was so ordered. Another resolution by Mr. Lounsbury was adopted. It provided for the renewal for sixty days of the fire department note for $1,160.10. Mr. MacLaughlin offered a resolution that a warrant for $200 be drawn in favor of F. C. Dunham, on account, for his services in connection with the opening of Watchung avenue. It was so ordered.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that collector Spencer's action be confirmed in paying the monthly pay roll amounting to $245.48. It was so ordered. The petition of Justice Mattison asking for the privilege of using the borough court room was refused. Mr. Lounsbury in reporting on the matter said that the committee did not think it wise to give anyone but the borough magistrate the privilege of the court room as the latter was the only Justice having charge of the Marshals and if outside Justices were given the previlege it would necessitate the jail being open and anyone could have easy access to prisoners if any were locked in the cells. The report was received and the Council commenced in the committees report. Counsel Charles A. Reed stated that all but four pieces of property along the Watchung avenue extension had been purchased and *paid for. The four remaining proper*ties would be secured in a few days. He said that in four weeks time the street ought to be vacated and then the work could progress rapidly.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the street committee be authorized to give permits to move buildings off the proposed extension. It was so ordered. The Council then went into executive session to examine the assessor's map, after which they adjourned.

R. F. HARRIOTT DEAD.

Stricken With Paralysis and Unable to Rally From the Shock.

Randolph F. Harriott, an old and respected resident of this city, died at his home on Watchung avenue at 11:45 o'clock Monday morning aged sixty-seven years. He had been an invalid from paralysis for the past six years, but his condition was not considered dangerous until about eight hours previous to his death. He passed away surrounded by kind and loving members of the family. The funeral will take place from the house on Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. M. Bodman will officiate, and interment will be made in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Decedent was born in New York on May 11th, 1829, and came to Plainfield over forty years ago. His father bought the property known as the Johnston place on East Front street, where the family remained for some years, and then returned to New York. Later they returned to Plainfield and took up their residence on East Front street, on the land through which Sandford avenue now runs.

For the past ten years the decedent has lived a retired life, but for many years previous to that he was in the real estate business in New York City, where he had large real estate interests. Besides the widow, three daughters and one son survive him.

LEFT THE CHILDREN AT HOME.

And Then Mrs. Heaney Goes to the Store and Much Damage Results.

While John Heaney's mother from Netherwood was in town last Friday laying in a stock of groceries and provisions for Sunday and Labor Day, two children were left to wander about the place. One of the children, a young lad, gained entrance to the place through a cellar window and then let his sisters in through an upper sky-light. John then turned the hose on two females and a coterie of children who were nearby, and after he had got through with the hose, which by the way, was attached to a faucet in the sink, the water continued to flow until the sink overflowed, and flooded two floors in the building. The damage will not exceed $100, but the inconvience caused by pulling down the walls and replacing them will be great.

Their First Run.

Dunellen's new fire department had a chance to show what it is made of Friday morning, and they did it with great credit to themselves. It was at 11:15 that fire was discovered in the house occupied by John Hubbard on the outskirts of the village. The alarm was given and the fire laddies scurried in great numbers to the headquarters, and with great excitement and incidental clanging of bells hurried to the scene of the conflagration. But before they arrived there, which was a fifteen minutes run, two or three of the members, who were near at hand, had extinguished the flames. The loss was about $100.

Owes His Life to Frisbie.

Another illustration of the necessity of getting to the station on time was witnessed Friday last when W. G. Morse, of East Fifth street, ran out from the waiting room to catch the 8:01 train for New York. Mr. Morse stumbled and fell on the car steps and narrowly escaped falling between the cars, when gallant James Frisbie rushed up and bodily lifted the passenger on the car. The train by this time was getting well under way and many persons turned their heads from what they expected would be a fatal accident.

—The State Council of the Daughters of America of this State will convene at South Amboy, Monday, September 21st.

John Steiner, of Somerset street, left Saturday morning for Asbury Park.

GUBERNATORIAL GOAL.

THAT IS STILL SAID TO BE FOSTER VOORHEES' AMBITION.

And John Kean is After the U. S. Senatorship — Voorhees' Determination Knocks Many Other Deals in the Head.

Though it has been repeatedly announced that State Senator Foster M. Voorhees, for three years the Republican leader in the New Jersey Senate, would not be a candidate for renomination, it is now understood he will accept the nomination if the Union county Republicans tender it to him with some degree of unanimity says a Trenton dispatch. Assemblyman J. Martin Boll had been a candidate, with the reservation that he was not to be considered if Mr. Voorhees decided to run. Sheriff Kyte has been another candidate, but it is probable that he, too, will retire to make Mr. Voorheest way clear.

Senator Voorhees himself is authority for the statement that he would accept a renomination. He was a delegate to the State Convention on Thursday, and his great popularity was attested by the ovation he received when he presented the platform as chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. The Union county delegation led the demonstration, which was taken up by the whole convention, but after reading the resolutions the Senator had the sagacity to quietly slip off the stage of the Opera House, and the loud calls for a speech failed to reach his ears.

This reconsideration of Voorhees intentions with regard to the Senatorship is probably influenced by the possibility of a nomination for Governor in 1898. John Kean is in the line for United States Senator, That was about settled by the National Convention which made Garret A. Hobart the nominee for Vice President and removed him as a Senatorial probability. Mr. Kean would other wise have been a candidate for Governor again, with excellent chances of winning, since he has the powerful influence and strong personal friendship of General Sewall as a starter. If Voorhees had insisted upon retiring from public life for two years his friends and admirers feared that he would have lost a vast amount of valuable ground, for in two years much can be forgotten in politics, and their arguments on this line probably and more weight with the young man that another thing else.

Mr. Kean's boom for United States Senator to succeed James Smith received its first healthy impetus on the night before the First Congressional district convention at Woodbury. He had gone down with State Committeeman Barker Gummere and W. S. Hancock, of Mercer county, and other North New Jersey friends of Congressman Loudenslager to be present at the convention and during the evening the party were entertained at the residence of State Senator Daniel J. Parker. The situation was discussed in an informal way and the Senatorial prize was acknowledged to be Mr. Kean's. Since then his boom has shown signs of considerable growth throughout the State, and his friends point with pride to his commendable course as a party leader. Of course, all these calculations are based upon the capture by the Republicans of both branches of the Legislature two years hence. Senator Smith's successor will not be chosen till 1899, a rather long look ahead.

Died in the Hospital.

The death of Walter N. Magee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman U. Magee, of Prescott place, occurred at Muhlenberg Hospital last Friday afternoon. Mr. Magee had been ill for some time with typhoid fever and when taken to the hospital, less than a week ago, he was in an unconscious and dying condition. He passed away calm and peacefully. Mr. Magee was a young man with a promising future. He was a machinist by trade and worked in the local machine shops. He was well known and had a large number of friends and acquaintances, whose sorrow is mingled with that of the bereaved family. Some time ago Mr. Magee was married and he leaves a young wife. The decedent was a member of Hope chapel, also Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock from Hope Chapel.

Searching for an Old Corner-Stone.

City Surveyor Meyer, of Elizabeth, will try to unearth the original corner-stone of the College of New Jersey, which will soon celebrate its 150th anniversary. The present location of the building is a matter of uncertainty. Mr. Meyer, however, knows more about the old landmarks in Elizabeth than probably any other man in the city. He has been searching for the site of the old college and thinks he has discovered it. The corner-stone may contain interesting records.

—The rain had a deteriorating effect upon the bicycle dealers and livery stable keepers hereabouts on Sunday. Had the weather been clear there probably would not have been enough carriages and wheels to supply the demand. As it was there was little or no business in either line.

BEING ROYALLY TREATED

G. A. R. DELEGATES ENJOYING A HUGE TIME.

The Attractions of the Twin Cities Thrown Open to Them—Comrade Smith a Veritable Encyclopedia for All.

Hotel Sherman, Headquarters of the N. J. Department, G. A. R., at St. Paul, Minn.—The Plainfield delegates have already found the commissary department of the hotel and, having laid in a good supply of rations, have been out to see the city and its handsome decorations. They found the buildings covered with bunting and electric lights, and the residents willing and ready to grasp the hand of every Jerseyman, many of them asking for friends in and around Plainfield. Comrade Smith knows every Plainfield man, woman and child when asked about anyone. Then Mrs. Smith, how sorry she is that she has not got a better memory so she can make the members of the Relief Corps sorry they did not come fourteen hundred miles and see the beauties of this beautiful city and the manner in which she west receives its guests. The programme is:

8:30—Reception to the commander-in-chief and Mrs. Walker by the citizens' committee, and citizens of St. Paul, at Hotel Ryan.

9 to 11—Reception to the Grand Army, Woman's Relief Corps, Sons and Daughters of Veterans and the St. Paul citizens' committee, by the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of Minnesota, in Senate chamber at State Capitol, Miss Marie Rasewinkle, department president.

2—Military Order Royal Legion, Commandery of Minnesota, headquarters Hotel Ryan annex, entrance from third floor of hotel and 4th Robert street, business session all the week.

9 to 12—General illumination of the city and band concerts.

9 to 1 p. m.—Excursions to Wildwood, on White Bear lake. Free variety performances and music and dancing in the Casino. Walking on water while 1,000 feet above the lake. Take East Seventh street electric cars.

And you bet the Plainfield boys won't see any of it.

N.

The New Firm.

The business people and residents of Plainfield are glad to know that J. P. Laire opened his store Thursday morning under such favorable circumstances. The firm name is the J. P. Laire Hardware Co. The store contains a complete and new stock of goods and everything in that line can be purchased. Mr. Laire feels confident that he will receive liberal patronage. Associated with Mr. Laire are Geo. Dunham, Frank Clarkson and Charles Kiederling, while Miss Mabelle Force is the efficient cashier.

Suspended Sentence on Monahan.

The trouble in the Monahan family on West Fourth street, has come to an end, at least so Michael Monahan says. He was brought in the city court last Saturday upon the charge of being disorderly. The complaint, as has been told in The Daily Press, was made by his wife. Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington appeared for Monahan and entered a plea non cull. Monahan seemed to be a respectable man and had a good reference from Street Commissioner Meeker. The Judge suspended sentence.

Arranging for Their Tenth Anniversary.

A regular meeting of the Plainfield Gesang und Turn Verein was held in the hall on Somerset street last Thursday, and the attendance was fair. President Schoettlin was in the chair, but the main business transacted was simply of a routine nature. The committee recently appointed to arrange for the tenth anniversary of the society reported progress. The anniversary will occur on Oct. 19th, when it is expected visitors will be present from all parts of the State.

Wrecked By a Trolley Turnout.

Miss M. Elizabeth Gavin, of the West End Farm, Columbia avenue, and a party of lady friends were driving from East Front street into Watchung avenue at 10 o'clock last Friday evening, when the left hind wheel caught in the car track and was completely demolishing it. Fortunately none of the occupants of the vehicle were injured, but the party was obliged to remain in the cool atmosphere for an hour or more before relief came in the shape of a new wheel.

Willing to Come for Expenses.

Mr. Drake, of Elizabeth, the leader of the celebrated band of that place, has offered to come to this city and give a grand concert, providing the expenses of travel are paid. There is a sufficient amount of money it is believed left in the hands of the 'Fourth of July Committee to meet such expenses, and as the committee has no other way to dispense with the money, why not have a concert which everyone could enjoy free of charge?

Knights of Honor Meeting.

Dictator Thad Smith presided at the meeting of Senate Lodge, Knights of Honor, in Firemen's Hall, Thursday. One of the main objects of the meeting was to decide upon a uniform rate of assesment. Heretofore there has been no regular classification according to age. The new schedule will go into effect on October 1st. On the third Thursday in this month the grand officers will be here and more fully discuss the matter.

—The five new closed cars for the street railway are expected to arrive in Plainfield very soon. The open cars are a trifle too cool for comfort these days.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

JOHN M. PALMER,

Of Illinois.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

SIMON B BUCKNER,

Of Kentucky.

OUR POSITION.

In the past we have never faltered in the support of Democratic principles and candidates, and in printing the names of Palmer and Buckner at the head of this column we are serenely confident that our pledge of support continues along in the spirit and precept by which the party of Jefferson and Jackson has succeeded in outliving many that have been arrayed against it.

The platform enunciated at Indianapolis, and on which Palmer and Buckner appeal for support, is essentially and intrinsically Democratic. Its teachings put to practical use in government means legislation and administration that will give the people prosperity and happiness.

The supreme issue, of course, is the question of what kind of currency we are to have, and, in fact, it is the one principal question on which the people will go to the polls and vote for on election day. Its importance has transcended all other declarations of the political parties, and the plank concerning this question in the National Democratic Party's platform is one that appeals to our support as against the dangerous ideas of currency promulgated by the Chicago convention.

The United States cannot maintain alone, if it hopes to carry on commerce with other nations, and we must do this if we prosper—the parity between gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. We believe to enact laws that aim at this purpose mean widespread wreck and ruin to the commercial interests of this country.

We cannot support such a policy, even though it is fathered by men who masquerade under the garb of Democracy.

CAMPAIGN IN NEW JERSEY.

The State Committee of the sound-money Democrats of New Jersey met in Jersey City, Tuesday. Henry D. Winton presided, and Abraham DeRonde acted as secretary. The others present were Jonathan Blackwell, James J. Bergen, Gen. Edward P. Meany, A. B. Carlton, Otto Crouse, Dr. Leonard J. Gordon, Hamilton Wallis, C. F. Randolph, and Messrs. Adams, Nelson and Graham.

Each member was authorized to organize the sound-money Democrats of his county, call public meetings, and arrange for such distribution of campaign literature as might be necessary.

The manner in which nominations are to be made was discussed. Under the election law of New Jersey this must be done by petition and the matter was referred to an Executive Committee, and Chairman Winton appointed the following: James J. Bergen, Edward P. Meany, Jonathan Blackwell, Leonard J. Gordon, and Abraham DeRonde.

The committee was authorized to file the list of electors selected as soon as the necessary signatures to the petition were secured. The method of doing this was especially referred to Mr. Bergen, who will act as counsel to the State Committee and all sub-committees when necessary.

The committee decided that the only nominations to be looked after were those for Electors and Representatives in Congress. The matter of making nominations for the Legislature was left to the County Committees, and may be made or not, as they deem advisable.

Dr. Leonard J. Gordon and Otto Crouse were appointed a committee to secure a State headquarters, and the committee adjourned, subject to the call of the Chairman.

The delights of a bicycle parade have been dissipated so many times, just as we were about to gulp them down with pleasure, that we are, as a progressive city, bound to try it again.

RAIN SPOILED THE DAY.

TORRENTS FELL JUST AS THE BICYCLE PARADE WAS TO START.

An Immense Crowd Was Present and Went Away Disappointed—Decorations of All Kinds Were Predominant.

Plainfield now knows how to break a drought. All that is necessary is to have a parade or a banner raising; at least, so circumstances would suggest. For the last three years almost any thing in the line of a parade has been either prevented or brought to an untimely end by a general downpour.

Last Saturday, the climax was reached when the Daylight Bicycle Carnival had to be postponed on account of a drenching rain that soaked paraders and spectators alike for twenty minutes before the time set for the parade to start. The first drops sent the unattached riders hurrying for shelter. Some of the clubs also scattered but the Crescent Wheelmen, of this city, and Vim Bicycle Club, of Newark, were the heroes of the occasion and remained fast at their post of duty while the fast increasing rain played havoc with their natty uniforms, until it was announced that the parade had been postponed. Then they, too, departed and left the triumphant rain in sole possession.

It was really too bad that all the efforts expended to make the Carnival a success, not only by the general committee, but by all the participants, should come to naught. Of course, the Carnival was only postponed, but it will necessitate lots more trouble to prepare for it again.

It was wonderful the way the people came from all the surrounding country. In the morning, the coasting contest was held on Watchung avenue hill and about thirty cyclists participated. Each one made several attempts, however. The strong wind from the southeast aided the coasters and the contest depended more on the luck of the contestant in receiving a strong wind than on the easy running qualities of his wheel. The latter, however, had something to do with it. As was told in Saturday's Press, the contest was finally won by Olaf Sangstad, of this city. He rode a Spalding and coasted 3,326 feet, or nearly two-thirds of a mile. He almost reached Franklin Place, F. Richard Stevens, of Park avenue, was second, about thirty feet behind. He rode a Cleveland Swell Special. Until the last of the contest, it was thought that Walter Long, of Park avenue, was going to win. He finished three rods, however, about five feet behind Steven's mark. He rode a Union. Baron Ernest T. Hand, of Westfield, was fourth and G. F. Boyce, of Passiac, fifth.

Among the other local riders that entered the contest were H. J. Martin, Jr., Laurens H. VanBuren, A. D. Thompson, Jr., Roy Phillips, S. C. Crane, F. L. C. Martin, and Albert Price. Simmonds, N. R. Titsworth acted as referee, J. Hervey Dalton as starter and J. Casper Kirker as clerk of the course. Titsworth's aides at the finish were Frank Rogers, F. J. Pope and C. B. Morse. Quite a number of spectators witnessed the contest.

All the morning the visitors arrived by train, awheel or in carriages, wagons and all sorts of turn outs. At the North avenue station, S. P. T. Wilbur's genial smile welcomed the strangers to Plainfield and he directed all to the coasting contest or bicycle headquarters as they dared to go. Two hours before the time set for the parade to begin, 3:30 o'clock, there was a steady procession going toward the corner of Park avenue and Eighth street, in which decorated wheels and fancy costumes were very much in evidence. At three o'clock the Independent Fife and Drum Corps and the Plainfield Cornet Band marched up Park avenue and took possession of their stages on West Eight street. Ten minutes after that the rain began to fall. By that time only two clubs had taken their regular positions, the rest were either parading around the streets or were on their way to the rendezvous. The Crescent Wheelmen were there, all in long white duck pants, the regular blue uniformed coats and white caps, and they made an excellent showing. The Vim Bicycle Club showed up well, although all their number did not arrive before the rain began. The handsome uniform sweaters looked very neat. Two little girls, dressed in the uniform of the club, were the mascots, and there was also in line a triplet, and two tandems. A uniformed bugle corps added the club and furnished music for them.

Among the other clubs present were the "Famous Six" of Somerville, with their escorts, the Alls football team, in football suits, red sweaters, and campaign hats and the Plainfield Business College Club. The Y. M. C. A. cyclers were just starting when the rain came and quite a number of out of town clubs just reached this city as the rain did and rushed for shelter at once.

There were decorated wheels innumerable, "Wandering Willies" and "New Women" were there in profusion, while Japanese, Chinese, "LiHung Chang's," Germans, dudes, and rustics wheeled from every direction. Some of the fancy costumes were very handsome, especially those of the ladies and young girls. There was one tandem from Rahway that was literally covered with flowers. The floats were very good but the threatening rain kept many away. Olaf Saugstad had a platform arranged over the top of his Punnett Companion and two little children, in fancy costumes, grouped upon it. It was handsomely decorated. The Central Mills had an appropriately decorated wheel. L. W. Randolph's business float was a handsome Venetian bower arranged on a wheel riden by Percy V. Wheeler, dressed as a knight in court costume. "Manager" William Sweeney and Herbert Beckfelder, dressed in large white duck pants, coats of the same material and tall silk hats, made a great hit on the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co's Punnett Companion.

The marshals were early on the scene and looked very finein white duck knickerbockers, dark coats, and white caps and their handsome red and gold sashes. Grand Marshal Martin made quite a noticeable figure with his gold fringed white sash, and costume similar to the marshals. His headquarters were at the Revere House and there the chief interest centered.

When the time for starting had arrived and the rain was falling heavily, Chairman J. F. MacDonald called a meeting of the general committee and it was decided to postpone the parade. Another meeting of the committee will be held at once to determine the date.

BULLETS WHIZZED BY.

Charles Routhenhousen Narrowly Escaped Having His Sight Ruined.

Charles Routhenhousen, the candy maker, of Westervelt avenue, nearly lost an eye, Monday afternoon. He was sitting on his front stoop, entertaining his children when a charge of buck shot whizzed past his head and embedded itself in the weather boards nearby. Two indiscreet youths had been in the woods hunting for squirrels during the afternoon, and meeting with no success, stopped near his house and sent a valley of shot at a lot of green chestnut burs on a tree near by. The young gunners shot wide of their mark, and came within an ace of sending Mr. Routhenhousen into the hereafter. The latter immediately walked over and notified the borough marshals, but as he is not absolutely positive of identifying the shooters, no arrests have as yet been made.

Borough Democratic Delegates.

The North Plainfield Democratic primary was held Saturday evening at the school house. There was not a large number present. D D. Smalley, was chosen chairman, David Kenney, secretary, while Wm. N. Pangborn, H. O. Hance and David Kenney were selected as delegates to attend the State Convention which will be held in Trenton tomorrow.

The following resolution was adopted by the delegates:

WHEREAS, The Democrats of North Plainfield, in primary assembled, do hereby Resolve, That they heartily endorse the nomination of William J. Bryan for President and Arthur Sewall for Vice President, and as so decare their unswerving adherence to the platform adopted at the National Democratic Convention held in Chicago in 1896.

Be it Resolved, That the principles enunciated in the Democratic platform will best serve the needs of this country. We hereby call upon all loyal Democrats to support the above named ticket, realizing the importance of this issue to the welfare and future well being of the maintenance of this nation, its general prosperity and the perpetuation of a patriotic government and we hereby pledge our allegiance to the party and its nominees.

A Political Sermon.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue chapel, preached a sermon, Sunday, on the political situation, but it was devoid of partisanship and was filled with good advice for the Christian to act under. His text was "Blessed is the Nation whose God is the Lord."

Town Improvement Association.

The September meeting of the Town Improvement Association will be held on Friday afternoon, September 11th, at the Y. M. C. A. building. The matter of burning leaves in the streets will be discussed, and as this subject so nearly concerns all of the citizens of Plainfield a large attendance is urged.

SCOTT'S Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites, can be taken as easily in summer as in winter. Unlike the plain oil it is palatable, and the hypophosphites that are in it aid in digestion and at the same time tone up the system.

For sickly, delicate children, and for those whose lungs are affected, it is a mistake to leave it off in the summer months. The dose may be reduced if necessary.

We recommend the small size especially for summer use, and for children, where a smaller dose is required. It should be kept in a cool place after it is once opened.

STOLE COSTLY JEWELS.

A PLAINFIELD COLORED COUPLE LOOT AN EAST ORANGE HOUSE.

The Husband Found at His Father's House in This City—Missing Money Found on His Person—Taken To Orange.

Although they have been married only about six months, the wedded life of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phillips, colored, has been an exciting one, and Saturday night they managed to get implicated in a burglary at Orange that is likely to prove rather disastrous for them.

Perhaps the readers of The Daily Press will remember the little adventure Phillips had the night of his marriage, how he was arrested for stealing a ten dollar bill from a woman at the City Hotel and how it took the biggest kind of hustling on the part of his friends to get him out of jail in time for the ceremony.

Last Saturday night, the home of Mr. Robinson, a wealthy resident of Orange, was robbed of some jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. Mrs. Phillips was employed in the household as a servant and the evidence pointed very strongly at her and her husband. She was arrested Sunday, but he skipped early that morning and disappeared.

The Orange police authorities discovered his disappearance Sunday night and early yesterday morning telephoned to Plainfield, knowing this to be his former home. Sergeant Kiely received the message and decided to make a call at the home of Phillips' father, on Central avenue, in the rear of Reform Hall. Accompanied by Patrolmen Vanderweg and Flannagan, the Sergeant gained entrance on some pretext and there found the missing man. A hasty search did not reveal any of the stolen property, but when Phillips was carefully searched at the lockup eight gold rings and one silver one, valued from $10 to $75 each, were found in his possession which corresponded with those described in the telephone dispatch.

Phillips submitted quietly to arrest and the subsequent search. He further admitted having pawned some of the most valuable of the stolen articles, and these, it is believed, can be recovered.

Yesterday a detective came up from Orange and took the prisoner back with him, where both Phillips and his wife are now locked up awaiting the action of the Grand Jury.

William Bartindale, of Brooklyn, is visiting relatives in town.

CUPID'S BILL OF FARE.

Newly-Wedded Couple Leave It in a Chicago Eating House.

If Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Kaberlah will return an elegantly engraved document containing sundry references to soup, entrees and desserts to a certain Madison street restaurant they will, if the Chicago Tribune tells the truth, be given in exchange another document fully as handsome, covered with cooing doves and lovers' knots, and clasped hands, and such things, and signed by a preacher and two witnesses.

Owing to the fact that love was still suffering from defective eyesight, Mr. Kaberlah and his blushing companion made a little mistake after dinner which made some confusion. It was manifestly annoying to a guest at the restaurant to pick up the document that Mr. Kaberlah left and say to the waiter:

"BRING ME SOME BLISS."

"Bring me some bliss, a couple of hearts, and half a turtle dove fried."

As for Mr. Kaberlah's friends they will be horrified when he innocently hands them his marriage certificate and they read:

"Clam chowder and shell-fish always in season. Complain of any inattention of waiter. Wine list on the last page."

But as soon as Mr. Kaberlah discovers he has exchanged his marriage certificate for a restaurant bill of fare it is probable he will make an immediate exchange.

Lady diners at the restaurant were highly edified when they picked up a new-looking menu card and read:

There is a bliss beyond all that the minstrel has told
When two that are linked in one heavenly tie,
With heart never changing and brow never cold,
Love on through all ills and love on till they die.

Now that was discouraging for a real hungry man. Some of the guests thought the verselet was thrown in for embellishment until they read on the next page:

"It is not good for man to live alone."
"I will make an helpmeet for him."
"In sickness and in health."
"To love and to cherish."
"Till death do us part."
"According to God's holy ordinance."
"And thereto I pledge thee my troth."

On the front page of the booklet was a couple of turtle doves engaged in cooing, 25 coos a minute, and it was only on the last page that a hint was thrown out that the devotees on the booklet were cooing their satisfaction over the marriage of Mr. Kaberlah.

Finally a waiter, who had been sent by sarcastic and hungry diners twice to the kitchen with orders for "turtle dove tongue with bliss sauce" got an idea something was wrong, and appealed to the manager, who took possession of the new bill of fare, and gave it to the cashier to put in the strong box until it should be called for.

A MISSOURI FREAK.

Boone County Has Produced a Lamb with Eight Legs.

Here is a lamb with eight legs. It is a bisexual lamb and lives and gambols on "the green" on the farm of Smith D. Comas, of Boone county.

With legs of lamb and mutton in demand in the city at good round prices for fat, juicy meat, a lamb with eight legs is not to be despised. This is the first lamb cast by the freak's dam and she made such a success that Mr. Comas has decided not to sell her to the butcher next fall, but to give her another chance. Mr. Comas has vague hopes that she may do as well or even better next time. Anyway, he thinks it worth while trying to raise eight-legged sheep for the market.

Put His Skill to Account.

A novel method of perforating iron plates is reported from Salida, Col. The city is being supplied with electricity for lighting and power generated 14 miles away in the Big Cottonwood canyon. It was found necessary, for the purpose of pipe connections, to cut four 48-inch openings in the seven-foot penstock, the plates of which were half an inch thick. The workmen began to cut with cape chisels, but the progress made was too exasperatingly slow for the engineer of the works, E. M. Jones, who is known throughout the west as the "cowboy engineer." Mr. Jones took up his rifle and, using steel bullets cased with copper, shot a line of holes through the plates from a distance of about 30 feet. The intervening edges were afterward easily cut out and in a very short time the job was finished.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation, can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

THEY MAKE NO APOLOGY.

INSTEAD BOROUGH OFFICIALS WILL BRING SUIT AGAINST MR. SERRELL.

He Wrote What Seemed to be an Impertinent Letter and Now he Gets a Curt Reply and Will Defend a Suit.

The North Plainfield Board of Health dealt summarily last night with the case of L. W. Serrell, a member of the city Board of Health, who, it is charged, maintains a nuisance against public health by running a sewer from one of his houses on Plainfield avenue to Green brook.

Two weeks ago, it will be remembered, Inspectors Pangborn and Weaver, of both borough and city, made a joint investigation and declared, by this aid of that famous colored fluid of Inspector Pangborn, that Mr. Serrell was maintaining a nuisance in violation of the ordinances of this city, which, as a member of the Board of Health, he is sworn to enforce. The Press published the news in the case and Mr. Serrell waxed wroth and wrote a bitter reply in which he belittled the efforts of the North Plainfield officials in their work of suppressing the pollution of Green brook and intimated that it was a conspiracy of the part of his enemies to put him in an embarrassing position before the public.

It seems that at the same time he wrote the letter for publication he also penned a private epistle to the North Plainfield officials insisting that they had no right to take any such proceedings as they had, and virtually demanded that they make an apology to him. This letter was read at the meeting of the Board last night. It caused quite a sensation and on first thought it was suggested that a letter be written and published explaining the whole subject. Further consideration, however, on the part of the members brought about the conclusion that the letter of Mr. Serrell's was highly impertinent. The secretary was authorized to simply acknowledge the receipt of it, without comment of any kind, and this morning the answer was mailed to him. Then the matter of investigation made by the inspectors was taken up and on the evidence all ready secured in the case, Borough Counsel Reed was instructed to immediately commence suit against Mr. Serrell under the law of 1893 relative to the pollution of public streams. It provides that for a conviction a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment, or both. The suit will probably be brought in Circuit court. The following sections from the ordinances of the Board of Health, of which Mr. Serrell is a member, were quoted to show that he had expressly violated the ordinances, and admitted by himself in his published letter:

"No person shall throw, cast, place or deposit or allow to flow or run into any stream, cistern or well any dead animal, putrid meat, garbage, offal, manure, compost or any foul or offensive substance whatever."

"The causing, throwing, draining or discharging, or causing to be cast, thrown, drained or discharged into any public street, highway gutter, alley or other public place or private grounds, within said city, any slops, kitchen water, laundry water, sewage, waste water, swill or filth, shall be deemed and hereby declared to be a nuisance."

AN OLD FRIEND DEAD.

Chauncey Roll, Known by Many Plainfielders, Passes Away.

Chancellor Roll, an old and respected resident of this city, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. W. Feild, at Madison, N. J., on Saturday, aged seventy-six years. He was born near here in 1820, and the greater part of his life had been spent in this vicinity. Decedent was peculiar in some ways but he was good natured and talkative to all. He was familiarly known on the street as "Uncle Chauncey," and was a regular attendant of the Friends meeting on Watchung avenue, where he could be seen nearly every first day, occupying the same seat. For many years past he had lived a retired life, he and his sister having amassed enough to live on comfortably for the balance of their days.

At the time of his death he was part owner in two valuable pieces of real estate on Watchung avenue, between Front and Second streets, and he had other real estate interests near Madison. He was unmarried, and was an uncle of Mrs. W. L. Force and Mrs. J. H. Force. The funeral took place from the home of his sister at Madison, Tuesday.

STRUCK BY A BLUE LINER

A DUNELLEN MAN FOUND DEAD ON THE TRACKS.

It is Supposed That Carl Fred Enander Was Struck by a Royal Blue Line and Was Not Found For Several Hours.

Carl Fred Enander, aged 55 years and three months, met a tragic death at Dunellen some time during Sunday night. His mangled remains were found literally cut to pieces about one hundred yards east of the station, and the only means of identication were portions of his clothing, a letter and a grey tuft of hair which still remained on the chin. The body was disemboweled, and the face was entirely torn away.

The crew on John McCall's train which leaves Dunellen soon after 5 o'clock were drilling their cars preparatory to starting out on their early morning run when the lifeless body was found lying between the two tracks. Particles of flesh and bone were strewn along the track for a considerable distance, and it was necessary to place them in a small box for removal.

Just how the accident occurred is not yet, and probably never will be fully known. Mr. Enander left his home on First street early in the evening to call on a friend in the Todd house, south of the station. He left there about 9:45 o'clock on the way home and the supposition is that he did not notice the approach of the eastbound Washington Blue Line flyer which arrives in this city at 9:56, and being caught up by the cowcatcher was hurled in the air and falling some distance ahead was ground to pieces on the rails. The engineer could not have seen the man approach for no warning signal was sounded and the train sped on its way.

Decedent leaves a widow and five children, three sons and two daughters. One of the sons, E. H. Enander, is in the plumbing business on Park avenue, this city. He was of Swedish parentage and located at Dunellen some twenty years ago. He was known as a man of strict business principles, and he had many friends.

President of the Board of Education, Samuel St John McCutchen, Superintendent A. D. Warde and Miss Glass, principal of the High School. Each made short addresses at the opening exercises. A new piano arrived at the school and was used this morning. Superintendent Warde and all the teachers are very busy arranging the classes and work so in a day or two the school will be in good running order.

Fell and Cut His Head.

John Ryback, of Philadelphia, sustained injuries Sunday morning about 2 o'clock which detains him at the hospital. He attempted to catch the 2:14 train to New York and missed it. He then walked down the stone steps at the Watchung avenue bridge, and in doing so he made a misstep and fell quite a distance to the sidewalk. Patrolman Vanderweg learned of the affair and secured a cab which conveyed the injured man to the hospital. An examination showed that Ryback had a deep cut in the forehead and several bruises about the body. He is now improving nicely.

—The funeral of William Hewitt was held from his late home on East Third street Sunday afternoon, the Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiating. Four sons acted as pall bearers. Interment was in Evergreen cemetery.

—Work on the nurses' home at the Muhlenberg Hospital has been started and is being rapidly pushed forward.

FOR NEW INSTRUCTORS

instead of mortgaging the school property, was brought up by Mr. Lounsbury, and by so doing, he claimed, the tax payers would reap some little benefit.

President Probasco stated that he had every reason to believe that the Mutual Benefit Society would probably take the bonds at 4 or 4½ per cent, and a resolution was adopted authorizing the Secretary to consult counsel with reference to the issuing of bonds.

The matter of furnishing writing pads for the pupils was brought up by Dr. Jenkins, and Principal Maxsom responded that writing paper was furnished to all the pupils, and pads would probably be an expensive luxury and many of them go to waste.

The Board then went into executive session, and considered the appointment of a janitor for the new Lincoln School building. In executive session the Board talked over at length the matter of appointing janitors, and all the old ones were re-appointed. No decisive action was taken with reference to appointing a janitor for the new building.

GOLD MEN'S TICKET

Palmer and Buckner Both Natives of Kentucky.

ONE WAS A BLUE, THE OTHER A GRAY

Final Day's Proceedings of the Indianapolis Convention—Main Points in the Platform—An Interview with the New Presidential Nominee.

Indianapolis, Sept. 4.—The second and final days' session of the national democratic party was conducted with the same business celerity that marked the opening proceedings. It closed up all its business, platform, nominations and every thing else in a continuous session of less than five hours. Then it as journed sine die without once indulging in any extravagant proceedings, or at any time permitting its order of business to be interfered with by the galleries. In this respect the convention was an object lesson as to what national conventions might be made if the plans suggested in 1892 by ex-congressman W. H. Collins of Boston, as to the limitation of spectators, in some modified form, were adopted by the great national parties. The nominees are senator John McAuley Palmer of Illinois and president Sereno Simon Bolivar Buckner of Kentucky for vice-president. Both candidates were born in Kentucky. One wore the blue, the other the gray, so Louisville, the capital of the "Dark and Bloody Ground" was appropriately designated as the place of notification for both candidates, Sept. 12 being the date designated. Gen. Palmer was nominated on the first ballot and ex-Governor Buckner by acclamation.

Rich in Oratory.

The convention was rich in oratory throughout, but the speech of Col. W. C. F. Breckinridge of Kentucky easily took rank as one of the most effective of campaign utterances heard in recent years. When he rose to speak there was some hissing heard, but his brilliant oratory soon won him friends and he was repeatedly cheered. Before adjourning the convention took the precaution of clothing its executive committee with full power to take all proper steps to secure recognition for the ticket in states where the Australian ballot law or other legislation might interpose obstacles to the recognition of two democratic tickets each claiming to be regular. This difficulty is anticipated in Ohio and some other states in the accepted battle ground of the middle west.

Cleveland's Positive Declination.

During the early part of the day Daniel P. Griffin, chairman of the New York delegation, sent the following telegram to President Cleveland at Buzzards Bay: "There has been manifested an unmistakable desire upon the part of the convention to nominate you for the presidency. The New York delegation is anxious to learn your personal wishes, and would consider it an honor to vote for your nomination." To this telegram Mr. Cleveland sent this brief but conclusive answer: "My judgment and personal inclinations are so unalterably opposed that I cannot for one moment entertain the suggestion."

The Platform.

The platform adopted is, in part, as follows: This convention has assembled to uphold the principles upon which depend the honor and welfare of the American people, in order that the democrats throughout the Union may unite their patriotic efforts to avert disaster from their country and ruin from their party. The declarations of the Chicago convention attack individual freedom, the right of private contract, the independence of the judiciary and the authority of the president to enforce federal laws. They advocate a reckless attempt to increase the currency by legislation to the debasement of our monetary standard and threaten unlimited issues of paper money by the government. They abandon for republican allies the democratic cause of tariff reform to court favor of protectionists to their fiscal heresy. In view of these and other grave departures from democratic principles, we cannot support the candidates of the convention, nor be bound by its acts. The democratic party has survived many defeats, but could not survive a victory won in behalf of the doctrine and policy proclaimed in its name at Chicago.

All Other Parties Arraigned.

The conditions, however, which make possible such utterances from a national committee are the direct result of class legislation by the republican party. It still proclaims, as it has for years, that the duty of the government to raise and maintain prices by law, and it proposes no remedy for existing evils except oppressive and unjust taxation. The national democratic party convened therefore renews its declaration of faith in democratic principles, especially as applicable to the conditions of the times. Taxation, tariff, excise or direct, is rightfully exacted only for public purposes, and not for private. Public amount is justly measured by public expenditures, which should be limited by scrupulous economy. The demand of the republican party for an increase in tariff taxation has the pretext in the deficiency of revenue, which has its cause in the stagnation of trade and reduced consumption, due entirely to the loss of confidence that has followed the populist threats of free coinage and depreciation of our money, and the republican practice of extravagant appropriations beyond the needs of good government. We arraign and condemn the populistic conventions of Chicago and St. Louis for the open coalition with the republican party in creating these conditions, which are pleaded in justification of a heavy increase on the burdens of the people by a further resort to protections. We therefore denounce protection and its ally, free coinage of silver, as schemes for the personal profit of a few at the expense of the masses. In fine, we reaffirm the historic democratic doctrine of tariff for revenue only.

Silver and Gold.

The experience of mankind has shown that by reason of their natural qualities gold is the necessary money of the large affairs of commerce and business, while silver is conveniently adapted to minor transactions, and the steadiness and exactness of both together can be insured only by the adoption of the former as a standard of monetary measure, and the maintenance of silver at a parity with gold by its limited coinage under such laws as legislation may direct. To the long established democratic policy we adhere and insist upon the maintenance of the gold standard, and of the parity therewith of every dollar issued by the government, and are firmly opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver and to the compulsory purchase of silver bullion. But we denounce also the further maintenance of the present costly patchwork system of national bank currency as a constant source of injury and peril.

Other Declarations.

The platform further declares for arbitration for the settlement of international disputes, a liberal policy of pensions to deserving soldiers and sailors, and opposition to efforts to degrade the United States supreme court. The administration of President Cleveland was highly commended.

Gen. Palmer Interviewed.

When asked by a reporter what he proposed to do during the campaign Gen. Palmer replied that he was unable to talk intelligently on that subject at present. "The location of headquarters and all matters of detail will be left in the hands of the national committee and my friends," he said. "That is about all I can say. The campaign goes without the saying." Senator Palmer expects to participate in the campaign as freely as possible, but what results would come from the work of the convention he would not predict. He said the committee had adjourned so hastily after completing its work the senator would have made a speech which would, the leaders with him hoped, have obviated the necessity for a formal notification. This will, however, come later, in accordance with democratic custom. Senator Palmer will at once devote himself to the preparation of his letter of accept ance.

Queer Arrangements of the Wo...

Until quite recently the postal system in Persia was very loosely conducted. It was under the superintendence of a minister of posts, who, however, does not work the system himself. Each road is farmed to some merchant or wealthy person, who pays a certain sum to the minister for the privilege, and makes as much money out of the business as he can.

On the south coast of Patagonia is the most remarkable postal service in the world. Close to the post is a large sign post with the inscription: "Post Office." Attached by chains to the foot of it is a box set in a strong chest, which has served as a post office, master, clerk, all in one, for many years. The ships passing through the Magellan straits send a boat to the shore to fetch any letters that may be addressed to their places of call, and at the same time to leave any letters they may wish to have taken in other directions.

In a small group of islands off the south coast of Iceland the islanders have a bottle post which is entirely at the mercy of the wind. When the wind blows from the south they put their letters into a well-corked bottle. To insure delivery, a plug of tobacco or a cigar is put inside, and then on the mainland are usually on the lookout for and ready to deliver the letters so dispatched, in return for the inclosed remuneration.

HOSIERY AND SHOES.

What Is Being Worn with the Summer Costumes.

Black hose and ties having a moderately pointed toe and medium heel are correct with any summer costume, though tan ties and hose are cooler looking and very stylish with thin street or house gowns. A colored shoe makes the foot appear two sizes larger—a fact that makes many hesitate in buying either tan or white ties. The latter in canvas are worn with white hose at summer resorts and chiefly with white suits. They are also much worn out of place on the streets of a large city. Patent leather ties are said to draw the feet and also to easily stretch out of shape, but they are, nevertheless, much worn for a dressy street wear. White glace kid slippers keep their shape better than those of suede kid. White slippers and hose should be worn with a white evening costume, but black ties and hose are worn with a white day toilette unless white canvas ties are preferred. High buttoned shoes have kid or cloth tops and patent leather tips. The small, razor-pointed, moderate or square toe and the medium or high heel. Wipe shoes when taking them off; air and stuff them with soft paper when not in use. Wearing shoes on alternate days keeps them in better trim besides doubling their wearest. Canvas may be cleaned with paste that is sold for that purpose, and white canvas ties with French chalk or naphtha; the latter is very explosive when exposed to either light or fire, consequently great care must be exercised while using it. Black shoes and hose are worn with any costume; tan hose and shoes with brown dresses. Dressy black kid slippers for the house have gold-embroidered toes in open or close work.—Ladies' Home Journal.

WORST BOY ON THE ISLAND.

William Mueller Has Been Looked Up Ten Years of His Life.

His Story as Told by Himself—The Burden of It All Is That "Nobody Hain't Treated Him Right."

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

Those who best know William Mueller, whose story as related by himself, his father and the officers of the law I am about to try to reproduce, declare him to be the worst boy in New York. As to that I cannot speak with authority, but if there are worse boys in New York than he, then Heaven help them and the city.

This boy had earned a bad name before he was six. He is now 18 and yet more than ten years of his life have been passed behind locked doors and barred windows. He is at present "doing" his second "bit" in the New York penitentiary on Blackwell's island and all hands there agree that he is the worst boy they ever ran up against. The opinion held concerning him by the penitentiary authorities is fully concurred in by the regular police and the officers of Commodore Gerry's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Both have had to keep strict and constant watch upon him off and on for the last dozen years. The Gerry society will not be bothered with him in the future, for he is no longer a child, but the police will perforce be on the lookout for him the minute he is again released from imprisonment.

He excuses himself on the ground of ill-treatment. The deputy warden of the penitentiary says that the lad's evil doing is the result of a hopelessly warped nature.

"He will undoubtedly be a criminal all his life," this official declared when talking of young Mueller, "and most of his days will be spent behind the bars Whatever is forbidden, that he itches to do, and though he has a certain sort of shrewdness, his criminal instincts are so much stronger than any and all others that he will at any time take desperate chances to commit a crime. He will no sooner get out after 'doing a bit' than he will be caught in some fresh iniquity and be locked up again. Under the 'habitual criminal act' of this state he might be sent to prison for life, and I'm not sure but that would be the best thing both for him and the community at large. He's present 'bit' here, is for 11 months and $300 fine. If the fine isn't paid he will have to serve 300 days after the 11 months are up and that will make his term almost two full years, for unless he turns over a new leaf he is certain to get no commutation for good behavior. He has been here only about a month now this time, and yet he has earned more punishments for a long term. He has even had to be chan often fall to a full-grown man in locked up in a dark cell, and that is a punishment given to comparatively few here. His first 'bit' on the island was for six months only, but it was long enough for him to make his mark as the toughest youngster we ever had dealings with, and he is evidently not going to rub out that mark this trip. He is a 'degenerate' if there ever was one."

William Mueller looks like a "degenerate." He is undersized and of a nervous manner and he whimpers when he speaks. Again and again while he was talking with me he laid the blame of his ill-doing on the shoulders of others, and his eyes frequently threatened to overflow with tears, while his lips were in a constant state of self-pitying tremulousness. At the request of his father, Louis Mueller, of 221 East Ninety-eighth street, who had lost sight of him but had heard he was locked up again, I went over to the island a day or two ago to see the boy. Little by little as he talked he told the story of his crooked life.

"Dey's only one trouble wit me," he said, "and dat is nobody hain't never treated me right, an' when I've tried to git even I've always got caught. Dey began to treat me wrong when I was a little bit of a feller. Me mudder was dead an' me fadder, he worked all day. De folks he boarded me wit, dey wouldn't let me go out on the street and nobody wouldn't give me no money. So I took what I could git me han's on and sneaked out de door whenever I could. Den de Gerry s'ciety folks, dey didn't treat me right, for dey caught me when ever any odder boys done any dirt. I use ter know boys dat would trow stones at stands and trip folks up in de street an' break windows and all dem things but I didn't do 'em. No, sir. I jist kept quiet like an' all I done was to take wot I could git me han's on when de folks wouldn't give me it willin'ly. Me fadder t'ought he was good to me, but he didn't know how I was treated, an' he usfer stay out all night lookin' fer me sometimes an' have to work overtime to make up.

"When I was between five and six, I guess it was, dey sent me to de institute on Tent' street, an' dere I stayed 'bout four years, I t'ink. But dey didn't treat me right dere eider an' when me fadder married again an me step mudder she didn't treat me right neider. She'd kick whenever I'd take a few pennies or stay out all night an' sleep in a waggin. Me fadder he sent me to a school an' paid fer me goin' dere but dey didn't treat me right any more dan de odders had an' dey turned me out fer gittin' me han's on tings. Den I was sent to de public school an' it made me tired to go dere. So I was sent to de Juvenile 'sylum 't Lunner' n' Seventy-sixt street, in Bloomingdale, most four years more. W'ot did I hafter go there fer? W'y me step mudder didn't give me no money fer a hull month' layin' on de table an' I needed it an' I took it. I spent it on Delancy street an' had a lot o' fun, but when me fadder foun' me he sent me to de asylum.

"I dunno w'y me step-mudder didn't like to have me sleep in waggins and cellar ways an' like dat. It's more fun dan sleepin' in beds, an' waggins is a good deal better dan cellar ways or any where else, only when you sleeps too long an' wake up where you haf to walk a lot of miles to git back again. Wunst I slept in a milk waggin and woke up down in de ferry an' de feller he didn't treat me right—he trun me out on de pave an' like to crack me nut.

"It was after I got out of de 'sylum dat I took a horse an' got in de refuge. A feller sat me to hol' de horse and he'd gimme five cents. He kep' me waitin' too long an' I got in an' drove away. He de feller's daughter she treated me dead wrong. She seen me drivin' by an' she squealed. She made an awful fuss an' w'en I was in front of a p'lice station a copper came out an' pinched me. We'ere was I goin' wit de horse? W'y to de horse market, of course. W'ere should I go to hock de horse but to a place w'ere horses is sold?

"I was in de refuge two years dat time, an' w'en I got out dey sent me to a farmer to work away out by Rochester. Say he treated me more wrong dan anybody else." Here the boy seemed at the point of collapse as he contemplated his wrongs. "I hat to git up at tree—four o'clock in de mornin'—an' go out wit a lantern in de dark an' water de horses an' cows an' clean de stables. An' den I had to help milk an' dat made me han's tired. An' den I hat to work all day an' some in de night. Say dat farmer didn't treat me right, no, sir. I stayed dere two months. I couldn't git away fer I couldn't git me han's on no money nor nothin'. After two months, dough, he gimme seven dollars an' a half an' say, I come to New York as soon as I could. I come here; I met a man in de road an' he was comin' here an' he said we'd be partners on de journey an' we come on a freight train. It took 'n' awful time an' we rode in a de woods an' over mountings, but finally we got to some ferry comes de river an' den we was all right.

"But I got in de refuge agin. Some other boys was disorderly an' der Gerry men caught me, an' I hat to do time agin. Den I was in a home for der refuge den, an' I wrote me fadder a letter an' sat him to git me a job where I could earn enough money so I needn't take any. He got me a job wit a tailor on Clinton street named Cohen, but he didn't treat me right at all. He wouldn't gimme but a dollar seventy fi' a week 'n' den one day he sent me to take a coat home to a customer—a pore headed boy—I don't remember his name—he said 'w'y don't you hock der coat, 'n' we'll spend de money.' Dat boy was to blame for dat, but after I pawned de coat I caught me and locked me up, an' I hat to do six monts' time here 'cause I was gittin' too big fer de refuge. Dey's a lot of bad boys up dere an' dey told me how to do a lot o' bad tings. After I got out o' here dat time I got a job in a shoe factory all by myself, but dey didn't treat me right dere no more dan anywhere else. One day I seen some spoons in de window next door an' de same red-headed feller dat tole me to hock de coat he said I'd better take de spoons. He was a bad mate, he said. If I would, an' so I took 'em. Den dey caught me an' now I'm doin' time agin, but dey didn't do not'in' at all to de red-headed boy.

"I wouldn't be in trouble at all if folks would only treat me right an' nobody wouldn't tell me to do bad tings. I'll keep away from dat red-headed boy sure w'en I git out next time an' say, mister, you tell me fadder to be certain to pay me de money or I'll go to stay here more'n a hull year longer."

"Was I ever in wid a gang? Not much of a one. Dey's a gang I know down on Clinton street, but dere's only half a dozen in it an' I can't tink of fer certain dat I've never been called de king of de gang as I know of."

This last in answer to questions I put because of the title the boy had been given on Clinton street. In that locality the boys who look as if they might be gang leaders are few, with many reservations that they never heard of Mueller, but the tailor, Cohen, remembers him well enough, and when I asked about the boy, speedily exhausted his scanty knowledge of English expletives in trying to express himself.

The boy's father, who formerly lived near Clinton street but who moved uptown to Ninety-eighth street a year or two ago to get away from his son's reputation, is a quiet, industrious looking man, who combines the cigar making trade with the occupation of housekeeper or janitor of a 25 flat front, five story tenement that shelters 115 individuals. His wife, the "stepmudder," is a tidy appearing but busy woman. The children are healthy and lively as crickets. The eldest of the brood is seven or eight years of age and all seem normal.

Both the father and the stepmother have been given a turnout for years by "the court people" over the boy, and have about given him up.

"Till my boy come five years old," said Mueller in his defective English, "people like him. He don't do nossing bad, jist wants to be a widow and have to move all the time. I put the boy out to board and all the time the people say 'that boy be no good.' I work days and have to leave him with strangers all but nights. Something go wrong with him. He don't make him be bad, but he do nossing good. By and bye I get married again but my wife she can't do nossing with him. He take whatever he can find everywhere and I have to send him first to the institute and then to the asylum. Then he get in the refuge twice and I get him out the second time by getting him a job with Cohen, the Clinton street tailors. Mabbe he give the boy too much power when he send him on with the coat—I don't know. Anyways he's bad all through now. I don't earn much money. I get nine dollars a week at my trade when I have plenty work but for years I average only $8 a week. I don't know how we live if we didn't get rent free. We have five children now and I done all I can by that boy in the past—I do nossing by him any more. Since he was six years of age I have spent six months with him. He don't drink none and if he smokes I don't know it. I got no more to say."

The boy himself says he smokes cigarettes whenever he can get his hands on them but mourns the difficulty that stands in the way of frequent indulgence.

It is agreed by all who know him that he does not drink. Taken altogether he is a most discouraging product of modern civilization. He is not the worst boy in New York he is certainly on the lowest level—there are none worse or weaker.

OSBORN SPENCER.

Curious Dwelling for Ants.

One of the curiosities of the vegetable kingdom, and one which of late years become quite common as a green-house plant, is the Myrmecodia tuberosa. The plant was first sent to Europe in 1847 by Hugh Cuming, from Malacca. Its stem is tuberous and everywhere covered with thorns. In its native country every plant is constantly inhabited by thousands of ants of the great family of myrmica, and it is on that account that the plant was given its scientific name of Myrmecodia. The ants pierce the tuberous stems in all directions and coat the galleries thus formed with an insect cement that is of suprising durability. In fact, it is a strange sight to see how the plant decies it will rot away, le aving the cement galleries intact, the whole then having the appearance of a beautifully ramified specimen of seaweed.

This Cat Gets Drunk.

Among the most cherished possessions of Frances Willard is her Angora cat, Toots. Toots'snose bore the more dignified name of Gladstone, but England's Grand Old Man happened to take a stand on the prohibition question that did not meet with Miss Wil lard's approval, so he was christened the cat. Toots has habits which would shock the temperance reformer, for he gets intoxicated occasionally, though with Miss Willard for a mistress "rum" is naturally not the cause of his crime. The Boston English Club visited her and him as maudlin as ever fiery liquid did a human being, and earnatious, too, are as bad as strong drink in his case.

SCRAP WITH A BADGER.

New Orleans Man Has a Unique Fight in Texas.

Although a Powerfully-Built Individual, Mr. Lees Has a Tough Time Getting the Better of the Infuriated Little Beast.

Information has reached the New Orleans Times-Democrat of a novel and exciting experience undergone by a New Orleans man at Sugarland, Texas. The incident is one that rarely, if ever, occurred before. Certainly it cannot be recalled that on any previous occasion a man had found himself forced into a hand-to-hand encounter with a badger, that active and sociable but bearish whose forepaws exhibit a strength of long, sharp claws scarcely less formidable than a tiger's. Yet the struggle between an unarmed man and an enraged beast of this species is on record, and Mr. S. S. Lees, well known as the representative of the Sterling Boiler company, Texas, who bested his wild animal adversary and with only nature's weapons.

For some days Mr. Lees has been the guest of Ed H. Cunningham & Company, sugar producers and refiners at Sugarland. During his sojourn Mr. Lees and others on the plantation sought to provide some novel entertainment in honor of their guest. After much reminating and many councils together on the subject, some one hit upon the idea to arrange a fight between a badger and hounds. This proposition met with general enthusiastic indorsement, especially when every one learned that Mr. Lees had never witnessed a scrap of this kind in his life. Active preparations were begun by the organization of a party which was to go out and provide the necessary badger, or as the naturalist would say, Taxideo Americana.

With this object in view, early one morning a little party set out from the plantation for the near-by haunts of the object of their quest, whose trail had been seen a few days before. The equipment of the hunters consisted of a rifle, a lasso and a strong twine attastened to the end of a long pole. It was their purpose, of course, to capture the badger alive, and the rifle was taken along solely for safety's sake.

Not long after reaching the vicinity of the animal's abode they sighted their prey, and after some lively maneuvering and exciting scuffle succeeded in lassoing the beast, enmeshing him in the net and making him a sure candidate for a gory arena.

By seven o'clock Tuesday evening all the preparations for the fight had been completed. Two fine hounds, picked from a pack of 25, were held in leash awaiting the trial of animal courage and strength. The fight was to be pulled off in a large room on the first floor of the refinery, and at the hour mentioned there were assembled Mr. Lees, his host and a crowd of other persons.

From the moment the badger scented the dogs his ire began to rise and his snarls became vicious. The dogs evinced an eagerness for the fray, too, and it looked as if it were going to be a battle royal.

Suddenly, however, all the plans for the combat were upset. The badger was being securely held in the net. He was released at the same instant the dogs, but as he did so he sprang at their wild foe they were cutely dodged by the furry beast, who, now grown desperate with mingled fury and chagrin at the presence of so many men, sought to escape by leaping over the heads of those assembled in the room. Here Mr. Lees became the most prominent actor in the arena. As it attempted to leap over him the badger did not clear Mr. Lees' head, but "lit squarely on his breast. Instantly there was a lively commotion among the crowd.

Though astonished at the sudden turn of affairs, Mr. Lees, who is a powerful man and something of an athlete, began to fight desperately, and the badger, fortunately finding it to escape cut out, fought like-wise. The struggle was however, short, sharp and decisive Before the bystanders had a chance to take a hand in the fight between man and beast, Mr. Lees had secured a vise-like grip on the badger's throat, and th ugh the animal clawed wickedly at his breast and inflicted several slight but painful wounds, he held on until the badger was choked to death beyond struggling. Not even then did Mr. Lees release his grip, but threw his wild adversary to the floor and continued to choke it until life was extinct.

There was plenty of excitement a out the refinery while the fight between and the badger were having it out with each other, and when it was all over Mr. Lees was the lion of the hour. Mr. Lees' exhibition of nerve and strength was such down on the programme, but his friends say he has now both seen and felt a badger fight.

A KILLARNEY IDYL.

Phelim McCaul was not in a particularly good humor as he strode along the rough mountain path whistling a fashion tune between his teeth and cutting savagely at the wayside brambles that shivered in the sharp east wind, which, appropriately enough, was heralding the Lenten season down the famous Gap of Dunloe.

Judged from Mr. McCaul's standpoint, the situation was a tantalizing one. Here he was, a man of 34, with a tidy bit put by, a snug farm and no incumbrance, actually unmarried, although this blessed Ash Wednesday eve, and likely to remain so during the coming 12 months, all owing to the unreasonableness of one Thady O'Rafferty, whose daughter, Mollie, Phelim sought in marriage, the negotiations having been broken off that very evening for positively the last time.

Had Phelim been a trifle older, or a trifle more philosophic, he would have probably told himself that this opposition of his was simply a blessing in disguise, but, being still young and not at all a philosopher, he chafed fiercely at the broken match and heartily cursed Mr. O'Rafferty as he went.

Absorbed in bitter reflections, he did not hear the approaching rattle of gig wheels behind, and it was not until a friendly voice had thrice shouted his name from lungs rendered stentorian by mountain air that Phelim knew he had a fellow traveller at his elbow. Then challenged, he faced around and recognizing his interlocutor as an acquaintance named Lanigan, who rented a farm a mile or so from his own place, came to a halt.

"Arrah, Phelim, boy, where are ye goin' at that rate this hour o' night?" asked the new-comer, accommodating his horse's pace to that of the young man as they moved forward together.

"Sure, I thought 'tis down colloguing with Mollie O'Rafferty ye'd be this minit instead of flyin' all over the country like thistledown—"

"That's all off now," replied Phelim, sulkily, not well pleased at Lanigan's observation, but too true an Irishman to resist the temptation of chattering about his own affairs. "The mane little blaggard of a father wouldn't give a penny more than 200 quid with the girl, and he after as good as promisin' 300 a fortnight ago, an' I knowin' he had 800 lodged in the bank in Killarney!"

"Is it truth ye're tellin' me?"

"Oh, divil receave the lie, an' divil receave the ha'penny more he'd advance, an' I, after swearin' to his face I'd not marry any girl under 500!"

"Right y'are, I like your sperret—"

"Sure if I did, I'd be disgraced for ever-and-ivin' meself down like that an' there's no fear me wife 'ud respect me either."

"Oh begob, I suppose he thought that as ye were decent ye'd the soft vein in ye too," commented the other, cracking his whip. "I suppose he feared that since Miss Mollie was at the convent for a year an' could play the pianny, the head 'ud be turned on ye shoulders."

"Faith, then he never made a bigger mistake in his life," retorted the rejected suitor, knitting his short, straight brows, "there's not such a differ between wan girl an' another as all that, an' 'twould take a keener man than Thady Rafferty to tell what's in any one himself an' his daughter, the crosseyed—"

"I don't wonder at yer feelin' hurt," interposed Lanigan smoothly, as he reined up, for at the branch of a spot where the road branched off in different directions, "but never say die, there's as good fish in the say as ever was caught, an' if ye're willin', ye can still be a-married man this very Shrove!"

Phelim, bitterly. He was in no mood for wooing now.

"I have three daughters yonder," pursued the other, pointing in the direction of the undulating uplands rolling away to the left, "and, by here in the Purple mountain soared into the deepening twilight, "an' they hear tell of you Phelim, though I don't know if any of 'em met you lately. For if they're great stay-athomes, but they have all a wish for you, an' 'tis I that 'ud be hard for ye to put the 'come hether' on any of 'em; so if ye're in earnest, Phelim McCaul, come along with me this blessid minnit, an' I'll give you the pick of the three, an' I'll send across for father Pat O'Leary—he's only a couple of fields away—an' he'll buckle ye in a jiffey, since the time is so short."

Phelim's darkening brow cleared a little; natural cunning was struggling with wounded pride, and that short-sighted longing for swift revenge which impels many a rejected wooer to fling himself away upon the first girl he meets, in order to enjoy the triumph of what is usually but a Phynic victory —pride won.

"I'll go," he cried suddenly, wheeling round; "me father, God rest his soul, often said ye were a decent man, an' sure the whole parish knows there isn't the dirty dhrop in any of ye!"

"Right you are, me bouchal," responded Mr. Lanigan, promptly; "that's the talk, an' before long you'll have a chance of Judgin' whether Thady O'Rafferty has all the nice girls in the country. So just jump up alongside o' me an' we'll be over there like winkin'."

Phelim obeyed and a quick trot along the winding road presently brought them to the group of whitewashed outhouses surrounding Lanigan's cottage, whose lighted windows shone hospitably through a mountain mist.

Here the proprietor begged his prospective son-in-law to wait while he went in and explained matters to the girls.

"They're bashful, poor things, since they lost the mother," he remarked, confidentially, "an' maybe they'd be a bit put out if they saw you comin' in on them all of a sudden."

To this arrangement Phelim made no objection, and Mr. Lanigan, hastily passing through the kitchen, went straight to the parlor, where, as he expected, he found the three Misses Lanigan placidly engaged in knitting or sewing.

At the entrance of their parent the three young ladies rose to greet him, the eldest, Kitty, a girl with dove-like eyes, limping slightly as she crossed the room.

"Girls alive, don't be flustered," said Lanigan, breathlessly. "Cissy, stir up the fire; be quiet, Peg, there's a young man outside—for a wife; he must get married this Shrove, an' he's waitin' at the door."

"Who is he, eroo?" asked Peggy, the youngest.

"Spake asy—Phelim McCaul," replied her father, with a nod, at once interpreting and explanatory. "I'm goin' to give him the pick o' ye, an' 'tis a long time till ye get as good a chance again."

"Shure, he's runnin after Mollie O'Rafferty," interjected Cissy, pausing in her operation of sweeping the ashes under the grate.

"Yes, but that's all broke off now," answered Lanigan; "he's tearin' ma'n' 'ud marry the divil's daughter for satisfaction. Here, don't waste any more time 'rampashin' there, but sit down, all of ye, about the table, Kitty here, an' Cissy at that side, an' you, Peg, at this, an' don't ye get up when he comes in, or have on to be surprised, but be nice an' pleasant to him, for I said ye were all 'gone' after him, be jabers."

And, silencing the titter with which the young ladies took their places, he hurried out to Phelim, who, when he was introduced a few minutes later, found the maidens demurely seated in the positions indicated by their fond parent.

There was a decent interval filled by improving the conversation, while Bridgie, the handmaid of the establishment, brought in materials for punch, and it was only when the tumblers were half emptied that Mr. Lanigan broached the subject which occupied the thoughts of all.

"Now Phelim McCaul," he said, rising, and unconsciously imitating the manner of a gentleman he had once seen auctioneering cattle in Killarney, "these are my three girls, the same I was telling ye about. There's the eldest, Kitty; I'll give her £500, dry money, and there's the second eldest, Cissy, and she has £300 to her name; an' here's Peggy, the youngest, an' the man who takes her now will have £200. So there you are, me bouchal, an' which of 'em will you choose?"

BOTH MEN WERE DEEP IN THE

Mr. McCaul rapidly worked a little sum in mental arithmetic; naturally, he decided on the £500 damsel, then he glanced carelessly at her face.

"I think, sir," he remarked, deferentially, "I'll take the eldest young lady, if she'll have me. The other two are very nice, indeed, an' it's not the first time I heard of 'em" (he was only dimly conscious of their existence until that evening) "but I think 'tis only proper to give her the refusin' of me."

There was a brief silence, a cinder fell from the glowing mass between the grate bars, Cissy tittered furtively, Peggy leaned forward, her elbow upon the table, her dimpled chin crushed in the palm of her hand, watching the episode with the pitiless eyes of 18. Kitty sat perfectly still, but her demure mouth was lifted at the corners, and there was a light under her half-closed lids like the gleam of a knife loosened in its sheath.

The disinterested Phelim rose and approached her.

"Will you have me, miss?" he asked, gently—perhaps at that exact instant he forgot the £500; I hope he did.

Kitty's head sank lower; there came a spot of scarlet on her cheeks.

"Oh, yes, indeed," she whispered.

"Begor, that settles it!" cried Lanigan, drawing a quick breath, "she's me own favorite child, the first of the clutch, Phelim, an' I say it without any shame to the others, you're got the pick of the bunch. Sure, I don't know what we'll do at all, at all, without her; but, anyway, I'm glad she's settled, and has a good husband, an' since she was to go, there isn't wan I'd rather have her before your own self. Take her, an' God bless ye, an' may the first boy be a bishop! Cissy, girl, run an' get up the fire, help your sister, Peggy, arick, while Phelim an' meself settle a little bit o' business here, as our heads are cool."

And overruling a very faint protest on Mr. McCaul's part, he drew the young man into a corner, where a little, old-fashioned cabinet stood, and presently both men were deep in the examination of a tank book, greasy with long use, and also a mysterious ledger which the girls knew to be opened only upon the most momentous occasions.

The examination of the books concluded, Mr. Lanigan remarked genially, as he pointed to an empty chair at the head of the table on whose snowy cloth, the scanty array of household treasures was already glittering:

"I sent over for Father Pat as I was certain 'twould be because his gettin' late in the evenin' now ye can be married comfortably off-hand an' no bother about it; there's a fine room upstairs, an' a bed that's fit for a king, an' they're lightin' the fire there now so the smoke'll be clear out when ye're ready, for sweet had luck to me if either o' ye go out of this house to-night!"

Of course Kitty, who had remained in the parlor, blushingly objected, a mere matter of detail which did not affect the arrangements in the least, while Phelim, who had made up his mind that the bargain was a good one, became properly impatient, so that when Father Pat made his appearance he found so air of undeniable festivity pervading the house, the genial spirit of the hour breathing upon all, from Murteen, the oldest farm laborer, who had got drunk with amazing celerity, to the young lovers themselves as they sat hand in hand under the fostering smiles of Mr. Lanigan, while he pelted the amorous swain with appropriate badinage.

The good father, who had been that very evening anticipating a "cold shove," was no forbidding figure in this scene of Arcadian felicity, and after some passages of decorous hilarity, the mystic knot was tied, and Phelim McCaul, though he had entered the house only an hour before a bachelor, found himself pledged for life to Catherine Philomena Lanigan.

This important ceremony having been transacted, the home of the Lanigans became a perfect focus of gaiety. A few neighbors and a blind piper, whom very instinct had led to the spot, keeping the impromptu merry-making afoot.

Father Pat, a quaint figure not destitute of a certain pathos and dignity amid this somewhat boisterous jollity, presided in the parlor, and gave "sonorous" blessings to the paralyzing Cissy's pancake, now joking with the young, now gossiping with the old, and later on taking a hand at a quiet game of "43" with Lanigan, the bridegroom, and Corney O'Leary, a clerical student, a cousin of the family. Finally, it was he who proposed the health of the new wedded pair, in an extempore speech, winding up with a neat little quotation from Martial, which Mr. O'Leon promptly mistranslated, to his own great confusion, but the unmitigated satisfaction of his relations who secretly believed him to be a far superior scholar to the parish priest, and soon after taking that kind-hearted gentleman's departure, going back to his lonely house, the richer by a ten pound note and a fresh experience in the ways of humanity.

When the priest had gone, dancing commenced in the great kitchen. Mrs. McCaul did not, however, take a part in the proceedings, but quietly retired to her room, while Peggy footed it with the most hopeless detrimental in the shape of the tune of the "Wind That Shook the Barley."

The next morning Phelim came downstairs in a great huff. "Jack Lanigan," he shouted, "come herh if ye's a man!"

"Arrah, there ye aire me bhoy," observed Lanigan, cheerfully, "a light an' airy ye are; the top of the mornin' to ye, I was comin' up to know were ye awake, how's yerself?"

"See here," roared the deluded bridegroom, "why did ye give me that girl inside with wan leg longer than the other?"

"Sure, didn't you see her?" retorted the father-in-law, "an' didn't you choose her from the three of 'em?"

"I know that quite well," rejoined Phelim, his eyes sparkling, "but I didn't know she limped an' why didn't you tell me?"

"So I would, if you had only axed me," replied the other, genially, "but I didn't know 'twas to run races you wanted her!"

That was all. The two men stared at one another the fraction of a second; then Phelim left the room, the nuptial chamber and closed the door gently.

Then he found the limp consisted of a wooden leg.

A PARADISE SONG.

The day was hot, the way was long, the feet were tired, so tired,
The goal is won toward which we strove,
the goal so long desired.
The eyes which sought the distant hope through wavering mists of care
See it at last, oh close, so close in Paradise
the Fair.

The black, black night through which we groped is turned to radiant day.
The doubt to certainty more glad than song or speech can say.
The baffling winds which buffeted beyond our strength to bear
Blew us across the blessed way to Paradise
the Fair.

We doubted and we fainted and we seemed to miss the road
As, stumbling on, and painfully, we toiled
beneath our load;
And the uphill left us breathless, and the tempest left us bare.
What matter, since they bore us up to Paradise the Fair?

We who were lonely once and found the silence very sore, Companioned round by our beloved are lonely nevermore;
The puzzles all are read, the explained, and the griefs which grieved us there
Are proved to be the Lord's sure path to Paradise the Fair.

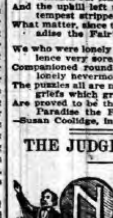
THE JUDGE'S SECRET.



NEVER before in the history of the state of Georgia has a case at the bar made such a strenuous effort to convince a jury of the innocence of the prisoner. Many years ago it was that the noted trial took place, but the scene all comes back to me as vividly as at the time it occurred, now that a startling disclosure has recently been made, after the death of the judge who sat upon the bench.

Although not more than a boy, I witnessed the trial of Andrew Hastings with more absorbing interest than anything else in my life has since awakened. I remember the gestures, the impassioned face of Hastings' attorney, Col. George Harvey Palmer, and I can almost repeat the very words he uttered when addressing the jury. It was a wonderful defense he made—wonderful how he fought every inch of ground, while a chain of strong circumstantial evidence was tightening the halter about his client's neck. His cross-questioning of the state's witnesses was so exhaustive, his pleadings to the judge and to the jury so earnest as to arouse the sympathy of many in the packed court-room. It was, as I remember, the first important case with which Col. Palmer had been connected in Monroe county courts. He had moved to Alabama from Virginia and had been in his new home but a few months before the Hastings murder case became the sensation of the hour.

Last week Judge James C. Garrow died in Monroe county, Ala., and among his papers was found a statement concerning the Hastings case—a statement written to be made public after his death. I have read that statement, and it, in connection with the trial of Andrew Hastings, makes such a remarkable chapter of court history that I have written it all down here.

It was in the days of the noted kuklux klan, that organization which sprung into life in the south during the memorable days of "reconstruction." It is supposed that the organizers of the klan originally intended to control the suddenly-freed slaves by appealing to their superstition, for the kuklux gave birth to hobgoblins, ghosts and spooks, and was shrouded in the most profound secrecy. But before long the klan soon became chargeable with many inexcusable and outrageous crimes.

Some time in the spring of 1867 the judiciary began to take active measures for the suppression of violence in Monroe county. Also, whether the lawless bands calling themselves kuklux, for the original organization had by that time ceased to exist.

On March 14, 1867, near the town of Clinton, Monroe county, Ala., Amos Bivins, a camp follower of the union army, who had opened a store in Claiborne, was found dead on the side of the public road. He had been beaten to death with a club or some other heavy weapon.

"Another kuklux victim," was the public verdict, and with this the people were disposed to discard the matter from any further consideration, but Judge Garrow was one of the most earnest among officers of the law, who had decided views of his own in the world for the suppression of crime. He instructed the sheriff to make a most thorough investigation, and, if possible to bring the murderer or murderers to justice.

It did not take long to fix the crime on Andrew Hastings, who clerked for Bivins. The evidence against Hastings while circumstantial, was very strong. Having been raised in the south, Hastings had no love for his employer, who was regarded as one of the despised class of "carpet baggers" in those days. He finally quarreled with his employer when reproved for insulting the union soldiers and negroes who loafed at the store. Witnesses testified to this quarrel, which resulted in Hastings being discharged, and there was an abundance of evidence to the fact that as he left the store he was heard to remark: "I'll fix the d— Yankee."

It was only two nights after Hastings' discharge that Bivins was killed. Two witnesses swore that Hastings tried to induce Augustus Brown to go on the day prior to the murder. It was also proven that Hastings was heard to say when speaking of the killing: "The people ought to give the man who did it a vote of thanks."

Added to all this was the fact that Hastings could not account for his whereabouts on the night of the killing between the hours of eight and twelve o'clock. Bivins left his store about ten o'clock to go to his home, and it was presumed he was killed a few minutes after that hour.

When on trial Hastings stated that he had gone "possum hunting alone, leaving home about eight o'clock, and returning about one o'clock the next morning. It was for this purpose he attempted to borrow a gun. He proved that it was his custom to go on these nights hunts alone. With his previous good character, this was all there was for the defense.

But Col. Palmer made the most of it and fought the evidence of the prosecution at times with an impassioned eloquence that almost amounted to a madness. I remember an old lawyer in the courtroom remarking: "Well, I never have seen an attorney so thoroughly identified with his client's interests before." In closing his argument to the jury, as I said, was a most masterly effort. His face was pale when he arose and walked to the jury box. His voice, although stern and full, trembled as he cried out: "Gentlemen of the jury, God is my witness when I say to you that I am here to plead for the life of an innocent man."

He made but little effort to controvert the damaging evidence against his client, but addressed mainly a pathetic appeal for mercy for an innocent man who was the victim of peculiar circumstances. He ended his speech by holding the Bible high above his head and saying:

"As true as this Holy Book I hold in my hand, so true is this man innocent, I say to you, I know it. You may call it intuition if you like, but so sure as you convict him you will have the blood of an innocent man upon your heads."

The verdict was guilty, and Hastings was sentenced to be hanged. The case was appealed to the supreme court, and the decision of the lower court was affirmed. An application was made to the governor for clemency, and a petition bearing the names of many prominent citizens of Monroe county was sent to the chief executive. Col. Palmer was leaving no stone unturned to save his client. The strain and hard work was telling on him. He had grown emaciated, and more than once had been ill from nervous prostration.

The governor refused to interfere, but intimated that he might give the case a more favorable consideration if the presiding judge recommended a commutation of the sentence. This was regarded as a forlorn hope, the determination of Judge Garrow to suppress crime being so well known.

The day of the execution was near at hand and Monroe county was preparing to witness its first hanging in many years. Then, like a thunder clap came the news that the governor had pardoned Andrew Hastings. Not even a commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment had been looked for, but here was an absolute pardon, and the prisoner was free, while all the gallows already over him was a free man.

It was some time before the people could be made to believe that the news was true, and many did not believe it until Hastings was allowed to walk from the prison unchecked.

The only reason the governor assigned was that Judge Garrow had requested it in a private letter, and the appeal was such as not to be disregarded.

But why did Judge Garrow make such a request? His honesty was above suspicion, his integrity was undoubted, and his firmness could not be questioned. Yet, after declaring in his purpose to clear the law and to have existing by the strong arm of the law, he deliberately used the power of his office to free a man convicted of a most foul murder. What could it mean? Was there an explanation? But the judge did not explain, and his silence through all these years has kept the Hastings case one of the strangest of the unexplained murder mysteries of Alabama. When questioned at the time the judge said: "I had just and sufficient reasons for acting as I did."

Time and time has this case and its strange denouement come before my mind, and often have I tried to reach a solution, which, while satisfactory to myself and leave no suspicion upon the memory of a member of the judiciary whose character had always been above reproach.

It is true, Judge Garrow has passed to stand himself before a judge whose justice, it is to be hoped, will be tempered with exceeding great mercy for us all. I have before me this statement, published in Monroe county, Ala., and I give it here as the sequel to what I have already recorded:

"To Those Who May Be Living When I Am Dead: I believe if any shall desire to look into my life history they will find nothing that posterity shall be ashamed to read upon my gravestone. Yet there is one transaction of my career as criminal judge which demands of me an explanation. In truth, I should have been ready to meet that demand before I passed away, but I was so placed that my lips were sealed. The wrong (if wrong it was) in following myself to be unhampered, but justice to an innocent man weighed in the balances against the wrong toward myself.

"This single act of mine for which I may have borne public condemnation was the part I took in securing a pardon for one Andrew Hastings, arraigned and convicted of the murder of Amos Bivins at the full term of the circuit court, which convened in October, 1867.

"Without any attempt to criticise the motives of those who thought it wise amid scenes of desolation and lawlessness to hold a mock in accordance with the forms of law, I will say that my conviction of the guilt of Hastings was based upon the clearest evidence. I had no doubt of it then, and I have no doubt of it now. I reviewed his history, his conduct of the case, how he had expended money and devoted his time with no hope of any reward. I looked into his face, and I knew he had spoken the truth.

"JUDGE GARROW, I AM THE MURDERER."

"I believe if it had not been for what he considered the needs of his cause and his little children, he would have surrendered at the first. It was undoubtedly his intention to have saved his client even if the last resource should have been to take the prisoner's place upon the gallows.

"There was nothing left for me to do but to urge the pardon of Hastings, and that I did.

"Judge Monroe County Circuit."

It is not often desired to resurrect unpleasant memories, but sometimes justice to the living and to the dead demand that the sepulchers of the past be invaded. So I have given this bit of history, believing that I am justified in doing so, even if I had to drag from its grave such a ghastly skeleton as the "kuklux klan.—Atlanta Constitution.

Strict Rules of Etiquette.

In Baron Rothschild's recent book of anecdotes are some curious tales of the extremely stringent rules of etiquette which prevailed at the French court in the reign of Louis XVI. Marie Antoinette christened Comtesse de Noailles the Countess Donkey, because when she fell from a donkey in her private grounds, she jumped to her feet and cried out, laughing: "Go and fetch Mme. de Noailles; she will tell us what the proper thing is to do in the case of a person who she falls off a donkey." One cold winter night when the queen was undressing she said was handing her the chemise de nuit when the lady in waiting observed that the high rank of superior rank, the garment had to be given over. She could not touch it, however, until she had removed her gloves, and before that operation had been performed Duchesse de Cossaea, a princess of the blood, turned up, and after her Comtesse de Provence, who was of higher rank still, so that the chemise had to be handed from one to the other, while the queen stood waiting and shivering. At last, unable to contain herself any longer, she exclaimed: "It is odious! What a nuisance!"—Mirror.

Meandmissing Work Stopped.

The Somerset County Board of chosen Freeholders met Tuesday at Somerville and transacted routine business. It was found necessary to lay the Mountain avenue matter over until a later meeting, owing to the fact that State Supervisor Budd had as yet failed to examine the road, as required by law. It is hoped that ere long he will perform that duty and then the work can proceed without delay.

The next encampment will be held at Buffalo, and the question of the Post and Relief Corps of this city attending was discussed and there is a probability that the two organizations will attend the encampment in a body. Other business transacted was of a routine nature.

Used Bottled Breath.

Mountain-climbers will be interested to learn of the successful experiments of Dr. Berson, of Stassfurt, who by means of "bottled breath" has been enabled to ascend to great heights, both on land and in a balloon. The doctor, when endeavoring to get further above the level of the sea than anyone else has ever climbed or flown, carries along a cylinder of compressed oxygen, fitted with a tube for breathing. Whenever he experiences discomfort on account of the rarity of the atmosphere a few whiffs from the cylinder suffices to restore him.

Dr. Berson, by means of this device, recently ascended to an altitude of 21,000 feet, which is 2,000 feet higher than the summit of Mount Everett.

HIS LIP BADLY GASHED.

FRANK VOSSELER CLAIMS CHAS. WOOD HIT HIM WITH A STONE.

Prefers a Charge of Atrocious Assault and Wood is Held for the Grand Jury.—The Circumstances of the Fracas.

A large number of interested people gathered in Justice Mosher's court Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock when the atrocious assault case of Frank Vosseler against Charles Wood was given a hearing. Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield appeared for the plaintiff and Lawyer H. C. Runyon for the defendant. It appeared that on Friday night the defendant and plaintiff, together with several others, had been to Campbell's Gulph house to participate in a clam bake. The evening was passed in a social manner and while there Vosseler and Wood had some trouble. The affair was evidently quashed and nothing more was thought of it for the time. Wood and his friends started for town in a wagon about 2 o'clock in the morning, while Vosseler left on his wheel a little later. Wood and his friends stopped near the Park Avenue church and were talking when Vosseler appeared.

Wood hailed him and said he wanted to tell him something. Vosseler slackened his speed and just then he fell off of his wheel with the result of having his upper lip badly cut. He claimed that he was struck with some hard substance thrown by Wood, while the latter stated that he threw nothing and that the cut was the result of the fall. Frank Hale and John Sullivan picked Vosseller up and assisted him to Dr. Hedges' office where the wound was dressed. Vosseller told the doctor that he fell off of his wheel, and later it was stated by Patrolman Flynn who was a witness, that Sullivan told him that Wood had smashed Vosseller and sneaked. The case was argued strongly pro and con. Hale says he did not see Wood throw anything and Sullivan testified to the same effect.

After both lawyers had summed up, Justice Mosher reserved his decision till this morning, which was that Wood be held in the sum of $250 to appear before the Grand Jury.

John Sullivan appeared before Justice Mosher this afternoon on the complaint of Vosseller, charging him with being an accomplice in the assault made on him by Wood. Sullivan waived examination to appear before the Grand Jury. He was held in the sum of $250.

Almost Self-supporting.

The annual report of the executive board of the American Sabbath Tract Society, through Secretary Peterson, is a carefully prepared and able document. Some of its salient features are these: "The publishing house is in successful operation at Plainfield, N. J. Present worth, $7,171.45; liabilities, $7.12. In consequence of the favorable disposal of the old plant, and the individual gifts of valuable machinery, the establishment of the new plant has drawn from the contributions of the people less than $900.

The Sabbath Recorder cost $5,218.14 during the last year; received on subscriptions, $3,011.83; for advertising, $898; present paying list, 2 265. The discussion which arose on this point was valuable. It ended in a proposition from Conference President Ingham to raise the paying list to 3,000, which would make The Recorder self-supporting."

Real Estate at Auction.

The desirable property recently occupied by Mrs. Eleanor Birdsall, deceased, and situated on the southeasterly side of Front street, Dunellen, was sold at public sale under a foreclosure Tuesday afternoon. The bidding was not very spirited as there was but a very few present who could purchase the peoperty even if they felt so desired. Adam Dealamann bought the premises for $2,250. Just what Mr. Dealamann will do with the place is not definitely known, but it is understood that he will make some extensive repairs, and get it ready to put on the spring market.

Appropriation Exhausted.

The work of repairing Front street, which has been completed as far as Somerset street, on West Front street, has been stopped because the appropriation has been expended. The steam roller, as well as the laboring men on the streets, has been called off, and no one knows when work will be resumed. East Front street needs repairing badly and it's a pity that the work has to be left in such a condition.

It doesn't matter much whether sick headache, billiousness, indigestion and constipation are caused by neglect or by unavoidable circumstances; De Witt's Little Early Risers will speedily cure them all. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Miss Edith Boone, of West Seventh street, left this morning for Wellesley college, which she enters this fall.

A WARRENVILLE FEUD.

BROTHERS BALDWIN GIVE FARMER CARL A LIVELY TIME.

The Latter Hit the Youngest of the Baldwin Boys in an Argument Over Horses —The Whole Lot of Them Arrested.

Warrenville has got something new to talk about, and the once famous pig case is thrown in the shade. That quiet farming region is now all stirred up over an assault, a free fight and threats of murder.

The Baldwins' who figured prominently in that wonderful pig case, are "in it" again. The trouble occurred yesterday and wound up with a general scrap and a flourishing of revolvers.

John Carl, a farmer, of large stature and powerful muscles, lives in Warren township not far from the Baldwin homestead, and Tuesday he stopped there for a little while. Henry, Richard and Augustus Baldwin were there and the conversation finally changed into an argument on horses. There had been some trouble about Augustus Baldwin helping Carl to haul stone, and Carl finally ended the argument by punching Augustus, the youngest of the three.

The other two thereupon pitched into their brother's assailant and things were lively for a few moments. Carl retreated and met Augustus later in the day when the latter drew a revolver and, Carl claims, threatened to shoot him. Baldwin said he did it to protect himself.

Carl went to Squire Austin and swore out a warrant against the three brothers for assault and battery. Squire Austin held them under $400 bail for their appearance before the Grand Jury.

The Baldwin Boys are not slow and they planned to get even with Carl so they made a counter charge and secured a warrant from Justice Mattison. Carl was arrested to his surprise and dismay but was released on parole by Squire Austin in the custody of Constable Stewart. The hearing will be held this evening and the entire population of the township is preparing to take possession, en masse, of Squire Austin's office to hear the fun.

AN OLD COUPLE IN TROUBLE.

Charged With Being Disorderly and Using Profane Language.

An old-fashioned looking couple, both well advanced in years, appeared before City Judge DeMeza Wednesday charged by their neighbor, Mrs. Mary Paul, with being disorderly and using indecent and abusive language. Their home is on West Fourth street.

They were marshaled into the stuffy little court room by Patrolman Totten. The unusual sights and sounds did not phase them in the slightest and they came up to the rail and unitedly declared their innocence. They declared that Mrs. Paul would not get along with anybody, herself included, and that she had been driven out of Battle Row because of her tongue.

Edward Kelly, for that was the name of one of the prisoners, and the other was his wife, Mrs. Ann Kelly, admitted that he had called the woman a pauper and a street walker, but said he had never sworn at her.

The Judge set their trial down for Saturday morning and held each in $50 bail for their appearance at that time. After profusely thanking the Judge, the couple left the building, Mrs. Kelly adding, as she left the court room:

"I hope you'll keep your office a long time."

Evening School in Prospect.

For sometime past there has been a growing demand among certain people in the borough to have an evening school organized, so that many can reap the benefits now enjoyed by others. The matter is gradually getting into definite shape and The Daily Press feels confident in predicting that ere long an evening school will be started in the borough public school.

GETTING DOWN TO WORK.

REPUBLICANS SELECTED TO LOOK AFTER CAMPAIGN WORK DETAILS.

Mayor Gilbert Will Deliver an Address Tomorrow Night and Attempt to Answer All Enquiries That Doubting Ones Ask.

The Republican campaign committee and sub-committees met last Tuesday at headquarters, at which time each sub-committee organized by selecting a chairman. W. A. Westphal was chosen chairman of the finance committee, F. W. Runyon of the literature committee, and J. Fred MacDonald of the committee having in charge the speakers, workers, etc.

It was announced at the meeting that Mayor Gilbert would address the meeting at headquarters, Thursday evening, on the subject "Why the wage-earner should vote for McKinley and Hobart." Mr. Gilbert will also be prepared to answer all questions, politically that may be asked. On Saturday evening another meeting will be held at which time John Moody, of New York, will make an address on the subject, "Why Democrats should oppose Bryan!" These meetings are open to all, both Democrats and Republicans, and a cordial invitation is extended.

The executive committee of the Colored Republican Club met in the Republican Association rooms last evening, with President A. S. Venable in the chair. William Fisher was the secretary. Routine business was transacted, and a committee, consisting of William A. Kline, Joseph Saunders and Edward Maynard, was appointed to confer with the regular Republican executive committee and state their wants, and also to look after the interests of the colored voters during the present campaign.

Other committees were appointed as follows:

Furnishing—William Fisher, L. L. Croom, Spencer Conway.

Rules—Edward Maynard, William Fisher, Ira C. Jackson.

By-laws and constitution—William Kline, L. L. Croom, Louis Peterson, Jr.

Printing—R. C. Jackson, William Kline, Louis Peterson, Jr.

Refreshments—W. Brown, Geo. VanBlake, Henry Peterson, Frank Nelson, Spencer Conway, James Babbit.

Reception—Wm. Fisher, L. L. Croom, Jos. Saunders, Wm. Kline, Jas. Babbit.

Committee to confer with executive committee—Edward Maynard, Wm. Kline, Jos. Saunders.

The executive committee will meet again on Friday evening at 8 o'clock to hear reports from the sub-committees.

A general meeting of the club will be held next Monday evening, and on the following Wednesday night a mass-meeting will be held under the club's auspices either in the Cycle Academy or Music Hall, when it is expected that T. McCarter Stewart, of the New York Sun, will deliver an address.

Gave the Officer a Clue.

A foreigner, who was selling goods from house to house in the borough yesterday, gave Chief Marshal Wilson a lively run. The peddler was informed that he could not sell without a license, and left the Chief with that understanding. Later, Chief Wilson discovered him selling his goods. The officer gave chase and the man with a broken-tongue also moved rather lively. The latter finally dropped his pack of goods and continued running. The Chief took charge of the goods, but the man got away and is not liable to return. The goods will probably be auctioned off at an early date.

Shot a Rare Bird.

A full grown crane, measuring five feet and five inches from tip to tip and three feet from bill to toes, was shot by Charles Emmons in his father's meadow land in North Plainfield, Wednesday. The bird is the largest of the kind seen in this vicinity for many a day. Mr. Emmons will have the bird mounted and it would make a valuable acquisition to the art gallery collection.

Backed Over the Embankment.

A team of sorrel horses, attached to a stone wagon, backed over the embankment at the Wilson stone crusher on Somerset street Wednesday afternoon, and the team, wagon and driver were thrown down the steep incline into a promiscuous heap. The horses were considerably cut and bruised, but the driver escaped serious injury.

Unable to Navigate.

J. B. McMurry, of Somerset street, was arrested by Marshal Wednesday morning about two o'clock for being intoxicated. He was unable to navigate and the officer thought a few hours rest in the lockup would do him good. He was arraigned later before Justice Crosley and fined five dollars, which amount he paid.

GREEN ONLY LOOKED ON

BUT WAS THOUGHT TO BE AN ASSAILANT AND WAS ARRESTED.

A Middlesex County Man Belabors a Colored Man After His Brother Had Wrecked the Latter's Beefsteak Stand

Joseph Green's little wife listened anxiously to the proceedings from the door of the court room Wednesday while her husband was being tried, and when the Judge declared him not guilty she turned away with a joyful face, while the kind hearted Jeremiah Cash congratulated her and told her it was only what he expected. For "Jerry" has a fondness for the gentler sex, and many is the time that he has cheered the sorrowing wife of some poor prisoner with his kind words.

The charge against Green was for being drunk, swearing and beating a colored man named Johnson. Assemblyman W. R. Codington appeared as Green's lawyer.

Several nights ago, Green and a young man named Charles Wood, from over in Middlesex county, took a ride on the trolley as far as the Dunellen terminus. Adolphus Emory runs an establishment there where he has a lunch, ice cream and the like can be procured.

On that evening a young colored man named Johnson was freezing ice cream for Emery in the back shed. Now it happened that a day or two before Wood's brother had thrown Johnson's boot blacking tools into the street.

Johnson remarked on the fact to Wood and the latter, who had been drinking, did not like it. According to Johnson's story and the testimony of an unprejudiced witness, Wood invited the colored acquaintance to come out and be thrashed. Johnson, however, continued to turn the freezer. Then Wood intimated that he would come in and thrash him, but Johnson kept steadily turning the handle. Then Wood jumped in, upset Johnson and the freezer and proceeded to wipe up the floor with the colored boy. When he had wiped up all the ice cream he had spilt he dragged Johnson out doors. Johnson then thought that Green jumped in too, but all the rest of the testimony was against this, while Green declared he left at once to keep out of all trouble, leaving his soda half finished. As there was no proof the judge discharged the prisoner.

CONTRACT CASES TRIED.

The Verdict in Both Actions Was No Cause For Action.

The contract case of Musgrave against Manning was tried Wednesday afternoon before Justice Newcorn and the following jurors: William Thompson, Matthew Conklin, C. M. Fine, J. A. Harned, J. Van Wyckoff, Eugene Marcalo, William Alpaugh, E. B. Clarkson, C. W. Lines, G. H. Rockafellow, Percy C. Ohl and E. D. Moffett. Lawyer Swackhamer represented the plaintiff and Lawyer W. R. Codington the defendant. The jury was out but a short time when they returned with a verdict of no cause for action.

This morning the contract case of Lawler against J. L Jones, Jr., was tried before Justice Newcorn and the following sir jurors: Walter A. Arthur, J. J. Crounce, David Smith, William Cranford, J. Pratsner and John Ross. Lawyer H. C. Runyon represented Lawler and the defendant took his own case. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant owed him some money for the treatment of a horse, while the defendant claimed unprofessional services. The jury brought in a verdict of no cause for action. The case was appealed.

Justice Nodyne, of the Babcock building, is spending a few weeks in the country.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

SPENCER IN A TANGLE.

THE COLORED PLUTOCRAT BEING SUED BY HIS NEICE.

She Claims That He Has Taken Goods Her Uncle Left Her—Conway Tells of His Good Intentions With Them.

Spencer Conway, who probably has more worldly wealth than any other colored man in this city, and who is appealed to to sign bail bonds, pay fines, etc., many times during the course of a year for the release of his Ethiopian brethren who fall into the clutches of the law, is now trying to straighten out a tangle into which he has become involved with his neice, Mrs. Maria Scott.

The controversy has been going on over a year, and is over the right of Spencer to appropriate the goods and chattels of his dead brother. Mrs. Scott is a neice of Conway, and claims that she was entitled to the effects of her dead uncle for the care and attention she gave him while on his deathbed.

Spencer came to The Press office this morning and told his side of the story. He says that he brought his brother from Boston when he was sick and provided for him up to the time death. Mrs. Scott, he says, only looked after him a couple of weeks before his demise and she secured $30 of his pension money just before he died, and then appropriated some of his personal effects immediately thereafter—sufficient compensation for her services. The other things he had assumed control of and intended to settle a few outstanding bills that he had accrued during his sickness. This was vigorously objected to by the niece, who asserted that she had the right to all the goods, but Spencer was perverse in his good intentions and he took the goods and kept them. Now Mrs. Scott is suing him for their value. The case will come up before Justice Newcorn Friday morning at 10 o'clock.

OUTING FOR Y. M. C. A. LEADERS.

Plans to be Discussed for the Approaching Winter Work.

It used to be the custom, and is still among some of the country towns, for all the city officials to go off to some grove or large residence near the city and enjoy an outing, with athletic contests, a supper and then perhaps a few short speeches Tho Y. M. C. A. of this city has planned such an outing for the officers and committeemen of the association for next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of Isaac W. Rushmore, of 731 West Seventh street. In the afternoon, athletic sports will be enjoyed while in the evening there will be a short conference about the work. Through the courtesy of Mrs. Rushmore supper will be served to all present.

Then on the following Monday the Y. M. C. A. has arranged for a reception for all the members. It will be the opening of the physical and gymnastic department and men from out of town will give a gymnastic exhibition. There will also be a literary and musical entertainment and last but not least of the attractions, there will be refreshments.

A New Glee Club.

There is considerable vocal talent among Plainfield's young men and last year it was given a chance to develope in the Lotos Glee Club. This year a double quartette has been formed under the name of the Midmer Glee Club. It is composed of the following: Herbert Schutt, Robert W. Clark, first tenors; Charles H. Angleman and Edward O. Clark, second tenors; William E. MacClymont and A. H. Comish, first basses; B. T. Barnes and Wyatt E. Barnes, second basses. They have been practicing for sometime and will make their first appearance Friday evening at a private entertainment at Port Washington, Long Island.

Anxious to Co-Operate With City.

At the next meeting of the Scotch Plains Town Commissioners, it is understood the board will be asked to communicate with the Plainfield council with reference to having East Front street repaired. The part in the road which calls for immediate attention is adjacent to Cole's hill on the west, but as this lays in the city limits of Plainfield it is the sole duty of that municipality to keep the road bed in repair. In its present condition it is unsafe for navigation, especially at night, and particularly so for bicyclists.

At the Beach.

A very happy and congenial party from this city enjoyed Wednesday at Boynton Beach. "Uncle" Dan Roberts is the chaperone and those in his charge are Mrs. D. J. Roberts, Mrs. W. L. Smalley, Sr., Miss Lizzie Smalley, Mrs. Harry Roberts, Mrs. Charles Roberts, Miss Roberts and Miss Ethel King.

SHE LOVED THE ITALIAN THE NATION'S DEFENSE:

IT SEEMS THAT LOUISE GILES WAS NOT KIDNAPPED AFTER ALL.

Chief Grant Found the Couple Yesterday Afternoon, but They Showed a Marriage Certificate—Luccio Was Arrested.

What appeared to be an abduction Thursday, seems now very much like a runaway, and young Louise Giles, instead of being dragged away to the lonely Italian shanty in the woods up at Terrill road, evidently went there of her own free will in company with the man of her heart.

Soon after The Press had exclusively told the story of the disappearance of Louise Giles to the public, Chief Grant found the missing girl and an Italian, by the name of Ernest Luccio, her supposed abductor. Now Louise is at her home, while Luccio is having a hearing.

It was not until 7 o'clock Wednesday night that the police were informed of the disappearance of the girl and that she was supposed to be at the Italian shanty at the corner of Terrill road and North avenue. Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely started out to investigate. They reached the hut only to find that the excited family of the missing girl had already been there. Louise was not to be found, but one of the Italians informed them that she had gone to the house of a certain Italian in Scotch Plains. They arrived at the latter place only to find that an Italian scout had preceeded them and that Luccio and his supposed captive had left a few moments before.

The police were not inclined to believe the kidnapping theory as they know that Louise had previously seemed quite taken with this young Italian, and he had shown a great liking for her. Only two weeks ago, Sergeant Kiely had warned him to keep away and leave her alone.

Yesterday the search was continued and in the afternoon Chief Grant again visited the Italian shanty on Terrill road. It was about 4 o'clock and he was standing by the hut when suddenly Luccio and Louise Giles appeared on the scene. The Chief was rather astonished and so were the young couple. Grant knew what he wanted, however, and his first remark was to Luccio.

"I want you," he said.

"What for?" said the Italian, as he looked smilingly at the Chief.

"I have a warrant for you," answered the officer.

"Alls right," was the reply and the Italian struck a paper into the Chief's hand. It was a marriage certificate and told that Louise Giles and Ernest Luccio had been married by Justice Hart, of Westfield.

Nevertheless the Chief arrested both and took them before Justice Newcorn. The weeping girl was turned over to her parents, for she could tell nothing in the excitement of the moment.

"She's not fifteen yet," said her mother. "She has no more idea what she's done than a babe unborn."

"If she's not fifteen you're her guardian" said the Justice. "You did not consent to this marriage?"

"I?" the woman cried. "Of course not. Oh, I am overcome with shame. She was taken to that shanty and kept there against her will. She was there when I asked for her, but they would not let her out till I'd gone."

"Oh, don't bother, mother," the bride sobbed. "Let it rest where it is and I won't live with him."

"Have I right to take her home?" Mrs. Giles asked.

"Yes, indeed, and to keep her, too, until the case is settled," said the Justice.

Luccio did not seem to object to the arrest but, on the contrary, seemed much pleased with the course of events.

"Can you furnish $500 bail?" asked the Justice.

"What?" grasped the Italian and his sunny smile faded away. "Me? I don't think!" and so the officer in charge locked up a very dejected foreigner while his wife was led away by her mother.

Justice Newcorn recognized Luccio as one who consulted him about a love affair several weeks ago.

"I love a girl and she loves me," the Italian said on that occasion. "Her mother won't let us marry. The girl is fifteen years old. What will I do?"

"Keep away from her and keep, out of trouble," said the Justice. But Luccio didn't take the advice. He has retained ex Judge W. A. Coddington as his lawyer.

The case was adjourned this afternoon until Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Carpet Works Change Hands.

The carpet works on South avenue, which have long been owned by A. D. VanDeventer, have passed into the hands of Lawyer A. J. Brunson, who is associated with R. V. Lindabury, the Newark lawyer.

Borough Cadets Proposed.

There is considerable talk among the boys of the North Plainfield public school regarding the formation of a cadet company, similar to the one in the High School on this side the brook. It is understood that the plan is receiving general favor.

THOSE WHO WILL INSTRUCT THE PUPILS IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

All the Corps Are Either Graduates of Colleges or Normal Schools and Will Keep up the Established Reputation.

Plainfield's public schools have long been famous for their excellency, but this has only been possible by having a corps of energetic and efficient instructors. This year the Plainfield public schools stand higher than ever before and the credit for this is due to Superintendent Henry M. Maxson and his able assistants in every department. The present corps of teachers, that has charge of the instruction of Plainfield's children, is an excellent one, which would be hard to equal. All are graduates of colleges or normal schools and Plainfield can well be proud of her educational facilities for the young.

The teachers are as follows:

High School—Henry W. Travell, principal, senior; Ellen E. Niles, principal, junior; Mary Grace Caldwell, third grade; A. J. Knowlton, sciences; Alice M. Whitney, S. Lena Bass, fourth grade.

Stillman Grammar School—Carrie B. Runyon, M. Elizabeth Benedict, ninth grade; Anna M. Day, eighth grade; Lena Tomlinson, seventh grade; Mary E. Lavers, drawing; Mabel Maxson, pianist.

Franklin school—Alice W. Lansing, eighth grade; Flora Griffin, Margaret B. Case, seventh grade; Jennie Davies, Mary W. Marshall, Anna E. Manktelow, sixth grade; Noel J. Bullock, principal, fifth grade; Mabel Mitchell, assistant principal, fifth grade; Emma Force, fourth grade; Clara J. Churton, Edith Gilbert, third grade; Lottie B. Strong, second grade; Madge L. Sutphen, Caroline A. Barber, first grade; Edith R Bond, Kindergarten.

Washington School—Millicent W. Humpston, principal, fifth grade; Anna W. Booraem, fourth grade; Jennie Owen, third grade; S. Louise Wood, second grade; Margaret R. Cory, Anna D. Sime, first grade.

CHEST AND LEG CRUSHED.

P. and R. Brakeman Mortally Hurt at Bound Brook This Morning.

Frank Walcot, aged twenty-eight years, a brakeman on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, sustained injuries Thursday, while coupling cars at Bound Brook, which in all probability will prove fatal. His chest was horribly crushed, as was also his leg. His associates found him in a partially unconscious condition and his wounds were bleeding profusely. He was at once brought to the hospital where he now lies in a very critical condition.

The physicians have examined him and considered that the man cannot at present stand an operation. Walcot is married and lives in Philadelphia. His folks have been notified regarding the accident.

Death of an Estimable Resident.

Henry Wheeler, aged 81 years, died at his home, No. 410 Madison avenue, at six o'clock Thursday last, his immediate illness resulting from the recent extreme heat. Although ailing more or less for a long time, his condition was not considered dangerous until quite recently. His death was peaceful, passing away as he did surrounded by kind and loving members of the household. Besides the widow there survive him four children, Mrs. William E. Lowe, of this city, Mrs. Charles Lockwood, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Geo. W. Ely, of New York, and a son. Decedent had in former years followed a variety of occupations, but about eight years ago he lost an eight-year-old son from the effects of which he was stricken down with nervous prostration. From this he never fully recovered, and has since then lived a retired life. In former years he followed real estate and mercantile pursuits.

Funeral services will take place from the house on Saturday afternoon at 3.45 o'clock, and the remains will be taken to Seymour, Conn., for interment.

—Thomas Newman's Scotch Plains stages did a thriving business on Saturday conveying passengers to and from the bicycle parade. "Tom" was jovial and good natured as usual while he gathered in the nickels and quarters from his patrons.

SENT TO REFORM SCHOOL

LADS WHO STOLE FROM THE BOYS CLUB ARRANGED IN COURT.

John Hickory, the Westfield Wife Beater, Sent to Prison for One Year.—Another Brute Goes to Jail for Three Months.

The fall term of the court of general quarter session opened last Wednesday morning, at Elizabeth, with Judge McCormick presided.

A considerable portion of the session was devoted to the making of citizens, and about thirty were naturalized. A large proportion of them were Germans, while others were Austrians, Danes, together with a number of former subjects of the British empire.

The criminal business before the court were several cases of minor importance, the prisoners awaiting trial being arraigned:

Albert Williams, the colored lad who stole "Jack" Price's bicycle from in front the Westfield bowling alleys, and then painted it to conceal its identity, pleaded guilty, but as his mother promossed to take better care of him, he was paroled with the understanding that if he did not behave he would be sent to the state reform school.

Two youths, William Rise and Dorsey Conozer, both of Plainfield, pleaded guilty to breaking into the Boys' Club in this city and stealing books and tools valued at $33. The court entered an order committing them to the reform school.

The wife beater, John Hickory, of Westfield, was the next arraigned. On July 29 he beat his wife, who is 70 years of age, so brutally that she was believed to be fatally injured. She was removed to the General Hospital, where for a week she hovered between life and death. Her condition was so bad that an "ante mortem" statement was taken, but she afterward rallied and recovered.

The trouble between Hickory and his wife arose because she asked him for a kiss when he was not in a kissing mood, and he knocked her over the head with a hickory club.

When asked for his plea, Hickory said, "I plead guilty; but it was the woman's fault." He was sentenced to one year's hard labor in state prison.

Wesley Sheperson, colored, was another Westfielder charged with assaulting his wife. She was placed upon the witness-stand and told how her husband and she had a difference, during which he struck her with an iron rod. The trouble was partly her fault. Sheperson went to jail for three months.

Touring in the Northwest.

Dr. O. L. Jenkins and wife who started Friday for the west will join a Raymond & Whitcomb party at Seattle, Wash., returning with same probably in November or December. During their absence they will visit all the principal resorts and attractions of the Pacific northwest, will spend several days in the Yosemite Valley and on the return trip will stop at Salt Lake City in order to visit the Tabernacle, making sojourns also at the Colorado, the fine new hotel which is located in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, Glenwood Springs. There will also be stops at Manitou Springs, where the Garden of the Gods, Pike's Peak, etc., will be visited.

Realty Looming Up.

A canvass of some of the leading real estate dealers in this city gives encouragement to the real estate market here. With a single exception the dealers were of the opinion that property is slowly but surely increasing in value, but few important transfers are being made just at this time when the political affairs of the country are on the qui vive. Homes that have been vacant in years past are now occupied, but this may be largely due to local causes. The prospect for big business in the real estate market here next season, some of the dealers say is most encouraging.

For an Ice Pond.

The Plainfield Ice Company Thursday consummated the deal for thirty acres of land in the Notch which will be used for an artificial pond to make ice in the winter. The land was bought of Charles Badgley, Mr. Wolfert and Mrs. Underhill. It takes in the site of the old French mill pond. F. A. Dunham commenced the survey today.

Mrs. Geo. W. Lowere, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Annie Belding, of Poughkeepsie, are visiting Mrs. Hiram Belding, of Gloversville, N. Y. They spent Labor Day at Mrs. H. Belding's beautiful cottage at Sacandaga Park, which is the great southern entrance to the Adirondacks. They were delighted with the beautiful park and will ever remember the curteous treatment they received at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Belding and the host of friends they made while there.

—Harry Dreier, of West Front street, has in his show window a curiosity in the shape of an apple twig which has some fifteen good sized apples on it. They came from what is known as the "Reuben Get Up Farm" at Fall River, Mass., and are of the High Virkin variety.

NO ROOM FOR GOLD MEN

DEMOCRATIC STATE CONVENTION DECLARED FOR FREE SILVER.

James E. Martine Talks and Strikes the Popular Chord By Saying That all Gold Men Must Leave the Convention.

The Democratic State convention at Trenton, Wednesday, was well attended and very enthusiastic.

Samuel Fowler acted as temparary chairman. In his introductory remarks he predicted that the State would go for Bryan and Sewall by an immense majority. After a speech by ex-Congressman Augustus W. Cutler and some routine business the convention adjourned until 2 o'clock.

On reassembling Senator William D. Daly was chosen as permanent chairman. As he stepped to the front of the platform he was greeted with cries of "Our next Governor!" and "Our next United States Senator!" He introduced Congressman Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, James E. Martine spoke of Messrs Cutler and McMillin's addresses:

"Hon. Augustus Cutler made a strong speech insisting that this was no new theme but that both parties had been declaring for free coinage for years. His remarks were cheered wildly. The talk of Hon. Benton McMillan, of Tennessee, was replete with statistics and facts. He said that no permanent prosperity would come to the toiling millions except through bi-metallism. He quoted Hon. Wm. McKinley as urging bi-metallism. He said McKinley's stand today was but McKinley drunk and McKinley sober. His address was eloquent and forcible."

J. E. Martine secured the floor and insisted that this was no time for Democrats to falter or hesitate. There was no middle ground to stand upon, he said. "Democrats cannot serve God and mammon, you must either be for or against us," he said, and to this end he insisted that all lukewarm or apathetic members of the State Committee who could not support the Chicago platform and its candidates should in common fairness and decency immediately withdraw from the same. He then read a resolution adopted by the Union county delegates declaring that since Hon. Samuel Williams, member of State Committee from Union county, had declared for gold and the Indianapolis platform, that his place be declared vacant, and that William D. Wolskell, of Elizabeth be elected in his stead. Mr. Martines address and thoughts captured the convention as with storm and delegations all over the State followed suit insisting that their members must declare for Bryan and Sewall or get out.

Former Senator William J. Keys, of Somerset county, member of the State Democratic Committee, took occasion to place himself on record.

"I am now, as I always have been," said he, "a Democrat, and will support and vote for Bryan and Sewall. I am ready, willing and eager to go into the fight. I am no prophet if New Jersey does not give Bryan and Sewall her electoral vote."

The following Presidential electors were chosen:

At large, Johnson Cornish, of Warren county, and Eckhard Budd, of Burlington county; first district, David M. Chambers, of Camden county; second district, I. N. Carmichael, of Ocean county; third district, James J. Meehan, of Somerset county; fourth district, N. C. Barrick, of Hunterdon county; fifth district, Carlton M Herrick, of Passaic county; sixth district, Jeremiah O'Rourke, of Essex county; seventh district, James F. Minturn, of Hudson county; eighth district, Edwin A. Raynor, of Essex county.

The following were the most important planks of the platform:

The Democratic party of New Jersey in convention assembled, ratify and indorse the National Democratic platform adopted at Chicago and the candidates nominated there, the Hon. William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, and the Hon. Arthur Sewall, of Maine, and hereby pledge our honest, earnest and hearty endeavor to secure the election of these, our candidates. We insist that the platform adopted at Chicago is thoroughly Democratic and purely American, and that the enforcement we firmly believe that relief will come to the toiling masses and it will advance the general prosperity of the country.

We demand that the tax laws of this State be amended to provide for the taxation of property not used for religious, charitable or educational purposes.

We declare it to be the principle of free government that the minority should submit to the will of the majority. Any other rule would be destructive of self government and party organization.

To Help the Army.

Rev. S. Parker Cadman, pastor of the Metropolitan Temple in New York, will deliver a lecture in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on September 26th for the benefit of the Salvation Army, whose funds for carrying on local work are depleted and their means of raising revenue limited. His subject will be "Life in London." The admission fee will be twenty-five cents. Dr. C. R. Barnes will preside at the meeting.

—Charles H. Hand, who has the contract of remodelling the Voorhees building on West Front street, expects to have all the improvements completed on or before October 1st.

—The New York Journal says a comet is coming this way at the rate of a million miles an hour. If someone would enlighten the poor people of Plainfield as to when it is due here, it might relieve them of the vexatious problem of laying in winter coal.

TOSSERS IN TEENS WON

THE Y. M. C. A. NINE CHAGRINED BY A DEFEAT BY THE P. A. C.

Their Confidence About Winning Was Rudely Shaken by the Youngsters Who Put up a Lively Game All Around.

Surprises are always in order, and when the Plainfield Athletic Club team defeated the Y. M. C. A., ball team, last Saturday afternoon, one of the greatest surprises of the season was met. The former team is composed of young men in their teens, and when they expressed confidence of winning Saturday's game, people were inclined to laugh. They won, however, and the game was fairly contested. Of course the P. A. C's. played in great luck, but that was circumstance, and not fault. For five innings neither side scored a run. There was no heavy batting and the ball never seemed to get away from the fielders. As each inning was played and no runs were secured, everybody began to wonder whether there would be any runs. The ice was broken in the sixth inning, however, and the Y. M. C. A. team secured four runs. In the next inning their opponents also made four runs. The Y. M. C. A. boys succeeded in making three runs in the eighth and ninth innings, while in the last inning after two men were out, the P. A. C's., batted out five runs, thereby winning the game 9 to 7.

It was a great game and no better has been seen in Plainfield this year. The Y. M. C. A. team felt their defeat so much that they at once arranged another game for next Saturday. Those on the winning team that distinguished themselves were Mumford, Lederer, Bolsterli, Sutphen and the battery, Winn and Erickson. The Y. M. C. A. team played a good game but could not seem to bat safely. In the field they put up their usual game. Their opponents played for all they were worth and were determined to win if possible. In the last inning they hit the ball very hard and every time the ball was out of the reach of the fielders. It is quite likely that next Saturday the Y. M. C. A. team will be strengthened and every effort will be made to defeat the team that captured the honors on Saturday. The attendance was small, but it's safe to say that next Saturday there will be a large crowd present. The score of Saturday's game by innings follow.

CUT A BLOOD VEIN.

Vincent Rittenhouse Catches His Hand in a Bicycle Wheel.

While waiting to turn out in Saturday's bicycle parade with the Alls football team, on which he plays halfback, J. Vincent Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, met with a serious accident which will prevent him from practicing for some time. The team had gathered in the yard of their captain, Royal T. Phillips, on Madison avenue, and Rittenhouse was among them. There was a ladies' wheel standing in the yard and he started to lift it by the rear wheel. The wheel turned suddenly, catching his hand under the mud guard, the sharp end of which cut open the back of his hand. He was escorted to Dr. Davis, on Park avenue, who found a large vein had been cut, causing the wound to bleed profusely. Five stitches were taken and the wound dressed.

At the annual meeting of the American Sabbath Tract Society held at Alfred, N. Y., August 23d, the society instructed its executive board to call Dr. A. H. Lewis, of this city, to devote his entire time to Sabbath reform work, and at the meeting of the board yesterday afternoon in the Seventh-day Baptist church, of this city, the call was formally extended to Dr. Lewis, and he will in all probability accept it at the next meeting of the board in October. Although he has two years more to serve the church as its pastor under his engagement with them, the church will no doubt will accept his resignation.

Landlord W. P. Bergen's Clambake.

A clambake was held on Saturday evening, at Somerville, whereat nearly one thousand persons were the guests of landlord William P. Bergen of the Somerset House. The bake was made by Horace Hall and was first-class in every particular and the many friends of Mr. Bergen thoroughly enjoyed his hospitality. The bake was made in the square adjoining the hotel alongside Main street and served in the bowling alleys. There were a few gentlemen from this city present.

Mrs. George W. F. Randolph, of West Front street, arrived home from Chicago on Saturday.

William K. Dwight returned to his home on Rockview avenue, Saturday, after a month's outing at Belmar.

Assistant-Postmaster and Mrs. John N. Whitenack returned Saturday to their home on Duer street, after a week spent at Asbury Park.

ICE MAKING INDUSTRY.

STONY BROOK TO BE DAMMED AND AN ARTIFICIAL POND MADE.

The Miniature Lake Will Cover Six Acres of Land and Will be an Enlargement of the Old French Mill Pond in the Notch.

The exclusive announcement in The Press, yesterday, of the large ice pond that the Plainfield Ice and Coal Storage Company intend to have in the valley near Washingtonville has aroused considerable interest, and visions of a second Johnstown flood across many minds, and everybody seemed anxious to know more of the details of this proposed artificial lake and where it is to be situated.

A Daily Press reporter visited the office of the company on North avenue yesterday afternoon to learn what the company had to say about their new venture. The representative of the company talked carefully and gave all the information asked for. He said that a new pond for the purpose of gathering ice was going to be built, but that the land that the company was going to purchase did not exceed twelve acres, and that the pond itself would be little, if any, more than six acres in extent. The stream, that is to be dammed is Stony Brook which is formed by the numerous little streams that start among the first and second ranges of the Watchung mountains. It is a wild little torrent after a heavy rain and was one of the causes of the freshet that visited this vicinity about eight years ago. There is already a pond there, known as the French mill pond, situated near Washingtonville. It is planned to extend this pond by mooting the dam further down the valley and building it up to about ten feet in height. The new pond will be about twice as long as the old one, so it is stated, and about the same width.

The mill will remain and Hippolyte Texier, its owner, will continue to conduct a glove factory on the two upper floors, while the two lower floors are now for rent with the power. A turbine water wheel is now being put in by Mr. Mooney, of Scotch Plains.

During the winter the pond will, of course, be used to furnish ice for the company, and will in no way interfere with the other ice ponds which will be used as formerly.

F. A. Dunham is not the engineer who is surveying the lines for the pond, but H. C. Smith.

MADE A SIGHT OF HIMSELF.

An Intoxicated Man Gets in the Way of Church Goers.

A man intoxicated on Sunday is a comparatively rare sight on Plainfield's streets. Such a person visited the neighborhood of the First Baptist church while the congregation was attending the morning service. The sexton called Patrolman McCue who arrested the inebriated individual and locked him up. It was John McGee, who is employed on the Brower farm up Park avenue. He had a bottle of whiskey in his pocket, the contents of which he was imbibing when arrested.

This morning he was brought before Judge DeMeza who suspended sentence on him when he promised to return to the farm at once and behave himself.

RESCUED FROM SNAKES.

Arrival of a Charcoal Burner Save a Young Woman from Rattlers.

While a party of young women were delving about the normal school were delving about the rocks and dense undergrowth on Fonteyne point the other day in search of arbutus they were surprised to see what they at first supposed was a large fowl bolt.

As it approached, says the Beaver [Pa.] Argus, they became too badly frightened to stir, seemingly having lost the power to flee, for what they now saw was a compact mass of snakes wound tightly about each other, with their heads outward, tongues darting out and hissing like small steam engines.

The snakes had approached within a few rods when, fortunately, a stone upon which one of the young women was standing slipped from under her foot and she fell. In falling her eyes were for an instant removed from the approaching snakes. The spell was broken and she uttered a loud shriek and ran away, while her companions still continued to gaze in silence and unable to stir hand or foot at the approaching venomous reptiles that had evidently charmed them, as a cat does a bird. In her flight for safety the girl almost ran against a cabin occupied by a hardy charcoal burner and his family, to whom she excitedly explained the situation. The man of the house seized his shotgun and ran to the rescue. When he came in sight the girls were still standing like statues, not a muscle moving, every eye fixed on the approaching ball of snakes, now less than a rod distant and beginning to unroll themselves.

Taking hasty aim, before they had time to scatter or spring at their intended victims, he let go both barrels of his gun. A number of the rattlers scurried away into crevices in the rocks and some more wounded and helpless were soon dispatched with blows from the butt of the gun. Then attention was directed to seven imperilled young women, each of whom, as soon as released from the spell of the snakes, had, after uttering one ear-piercing shriek that was heard in the village, nearly a mile away, fallen unconscious.

Vigorous chafing soon brought them back to consciousness, although it was several hours before strength returned sufficiently to permit them to return home. Eighteen dead snakes were counted on the field of battle, though none was of large size.

CHEWED A CARTRIDGE.

It Exploded in the Horse's Mouth and Broke Its Jaw.

In front of the Mott street entrance to New York's police headquarters a big bay horse that works for a brewing company shot himself by chewing a loaded cartridge.

The animal not only shot himself, but came near shooting a shopgirl who was passing on her way to work. The horse belongs to the H. B. Schraman Brewing company, of Brooklyn. One of the firm's customers has a small lager beer saloon in Mott street, next to police headquarters. The horse and his mate drew a wagon load of beer to the front of the store about nine o'clock the other morning.

The driver carried several kegs of beer into the cellar of the saloon, leaving the horses unwatched. It was while the driver was in the cellar that the shooting occurred. It is supposed that that animal, while nosing in an ash barrel, got a cartridge in its mouth, and began to chew it. The cartridge exploded in his mouth with such a concussion that the report could be heard in the police building.

Those who arrived on the scene first saw the animal's tongue hanging about six inches out of his mouth, from which a stream of blood was flowing. The tongue was badly lacerated and the shot also broke the animal's jaw. The bullet that was discharged flew across the street from the animal's mouth.

Otto, the man-of-all-works at police headquarters, who was crossing the street at the time, says that it whizzed past his head and went through the balloon sleeve of a girl who was passing.

A veterinary surgeon was called to attend the wounded animal. The horse was then taken to Brooklyn. It is believed that he will not have to be killed, but he will probably lose his tongue as the result of the accident.

AN ILLUSION.

Do you know that the sight of your face,
Though I see you each of the seven,
Can transfigure the commonest place
Into something that seems to be Heaven?

Do you know that the sound of your voice,
When you utter a brief salutation,
Bids the stars of the morning rejoice
As they did at the dawn of creation?

Do you know that the clasp of your hand,
In a purely conventional greeting,
Makes life worth a moment's while
Where the fairies are holding a meeting?

Do you know that the ways you pass by,
When the stream of the traffic is flowing,
Are like the roadless wilds lead to the sky,
Wherever angels are coming and going?

Do you know that your yes or your nay
Lays its clasp on my soul like a fetter?
While existing myself I can say
That I know that I ought to know better.

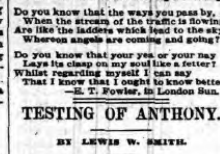
TESTING OF ANTHONY.

BY LEWIS W. SMITH.



THERE were three weeks yet before commencement and in that time much could be done by hard practice; but what would that avail when Leon March would be sure to practice hard? Leon was the largest but not the prize; there were three other competitors besides Anthony himself; but the chances were all in Leon's favor. Anthony jumped up and strode about his room angrily, as the thought of the foolish persistence with which Leon kept to himself and to his violin, foregoing the pleasures of the other boys and living only in his music. Why could he not be interested in the other things that appeal to the well-rounded boy in general? How could one have any chance at all with a boy who didn't care for football or baseball or any other outdoor sport? It was so unnatural to be afraid to hear that his fellow students at the academy had given up trying to understand him, and had for him only that feeling of irritation that all of us have when we come into close contact with a thing altogether anomalous and beyond our fathoming. When he first saw him at prayers Anthony had conceived a liking for him; but as all his attempts at friendliness with him were one by one met coldly or repulsed, that early feeling had grown into something that was not dislike, but had yet all its bitterness.

Anthony began again the oft-repeated process of looking over his music, not yet decided as to which among his solos he should play at the great concert. While again balancing in his mind the merits of two compositions between which his decision wavered, there was a knock at the door, and, in answer to his shouted invitation to come in, Roy Willets opened the door and poked his head in before entering.

"Perhaps I shan't, if you're only looking at the music and not playing," he said, as he pushed the door wider and came in. Anthony tossed the music over on the table with just a show of vexation in his manner, "I am tired enough of it to be glad you've come. What's the use in trying for that miserable prize when we all know that Leon will get it? I don't call it a fair show for the rest of us. We have something else to do, and can't be practicing all the time, as he is."

"You haven't heard about his violin, have you?"

"No; unless you mean that old story about his singing it to sleep."

Roy laughed, not at the story, but at the startled questioning on Anthony's face.

"I am afraid that he will cry it to sleep to-night, and himself, too. This afternoon he made a hole in the back of it, and you can hardly call it a violin any longer. He wants to give up entering the contest, but Mandel won't hear of it. The rest of us have good violins, and it will be our fault if some one of us does not get the prize."

"After all, that's hardly fair," said Anthony, a sudden sympathy for his rival springing to life in his heart.

"It simply gives us an even chance with him," said Roy. "The disadvantages have all been ours so far, but now he's getting his share. That's all there is to it."

"And what have been our disadvantages?" said Anthony, with a guilty

"AFTER ALL, THAT'S HARDLY consciousness of having had the same feeling himself. Roy settled himself back lazily in his chair before answering.

"Oh, we haven't been given the natural abilities that we ought to have, and, besides that, we weren't born for spend all our time bending over a violin, as he does."

"No," said Anthony; "I am sure we were not. Even Mandel himself would agree to so much."

"It strikes me that if one does not inherit a capacity for work he ought certainly to be given its equivalent in some sort of good luck; and to and behold! the gods are as wise in the matter as I am. Here comes the good fortune that is our portion."

"But even with that lucky chance to help you, you will still have to work hard. If you do not, I am sure to beat you."

"You forget that you can't play any," said Roy, lightly; and the boys laughed before leaving out the schoolyard, to forget their musical incapacities in exercising their brains over the intricate maneuvers of knights and queens and bishops.

That night Anthony could not escape the remembrance that he had another violin which he was not using, stored away in the little closet adjoining his sleeping-room. There was no reason at all why he should not let Leon have it until after the concert, save that by so doing he would be increasing his rival's chance for the prize. Leon could not afford to get a new violin, he knew that well enough; and of what use would the old one be with a hole punched in its back? Of course Leon deserved the prize, just as Roy of right had the honor of being captain of the ball club. Still it was none of his affair if he broke his violin. It was not a thing for which he should make reparation, or why should he trouble himself about one who had always repulsed his kindnesses, or at least had never invited them? He would be quite sure of the prize himself if—but Anthony could never bring himself to think of his being a party to Leon's failure. The old violin in his closet seemed to send out a lament because the music in its heart had been so long unloved. He could fancy that the spirits of these two long-gone days had played upon it were waiting to whisper in its moving tones the joys and sorrows of a vanished time. And then—but Anthony would not think about it any more. He turned his thoughts resolutely to the next day's Virgil reading, a topic stimulating his fancy so lightly that he soon forgot it all in sleep.

It was three days later when Anthony went into Prof. Mandel's room before the latter had finished the lesson he was giving Leon. Both master and pupil were aggravated by the dull tones of the cracked violin; and at last Mandel handed Leon his own instrument, upon which no pupil had ever before been permitted to play. Anthony sat down and listened for the remainder of the lesson hour. At first his heart sank when he thought he could not so much as dream of being able to play like that. Then gradually the music came over him with all its power. He wondered how so slight a form, so thin and ethereal-looking, should have in it for its soul so much strength and mastery. Directly he forgot to think about this, and by the time Leon had finished he knew what he should do. The shy boy hardly understood him when he told him that he had an abundance of good quality, to the use of which he was welcome for the rest of the term; but Anthony himself played better that afternoon than he had for weeks.

Anthony did not enter the contest for the prize, but he could not so much as disappointed, he knew; but he had not the heart to bring his fumbling with the bow into comparison with Leon's mastery of his instrument. Roy laughed at Anthony's sophistical reasoning, but forgave him for lending his violin; but Roy's laughter and upbraiding were alike harmless.

But after the concert, when the prize had been awarded, Leon's mother came to him without introduction.

"I do not know how to thank you," she said, and her voice was not so steady as it might have been, "Leon has written me about you. Your giving him the violin was more to him than the prize."

Afterward, when they had gone to his room together, Anthony told his father why he had not played and with whose instrument it was that Leon had won. His father seemed to be thinking of other things, only nodding his head slowly to show that he was listening. Then at the conclusion he spoke as from a distance, his eyes looking into a time of which Anthony knew not.

"Your uncle used to play that same fantasia on the old violin years ago, when we were boys together. I can see him dropping his head over the strings now. He used to linger over that Adagio in the middle, and the melting tones were angel voices calling; and even the Andante's pain of human longing barely seemed to bring him back to earth. It is no wonder that your friend played well to-night."

Anthony was not thinking now of the possibility of having to meet his father's displeasure.—N. Y. Independent.

NIGHT IN THE REDWOODS.

The eyes that all day upward look to feast
On sloping boughs, nor yet at twilight ceased,
Now see in trunk and branch and leaf and spray
Diviner meanings than were felt by day.
The trunks that tower high look up and out
Like Faith above the undergrowth of Doubt;
The stately boughs, the sprays so far
Encompass Faith with arms of tender Love;
The little leaves are servants fond and true,
Cup-bearers of the summer sun and dew;
These, slim limbs, each spangled with a star,
Beam spirit steps to heavenly lands afar;
And these wide-spreading arms hold high in air
In quiet wait the answer to a prayer.
How still the scene! A century of calm
Lies wrapped within this night of blissful balm.
All still, save in the soul a breath, a call,
A thrill that holds the heart in solemn thrall.
One swelling pulse, one mighty undertone
God's voice down through the redwood branches blown.

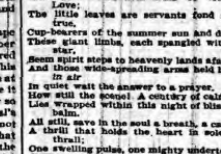
WEDDING GIFTS.



"OOH! presents!" said the old married man to the bride egroom. "Don't think you'll get what you want. I'll tell you my experience.

"At the time for our marriage drew near I used to call at the house as often as available, evening and whisper confidentially to the curly head which exactly fitted my shoulder that I was the luckiest fellow on earth. On one occasion agates signed and murmured dreamily that that was just what she felt.

"That was on the 5th.

"On the 12th I stopped in a minute as soon to see if she loved me as much as at 11th, the night before. She replied that she did—that love was unalterable—but that she must hurry upstairs now or the dressmaker would get her skirt flute-shaped instead of organ-piped.

"On the 19th the presents began to arrive—also the relatives. It became an unsettled problem which of the two were more numerous. Aggie had cousins once removed, I had several uncles and aunts. All were well off. In fact, it was a curious coincidence that we were the only poor branches on our respective family trees. I was in an insurance office—fire insurances, not life insurance—and when Aggie announced her engagement to her the news of my recent promotion she had promptly declared in the face of her family's unaccountable preference for Henry Walker (who was not so good a catch, by any manner of means) that to be Mrs. Joseph Lounsbury and live in a small house and on a very small income and bliss was precisely her ideal of existence. So we were soon married in a specialism; nevertheless, since marriage came so seldom in one's life, we had hopes that our moneyed relatives would do the handsome thing.

"They did. First came a complete set of knives, forks and spoons in a polished wood case. They were from the cousin Aggie had been named for. 'Such a sensible present!' said her mother; 'they will last a lifetime.'

"'It is,' said I, 'it will take us a good while to wear all those out two at a time.'

"Don't you suppose we're ever going to entertain any company, Joe?' asked the girl, in a pet of affection, tapping me on the cheek with one of the forks.

"The same night I had a note from her saying: 'Dearest Joe, you ought to see the lovely after dinner coffee spoons Second Cousin Milly has sent—so two alike. Orange plush case. Isn't it exciting? Don't tell, dear, but I almost wish they'd been something else, for I think some of the girls are going to give me spoons.' The rest of this letter was not interesting to you.

"This was the beginning of an avalanche of spoons—Charter Oak spoons,

I TRIED THE LOCK.

nutmeg spoons, soldiers' monument spoons, witch spoons, bust spoons, portrait spoons (I called these last our picture gallery and suggested that they should be framed in ribbons and hung up in the parlor). One of our friends sent a pair of salted-almond spoons hoping that we would exchange them if they were duplicated, but it turned out that those were the only ones we had. The sugar spoons were all marked There were five of them.

"It is a time-honored custom in our office when one of us is married for the rest to 'combine' and buy a picture; and you could generally tell what year a man's wedding came off by a glance at his parlor wall. Williams, who was married in '84, had 'Far Away;' Brown's, a few years later, was 'The Three Fates.' Ours was, of course, the latest thing out. It had a silver frame.

"As the days went by said pieces of silver piled up on us I was more than once reminded of the couple whose courtship was conducted in Browningese, and who were fitted out by their admiring friends with a Browning tea set, with quotations around the edge. 'Oh, the little more, and how much it is!' The Fords had a run on china, but a good deal of it got broken the first year. The Smiths' specialty was delicacies; they had enough for every room in the house—only, they never had a house; they have boarded ever since they were married. Finally the climax came, when my old Uncle John sent us a solid silver tea set. I hadn't expected anything from him, unless perhaps a Bible or a Webster's unabridged, for he didn't enjoy giving anything away. Aggie was getting too tired to be very enthusiastic, but her mother was delighted, and it was no use thinking that I would just as soon have had the money.

"This makes 103, dear—nine more than Susie Trish had," said her sister.

"'One hundred and two,' said Aggie.

"'No, dear, 103—102 came this morning.'

"'Oh, I know I never shall get this list right!' exclaimed Aggie, diving for her blank book.

"'Look out, or you'll be handing that book to the parson for a prayer book,' said I.

"'Wouldn't be a bit surprised,' she answered, smiling; Aggie could smile when she was tired.

"Well, we were married. A man breathes easier when it's over with. That, Aggie,' I said, as the carriage door slammed on us, 'if it ever happens to us again let's leave out the heathen superstitions.'

"'I know it,' said Aggie. 'I begged them not, but they would smuggle some in. See any in my hair?'

"'Some in your hat-brim.' I brushed her off, and she seized the newspaper I had carefully brought along to look like an old married man, and conjured with it a minute, holding it out for an improved look. 'How,' she said, 'the very children in kindergarten know how to make paper dustpans—now brush the carriage seat.' When we got out I gave the hackman a dustpanful of rice with a lofty toss. 'There is rice, I told you.'

"'Did you see him chortle in his joy?' said Aggie, giggling; 'Joe, do you feel like a married couple.'

"'Lots,' said I.

"Our ten days in Washington had only one hope—the blank book. Aggie said she must finish her notes. All I could do was to sit by and fret, and put on the stamps; and she told me I hindered her more than I helped, and she wished I would go have me around, it made her feel better.

"We began housekeeping in a cheerful way in a little house on a new street. It was something like to come home to one's own dinner like that, and so much silver that it looked funny with our plain china—nobody had given us a lot of ice-cream sets and things. I tell you, marriage is a lottery when it comes to wedding presents. I recall seeing Aggie's face in the sugar bowl, though. Every night the little maid (imported to live up to the spoons) brought them and all the rest upstairs in a tray and we counted them over and put them away. It made, and a pretty penny it cost, with its combination look, which went into the end of the closet where nobody could get at it. One night we came home at the usual hour, and as we stole upstairs not to wake the sleeping handmaiden, Aggie so sleepy herself that she tripped on her wedding gown and I had to hold her, we came upon the whole array on the floor outside our door.

"'Isn't it imposing? so safe!' said I, but Aggie said, desperately: 'I shan't care anything about going out evenings any more if I've got to put that silver away after each meal.'

"'Let it stay there.'

"'Oh, I can't. Mamma thinks we're so careless. We don't appreciate things enough. She says if anyone had given her such presents when she was first married she wouldn't have dared to close her eyes!'

"'Take more than that to keep my eyes open.' But I helped Agnes above the tray under a chair, and drape the train of her wedding gown on to it.

"'What on earth are you doing, Aggie?' I asked, on coming in for dinner one day. All I could see was one fork and a skirt ruffle in the closet.

"'Aggie screamed up enough to catch me round my knee. 'Oh, Joe, I'm so glad you've come!'

"'What is it? You're ready to cry.'

"'That's what I like about you; you don't have to be coaxed to cry.' Henry Walker wouldn't have known I felt like crying if I'd screamed it at him.'

"That made me feel pretty good (though dinner wasn't ready). 'But what—?'

"'It's the silver! I came up to change the forks and spoons so they should get worn alike, and I've shut the paper with the combination in the chest, and I can't remember what it was!'

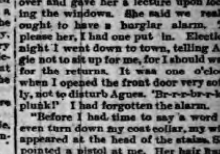
"I got down beside her. It was hotter than Mexico in that closet. I turned and tried the lock. 'Do keep your dresses out of the way, they tickle the back of my neck.' No good. 'Well, I guess we'll use the old forks to-day,' said I; 'I don't believe they will fade away yet awhile.'

"'Oh, I'm so sorry—but they're every one shut up in that chest.' So we hunted. What else was there to do? It was funny when Deming came home with me to tea—we'd asked him some days before. It wouldn't have been funny with some girls. The table looked principally white china, and the kitchen knives and forks didn't go round. Ever cut omelet with a pewter spoon? It is great.

"It wasn't quite so funny when three hot days had gone by and we had nearly starved ourselves over the closet, and no news of the combination. 'Don't tell mamma,' pleaded my wife. I began to think I should have to call in a blacksmith, when one evening Aggie startled me by jumping out of bed crying: 'I've got it! I've got it!'

"'Got what—a nightmare?'

"'I've got the combination! I've been working on it all the time, and it just came to me in my sleep. Get right up,



SHE POINTED A PISTOL AT ME.

Joe, and hold the light, and mind yours don't set anything on fire.' In another two minutes the front of the chest fell down, and behold our household gods!! 'If anybody wants to steal them between now and daylight, they can, that's all,' said Aggie; 'but I'm not going to shut that lock again to-night for anybody!'

"In the fall there was a burglar scare about town, and Agnes' mother came over and gave her a lecture upon locking the windows. She said we really ought to have a burglar alarm. To please her, I had one put in. Election-night I went down to town, telling Aggie not to sit up for me, for I should wait for the returns. It was one o'clock when I opened the front door very softly, not to disturb Agnes. 'Br-r-r-br-r-kplunk!' I had forgotten the alarm.

"Before I had time to say a word or even turn down my coat collar, my wife appeared at the head of the stairs. She pointed a pistol at me. Her hair hung loose, and she was in her—well, never mind; but she looked distractingly pretty.

"'If you come one step further I'll fire!' she cried.

"'It's Joe, Agnes,' said I, meekly.

"'I don't believe it! Take off your hat!'

"I took it off, and made her a low bow. 'Don't shoot your husband, he's doing the best he can.'

"Agnes laughed hysterically. 'Oh, Joe, I was so frightened.'

"I rushed upstairs and caught her. I took away the pistol, and wrapped her up in her dressing gown. 'Do you intend you ought to appear before burglars in this costume?' I inquired. She blushed. 'I never thought of that.'

"'And to think you should point a pistol at your own husband!'

"'It wasn't, indeed, Joe.'

"'Agnes Lounsbury,' said I, 'do you mean to say you were so rash as to aim at me with a pistol that wasn't loaded?'

"'But I shouldn't have fired it, anyway, it wasn't cocked.'

"'Well, then, ends the watchman-burglar alarm business,' said I. 'We've had about as much of it as we want. To-morrow we'll decide what silver we want to use every day, and the rest shall go down to the bank.'

"We were able to breathe now. The silver stands on the sideboard, and we yet nobody has carried it off; if they do, Agnes' mother will say she expected it, for we aren't the careful people they used to be in her recollection. And in awhile Aggie quarrels with me because some dish or other that would make a show for company is at the bank, and I don't see my way clear to bring it home under my arm. 'You can have those all home and trust to luck if you'd rather,' I say.

"'I'd rather they were at the bank, because then I should have them, you know.'

"'Don't see it,' said I; 'but it's just as you say.'

"When our anniversary came around we had a present and a note from one of Agnes' elderly friends. The note ran this way:

"'My dear Mrs. Lounsbury: We send you our best congratulations on your anniversary. My husband will have his little John, who is now in his second term, tell him that the Lounsburys had so much silver given them on their wedding that it was a little embarrassment to them, he says you ought to be ashamed of being so ungrateful as your age, while the older generation has not even accumulated souvenir spoons, and sends you this little gift to remind you of the fact.'

"'Oh, Joe! it's silver;' for I had punched a hole in the paper. 'No, it isn't, no, it isn't, it's plated. We can keep it. It's a pudding dish, or for oysters, you know. How kind. And plated too. It didn't cost much, Joe, did it?'

"'A few dollars, I should think.'

"'How good! Perhaps even less, Joe?'

"'Perhaps so; it's rather light-weight.'

"'Isn't it delightful? We'll have some oysters in it to-morrow night, and ask them over to tea.'

"'I should feel dreadfully to have that taken,' I heard her murmur that evening.

"'What for?'

"'Because it's such a comfort to have one thing that you don't care whether it's stolen or not.'

"'You're getting sleepy, Aggie. But I know one thing that "goes on, goes on, forever."'

"'What?'

"'Our mileage rent. I reckon in a few years we'll have paid for the whole outfit, and then we'll fetch it home and keep open house for burglars with a clear conscience.'

"'Don't be ridiculous, Joe,' said my wife."—N. Y. Tribune.

Cold Baths.

Most medical men consider that a cold bath every morning is apt to do more harm than good to any but persons of a very vigorous constitution. The sensible thing to do is to see that the temperature of the water in cold weather is not lower than that of the air. A daily bath is most healthful, but it should not be so cold as to give a shock to the system.—Chicago Tribune.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT,

JOHN M. PALMER,

Of Illinois.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

SIMON B. BUCKNER,

Of Kentucky.

THE CANDIDATES NOTIFIED.

Palmer and Buckner were officially notified of their nominations as President and Vice President at Louisville last Saturday by the committee appointed at the convention held by the National Democratic Party at Indianapolis. Eliminating the enthusiam—and there was plenty of it—the event was one of the most notable in a political way that had ever been held in the United States. Here was a great gathering of men inspired not by a desire for personal aggrandizement or party thrift, but from a consciousness that a stern duty lay before them in the effort to preserve the integrity of a party to the honesty of a nation threatened with a governmental policy that would prove disastrous to our commercial interests and standing; and knowing well that there could come no profit in the matter of sharing public office by affiliating with the cause—no matter how worthy it is—their position was one of patriotism.

The difference in patriotism from that which marked the stirring times in 1861 was that there was no Mason and Dixon line drawn in the personality and nativity of those to be notified or the ones delegated to per form that pleasant duty. It was an auspicious time for the mingling of the blue and gray—a time when all men could join efforts to save the nation not on the field of battle but at the ballot box; a time when intelligence rather than force is to be the controling factor.

THE PLAINFIELD DEMOCRATS.

In another column of today's Constitutionalist appears in an article reporting the proceedings held by the local Democrats last Friday evening. A that time an organization, with a full set of officers, was formed for the purpose of carrying on a vigorous campaign for sound money, and adding strength to the candidacy of Palmer and Buckner. Similar meetings are being held in various parts of New Jersey, but it is safe to say that in no community has there been a more substantial or more sincere assemblage of Democrats gathered together for the purpose outlined in the article appearing in another column than in this city. By establishing headquarters where addresses can be made to the people and from where literature may be distributed, the Plainfield Sound-Money Democratic Association will be able to do a good and worthy work.

THE PRESIDENT FOR SOUND MONEY.

At the notification of Palmer and Buckner at Louisville, the following letter was read from President Cleveland:

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Sept. 10, 1896.

The Hon. W. D. Bynum, Indianapol s:

I regret that I cannot accept your invitation to attend the notification meeting on Saturday evening. As a Democrat, devoted to the principles and integrity of my party, I should be delighted to be present on an occasion so significant, and to mingle with those who are determined that the voice of t us Democracy shall not be smothered, and who insist that its glorious standard shall be borne aloft, as of old, in faithful hands.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

The letter was not a surprise, because it was well-known that President Cleveland was a sound-money man and a Democrat, but it was none the less interesting, and the effect of the President's declaration will add much strength to the Indianapolis ticket among those who are admirers and followers of Mr. Cleveland.

CARLISLE KNOWS WHAT IS GOOD.

Secretary of the Treasury John G. Carlisle has practical as well as theoretical ideas on the currency of this country. For years he has been recognized as one of the best versed public men on the money question in the country, and with nearly four years experience in presiding over the financial end of the government—where he has had opportunity to learn just what is best—his advice to Democrats that they support Palmer and Buckner is well-timed and good.

No grass seed need be sown about the Plainfield station, as many busy feet would trample it out in short order.

Plainfield's Constitutionalist is the latest Democratic newspaper to bolt the Bryan ticket. How could it be otherwise with a paper having such an honorable title?—New York Press.

Maine and Vermont are the straws that show how the Eastern States are going. The New York Journal, the leading silver paper in the East, admits that Bryan stands a poor show east of the Wabash or north of the Mason and Dixey line.

The Republican Congressional Convention for the Eighth District, comprising Elizabeth, Plainfield, Orange and Bayonne, and all the townships of Essex, except East Orange, will be held October 1st, in the Veteran Zouave Armory, on Broad street, in Elizabeth. The call for the convention was issued by the committee yesterday.

New Jersey's Sound Money Democratic State Committee has opened headquarters in the Davidson building, at Washington and Montgomery streets, Jersey City. Secretary Holly will be in charge and will superintend the distribution of sound-money literature, with which the State is to be flooded. It is the purpose of the committee to organize Palmer and Buckner clubs in every county.

Senator Daly, who presided over the Democratic State Convention Wednesday, announced the following yesterday as the committee on Vacancies for the electoral ticket: Henry Lohman, Jr., Hudson; William Harrigan, Essex; William A. Cotter, Hunterdon; Thomas F. Lane, Union; Munson Force, Passaic; James J. Davidson, Gloucester; Eckard P. Budd, Burlington; Addison Ely, Bergen; Aaron E. Johnson, Monmouth.

The opening of the school year here in Plainfield, on both sides of the brook, is very gratifying to those who take pride in the intellectual development of the rising generation. With the high standard of the city public schools maintained as in years past, and improved if anything, together with the fact that the North Plainfield public school has been raised to the high school class, is a matter of congratulation for all who, like the late James A. Garfield, believe that the public schools are the Nation's defence.

The Democratic State convention held at Trenton, yesterday, was controlled from start to finish by the silver men. Only one gold man attempted to raise a voice in defence of his ideas and he was shutup in a way that showed the majority's determination not to permit any other sentiment other than of the silver brand to show itself. James E. Martine, known far and wide as the "Farmer Orator," took an active part in the day's proceedings and was largely responsible for the platform enunciated by the convention.

H. K. Weber, vice-president of the First National Bank, of Springfield, Illinois who has been visiting E. R. Ackerman, of this city, reports that a careful canvas among the depositors in his bank shows that where one Republican has indicated his intention to vote for Mr. Bryan, thirteen Democrats can be found who will vote for Mr. McKinley, and this average has been obtained by interrogating nearly a thousand persons, and Sangamon county, in which Springfield is situated, is composed largely of farmers, and is a typical county in the state.

With one sweep of the pen a New York editor has transplanted beautiful Plainfield from beside the limpid and peaceful Green brook to the banks of the rawging Morris canawl. The geographical abortion was made in the report of a "little Johnnie Slavinski" who fell into the canal. Now, as our thoughts wander, we can almost perceive the bray of the boney and abused mule as the whacks of a whip are plied by the raw-boned driver and vibrated to our auricle, instead of the redolance of the brook's cleansified flow permeating our olfactory organs. We take it upon ourselves to say that Plainfield has not moved yet. We are doing business at the same old stand.

Lack of facilities for accommodating children who are anxious and need to be entered into the public schools is a condition which many cities are grappling with. In New York alone, yesterday, 30,000 children were turned away from the public schools because there was not room for them and the same story—modified in the number—is told in nearly every large city in the country. Plainfield has not been free from this condition to some extent, though her fault was more of overcrowding than turning away. But the new Lincoln School, when finished, will largely eliminate this discouraging and retrogative element in public instruction, and provide sufficient accommodation for the young seeking knowledge.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said:

"If all drugs were thrown into the sea it would be better for men and worse for the fishes."

Yet for the only drug which is at once a medicine and a food we are indebted to one of those same fishes. Dr. Holmes was hasty. "No known drug," says a high English authority (Dr. A. E. Bridger), "except cod-liver oil, has power to generate any force within the human body. The stimulants and tonics waste force and create weakness." Thus we see why of Cod-liver Oil with hypophosphites has, for twenty years, been the chief dependence of physicians in all bronchial and lung diseases. Scott's Emulsion acts strictly on the lines of modern medical practice. It does not stimulate, like alcohol and quinine, or stupefy, like opium and the bromides. It nourishes, strengthens and upbuilds the system. Being a true food (digested and absorbed in cases where in other food only clogs the digestive organs, ferments, and poisons the blood), Scott's Emulsion arrests wasting, forms new flesh and tissue, revives the natural appetite and cures disease, conferring more life. For consumption, bronchitis, depleted blood, scrofula, etc., it excels all other remedies or forms of treatment.

Augustus W. Cutler was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for Representative from the Fourth Congressional District Tuesday.

Senator Smith, chairman of the Democratic State committee, arrived home from his European trip yesterday. He had no political opinions to express, though he expressed some surprise at the early date of the Democratic State convention. He did not say what his course would be in the campaign.

The Press regrets to learn of the retirement of T. E. Hazell as teacher of music in the public schools and his early departure to his new position in Summit. No better testimonial of Mr. Hazell's popularity or work in which he is engaged is needed beyond the fact that in all his years of service in this city there has been no attempt to displace him. He was a man whose services were appreciated.

The executive committee of the New Jersey Sound-Money Democracy held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the headquarters of the committee in Jersey City. Former Senator Henry D. Winton, of Hackensack, presided. The committee discussed the electoral ticket, which the recent convention gave it the power to appoint, but arrived at no definite conclusion. Gottfried Krueger, of Newark; Richard V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth; Nelson J. H. Edge, of Jersey City; Ashbel Green, of Bergen; and Samuel T. Smith, of Warren, were practically agreed upon as electors. There are five others yet to be chosen.

Here is a fugitive paragraph which worth republishing: "All school work is simply laying the foundation for the future educational structure—simply getting ready for the building of the tabernacle that may be erected upon it. We sometimes hear young persons talk of having 'finished their education' upon graduating from a high school or college. The minds of such persons must be shallow indeed if they consider their education to be finished when leaving school or college. In fact, it is only the beginning of an education for a sound and sensible mind—a systematic training for what is to follow. No one's education is ever complete, and thoughtful persons exist to little purpose if they do not learn something of advantage every day they live even if they have had a university education. Some of the best educated and most useful persons in the world never saw in the inside of a college."

QUALITY, NOT QUANTITY.

WHAT THERE WAS OF THE BICYCLE PARADE WAS GOOD.

But the Threatening Weather Kept Many Away and the Entries Were Almost Exclusively Among Local Riders.

Yes, the Daylight Bicycle Carnival is over and Plainfield will again resume its wonted quietness until something else comes to disturb its serenity. Fate seems to have a grudge against this fair suburban town, for again last Saturday afternoon the clouds gathered and the rain began to fall. The drops were scattering, however, and the main storm held off until evening. It might just as well have poured though, for the leaden skies and the threatening appearance broke up all the well-laid plans for the Carnival.

The Carnival was held, of course. It had to be as long as it didn't rain. But the host of visiting wheelmen, who had promised and were expected to come, failed to appear. Their experience the week before was too well remembered and the heavy clouds were too suggestive, so they stayed away. That left Plainfield to go it alone and she did it very creditably, too, considering the circumstances.

There were lots of strangers in Plainfield, however, despite the unpropitious weather. They came, mostly as spectators and not as participants, while many of them remained as guests of their Plainfield friends.

There were about 300 wheels in line, not including the several hundred cyclists that followed for intervals during the march. The entire line of march was covered rather faster than had been intended, but that was owing to the wish to complete it before the momentarily expected rain should arrive.

At about 1 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, blue sky appeared and it looked as if Farmer Dunn was telling the truth and the weather would be clear. Then the visitors began to arrive, but it clouded up soon after and those who had prepared to come waited for further developments. At 2 o'clock the streets in the vicinity of the parade headquarters at the Revere House began to assume a lively appearance. The vanguard of the he big army of spectators that was to crowd the place two hours later had arrived, and from that time until the parade started there was a steady stream of humanity pressing steadily forward in that direction. Everybody was in holiday attire except the crowd of cyclists, who threaded their way through the long caravan of wagons and carriages of all sorts and kinds, clad in the conventional wheeling costume.

At 3 o'clock the Plainfield Cornet Band marched up Park avenue and took their position in line. Forty minutes later Sergeant Kiely, looking extremely well in his natty and becoming uniform, mounted his wheel and headed the platoon of mounted police that led the parade.

After the detachment of Plainfield's "Finest," came Grand Marshal F. L. C. Martin, in black coat, white knickerbockers and cap, with his handsome white and gold sash slung over one shoulder. Next came the First division headed by Marshal Louis G. Timpson.

Marshal Timpson and all the other marshals wore dark coats, white knickerbockers and caps. They were also designated by their gorgeous red sashes.

Grand Marshal Martin's special aide was Edgar L. Serrell, who was kept busy speeding along the column delivering messages.

The First division consisted of the ladies and their escorts. Some of the decorations were very pretty. Miss Rita Nash, gowned in pink, rode under a "Liberty Bell" of pink roses supported by two uprights. Her wheel was also decorated with pink streamers. Miss Mamie Jones represented a "Snow Girl." She was dressed in white and her gown and white wheel were decorated with bunches of white cotton. Three young girls were gotten up as sunflowers in yellow and black. Others made little attempt to decorate their wheels, but wore fancy costumes. Miss Clara Peck represented a Japanese maiden. Miss Mildred Terrell made a charming little Quakeress. Miss Mamie Thatcher, daughter of the only George, was a wild-eyes Zulu with blackened face. There was also a pretty gypsy. Miss Lyda Pangborn was dressed to represent an old woman in rags.

While the visiting clubs were few, the Crescent wheelmen turned out well and presented a very fine appearance. Their captain, Chas. C. Lister, acted as marshal of that division. The Wheelmen were all dressed in uniform, White caps, the regular blue uniform coat and white duck trousers. Their wheels were also decorated in white. They had two tandems in line, the one manned by Clarence E. Teel and Thomas Hanna looking particularly well with its white decorations and nattily dressed riders. There were about sixty of the Crescent Wheelmen in line.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of Marshal F. R. Stevens, the Fourth and Sixth divisions were united under the command of Marshal Charles B. Morse.

First came W. E. Brock on his tricycle, invented by himself, gaily bedecked in red, white and blue. Clarence Boome and LeRoy Brewster rode a tandem, artistically hung with the tri-colors. Douglass Martin and Linden Stuart, with blackened faces and tattered clothing, were mounted on an old solid-tire tandem and presented a very dilapidated appearance. The Crescent Wheelmen Juniors were in this division with thirty-eight members in line. Captain William Nash commanded the club from the interior of a regular house on wheels and gave his orders to his bugler, Roy Radford, through the windows. William H. Pope had a very prettily arranged red, white and blue canoe with sails formed of the tri-colored tissue-paper rope. Stanley Peck represented a very remarkable young woman named "Maria Susan" Harry Slauson was dressed as a clown. A small, but very good looking, "George Washington" was Seldon Thayer in a costume of the eighteenth century, with its cocked hat and silk coat embroidered with panfies.

William Vanderweg and Albert Utzinger were gotten up as girls, "Gold" and "Silver," and made a great hit. "Uncle Sam" was in line, rather youthful, perhaps, but well gotten up. He was represented by Egbert D. Murphy. A genuine old hayseed of the "Uncle Josh" type, bestrode a high wheel and gazed at the crowd with wide-open mouth. Underneath this disguise were the form and features of Charles Palmer. Abbott Brainard was a brave soldier, while the decorations on Owen Fleming's wheel were rather mixed.

Then came Homer Smith. Only his head was visible and that was equipped with a black wig and face like that of a pickaniny. The rest of his body and wheel was concealed by an immense watermelon, made of paper stretched on a frame. Rowland Rockfellow was grand in a red, white and blue suit, while Harry Montrose was disguised as a clown and followed on a high wheel.

The members of the Allis football team made an excellent showing. They came up in red sweaters, football pants and campaign hats, while their captain, Royal T. Phillips, led them carrying a football. They had eight in line. Orville T. Waring, of the team, led his greyhound by a ribbon.

Marshal Thomas A. Cuming led the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers, of which he is the captain. There were twenty-six of them in line, while the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. Cyclers sent a delegation of ten and a float, representing a large and ferocious looking dragon. Marshals N. R. Titsworth and W. F. Elderton looked out for unattached wheelmen, and they had their hands full.

The G. O. P. elephant was in line, while his designers rode inside of him on a tandem. He seemed a very quiet animal and paid no attention to the tramp that rode near by with a sign out "I'll take either gold or silver." A. R. Johnson's wheel was handsomely decorated with green moss and red roses while an umbrella of the same was stretched over his head.

John Poole, of the Scott Press Works, had a steam yacht of black and orange built over his wheel, and he areered along the street in a most nautical fashion.

Fred Barker was really humorous. Most of his person was enclosed in a barrel. His head stuck through a hole in the top, his bare arms were thrust through openings in the sides, while his legs, encased in flesh-colored tights, protruded through the bottom. On the side of the barrel was painted "Oh, mamma, I've been in swimming and lost my clothes." His appearance was everywhere hailed with shouts of laughter.

Henry Vosseller was gotten up after the fashion of "Weary Waggles" and was known as "the tramp that slept in the Astor bed." He had all sorts of labels fastened around him.

A real live looking bullfrog rode along quite comfortably and informed those who asked that he came from that wicked town of Somerville. There was a two-wheeled cycle which was apparently once an old velocipede. It was ridden by a remarkable character.

Willie Mortimer looked fine in a suit of yellow and white, while his wheel was decorated with rosettes of the same colors.

Henry Leal and Wells Taylor impersonated a "cullud sweet" and his "gal." Victor Christofferson, was not recognizable in the rags and tatters of a "knight of the road." He had a monstrous canvas umbrella spread over his head, while the rest of his outfit was fastened on at convenient places.

A remarkable character in skirts, and bearing a very idiotic mask, violently fanned a poor toy pug fastened in a luggage carrier throughout the parade.

The hod carrier was there with his hod in his hand and a pipe in his mouth; he had a ladder fastened to his handles, up which he was apparently climbing.

The last division in line was the one devoted to business floats, commanded by J. Hervey Doane. This display was excellent and a number of floats were represented. Probably the most elaborate was the float of Hillier & Co., the North avenue laundry firm. It was finished after the shape of a house with the rider, George Wilson, inside, and was white, with gold decorations while the suggestive laundry packages told of the occupation of its owners. It was certainly very handsome. Its designer was Miss Rose Brown. William H. Addis and Dell Carney, representing two rather pretty colored individuals fresh from the wash, navigated the float of Addis & Bro., which was built on two bicycles side by side and looked something like a lunch counter on wheels.

Manager E. W. Mills, of the United States Express company, had the company's new package carrier in line with little Gordon Kerr seated on top. The new vehicle received much favorable comment. Crane & Clark had a hat ambulance in line. Edward White's package carrier was in this division and was prettily decorated. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle company had two representations. One was the Punnett Companion, decorated with red, white and blue and with a canopy of the same overhead, while motive power was furnished by "Manager" William Sweeney and Herbert Kirkfellow, each wearing a tall silk hat and a white duck suit. Gorgons were no name for it. Edward Mosher was mounted on the rear of a tandem, while his trained dog, gaily decorated for the occasion, occupied the front seat. This was the F. L. C. Martin Cycle company's mascot. L. W. Randolph's famous glaces were in advertising by a pretty Venetian bower in which sat P. V. Wheeler, a gay courier for the the time being, and also acting as the engineer of this craft.

J. H. Leggett's display was certainly a very pretty one. It was white, wheel and all, while a bower overhead sheltered the rider who was also dressed in the prevailing color. A morter and pestle adorned the front and there were other signs of the trade. The effect was charming.

Woolston & Buckle's float was neat and attractive looking and received lots of applause. Rushton, Hansen & Luthman had a warrior of the ancients out to defend their reputations as painters and he looked very fine in his armor with shield and spear. J. H. McVey's restaurant was remembered by a transparency. M. C. Bird's Central Mills was aptly illustrated by a rider carrying a sheaf of straw. Edsall's Commercial Palace had its float in line and a very pretty one it was.

The judges remained at the Revere House and the parade passed by them again before following the regular line of march. The judges present were Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank, ex-Councilman Ernest R. Ackerman, W. D. Murray and Edward White. At the close of the Carnival they announced the following prize winners.

Best club—First, Crescent Wheelmen; second, Allis Football Club.

Best individual man's wheel—First, A. R. Johnson; second, John Pool; third, W. H. Pope.

Best lady's wheel—First, Rita Nash; second, Mamie Jones.

Best burlesque—First, Homer Smith; second, Fred Barker.

Best juvenile wheel—First, Selden Thayer; second Egbert D. Murphy; third, Mamie Thatcher.

Best tandem—First, C. E. Teele and Thomas Hanna; second, Clarence Boome and LeRoy Breitveter.

Best business float—First, Hillier and Co., second, Leggett's Pharmacy.

Best ladies costume—First, Clara Peck; second, Mildred Terrell.

Best man's costume—First, Henry Vosseler; second, Charles Palmer.

The prize committee will announce the time and place of the giving of the prizes in a few days.

Most of the residents and business men along the line of march decorated to some extent. There were some very pretty arrangements but to individualize without giving all would be unfair to the rest and lack of space prevents a list of all.

Now that it is all over something should be said of the men who worked so hard to get it up. The committee has been hard at work for several weeks and although the weather was against them, yet their efforts proved very successful. Special credit is due to Edward White, the very energetic treasurer, as well as the popular chairman, J. F. McDonald. Nobody realizes how it was done by the untiring secretary, F. B. Stevens, and indeed by all the rest. F. L. C. Martin should not be forgotten, for he was the originator of this Carnival and the previous one. Time, labor and money have been spent by him to make the affair a success and he deserves a vote of thanks from the citizens of Plainfield in recognition of his efforts.

Next year it is to be hoped Dame Nature will be more kind as regards the weather when Plainfield attempts to hold a Carnival.

Miss Deborah Newman, of Harmony Street, Becomes Mrs. Wadsworth.

The marriage of Miss Deborah Newman, of Harmony street, and Mr. Wadsworth, of Paterson, was celebrated quietly Monday evening at the home of Rev. Cornelius Schenck who performed the ceremony. Miss Lizzie Rutledge, of Warren street, acted as bridemaid and Henry Seader, of Harmony street, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadsworth left for Paterson, where they will reside in the future. They were the recipients of many handsome presents as tokens of esteem.

In a recent letter to the manufacturers Mr. W. F. Benjamin, editor of the Spectator, Rusiford, N. Y., says: "It may be a pleasure to you to know the high esteem in which Chamberlain's medicines are held by the people of your own state, where they must be best known. An aunt of mine, who resides at Dexter, Iowa, was about to visit me a few years since, and before leaving home wrote me, asking if they were sold here, stating if they were not she would bring a quantity with her, as she did not like to be without them." The medicines referred to are Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, famous for its cures of colds and croup; Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, pains in the side and chest, and Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy for bowel complaints. A Timely Reminder.

Each season forces upon our consideration its own perils to health. The advent of fall finds many reduced in strength and vigor, poorly prepared to continue the business of life. The stomach and bowels, the great highway of animal economy, is especially liable to disorder in the fall. The nervous system has also suffered in the struggle. Typhoid fever and malaria in particular find in the fall that combination of earth, air and water that mark this season as especially dangerous. The failing leaves, the decaying vegetables continue their chain of vitiation. Hood's Sarsaparilla furnishes a most valuable safeguard at these important points, and should be used in the fall before serious sickness has laid you low.

LIVED AN EVENTFUL LIFE

JOSEPH TUCKER DUNHAM PASSES OVER THE GREAT DIVIDE.

Was the First Man to Enlist in the Civil War From Rhode Island and the First Soldier to Return to Plainfield.

The sudden death of Joseph T. Dunham, of 930 Park avenue, which occurred Saturday afternoon at 12:25, was received with feelings of sadness by the entire community. For sometime past Mr. Dunham had complained of rheumatism, and he suffered considerably in consequence. However, he felt well otherwise and was able to attend to his business. Last Monday afternoon he, together with his brother, M. M. Dunham, enjoyed a drive about the country. They returned about 7:30 that evening. After that he had his supper, and while eating some corn from the cob he was unable to clear his throat. At first the time he paid no special attention to it. A little later he was stricken with apoplexy and was carried to his home. His left side was paralyzed and he was totally blind. Dr. Tomlinson was called at once and prescribed. Tuesday evening a consultation was held and it was then decided that he could not survive the illness, and from that time life gradually left the body.

Joseph Tucker Dunham was the oldest of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus M. Dunham's five children, and was born in April, 1841, on the old Jonathan Dunham farm at New Market, where he remained for a few years. Later the family moved to Plainfield and occupied the house on West Second street next to the one occupied by G. W. Force. It was then that Mr. Dunham attended school under Rev. Mr. Bond and W. J. Davidson. When the public school opened Mr. Dunham was the first scholar on the roll. A few years later, when the family moved into the house which stood where Music Hall is now located, Mr. Dunham went to sea and for three years he followed the life of a jolly tar on a sailing vessel. While making what proved to be his last trip across the ocean he fell from the mast of the ship and sustained severe injuries. When the vessel reached Constantinople he was removed to a hospital where for five months the Sisters of Mercy gave him the best of care. This closed his sea life and he returned to New York, where he entered the machine shops of Cottrell & Babcock. He was then about twenty years of age and he served his time as a machinist.

He had just completed his time when President Lincoln issued the first call for nine-months men. Mr. Dunham, being exceedingly patriotic, enlisted at once and was the first volunteer to enlist from Rhode Island. He served well during the nine months and then returned to Plainfield.

He was the first soldier to return here from the war and considerable interest was manifested. He was met at the station by Editor Foster Cushing, of the Plainfield Union, and was taken to his home in Mr. Cushing's wagon. This was on Saturday afternoon, and nearly everyone in town called; on Mr. Dunham to hear his story of the war. He had only been home a short time when President Lincoln issued a second call for two years' service. Mr. Dunham responded promptly and enlisted with a New York State regiment. He served his time and answered to the third call issued by the President. He then remained till the close of the war. He was called into the engagements at Bull Run and at Chancellorsville, and at one time he was one of the prominent sharp shooters, and among his old relics is the rifle he used at that time.

At the close of the war he returned to Plainfield and engaged in the wholesale fish business in Fulton Market, New York. For sometime he commuted back and forth, but finally took up his residence in Brooklyn, where he lived until five years ago. About three years ago he purchased the property where he now lives. He remained in the fish business for several years and during this time he secured a patent on a combination tag and envelope and shipping tags. He then changed his business to the latter and he continued in the tag business at the time of his death, at 59 John street, New York.

About thirty years ago Mr. Dunham was married to Miss Mary Clark, of Nile, Allegany County, New York, and she now survives him. An interesting incident is told regarding a bomb shell which Mr. Dunham brought home from the war. It was left at his parents home, and it was supposed that the shell had entirely exploded. One day Mr. Dunham's mother was cleaning the shell and had placed it on the stove containing a fire. Just then Dr. Stillman walked in and seeing the position of the shell, thought he would examine it. Being a scientist, the doctor was interested, and to his surprise learned that there was still about two pounds of explosive matter in the shell. It was fortunate that the doctor came in, for the house and occupants might have been blown to atoms."

Mr. Dunham was a Baptist and generally attended the Seventh Day Baptist church. He was also commander of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., of this city. He was thoroughly in love with the G. A. R. and all its work and there was nothing that he wouldn't do, if possible, for the order. He was also a brother-in-law of the late George H. Babcock. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the Post of which he was a member is in charge.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES.

Last Sad Rites Held Over the Remains of the Late Joseph Dunham.

Most impressive was the funeral services of the late Joseph Tucker Dunham, which were held Monday afternoon at three o'clock from the house, 930 Park avenue. In addition to the large attendance of relatives and friends, there was also present a large delegation from Post 109 and Post 73, G. A. R. The services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Richardson, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. Both divines spoke of the departed as a comrade and soldier and as a husband. The many excellent points in his character were mentioned, and a grand lesson was illustrated in the words "Be ye Ready." The uncertainty of life was impressively laid on the hearts of all, as each one felt the sudden departure of the decedent.

The comrades of the G. A. R. acted as an escort to the funeral cortege, and the following served as bearers: Captain J. Frank Hubbard, Asa Collier, E. H. Holmes, Elmore D. Moffett, Charles H Randolph and Edward T. Dunn. At the grave, members of Post 109 took part in the service, which closed with a prayer by Rev. J. W. Richardson and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The floral tributes consisted of a beautiful pillow from Post 109, bearing the inscription "Our Comrade," and several bunches of choice cut flowers. Interment was in the Seventh Day Baptist cemetery, corner of Ninth street and Arlington avenue.

I am in the business of Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing. My employers will be pleased to have me attended to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally allowed to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel sure to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

NO LEAVES TO BE BURNED

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION START THEIR FALL WORK.

Proposed to Utilize the Paupers in Gathering Falling Leaves to be Taken to a Central Point and Then Carted Away.

The Town Improvement Association held their first fall meeting Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. rooms. Judging from the number present it was clearly shown that the objects for which the association was organized have not been lost to view, and the discussion of various subjects was very lively.

The president, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, presided, and Mrs. S. R. Krom was in her place as secretary. After the minutes of the previous meetings had been read and approved, the treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, read her report which showed that since the last report $19.50 had been received, which now leaves a balance of $54.09 in the treasury. Mrs. J. D. Titsworth made a report regarding the framing of ordinances, and she stated that owing to the fact that the city ordinances had not yet been compiled in corrected form, the committee was unable to do anything. She also stated that complaints had been received regarding the weeds and grass which had been alowed to grow along sidewalks. It was moved that an ordinance covering the matter be framed, but it was finally thought best to place the matter in the hands of the committee.

Under the head of new business, the subject of burning leaves was discussed. Many plans for their disposal were offered, and among them, it was suggested that a large vacant lot be secured and the leaves placed there. When the question was asked how they would be placed there, it was suggested that the paupers of the city be employed to carry them in bags.

Mrs Pierre Mali made a statement regarding the keeping of yards. She said that people in her section had been rather lax of late and no improvement had been noticed. She also spoke in relation to sidewalks on West Third street and Paradise Alley. She thought that if the proper ones were informed, the matter would be attended to. The next subject under discussion was the spraying of trees, which took the form of a review of the past work. It was thought by all that the work had been effectual and been the means of saving many trees, which otherwise would have been destroyed.

It was stated that Mr. Tobin would not be able next year to do the spraying for the same price, and other arrangements would necessarily have to be made. The matter was left on the table until the next meeting.

Mrs. Pond thought it would be well to invite all the members to the next monthly meeting, when a discussion of the burning of leaves would be more fully considered.

Mrs. Randolph expressed herself as being in favor of the idea and after it was decided so to do, the meeting adjourned.

LUNCH BOX SOCIABLE.

The Woman's Relief Corps Conduct a Pleasant Social Affair.

The lunch box sociable and entertainment arranged by the Woman's Relief Corps was held Friday evening, and the attendance was most gratifying in every particular. Commander I. L. McVoy, of Post No. 73, G. A. R., acted as master of ceremonies and opened the affair with an interesting and appropriate address. He then introduced Miss Lena Jomini, who gave a soprano solo, assisted by Miss Dodge, on the piano. It was well received and won hearty applause. Past Commander M. C. Dobbins was then called on and related an amusing parrot story. Past Commander William Hand followed with some interesting remarks regarding his experience in the late war. Miss Dodge then gave an excellent recitation. A soprano solo by Mrs. Leland followed. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Nash.

Another recitation was given by Miss Dodge, and the last number on the programme, a solo "Brave Boys," by Miss Jomini, was loudly applauded. Mr. McVoy then announced that the lunch boxes would be sold to the biggest bidder. Comrade Francis Whitely acted as auctioneer and he was a great success. The boxes brought prices ranging from 25 cents to one dollar and it was not long before all were sold. As an accompaniment to the lunch good coffee was served. The proceeds of the affair will go into the relief fund, and its use will accomplish much good.

A New Trolley Route.

H. C. Smith, the civil engineer, has just completed a survey for a new trolley route to the Mountain Park Inn, and which, it is assured, is entirely pratical for building over. It is to branch off from the main line at Jenning's lane, this side of the drive, go up the lane for a distance to the rear of A. C. Johnson's house and then up to the mountain to the Inn. It is a comparatively straight route with a grade of seven per cent. to the one hundred feet.

GOLD DEMOCRATS MEET.

PASS RESOLUTIONS CONDEMNING THE REGULAR STATE CONVENTION.

Officers Elected to Carry on a Campaign Exploiting the Issues Which They Believe are at Stake in the Coming Election.

A meeting of Sound Money Democrats, opposed to Bryan and Sewall and free coinage, was held Friday last at the Revere House.

James E. Clark presided. A constitution was adopted and the following officers chosen: President, Albert H. Atterbury; vice-presidents, James E. Clark, Rowland Cox, Ernest L. Walz, George J. Tobin, Louis G. Timpson, Thomas H. Keller; treasurer, Edwin W. Conklin; secretary, Carl Pfeiffer.

The following address was adopted:

We, Democrats of Plainfield, N. J., organized in support of the platform and candidates of the Indianapolis convention, hereby state our position as follows:

First, We repudiate the platform of the Chicago convention; it is undemocratic and revolutionary, and the delegates exceeded their powers in adopting it. We commend the New Jersey delegates for their earnest efforts to avert this action and for declining to participate in it. They were sent to choose Democratic candidates on a Democratic platform.

Second, The self styled "regular" branch of the Democratic party in this State has stultified itself. At our convention in May we committed ourselves unqualifiedly to the cause of gold and now in September the seek to commit us to free coinage of silver. We refuse to tolerate such trickery.

Third, We adhere to the principles declared by the Indianapolis Convention, a convention representing the honor, traditions and strength of the Democratic party. The candidates, Palmer and Buckner, are worthy of the platform; they are Democrats of the highest standing and deserving of hearty support.

Fourth, We invite the co operation and support of all true Democrats in this city and vicinity who agree with us in the views herein expressed.

The following gentlemen have joined the association: James E. Clark, Otto Arens, Rowland Cox, Isaac N. Field, Edwin W. Conklin, William H. Sterling, Thomas H. Keller, William P. Smith, Louis G. Timpson, George B. DeRevere, Carl Pfeiffer, Albert H. Atterbury, Ernest L. Walz, John Mortimer, George J. Tobin, C. B. Peet, Rev. J. P. Taylor, John Benson, Carl Schipper, Gustave Schipper, Edward M. VanBuren, Frederick Walz, James Scott, Frederick H. Martin, Eugene A. Gross, C. A. Leveridge and Alfred Cock.

Anyone opposed to Bryan and Sewall and favoring the Indianapolis platform, is invited to join the association, and can send his name to the secretary, Carl Pfeiffer, of Madison avenue.

ELECTION BOARDS.

Those Who Will Receive the Ballots on Election Day.

The Union county board of election met Thursday morning and the members, E. C. Woodruff and R. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth, and ex-Mayor William Chamberlain and ex-County Clerk John L. Crowell, of Rahway, were sworn in by County Clerk Howard. President Woodruff suggested that maps should be secured which would define all of the election districts in Elizabeth and Plainfield. Mr. Ryan made a motion to that effect, and after it was adopted the lists of district members were submitted for approval from the chairmen of the Republican and Democratic county committees.

The following Republicans from this city were selected for the election boards:

First ward—First district, George W. Moore, J. H. Tier, Jr.; Second district, Guillermo Thorn, B. T. Barnes.

Second ward—First district, J. H. Doane, Armstrong Mulford; Second district, Edward Willis, Fred I. Smith.

Third ward—B. Frank Coriell, Jacob Kirkner.

Fourth ward—First district, James Huntington, Abraham Angleman; Second district, James B. Martin, Jacob Krimey.

The Fanwood Republicans are: Henry Kyte, Chas. J. Drake.

Water by the Million Gallons.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company sent 23,000,000 gallons of water to Elizabeth in August which is only "a drop in the bucket" compared to the draft made on the wells in other months. In two weeks' time the Elizabethtown Water Company will tap their new wells near the Hummock, and then the city of Elizabeth will excel any city in the county in the purity and volume of its water.—Contractor.

Took a Double Dose of Medicine.

What might have been an untimely death narrowly escaped this noon, when Mrs. J. P. Laire, of East Fifth street, accidentally took a double dose of medicine. The medicine is very strong and is only intended to be taken in small quantities. Dr. Davis was summoned at once and administered an emetic, which brought relief immediately, and Mrs. Laire is now much better.

DID BATTLE WITH A TUB.

AN EXCITING EPISODE IN A WEST FOURTH STREET HOUSE.

Two Colored Men Use Anything They Can Get Their Hands on to Win the Fight They Indulged In—Arrested.

With everything that came handy for weapons, two colored residents of West Fourth street went for each other last evening in a highly exciting manner. The two dusky skinned individuals, who were implicated in the racket, were Walter Carter and Solomon Lewis.

What the cause of the quarrel was no one seems to know exactly, not even the combatants themselves. At any rate they became excited over something. Words led to blows and the tenanent house on West Fourth street, in which they both live, was turned topsy turvy by their vigorous movements. Carter seized a tub and used it with considerable effect on Lewis' eye, leaving as a remembrance a deep cut and a black eye. Lewis twirled a chair about his head but Carter was tougher than the chair and the latter gave way. Kitchen utensils, stove pokers, and the like began to fly around like flies in a butcher shop. Carter gained possession of a board about four feet long and spanked his opponent most delightfully.

The racket was in full blast when someone told Patrolman Cooney and he took a hand in the game. The combatants quieted down surprisingly on the appearance of the officer and made no resistence when he arrested them both and locked them up. They appeared before City Judge DeMeza this morning. As Lewis' face was damaged to about the extent of five dollars, the Judge allowed him to go on payment of a five dollar fine. Carter was evidently the upper man in the fight and in default of ten dollars to pay his fine he was escorted to the county jail for thirty days.

TELLS A DIFFERENT STORY NOW.

The Giles Girl Says She Did Not Go Willingly With Loccio.

The story that Louise Giles told to Justice Newcorn yesterday puts still a different face on the matter.

According to her story, she wrote to Ernest Luccio, the Italian implicated in the case, sometime ago telling him that she could not go with him any more, as her parents objected.

When he met her that eventful Monday night, she was afraid to refuse to accompany him. And all her actions, she now claims, were forced, including the marriage. She was afraid to refuse for fear he would do her some injury.

Luccio is now waiting at the county jail and was brought to Plainfield in time for his hearing Monday afternoon at three o'clock.

CAPTIVE BIRDS GO FREE.

Metuchen Jeweler Fined for Having Songsters in His Possession.

Game Warden James L. Tooker, of Perth Amboy, has arrested E. R. Cuny, a jeweler of Metuchen, whom he charged with having song birds in captivity. Cuny was taken before Justice of the Peace Wood and fined $40 and costs. The birds found in Cuny's possession were American canaries. They were caught by Cuny in a spring cage, in which he placed a canary as a decoy. The birds were used as evidence and then liberated by the game warden.

Shooting at Carrier Pigeons.

William H. Carman, of Dunellen, has a lot of carrier pigeons which he prizes very highly. In all there were about fifty old and young on Sunday last, and the majority of these were registered. Out of a total of twenty liberated on Sunday just for exercise, only fourteen came returned to the loft, and three of the number carried gunshot wounds on the body, showing conclusively that some one or more had shot into the flock. There is a penalty attached to shooting carrier pigeons, and if the practice continues Mr. Carman will doubtless bring the guilty ones to the front and deal with them as law and justice directs.

Large Attendance.

The attendance at the North Plainfield public school is still increasing. There are now over sixty scholars in the High School, and at present the room is not sufficient. Yesterday a graduate of the Plainfield public school applied for a post-graduate course, and will enter the school on Monday. The scholars have now adopted themselves to the rules and studies of the school and everything is running in a satisfactory manner.

—Despite the fact that the City Council have taken precautions against having the streets soaked with water, the condition of the streets are just as bad.

Raymond Carpenter and Raymond Carroll bid fair to retain their title of champions of Watchung Park at tennis playing. William and Ed. Loizeaux put up an excellent game but the two Rays were too much for them in a very exciting match played on the Loizeaux courts yesterday. The victors won by the score of 6-8, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 8-6.

SANDBAGGERS AT WORK.

THEY TRIED TO WAYLAY CLARENCE THORN NEAR RAHWAY.

The Assailant Did Get Take Good Aim and So Struck Thorn's Shoulder Instead of His Head—The Circumstances.

With blanched face and trembling limbs, Clarence Thorn, of East Second street, joined his comrades at the Rahway station last Thursday evening after having passed through a lively and not particularly pleasant experience.

Thorn had left his comrades to walk home with a friend who lives on the road to Milton. After saying good night, he started back to Rahway alone. He had not gone very far when somebody brushed against him. It was very dark, but Thorn could see that the man had on a slouch hat and had his collar pulled up around his ears.

Thorn suggested that he be more careful and a few words passed between them. Then the stranger made a quick movement and something whizzed by Thorn's ear. It was evidently aimed for his head but it missed that and landed heavily on his shoulder, forcing him down on his knees. All the stories that he had ever heard of sandbaggers flashed through Thorn's mind and with one wild yell he jumped forward and rushed into the darkness.

"Help! help!" he shouted his assailant, and four shadowy forms sprang forward. To attempt to resist would be foolhardy, and Thorn covered the ground at an amizang rate of speed. The attack had been so sudden that he had hardly time to collect his wits. Panting from his long run he at last reached the rest of the party, rather lame in the region of his right shoulder and considerably excited to say the least.

The story of the attempted sandbagging was told and then the party returned to Plainfield, keeping a good lookout for tall strangers with slouch hats.

DIDN'T GET THE JOB.

A Poor Man Sent on a Fools Errand by a New York Employment Agency.

William Fleming, a good looking man aged twenty-three years, of No. 538 West 49th street, New York City, was duped through a New York employment agency, yesterday. He applied to the agency on Greenwich street for work of any kind, and was sent out to "Barrett's farm, back of Dunellen, N.J." Fleming packed up all of his earthly possessions, and went to Dunellen, reaching there soon after noon yesterday. He carried a big satchel in which he said was all he owned. Arriving there he inquired for and found Barrett's place, and was then told that a man had been engaged before he arrived.

The man was of course vexed, but he took a philosophical view of the situation, and said he would get satisfaction when he got back to New York. So he came to Plainfield on a trolley car, and then returned to the by steam cars.

Robbed in the Crowd.

One middle-aged woman from Dunellen, who mingled with the crowd of spectators at the Republican banner raising Thursday night, had her pocket picked by a sneak theif. She did not notice that her wallet was missing until she got to the North avenue station and looked for her return ticket home. Then she recognized the fact that she had been robbed. Of course there was no clue that would establish the identity of the thief, and as the wallet only contained a little change, she did not consider it worth while to notify the police, neither would she divulge her name.

His Family Home Once More.

After a two months vacation at the mountains and seashore, some at home and others abroad, Stephen R. Hope, janitor of the Bryant School building, has again got his family of school children domiciled in the building, where the fall and winter work has been taken up with much vim. On the opening day in the Bryant School 406 pupils were registered, and on the following day the number was increased to 416. Since then there has been a steady but slow increase in the number of pupils, but a few more could be accommodated on the pinch.

Walks Lame Now.

William DeMeza, of West Second street, is still very lame as the result of a fall from a wheel Thursday night. He was riding home from New Brunswick and had almost reached Metuchen when a buggy, in which were two drunken young men who were running the horse, approached. DeMeza attempted to get out of their erratic path and struck a rut. What followed may be well understood by any cyclist. DeMeza left a large portion of his cuticle there while his trousers were cut to pieces.

—People have often asked why it is that the 8:01 a. m. train to New York often slows up and stops just west of the Park avenue bridge. It is simply because the 7:58 train has not got beyond the mile post, and in railroad parlance it would be considered a misdemeanor for an engineer to proceed unless he was properly signalled.

AN ATTEMPTED HOLDUP.

KAUFFER KNOCKED HIS ASSAILANT DOWN WITH A TENNIS RAQUET.

He Was Returning to West Dunellen Late in the Evening When an Ugly Tramp Sprang Suddenly at Him.

The "tanks" at Greenbrook have long been the gathering place for the hordes of "Wandering Willies," "Weary Waggles," etc., that visit this part of the country during the summer. Several instances of attempted holdups have been reported and the tramps have given a rather unsavory reputation to the place.

Dr. H. J. Kauffer has been spending the summer at the Maltby cottage, West Dunellen, and has twice been hailed by tramps and ordered to halt. He kept on, however, and no attempt was made to stop him. Last Tuesday night he had a different experience.

The Doctor was returning home late at night on his wheel after visiting some friends in Dunellen. He was bringing his tennis raquet home and his friends jokingly told him to beware of highwaymen as this would be the third and all important time. He laughingly answered that he would use his tennis raquet to defend himself with.

He was speeding along past the "tanks" when the light of his lantern showed the figure of a man crouching in the road. The glimpse was but momentary, and then the figure sprang at the rider. Almost unconsciously, Dr. Kauffer brought the tennis raquet down on the unprotected head of the highwayman with terrible force. The raquet was almost shattered by the blow while the attacking man uttered a loud groan and fell against the rear wheel of the Doctor's bicycle.

Dr. Kauffer did not wait to see whether his professional services were needed. He is a dentist and thinks maybe he knocked some of the highwayman's teeth out. He rode as if fifty tramps were in hot pursuit and did not stop until he had reached the cottage.

On examining the raquet, he found it spattered with blood. Traces of blood were also found in the rear wheel. Dr. Kauffer does care for a fourth experience.

ANOTHER FERRY SLIP CRASH.

The Fanwood's Engines Stuck and She Ran Into a Float at Full Speed.

The engine of the Central Railroad ferryboat Fanwood got stuck on center while she was crossing the river at 4:20 o'clock Friday afternoon and she drove into her slip at Jersey City at full speed. There were about three hundred passengers on the boat at the time including a number of Plainfielders. Several of them were thrown to the deck, but no one was hurt. Several planks of the bridge were torn up and a watering cart was upset, but no other damage was done. The boat was not damaged.

Must Keep Out of the Orchard.

The police have promised to make things lively for those who invade the orchard and garden of Halstead Compton, of West Front street, in the future. It has been the custom, so they state, of some of the employes of the Pond Tool Works to visit the above-named orchard at the noon hour. The police have determined to break up this practice, and it will go hard with the offenders if they are caught.

Captivated With This Section.

Manager Hopkins, of Wanamaker's tapestry department in the Philadelphia store, has just completed a handsome new summer residence on the second mountain, northwest from here, and the family have just taken up their residence there. Mr. Hopkins says he is perfectly captivated with the climate and scenery in and about Plainfield, and has located on the mountain as his permanent summer abiding place.

To Receive Miss Willard.

New Jersey Woman's Christian Temperance unions are preparing to give Miss Francis E. Willard, the World's white ribboner, a reception in Jersey City upon her arrival in this country from abroad. Miss Willard is expected to sail for New York early in October and the reception is arranged for October 13. Miss Willard comes to preside over the National convention at St. Louis in November.

Great Vaudeville Team.

George Thatcher, the merry minstrel man who lives in this city, has joined Ed. Marble, also well known here, and will appear in a new vaudeville act in theatres throughout the country. Mr. Marble is a dramatist of renown and between he and Mr. Thatcher will originate an act that will doubtless make a hit in the vaudeville world.

Plainfield Carpenters Laid Off.

Out of the two dozen or more carpenters from this city who have been employed on the new Garwood supply factory, at Garwood, all but three were laid off last night. Hedden & Sons, the Newark contractors, have about completed their contract, and the extra force of men were no longer needed.

—The Baptist Boys Brigade expect to commence drilling very soon under the direction of L. H. Bigelow, Jr.

OBJECTED TO HIS HOUSE

SO THE NEIGHBORS LEAGUED TOGETHER TO DRIVE CRONIN OUT.

They Destroyed His Garden, Stoned His House and Finally One of Them Assaulted His Wife—He Goes to Court.

Persecuted by his neighbors, while his wife was assaulted by one of them, John Cronin, of Dunellen, was at last driven to appeal to the borough authorities for protection.

John Cronin is the coachman employed by R. F. M. Chase, of Somerset street, and about two years ago he purchased a little plot of land from the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company at Dunellen, not far from the railroad. On this land he built a house. It was not a palatious one, as it was only by hard work that Cronin could lay by any money. The house was smaller and cheaper than the others in the neighborhood and that caused the trouble.

Some of his neighbors did not like either Cronin or his house, and were not afraid to express their opinions. Their children took up the feud and Cronin's garden suffered accordingly. In the evening they sometimes threw stones, large and small, at Cronin's house.

One evening, the first of this week, a young man names James Kelly visited the Cronin home. According to Cronin's story, Kelly stood on the front of the house and yelled with taunts and jeers to bring Cronin out. Then he went into the yard. But Cronin came to the door and according to her statement Kelly rushed at her, kicked, punched and beat her until she could hardly stand. Constable Warden was going by at the time and was called in. He led Kelly away and told him to go home.

The next day Mr. and Mrs. Cronin appeared before Squire Luckey, justice of the peace, and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Kelly. The warrant was served and Kelly was brought before the justice yesterday. He was held in $200 bail to appear before the grand jury at the next term of court. Mr. Cronin has retained City Judge DeMeza to look after his interests.

WALKED FOR A CAKE.

Grace and Ease Personified at the Colored Ball.

With all the grace and dignity possible the waiters of the Revere House blossomed forth in Central Hall last Thursday, with their many friends, and enjoyed one of their celebrated cake walks and dances. Previous to the dancing, however, an excellent entertainment was given. The first number was a banjo and guitar duet by R. Hopkins and William Wilson, followed with a selection by the Blackville quartette, composed of William Betts, William Wilson, C. Nelson and John Taylor. A soprano solo "The Picture of '84," Mrs. R. Hopkins, a solo, "The Tramp Song," by William Betts, John Taylor and S. Conway in a comic song and dance, Wm. Wilson sang and dance entitled "Dancing in the Moonlight." The last number was a selection by the quartette. The floor was then cleared and prepared for the grand cake walk. All the guests present entered the walk but only two could win and they happened to be Mrs. Georgia Heywood and Wm. Wilson. The committee, James Potter, Arthur Chambers, B. F. Bowden, J. McCray, R. Hopkins, G. H. Henderson, and Geo. Anderson, very gracefully awarded the winners a handsome cake, which, of course, was taken by Mrs. Heywood.

The Yale Prize.

Every year the Yale Club of this city put up a prize of $25 in gold to go to the Plainfield boy passing the entrance examinations into Yale that year with the highest average. This year the prize will probably have to be divided, unless some unexpected candidate turns up at the final examinations. Appended William Tracy, of West Eighth street, and William M. McCutchen, of Rockview terrace, are tie for the honor.

Describing the Sewage Beds.

This week's issue of the Engineering News, of which Councilman George H. Frost is business manager, devotes five pages to a detailed description of the sewerage and sewage system of this city. The article is written by Andrew J. Gavel, the constructing engineer, and is liberally illustrated with diagrams and pictures showing the construction of the system and how it works.

A Chinaman Gets Naturalized.

Joe Get, who is the proprietor of the Chinese laundry on Division street, Somerville, applied to County Clerk Somers on Tuesday for naturalization papers. He took out his first papers, and claims that he is entitled to his second papers, as he has been in the country twelve years. He says he can pendnce the proof. He wants to vote for McKinley and Hobart.

Miss Alice Callahan, of 457 Woodland avenue, and Miss Lizzie Kepler, of South avenue, have passed their examinations at Trenton successfully and have entered the Normal School for a course from two to three years.

HOW THEY VIEW IT

Democrats in Washington Pleased with Bryan's Letter.

OTHERS SURPRISED AT ITS SHORTNESS

His Managers Consider It a Strong Document, as It Covers Only the Main Questions Now Before the American People and Does Not Go Over Old Ground.

Washington, Sept. 10.—William J. Bryan's letter of acceptance was read with much interest at the different political headquarters here, and among all but the democratic leaders its shortness was a surprise. Mr. Bryan's declaration, often before embodied in his speeches, that he would not accept a second nomination if elected is considered by democrats as one of the strong points. Regarding this he says: "So deeply am I impressed with the magnitude of the power vested by the constitution in the chief executive of the nation, and with the enormous influence he can wield for the benefit or injury of the people, that I wish to enter the office, if elected, free from any personal desire, except the desire to prove worthy of the confidence of my country." Human judgment is fallible enough when unbiased by selfish considerations, and in order that I may not be tempted to use the patronage of an office to advance any personal ambition I hereby renounce, with all the emphasis which words can express, my fixed determination not, under any circumstances, to be a candidate for re-election in case this campaign results in my election."

Considered a Strong Document.

At democratic headquarters the letter is considered extremely strong for two reasons, in short and covers only the main points at issue, and in the present flood of political literature can be more easily digested than if it had gone into points already thoroughly covered by Mr. Bryan in his speech of acceptance and numerous addresses. That this was his intention is made clear by the following paragraph taken from the introduction of his letter, the main points of this document then following: "Leaving discussed portions of the platform at the time of its adoption, and again when your letter of notification was formally delivered, it will not be necessary at this time to touch upon all the planks which embrace the party's declarations. Honest differences of opinion have ever existed and ever will exist as to the most effective means of securing domestic tranquility, but no citizen fails to recognize at all times under all circumstances the absolute necessity for the prompt and vigorous enforcement of law and the preservation of the public peace. In a government like ours law is but the crystallization of the will of the people; without it the citizen is neither secure in the enjoyment of life and liberty, nor protected in the pursuit of happiness. Without obedience to law, government is impossible. The democratic party is pledged to defend the constitution and enforce the laws of the United States, and it is also pledged to protect and defend the dual scheme of government instituted by the fathers and for the republic. The name United States was happily chosen. It combines the idea of national strength with the idea of local self-government, and suggests an 'indissoluble union of indestructible states.' Wise were the forefathers, fearing the tendency toward centralization, as well as the dangers of disintegration, guarded against both, and national safety, as well as domestic security, is to be found in the careful observance of the conditions which they impose. It will be noticed that, while the United States guarantees to every state a republican form of government, and is empowered to protect such state against invasion, it is not authorized to interfere in the domestic affairs of any state except upon application of the legislature of the state or upon the application of the executive when the legislature cannot be convened. This provision was wisely framed to secure to the people of the state, acting through their legally chosen representatives are, because of their more intimate acquaintance with local conditions, better qualified than the president to judge of the necessity for federal assistance. Those who framed our constitution wisely determined to make as broad an application of the principles of local self-government to circumstances would permit and we cannot dispute the correctness of the position taken by the people themselves.

No Excuse for Bond Issues.

"An increase in the bonded debt of the United States at this time is entirely without excuse. The issue of interest-bearing bonds within the last few years has been defended on the ground that they were necessary to secure gold with which to redeem United States notes and treasury notes; but this necessity has been in many rather than real. Instead of exercising the legal right vested in the United States to redeem its bonds in either gold or silver, the executive branch of the government has followed a precedent established by a former administration and surrendered the option to the holder of the obligations. This administrative policy leaves the government at the mercy of those who find a pecuniary profit in bond issues. The fact that the dealers in money securities have been able to deplete or protect the treasury according to their changing whims, shows how dangerous it is to permit them to exercise a controlling influence over the treasury department. The government of the United States, when administered in the interest of all the people, is able to establish and maintain its own financial policy, not only without the aid of any syndicates, but in spite of any opposition which the syndicates may exert. To assert that the government is dependent upon the assistance or good will of a portion of the people other than a constitutional majority, is to assert that we have a government in form, but without vital force.

National Bank Currency.

The position taken by the platform against the issue of paper money by the national banks is supported by the highest democratic authority, as well as demanded by the interests of the people. The present attempt of the national banks to force the retirement of United States notes and treasury notes, in order to secure a basis for a larger issue of their own notes, illustrates the danger which arises from permitting them to issue their paper as a circulating medium. The national bank note being redeemable in lawful money, is never been better than the United States note, which stands behind it, and yet the banks persistently demand that the United States notes, which draw no interest, shall give place to interest-bearing bonds, so that the banks may collect the interest which the people now save. To empower national banks to issue circulating notes is to grant a valuable privilege to a favored class, surrender to private corporations the control over the volume of our circulating money, and build up a class which will claim a vested interest in the national financial policy. The United States notes, commonly known as greenbacks, being redeemable in either gold or silver at the option of the government and not at the option of the holder, are safer and cheaper for the people than national bank notes based upon interest-bearing bonds.

The Monroe Doctrine.

A dignified but firm maintenance of the foreign policy first set forth by President Monroe and reiterated by the presidents who have succeeded him, instead of arousing hostility abroad, is the best guarantee of amicable relations with other nations. It is better for all concerned that the United States should resist any extension of European authority in the western hemisphere rather than invite the continual irritation which would necessarily result from any attempt *to increase the influence of monarchi*cal institutions over that portion of the American which has been dedicated to republican government.

Pensions.

No nation can afford to be unjust to its defenders. The care of those who have suffered in the military and naval service of the country is a sacred debt. A nation like the United States, relies upon volunteer service rather than upon a large standing army adds to its own security when it makes generous provision for those who have risked their lives in its defense and for those who are dependant upon them.

Injunctions.

The recent abuses which have grown out of injunction proceedings have been so emphatically condemned by public opinion that the senate bill providing for trial by jury in certain contempt cases will meet with general approval.

Trusts.

The democratic party is opposed to trusts. It would be recreant to its duty to the people of the country if it recognized either the moral or the legal right of these great aggregations of wealth to stifle competition, bankrupt rivals and then prey upon society. Corporations are creatures of the law, and they must not be permitted to pass from under the control of the power which created them; they are permitted to exist upon the theory that they advance the public weal, and they must not be allowed to use their powers for the public injury."

The Production of Wealth.

Labor creates capital. Until wealth is produced by the application of brain and muscle to the resources of this country there is nothing to divide among the non-producing classes of society. Since the producers of wealth create the nation's prosperity in times of peace and defend the nation's flag in time of peril, their interests ought at all times to be considered by those who stand in official positions. The democratic party has ever found its voting strength among those who by a proper use may be known as the common people, and it pledges itself to propose and enact such legislation as is necessary to protect the masses in the free exercise of every political right and in the enjoyment of their just share of the rewards of their labor.

Arbitration.

"I desire to give special emphasis to the plank which recommends such legislation as is necessary to secure the arbitration of differences between employers engaged in interstate commerce and their employes. Arbitration is not a new idea—it is simply an extension of the court of justice. The laboring men of the country have expressed a desire for arbitration, and the railroads cannot reasonably object to the decision rendered by an impartial tribunal. Society has an interest even greater than the interest of employer or employe and has a right to protect itself by courts of arbitration against the growing inconvenience and embarrassments occasioned by disputes between those who own the great arteries of commerce on the one hand and the laborers who operate them upon the other.

Immigration.

"While the democratic party welcomes to the country those who come with love for our institutions and with determination and ability to contribute to the prosperity of our nation, it is opposed to the dumping of criminal classes upon our shores and to the importation of either pauper or contract labor to compete with American labor.

Railroads and Civil Service.

"The right of the United States government to regulate interstate commerce cannot be questioned, and the necessity for the vigorous exercise of that right is becoming more and more imperative. The government cannot afford to discriminate between its debtors and must therefore prosecute its legal claims against the Pacific railroads. Such a policy is necessary for the protection of the rights of the patrons, as well as for the interests of the government. That the American people are not in favor of life tenure in the civil service is evident from the fact that they, as a rule, make free quent changes in their official representatives when those representatives are chosen by ballot. A fixed term in appointive office, except where the federal constitution now provides otherwise, would open the public service to a larger number of citizens without impairing its efficiency.

The Tariff.

"It is not necessary to discuss the tariff question at this time. Whatever may be the individual views of citizens as to the relative merits of protection and tariff reform, most people believe that until the money question is fully and finally settled the American people will not consent to the consideration of any other important question.

taxation presents a problem which is not likely to be presented, and a postponement of definite action upon it involves no sacrifice of personal opinion or political principles; but the crisis presented by financial conditions cannot be postponed. Tremendous interests are at stake, action taken by the United States on the money question and delay is impossible. The people of this nation, sitting as a high court, must render judgment in the cause which greed is prose*cuting against humanity. The decision* which they give here and inspiration to those who toil, or 'shut the doors of mercy on mankind.' In the presence of this overshadowing issue, differences of opinion upon minor questions must be laid aside in order that there may be united action among those who are determined that progress toward a universal gold standard shall be stayed and the gold and sil*ver standard of the constitution re*stored.

W. J. BRYAN."

BOURKE COCKRAN DECLINES.

His Reasons for Refusing a Republican Nomination for Congress.

New York, Sept. 10.—The republicans of the Twelfth congressional district a few days ago sent a letter to Bourke Cockran, asking him if the republican nomination for congress. To this Mr. Cockran has just replied, declining the offer. He said that while he was deeply sensible of the compliment, and that while the assault led by Mr. Bryan on American honor and industry are fraught with such danger to the country that he would vote for Major McKinley as the most effective means to prevent its success, he could not, however, accept any nomination to an office howsoever exalted for *which he would be indebted to the po*litical organization whose candidate he was compelled to support by the exigencies of an unfortunate peril, but to whose principles he was opposed.

Funeral of Former Senator Payne

Cleveland, O., Sept. 10.—The funeral of Henry B. Payne, former United States senator and father-in-law of William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, who died yesterday at his home on Euclid avenue, will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Both of Mrs. Payne and a daughter, Mrs. W. C. Whitney, occurred only a few years ago. The only surviving children are *Col. O. H. Payne and Mrs. C. W. Bing*ham, both of New York city.

South Carolina Election Returns.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 10.—The back-woods precincts now to hand have given Earle's lead. Earle now has 35,942, Evans 25,576; Earle's majority is 10,366 out of this vote. Allowing a total vote of 85,000, and giving Evans the improbable amount of two-thirds of the remaining 17,000, and the majority of Earle a final majority of 2,500 votes. Earle's majority will be at the lowest estimate about 5,000.

Bland Declines the Nomination.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Gen. John C. Black, who is United States district attorney in Chicago, has sent his expected letter to the Illinois committee of the national free-coinage party, declining the nomination for governor, which was given him, August 25.

New Jersey Democrats.

Trenton, Sept. 10.—The democratic state convention yesterday afternoon selected presidential electors and instructed them to cast their ballots for Bryan and Sewall. Resolutions indorsing the Chicago platform and ticket were adopted.

Baldwin Not Asked to Resign.

Washington, Sept. 10.—It is emphatically denied at the treasury department that a request has been made on Auditor Baldwin for his resignation because of his participation in the free silver agitation.

Nominated on the 1,000th Ballot.

Louisville, Sept. 10.—The fourth district free silver democratic congressional convention at Elizabethtown has nominated D. H. Smith, of La Rue county, for congress on the 1,000th ballot.

Republican League Clubs.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 10.—The Republican League clubs convention elected Isador Sobel of Erie president by acclamation; Charles F. Harris of Pittsburg secretary, and M. B. Young of Philadelphia treasurer.

AS TO THE NAME BILL.

Every Boy Bearing It Should Be Proud of the Title.

There is something cordial and frank about the name of Bill, says the Chicago Record. It is a strong and sterling old name, which goes on multiplying itself in a most meritorious manner. A large proportion of the men who bear it are good men, and the reason is simple. Most of the "William's" are named for some other Williams. It is not assumed that it is possible for any mother to choose that rough old cognomen for her pretty baby unless she does it to honor some particular person. Other things being equal, she would call him Clifford or Adelbert or Reginald. But she remembers Uncle Bill Fairsworth, who was the best and fairest man in White Oak precinct when she was a girl, and so she calls the child for him. Or the father recalls to mind a good, hearty and joyous character of earlier days—some friendly Bill of other times —a righteous man and a good citizen, and he names the boy which is pest to his heart, his man-child. Wherever you find a man named William, and you will find many of them, you will please remember he was so called because there was a respectable and upright William back of each of them, and that each William was named for a further William of goodly sort.

It does not pay to belittle the common, plain name of Bill. Every male bearing that name represents some person, perhaps many women, and he has self disgrace and discredit the name then his punishment will be that no Bills will be called in his honor.

MOURNING GARB RENTED.

Novel Business Built Up by an Enterprising Dealer in Old Clothes.

Persons who are forced to undergo a sudden change of clothing because of the death of relatives, and who haven't the ready money to buy outright an entire outfit of black for brief use, have found a welcome assistance in their embarrassment in a man whose business is obscure, comparatively, and of recent origin, but who has an active trade.

The office of this man has a funereal aspect, filled as it is with heaps of somber garments, but its proprietor is anything but grave. He was, until lately, a dealer in old clothes, and was dismayed at the amount of competition. Everybody seemed to him to be dealing in that commodity.

A friend, short of cash, whose father died, borrowed a mourning outfit from him one day, paying a small sum for the loan. This transaction suggested to the dealer the idea of hiring out mourning dress as a business. He tried it, and soon found his peculiar trade well patronized.

He began to read death notices in the newspapers, and to send his agents to visit those whom he considered were not in extra good circumstances. Seven agents in all now belong to the corps of commissions." Each has a regular circuit of streets marked out for his canvass.

LEGAL ADVICE FREE.

Given to a Lawyer by Judge Sage in Self-Defense.

Here is a story told by a bright young Cincinnati lawyer on one of his older and less scintillating friends, says the Cincinnati Times-Star:

The older attorney was pleading a case before Judge Sage, and had talked incessantly for two hours. He had gone over and over the ground and up into the air and down below the surface of the question until the court felt it nothing was left for him to say. He had talked and talked until most of the listeners were either asleep or wished they were, and those who were still awake were trying to "put their minds to rise in their might and throw chairs and things at him, when suddenly and unexpectedly the long-winded man stopped short and coughed.

"I should like a glass of water," said he to the court, and the man did disappeared to get it for him.

For a moment there was a long-drawn sigh from the listeners, and then Judge Sage leaned forward to the young lawyer who had been story, and whispered:

"Why don't you tell your friend, Alfred, that it is against the law to run a windmill with water?"

Take the First Bank.

A certain Alabama register in chancery takes first rank as a lover of absolute justice. Recently in stating an account he instead of finding evidenced showed that a large quantity of corn bargained to plaintiff had been lost by the defendant's agent, whose duty it was to deliver it to plaintiff, the register announced his decision as follows: "Gentlemen, I have no hesitation in evidence are on the side of the plaintiff, I think it would be unjust that the defendant should lose all this corn. I, therefore, charge the plaintiff with the corn."

Railroad Speed in Germany.

Germany has made some bold experiments on railroad speed on the line between Berlin and Gorlitz. The best performance was 65¾ miles, which was 12 miles better than the highest speed of the fastest German train, the Berlin-Hamburg lightning express, which does *177½ miles in 2½ hours. Ordinary Ger*man express trains make 48¾ miles an hour.

Scotch and English Farmers.

Scotch farmers who have settled in the east of England are not looked on with favor, because their wives and daughters milk cows, take it to the village, feed calves and do other work." Scotch farmers succeed thereabouts, while English farmers do not.

HOBART'S LETTER

Accepting the Republican Vice-Presidential Nomination.

IMPORTANCE OF THE MONEY QUESTION

Bimetallic Currency as We Now Have Approved by the Republicans—A Standard and a Currency Vastly Different—Dishonest Original Bond Holders—A Change in Tariff Law.

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 10.—Garrett A. Hobart's letter accepting the republican vice-presidential nomination is made public to-day. The main points follow:

Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks and others of the notification committee of the republican national convention:

Gentlemen—I have already, in accepting the nomination of the office of the vice-presidency tendered me by the national republican convention, expressed my approval of the platform adopted by that body as the proper basis of doctrine. In accordance with accepted usage I beg now to supplement that brief statement of my views, by some additional reflections upon the questions which are to be before the American people.

The Money Question.

The platform declarations in reference to the money question express the views of the substantial majority of the republican party as to this supremely important subject. We stand unqualifiedly for honesty in finance, and the permanent adjustment of our monetary system, in the multifarious activities of trade and commerce, to the existing gold standard of value. We hold that every dollar of currency issued by the United States, whether of gold, silver or paper, must be worth a dollar in gold, whether in the pocket of the man who toils for his daily bread, in the savings bank in which he holds his deposits, or in the exchanges of the world. The money standard of a great nation should be as fixed and permanent as the nation itself. To secure and retain the best should be the desire of every right-minded citizen. The dollar of our country, whether of gold or silver, should be of the full value of one hundred cents, and by so much as any dollar is worth less than this is the market, by precisely that sum will some one be defrauded.

Not Opposed to the Use of Silver.

The necessity of a certain and fixed money value between nations as well as individuals grows with the growth of the interchanges of commodities, the trade and business relationships which have arisen among the peoples of the world, with the enlargement of human wants and the broadening of human intercourse. This necessity has made gold the final standard of all enlightened nations. Other metals, including silver, have a recognized commercial value, and silver, especially, has a potential use for small coinage and ordinary coinage. In view of a sedulous effort by the advocates of free coinage to create a contrary impression, it cannot be too strongly emphasized that the republican party in its platform affirms the value in silver, and favors the largest possible use of this metal as actual money that can be maintained with safety. Not only this, it will not antagonize, but will gladly assist in securing a double standard whenever it can be secured by agreement and co-operation among the nations. The bimetallic currency, involving the free use of silver, which we now have, is cordially approved by republicans. But a standard and a currency are vastly different things.

Must Cease Juggling.

If we are to continue to hold our place among the great commercial nations we must cease juggling with the question and with the honesty of purpose clear to the world. No room should be left for misconception as to the meaning of the language used in the bonds of the government not yet matured. It should not be possible for any party or individual to raise a question as to the purpose of the country to pay all its obligations in the best form of money recognized by the commercial world. It is desirable that all bonds shall make it known at once and authoritatively that an "honest dollar" means any dollar equivalent to a gold dollar of the present standard of weight and fineness.

Freed Users of All Poisons.

The free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 is a policy which no nation has ever before proposed, and it is not to-day permitted in any mint in the world—not even in Mexico. It is purposed that the coinage shall be limited to absolutely fatiliess ratio, fixed with no reference to intrinsic value or pledge of ultimate redemption. With silver at its present price of less than seventy cents per ounce in the market, such a policy means an immediate profit to the seller of silver for which there is no return now or hereafter to the people or the government. Any attempt on the part of the government to create by its fiat money or fictitious value would dishonor us in the eyes of other peoples and bring infinite reproach upon the national character. The business and financial consequences of such an act would be world-wide. Such a free coinage legislation, if ever consummated, would discriminate against every producer of wheat, cotton, corn or rye—who would in justice be equally entitled with the silver owner, to sell his products to the United States treasury at a profit fixed by the government—and against all producers of iron, steel, zinc or copper, who might properly claim to have their metals made into current coin. It would, as well, be a fraud upon all persons forced to accept a currency thus stimulated and at the same time degraded. In every respect the proposed policy is partial and one-sided.

[The letter then at some length points out a number of great interests that would suffer and the calamity that would follow if the Chicago platform was permitted to be carried out.]

Current Economic Problems Questions.

The proposition for free and unlimited silver coinage, carried to its logical conclusion, and but one is possible, means, as before intimated, legislative warrant for the repudiation of all existing indebtedness, public and private, at the ratio of nearly 53 per cent. of the face of all such indebtedness. It demands an unlimited volume of fiat currency, irredeemable, and therefore without any standard value, in the markets of the world. Every consideration of public interest and public honor demands that this proposition should be rejected by the American people. This country cannot afford to give the sanction to wholesale repudiation. We must hold fast to its integrity. It must still encourage thrift in all proper ways. It must not only educate its children to honor and respect the flag, but it should teach them fidelity to the obligations of personal and national honor as well. Both these great principles should hereafter be taught in the common schools of the land, and the lessons impressed upon those who are the rulers of to-day and who are soon to become the inheritors of sovereign power in this republic, that it is neither wise, patriotic nor safe to make political platforms the mediums of assaults upon the foundation of the society and upon civilization itself.

Serious Peril.

But vastly more than the mere assertion of a purpose to reconstruct the national currency is suggested by the Chicago platform. It assumes, in fact, the form of a revolutionary propaganda. It embodies a menace of national disintegration and destruction. This spirit manifested itself in a deliberate proposition to repudiate the plighted public faith, to impair the sacred obligation of private contracts, to cripple the credit of the nation by stripping the government of the power to borrow money as the urgent exigencies of the treasury may require, and, in a word, to overthrow all the foundations of financial and industrial stability. Nor is this all. Not content with a proposition to thus disbench the currency and to unsettle all conditions of trade and commerce, the party responsible for this platform has invaded the competency of the government to protect the lives and property of its citizens against internal disorder and violence. It assails the judicial movements set on foot for the condition for the defense of individual rights and the public welfare, and it even threatens to destroy the integrity and independence of the supreme court, which has been considered the last refuge of the citizen against every form of outrage and injustice. In the face of the serious peril which these propositions embody, it would seem that there could be but one sentiment among right-thinking citizens as to the duty of the hour. All men, of whatever party, who believe in law, and have some regard for the sacredness of individual and institutional rights, must unite in defense of the endangered interests of the nation.

Tariff and Protection.

Our financial and business condition is at this moment one of almost unprecedented depression. Our great industrial system is seriously deranged. Production in many important branches of manufacture has altogether ceased. Capital is without remunerative employment. Labor is idle. The revenues of the government are insufficient to meet its ordinary and necessary expenses. These conditions are not the result of accident. They are the outcome of a mistaken economic policy deliberately enacted into law by the democratic congress, and would not involve any violent disturbance of our existing commercial system to enact necessary tariff modifications along the lines of experience. In such condition of affairs as that in which it is idle to argue against the necessity of some sort of a change in our fiscal laws. Our party holds that by a wise adjustment of the tariff, conceived in moderation and with a view to the needs of the country and all needed revenue, and it declares that in the event of its restoration to power it will seek to accomplish that result. It holds, too, that it is the duty of the government to protect and encourage in all practicable ways the development of domestic industries, the elevation of home labor, and the enlargement of the prosperity of the people. It does not favor any form of legislation which looks to the end that the government the power to do what the people ought to do for themselves, but it believes that it is both wise and patriotic to discriminate in favor of our own citizens and enterprises in the utilizations, under the best attainable conditions, of our own capital and our own available skill and industry.

Appeal for Patriotism.

My sincere conviction is that my countrymen will prove wise enough to understand the issues that confront them, and patriotic enough to apply safe and sure remedies for the evils that oppress us. They will not, I am confident, be misled by the false lights of the promises of a party which, under desperate and perverted leadership has so recently dishonored its solemn pledges, which has repudiated the principles and policies which have given it a historic rank, and the success of which, as now constituted, would endanger at home private security and the public safety, and disastrously affect abroad both our credit and good name. And I am confident among those who will decline to follow where the new democracy leads will be thousands *of men, democrats aforetime and demo*crats to-day, who count country more than party, and who will be even by indirection to contribute to results so disastrous to our most sacred interests.

GARRET A. HOBART.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Fred Fowler, of Oak Tree, has purchased a new wheel.

Wm. Layton, of Oak Tree, is riding a new Wilhelm wheel.

The annual election of officers for the Crescent Wheelmen will be held this evening.

The posters for the Crescent Wheelmen's national circuit meet on Sept. 26th, are out, and are quite attractive in appearance.

"Manager" Wm. Sweeney, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, has been confined at home with illness for several days.

Mrs. Daniel Ginna, of Watchung avenue, is the latest purchaser of a Waverley wheel from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

E. A. Sprowl, of Rockview terrace, started last Friday night on a bicycle trip to the Thousand Islands and Canada. He expects to be absent about two weeks.

The Citizens' Handicap, a 10-mile road race, will be held on the Prospect Park Boulevard, Brooklyn, Sept. 30th. J. Sorensen, of this city, is among the riders entered.

Miss Lillian Trexell, of Madison, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Miller, of West Fourth street, for the past two weeks, is perfectly captivated with Plainfield's well kept streets. She is a lady who has travelled extensively on the bicycle, and she evidently knows good roads when she sees them. Miss Trexell was accompanied home on her trip by Walter S. Arthur and A. P. Miller.

"Bocap's Hill" so often quoted in the city papers as being a dangerous spot for pedestrians, is the same as ever. It matters not whether in dry or wet weather, certain bicyclists deem it their privilege to ride on the side walk. There is little or no police protection in this particular part of the city, especially at night, and probably on this account the bicyclists take to the walk instead of the macadamized road. Some of them, too, ride on the walk without a light, and this makes it more dangerous for foot passengers. Then again the bicyclist stands less chance for arrest, than as though he were in the middle of the street.

Roselle is planning for a big coasting contest for next Saturday, under the auspices of the Roselle Athletic Club. It is called the first annual bicycle coasting championship of Union County but why it should be called so it is rather hard to see. At any rate the Roselle cyclists expect to make a big thing of it and have offered a number of prizes. There will be first, second and third prizes for distance open to all. Gold medals are offered as the first two prizes and a silver medal as the third. There will also be a special gold medal to the lady rider making the best record for distance. The entrance fee for each attempt will be twenty-five cents, to be made at the course. There will also be prizes for manufacturers of a first for wheel and a first for tires with a prize in each case of a gold medallion. The manufacturers entrance fee will be five dollars. Plainfield will probably be represented by at least one contestant and it is expected that quite a party will go down from this city.

One of the races at the meet of the Quill Club Wheelmen of America at Manhattan Beach, to be held on September 18th and 19th, which is attracting unusual attention from the amateurs of this section, is the five mile Metropolitan District Championship, for the handsome and valuable cup offered by the "American Wheelman." This race is open to amateurs residing within fifty miles of the "American Wheelman" office, and ever since it was offered at the Good Roads Tournament, held at Asbury Park three years ago, it has been contested for most viciously by the Metropolitan District clubs. Monte Scott, then of the Crescent Wheelmen of this city, was the first winner of this cup, and at the time he won it he broke the world's record for four and five miles. Last year the New Jersey Athletic Club won it through W. C. Roome, and this year the interest is keener than ever between the Liberty Wheelmen, Riverside Wheelmen, Harlem Wheelmen and the Kings County Wheelmen. Each of these clubs have their best men in training, and they expect to make the race a notable one, as it usually is.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

A batch of five local fishermen spent yesterday at New Market. They caught a number of good-sized sunfish and five larger ones of the sucker variety.

George Squiers, Albert De Nise and George Deal, of the borough, went over the mountains hunting for squirrels a day or two ago. On the return George Squires discovered a bald-headed eagle, and quickly brought him down with his gun. The bird, which measures five feet and eleven inches from tip to tip, will be mounted by John Goff, president of the New Jersey Game and Fish Protective Society, and will be an ornament to the decorations in the society's rooms.

AROUND THE BASES.

"Little Billee" Keeler, of the Baltimores, is second in the batting average of the National League with a percentage of 386.

Frank Bonner, another Crescent graduate, whose career is watched by the followers of the game, is now captain of the Wilkesbarre team.

The baseball cranks, who follow the league games, have missed Willie Keeler's name from the scores of the Baltimore's games. He is laid up with a badly sprained wrist.

Captain MacLaughlin, of the Y. M. C. A's, was caught napping on Saturday with a weaker team than usual, and the P. A. C's took him into "Camp." There is some good material among the youngsters that could be developed into strong players.

Eddie Daly, the popular third baseman of the old Crescents, who has been playing ball with the Newark club this season, was run over on Forty second street, New York, one day last week and very seriously injured. It is feared he may lose an arm.

"Newark takes the pennant and the championship of the Atlantic Baseball League," announced President "Sam" Crane before 5,000 people on the Shooting Park grounds Sunday afternoon after the Athletics had been beaten two straight games by the Newarks. The defeat of Hartford by Paterson clinched the championship.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Ellis Campbell has purchased the trotter "Coriell Girl" from William Coriell, of Dunellen.

Charles C. Brower has shipped the trotter "Highland Boy" from Waverly to Lyndhurst, L. I., where he will enter the races.

Thos. Brantingham's "Myrtle Twig" and James Arkell's "Highland Boy" are entered in the 2:25 class trotting match at the Trenton Inter-State Fair.

Thomas Brantingham's "Myrtle Twig" defeated J. W. Johnson's "St. Albans" 1st Saturday afternoon at the Gentlemen's Driving Park in three straight heats. The times were 2:27, 2:28 and 2:26¼.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The sports at the outing of the Y. M. C. A. committeemen will take place in one of A. D. Thompson's fields near the terminus of the street railway on West Seventh street, Saturday next, from 3 to 6 p. m.

A Serious Blockade Near Rahway.

The "Empire" freight train of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, bound west, and running over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, was wrecked at Perth Amboy junction, one mile west of Rahway, shortly before midnight last night. The train was going at a fair rate of speed and was making a crossing. Half of the train went over the switch all right, but a car in the centre jumped a "frog" between tracks 3 and 4. Five cars were thrown from the track, blocking the four tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Miss Mabelle Phillips, of Madison avenue, went to Wellesley College today where she will take the regular course.

Charles Masters, residence unknown, who has been ill at the hospital for some time under treatment, was discharged today completely cured.

Mrs. C. B. Matthews and Miss Virginia Hegeman, of Washington Park, are expected home tomorrow from Sunbury, Pa., where they have been visiting.

James E. Martine will speak at Allentown, Pa., this evening, and it is probable that he will speak elsewhere in Pennsylvania during the campaign.

—The Misses Marsh, of Madison avenue, will resume instruction on the piano tomorrow, the 17th. Whenever possible they use the Virgil Practice Clavier in teaching, considering it an invaluable aid to the piano student.

The Mikado's American Tour.

We learn on excellent authority that the mikado contemplates a tour through the United States and Europe at some future time. If he is able to carry out this plan he will be the first Japanese emperor who has ever been allowed to leave his dominions. It seems, however, that there are great difficulties in the way, the old fanatical Japanese party objecting strongly to so remarkable an innovation. The Turkish fanatics did the same thing when Abdul Aziz announced his intention of paying a visit to Paris and London. They were unable to prevent it, and that luckless sovereign was the first Turkish sovereign whoever crossed the frontiers of his empire, except as a conqueror. The mikado is a highly educated man, who speaks several European languages and his visit, should it ever take place, will be an event of great interest.—London Chronicle.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

REPORTS ON THE PROGRESS OF W. C. T. U. WORK IN THIS CITY.

Reports Show That the Increase in Attendance at Sunday-school Over Last Year is Large—New Superintendents.

The first business to be considered at the afternoon session of the W. C. T. U. annual meeting, held Monday, was the report of the Executive Committee. It contained the result of the election for superintendent's of the various departments. Those elected are: Evangelistic, Mrs. Ramsey Blair; Sunday-school, Mrs. M. Winter; Parlor meetings, Mrs. M. I. Cooley; Flower mission, Mrs. Thomas Minford; German, Mrs. Jacob Voehl; Purity, Mrs. Powell; Soldier and Sailor, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; Press Literature, Mrs. Lagar; Franchise and Christian Citizenship, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson; Loyal Temperance Legion, Miss Beekman; Mother's Meetings, Mrs. M. Winter; Scientific Temperance Instruction, Miss E. Niles.

The following vice-presidents were added to those chosen at the morning session: Mount Olive Baptist, Miss Georgia Wilson; Trinity Reformed, Mrs. Dunlap; East Third Street Mission, Miss Florence Dodge. At this time Miss Maire read extracts from letters received from her sister, Miss Rachael Maire, who is now laboring as a missionary in Africa. The letters were of intense interest to those present who know Miss Maire. The reports of the superintendents were then received. All the superintendents were not present, but those who were gave helpful reports. Mrs. Winter, for the Sunday-school department, reported that last year there was 3,316 scholars attending the Sunday-schools in the city and this year there are 4,412. Among them there are 900 scholars pledged to temperance. Mrs. De-Forest, for the flower department, presented a report showing that flowers had been taken to the hospital and to the homes of sick persons, and in fact the distribution of flowers generously had caused much happiness. Mrs. Krom for the literature department, stated that the committee had distributed 6,639 pages of literature during the year, 220 pages of which were temperance and religious. There had also been distributed 400 copies of the Young Crusader.

Fifteen new subscribers had been secured for the Union Signal and five new subscribers for the New Jersey Gazette. The Union Signal, Young Crusader, New Jersey Gazette, Anti-Tobacco Gem has been kept on file at the Public Library, and Y. M. C. A., and the Anti-Tobacco Gem and School Physiology has been on file at the public school library. Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, for the soldier and sailor work, reported that much good had been accomplished in that department.

During the year meetings had been held for the G. A. R. and S. of V., at which time Rev. G. E. Herring, Dr. Lewis and Rev. L. E. Livermore had made excellent addresses. The committee also did much in sending useful articles to the life savers at Sea Bright. Their work was being rewarded and the committee felt encouraged to go forward with renewed zeal and energy.

During the year the Union has held three public meetings which were addressed by Arthur Krom, Miss Elizabeth N. Yates and Miss K. Loundun, and each service was helpful. At this time the delegates to the county convention were elected as follows: Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. J. H. French; alternates, Mrs. S. Yerkes, and Mrs. Honeyman. During the afternoon an experience and praise meeting was held and several experience dollars were received. The last number on the programme was a parliamentary drill which was conducted by the county president, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson. It proved to be remarkably helpful to those who are not so well up in parliamentary matters.

The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and a prayer by Mrs. Tomlinson.

—A. B. Cosey, of Jersey City, secretary of the National Colored Committee, will be in town next Wednesday evening and address the colored Republicans here.

SURPRISED AT THE INN.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moulton Celebrate Their Tenth Anniversary.

One of the most pleasant events of the season was the surprise given to Mr. and Mrs. George S. Moulton, of Mountain Park Inn, last evening, by the guests and stockholders of that favorite resort. It was the tenth wedding anniversary of Manager Moulton and his wife, and their friends very kindly remembered them. The whole affair was a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Moulton. During the evening they were presented with an elegant French marble cloak as a token of the esteem in which they are held. Hon. Chandler W. Riker, in his usual happy and genial manner, presented the clock and paid a lasting compliment to the receivers for their excellent management. After the presentation the whole about fifty of all, participated in a salmagundi party, which was a source of pleasure to all, as was also the dancing which followed. As an intermission excellent refreshments were served, which added greatly to the evening's enjoyment. Mr. and Mrs. Moulton received the hearty congratulations of all for continued health, happiness and prosperity.

THEATRICAL

Don't miss the finest spectacular comedy of the age, with its myriad of pretty girls; with its humor, its situations and its wonderful electric light effects. Don't miss Coney Island by daylight, nor the graceful and eccentric dancing girls who do the hot tamale. Don't miss the swellest barber shop in the world. But go and see the greatest scene ever put on any stage. They are all in "Vanity Fair," and there is more to come. There is a burletta, complete in itself, which presents a swell New York yacht club interior, where comedians make merry for the guests. "Vanity Fair" is the greatest and best play of the season. It is full of movement, life and vivacity. It contains not one dull moment. See it and see the artists at Music Hall, Saturday evening, September 19th.

There can be no doubt about the great success attained by the Whitney Opera Company in the production of Messrs. DeKoven and Smith's new opera "Rob Roy." The entire press of New York City, during its two years run at the Herald Square Theatre referred to it as a revelation in the operatic line. The music is characteristic even to the necessary discords that at times are incidental to the action especially when the various pipers that lead the different clans strive for the mastery. The construction of the piece is called admirable, each act develops to a climax that is natural, and the interest in the tale is maintained steadily to the close. At Music Hall Monday evening. TALKED AGAINST SILVER

A. H. ATTERBURY ADDRESSES THE DEMOCRATIC ORGANIZATION.

Says That the Circulation of More Silver Dollars Will Not Act as a Panacea For the Big Depression Now in Existence.

The National Democrats of Plainfield, representing the gold standard and not Bryan and Sewall, met last Tuesday evening at the corner of Muhlenberg place and South Second street, and held their first meeting A. H. Atterbury, a leader in the new party, presided, and addressed those present. The attendance was excellent, and much interest was shown. A part of Mr. Atterbury's remarks follows:

"Gentlemen, I extend a welcome to you in the name of the National Democratic party. The issues involved in the present campaign are the greatest since the war, notably, the proposed changing of our money standard. These issues ought not to be decided hastily, for there is much to learn and there are so many who are ignorant regarding these great issues. Bryan tells you that cheap money will bring prosperity. We Democrats tell you that cheap money has been tried many times, and it has brought misery and loss to all people. These meetings are held to teach sound ideas on this subject. We have no great orators to offer, but those who do speak here will tell you the truth.

The discussion at present is all about money, that which you receive as wages at the end of each week. Nine persons out of every ten strive solely for money. Money had a beginning like everything else, and there was a time when people exchanged corn and sheep. Salt and tobacco were used for money, until the country adopted silver and gold. A change in the two is now being considered. When the silver dollar was first made, it was an honest dollar. At present there is a considerable amount of sentiment expressed over the silver dollar. In 80 years, counting from 17 3, there was coined less than $8,000,000 silver dollars.
